He also presented a resolution adopted at a public meeting at Town Hall Club, sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, New York City, N. Y., protesting against the inauguration by the Government of a billion dollar defense program, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Ivanhoe Democratic Club of Flushing, Queens County, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation creating an authority, similar to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, provided with sufficient finances to complete the work of that corporation, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Boro Park and Bay Ridge Home Owners' Association, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation resulting in the resumption of the operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to the extent that a sum of not to exceed one and one-half billion dollars, in addition to the sums already authorized, be allotted to the H. O. L. C. to care for new applications for loans by distressed home owners, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the council of the city of Rochester, N. Y., favoring in principle the enactment of legislation establishing an adequate old-age-pension system, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Parent-Teacher Association of Jeffersonville, N. Y., favoring the establishment of a national film institute to encourage the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures for visual education and entertainment, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented petitions, numerously signed, of sundry citizens of the State of New York, praying for the publication at Government expense of all testimony taken by the Federal Communications Commission, Broadcast Division, in relation to the broadcasting of programs of interest, convenience, and necessity, together with the report of the Commission, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the directors of the Sheffield Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., protesting against enactment of legislation establishing a 30hour workweek if it shall apply to the dairy industry, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a resolution adopted at a meeting held in Grace Baptist Church by the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, favoring the enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a resolution adopted by members of the Metco Stamp Club, of New York City, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation authorizing the issuance of a special commemorative stamp in honor of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the termination of Commodore John Barry's service in the Navy, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the board of trustees of the village of Port Chester, the Common Councils of the Cities of Saratoga Springs and North Tonawanda, and Groups Nos. 2082 of Utica, 1947 of Schenectady, 114 and 1170, both of New York City, and 153 and 583, both of Buffalo, all of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, in the State of New York, favoring the enactment of legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DUFFY presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide a relief program adequate to maintain a decent standard of living and to accomplish other purposes

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That this legislature respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to provide a relief program which will—

1. Give those employed sufficient work and compensation to maintain a decent standard of living.

2. Give work to the unemployed who are not on relief but who

2. Give work to the unemployed who are not on relief but who require help to pay taxes and interest on their homes.

3. Provide sufficient work at Federal expense so that local units of government will not be obliged to add to their indebtedness or increase their already overburdensome taxes.

4. Reimburse the various counties and municipalities of the State the sum of $6,000,000, the amount contributed by them during the year 1935 as their share of unemployment relief; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, Harry L. Hopkins, Administrator of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, both Houses of Congress, and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

ach Wisconsin Member thereof Thomas J. O'Malley, President of the Senate. Lawrence R. Larsen, Chief Clerk of the Senate. J. W. Carow, Speaker of the Assembly. Lester R. Johnson, Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. DUFFY also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide jobs for persons who have secured loans from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and from other sources and who because of unemployment are unable to meet the required payments

Whereas a large number of home owners are now, and will be, unable to meet the required payments on loans made by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and from other sources unless they secure employment: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That this legislature memorializes the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing work for those home owners who, because of unemployment, are unable to meet the required payments on the principal or interest or both: that such work he provided under principal or interest, or both; that such work be provided under public-work projects through either the local, State, or Federal Governments; be it further

Resolved, That duly attested copies of this resolution be sent to both Houses of the Congress and to the Wisconsin Members

Thomas J. O'Malley,
President of the Senate.
Lawrence R. Larsen,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
J. W. Carow,
Speaker of the Assembly.
Lester R. Johnson,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

A concurrent resolution memorializing the President of the United States and the Congress of the United States that it is the sense of the members of the Minnesota Legislature that the Government of the United States should perform its solemn promise and duty and place American agriculture on the basis of equality with other industries by providing an adequate system of credit, and that adequate legislation to that end should be adopted at the earliest possible date

Whereas the farmers throughout the entire United States have whereas the farmers throughout the entire Officed States have lost and are losing their lands and chattels through inability to refinance loans on their property because of high interest rates and low prices of agricultural commodities; and

Whereas agriculture is the basic industry of this country and there can be no sound business prosperity unless the business of agriculture is placed on a sound basis and on an equal basis with other indutries; and other indutries: and

other indutries; and
Whereas a bill has been introduced in the Senate of the United States known as the "farmers' farm relief act", commonly called the "Frazier bill"; and A bill to liquidate and refinance agricultural indebtedness, and to encourage and promote agriculture, commerce, and industry, by establishing an efficient credit system, through which the unjust and unequal burdens placed upon agriculture during the period of price fixing and deflation may be lightened, by providing for the liquidation and refinancing of farm mortgages and farm indebtedness at a reduced rate of interest through the Federal farm-loan system, the Federal Reserve banking system, and the Postal Savings depository system and creating a board of the Postal Savings depository system and creating a board of agriculture to supervise the same; and Whereas this bill is a sound economic measure designed to remedy the inequalities under which agriculture is now laboring: Now, therefore, it it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Minnesota (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, urgently petitioned to enact the said bill into law, and that the President of the United States be urged to approve said measure after its passage; be it further Resolved, That the Minnesota Members of the United States Senate and the Representatives in Congress from the State of Minnesota hemotype the Congress from the State of Minnesota be, and they are hereby, petitioned and most earnestly urged to use their best efforts to bring about a speedy enactment of said legislation; be it further officers of the Senate and of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of Minnesota in the Congress of the United States.

*Resolved*, That a duly authenticated copy of this resolution be presented to the President of the United States, to the presiding

Mr. SHIPSTEAD also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce:

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to eliminate the long-and-short-haul clause from the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act, or to modify the same so that railroads may be permitted to establish rates which will enable Middle West industries to meet the competition of Eastern manufacturers transporting their goods through the Panama Canal

Whereas the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act prohibits railroads from making a lesser charge for a longer than for a shorter distance over the same line in the same direction unless authorized to do so by the Inter-

whereas the higher rail rates from Minnesota and other States in the Middle West to the Pacific coast than water rates from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast through the Panama Canal has resulted in Middle West manufacturers losing all or a substantial part of their markets on the Pacific coast to the advantage of their competitors located in the East; and

Whereas the elimination of the long-and-short-haul clause from the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act would allow the railroads to establish reduced rates from the Middle West to the Pacific coast to meet this water competition without depressing below a reasonable level their rail rates to points inland from the Pacific coast where such water competition does not exist; and Whereas such a readjustment of rail rates will enable Middle West manufacturers to regain a substantial part of their Pacific coast business, will result in increased employment in Middle West industries, will give added employment to labor in transporting such added rail traffic to the Pacific coast, and will enable the railroads to earn some additional net revenue to the advantage of farmers and residents generally of the Middle West and West who farmers and residents generally of the Middle West and West who must employ the railroads to transport their products to market and furnish them with long-haul transportation; and

Whereas reduced rail rates from the Middle West to the Pacific coast will not result in eliminating Eastern manufacturers from the Pacific coast markets or the boat lines from carrying traffic through the Canal, but will simply afford Middle West manufacturers an opportunity to compete with Eastern manufacturers for a fair share of the Pacific coast business on a properly related basis of freight rates; and freight rates; and

Whereas the Middle West contributed by taxes to the construction of the Panama Canal and contributes to its maintenance and support and should be permitted to have a basis of rail rates which will prevent the Panama Canal from working an unjust discrimination against Middle West industries and employment: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That Congress be memorialized to eliminate the long-and-short-haul clause from the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act, or to modify the same so as to effectively permit railroads to establish rates to the Pacific coast from the Middle West which will enable Middle West industries to meet the competition of Eastern manufacturers using water transportation through the Panama Canal; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to both houses of the Legislatures of North and South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois, to the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, and the Senators and Con-gressmen from the State of Minnesota.

Mr. ASHURST presented the following memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

House Memorial 2

To the President and the Congress of the United States of America: Your me memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represents:

In Mohave County, Ariz., an interstate road connecting the towns of Fredonia in northern Arizona and St. George in southern Utah, which frequently in its winding course passes back and forth over the boundary between the two States, crosses the stream known as Short Creek.

Short Creek is a torrential, turbulent, and treacherous stream, whose quicksand bed has, during the past few years, claimed a large number of automobiles, and constitutes a distinct menace

The road which thus crosses this dangerous stream pos a direct interest to the Federal Government, by reason of the fact that it serves Indian reservations in both States, a large area of national grazing lands, and the Pipe Springs national

Local interest in the said highway is such that the county of Mohave is maintaining the same, over such portion of its course as lies in Arizona, as a county highway, and would be and is willing to defray one-half of the cost of constructing a bridge over Short Creek.

Wherefore your memorialist prays:

1. That an appropriate agency of the United States be directed to make an investigation of the matter hereby presented, and if it appear that the interest of the Federal Government in the maintenance of the service given by the said road justifies such participation, that steps be taken to enter into a cooperative agreement with the county of Mohave for the construction of the said bridge over Short Creek.

2. That in the event an appropriation, or other legislation, be necessary to the carrying out of the project referred to, such legislation be enacted.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

And your memorialist will ever pray. Adopted by house February 19, 1935.

THOS. D. TRUOG. Speaker of the House. LAMAH RUTH, Chief Clerk of the House.

Mr. ASHURST also presented the following memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

House Resolution 5

To the Honorable Harold L. Ickes,

Secretary of the Interior:

Whereas we have the finest Indian school in the country, educating the children from 26 tribes; and Whereas the people of Arizona are deeply concerned as to the future of the Phoenix Indian School; and

Whereas New Mexico has three Indian schools and Arizona only one, while their Indian population is only one-third of Arizona,

Whereas New Mexico has three Indian schools and Arizona only one, while their Indian population is only one-third of Arizona, which is 42,000; and

Whereas the lack of an adequate copper tariff has caused our mines to close and has crippled our great State to the extent that any reduction in appropriation for Arizona represents an added burden of unemployment to be carried by the citizens of this State and every dollar represents food kept from the mouths of Arizona workingmen's families; and

Whereas the appropriation for our school has been decreased from year to year so that the school can now serve only half the number it did 4 years ago; and

Whereas any proposal to remove these Indians to any reservation without the advantages of education is against all principles of justice, because it is by education only that we can ever hope to make it possible to absorb these people into our industries, arts, sciences, and everyday life, and make them a part of our people, as we have the people of other nations, and not keep them as they are now, a nation within a nation; and

Whereas the Indian problem is not a diminishing one in Arizona, since the increase in the white population in this State in 1934 was 30 percent, while the increase in the Indian population was 32 percent: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives of the State of Arizona respectfully urge you to consider the enormity of this economic problem, and in the interests of justice to these people, in the interests of the alleviation of the great distress of this State, may we hope that, through the ministration of your great office, you will increase the appropriation for this school so that it can return to its status of 4 years ago and broaden the scope of its great work.

Adopted by the house February 19, 1935.

Adopted by the house February 19, 1935.

THOS. D. TRUOG Speaker of the House.
LALLAH RUTH,
Chief Clerk of the House.

ADDITIONAL JUDGES IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. ASHURST presented a telegram from Ford W. Harris, Los Angeles, Calif., which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Telegram]

Los Angeles, Calif., March 1, 1935.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 1, 1955.

Hon. Henry F. Ashurst,

Chairman Senate Judiciary Committee,

Senate Building, Washington, D. C.:

In spite of the fact that several of the judges of Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit have killed themselves with overwork in the last 10 years, and the judges now on the bench are all working arduously, the work of the court is steadily getting in arrears. Our district court here in Los Angeles is so far behind in its work that the United States statutes have ceased to be practically operative in this territory. Of what possible value is it for Congress to pass new laws when the old ones cannot be enforced due to an easily preventable collapse of our judicial machinery here? If we are to maintain any public respect for the Federal Government and any semblance of respect for the present administration or Congress, it is essential that we have prompt and complete relief. Bill for fifth circuit judge should be passed promptly.

FORD W. HARRIS.

ELECTRIC RATES AND PUBLIC UTILITIES

Mr. ROBINSON. I present a communication relating to the electric rates of public utilities, the bill pertaining to holding companies, and so forth, and ask that it be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate |

There being no objection, the communication was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PINE BLUFF, ARK., February 17, 1935.

Hon. JOE T. ROBINSON, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have been following the activities of our Government with relation to electric rates, the entrance of the Government in the electric-current production through the T. V. A., and desire to make some suggestions which, I trust, may be of benefit in working out an equitable solution of the

I am of the opinion that if these operating companies could make a decided reduction in rates, that the consumption of electric current would be increased to the extent that within a year or two the increase would offset the loss in revenue due to tric current would be increased to the extent that within a year or two the increase would offset the loss in revenue due to reduced rates, and that the security holders would again be paid interest on their money, to which they are entitled.

As I see the situation, the companies must either change their capital structure or very materially increase the volume of business, or both, to get on a sound basis. There might be some saving effected by the abolishment of certain executive positions or the elimination of certain supervision costs. I am of the opinion that employees' wages are low enough.

I do not think it fair to holders of preferred stock of these companies to arbitrarily bring about a reduction in rates that would prove, in a way, confiscatory; and it is not thought that it is the intention of our Government to do so. Certainly it would mean a great loss to holders of securities to see the public come in competition with the power companies in the building of municipal distributing plants to be supplied by Governmentmanufactured current. In other words, to reduce the rates to such an extent that security holders would suffer any great loss would be an alinement of the majority of our citizenship using electric current against others of our citizens holding securities of operating companies. It will be remembered that those citizens who invested their money in preferred stock of these companies of operating companies. It will be remembered that those citizens who invested their money in preferred stock of these companies were told that their investment made the companies possible, giving to those other citizens a convenience which is now considered a necessity. The preferred-stock holders, of course, enjoy the same service; but I feel that inasmuch as I bought preferred stock direct from the companies in good faith, and to help build the State, I am entitled to a fair rate of interest on investment, and to know that the investment is not being jeopardized by Government activity.

Government activity.

It is my information that the taxes paid by one of these operating companies is equivalent to $5.68 per share on outstanding preferred stock, or a total yearly tax cost of $808,633.18. I know that taxes are high and that the tendency seems to be toward an increased taxation.

an increased taxation.

If the Government-yardstick rates will meet the fixed charges, etc., I suggest that consumers of electric current be billed at those rates, adding to the bill the actual per kilowatt-hour cost for taxes. I, of course, do not know that the yardstick rates would afford sufficient earnings in each instance to meet fixed charges, etc.; however, that is a matter for the Federal Power Commission and the companies to determine. I understand that electric current can be produced cheaper in some localities than in others. I also understand that small-quantity consumers cannot consistently expect the same rate as large consumers, therefore a sliding scale of rates is necessary.

If the plan of basing the rates on the Government yardstick, and the consumers paying the companies' taxes should meet with fore a sliding scale of rates is necessary.

If the plan of basing the rates on the Government yardstick, and the consumers paying the companies' taxes should meet with favor, the companies could make a quarterly settlement with the tax officials, and by so doing there would be some ready money at all times for the operation of schools, or to meet other current expense of State and city government. I would much prefer that taxes derived from electric-current consumption be used for schools, old-age pension, and relief of the poor.

I think that by the public paying the operating companies' taxes, that the companies would be taken out of politics, which in itself would be some relief. Further, the publicity cost could be eliminated, which is no small item.

I realize that our economic situation is not what we all very much desire, and I am willing to contribute my part toward a readjustment of electric-power structure that will bring about rates for electric current that will be fair to the public, the security holders, and the companies. If absolutely necessary to bring about such a situation and to keep the companies in a healthy condition, I suggest the following: First, that the rate of interest on bonds and all classes of preferred stock be reduced from the present rate of interest on bonds, or the dividend rate per share, to a guaranty of 2 percent on bonds, and $2 per share on preferred stock (these rates to be based upon a consolidated earnings of the combined issues) and to pay whatever said securities earn, but not to exceed 5 percent on bonds and $5 per share on preferred stock. Second, that in case of reorganization (receivership not permitted) the bonds and preferred stock be made one class of security. This, I think a better plan, and, should such a plan be worked out, the dividend or interest rate should be a guarantee of 2 percent or $2 per share, to pay whatever company earns, but not to exceed 7 percent or $7, as the case may be. Any earntee of 2 percent or $2 per share, to pay whatever company earns, but not to exceed 7 percent or $7, as the case may be. Any earnings above 7 percent or $7 to go into a sinking fund for retirement of such securities, or for a further reduction in rates.

Third, and as a last resort, reduce the face value of bonds and preferred stock 10 or 15 percent. I think that either of the three plans, especially the last, would probably have to be endorsed by the bondholders and preferred-stock holders. These changes would seem to eliminate the common-stock issues. I do not fancy a process of repudiation, however, if necessary to bring about the desired results, I would take my loss without a murmur.

I understand that the companies now have a depreciation account, also a sinking fund for the retirement of bonds and, perhaps, preferred stock.

If we in this locality could enjoy an electric rate of 4 cents per kilowatt-hour, including cost of taxes, for the first 100 kilowatt-hours, domestic purposes (no room charge), we would be able to use electricity for cooking, which, in our opinion, is the best cookuse electricity for cooking, which, in our opinion, is the best cooking fuel; operate washing machines, irons, radios, and various accessories; and not find ourselves running from one room to another turning off the lights. I would not consider unfair a minimum monthly charge of $1. I would not, however, look with favor upon a schedule of rates setting up $1 per month charge for a small number of kilowatt-hours. I do not consider unfair the deposit required before service is started.

In my discussion of this matter, I have given consideration only to domestic use of electricity, and have endeavored to be fair with security holders, the companies, and the public.

Respectfully submitted.

W. J. Williams.

W. J. WILLIAMS, 514 Walnut Street.

THE BANKING SYSTEM

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I present a very clear and interesting statement by Mr. F. A. Vanderlip on the subject of pending banking legislation and ask to have it printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

There being no objection, the statement was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

52 WALL STREET, NEW YORK, February 19, 1935.

Senator FLETCHER.

ator Fletcher, Chairman Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, Washington, D. C.

The SENATE COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY,

Senator Fletcher, Chairman, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: The bill, S. 1715, now before the committee is, in my judgment, one of the most significant pieces of legislation that has been drafted during my lifetime. I am surprised at the silence of the leading bankers of the country regarding this measure. It is hardly possible that informed banking minds do not appreciate its import. Their silence certainly must be attributed to other reasons then acquiresone. reasons than acquiescence.

reasons than acquiescence.

It is hardly appropriate within the proper limits of a letter to engage in a complete discussion of the measure with all its implications, but there are some points regarding it which I profoundly feel should have the sober consideration of your committee.

I will pass over the first division of the bill, dealing with the insurance of bank deposits, although much that is important might be said concerning some of the features of that division. The second division of the bill, containing amendments to the Federal Reserve Act, is of such deep significance that I will confine what I have to say to that portion of the measure.

There is certainly a growing political demand, and one to which

There is certainly a growing political demand, and one to which many Members of the Congress now attach themselves, that the constitutional provision enjoining Congress to regulate the value of money creates an obligation which, even at this late date, Congress should fully assume. Heretofore, Congress in common with most of the world opinion, has believed that providing the redemption of currency in a given weight of gold fixed the value of the currency. the currency.

Students of the currency problem are beginning quite generally to recognize the fallacy of the assumption that a given number of grains of gold is a permanent and unvarying standard of value. Not until economists, in comparatively recent years, evolved the mechanism of the price index has there been a clear conception concerning the characteristics of a standard of currency value.

There have been economists who have recognized that the invention of the price index offered the possibility of creating a true standard of value by means of which the fluctuations in the value of any commodity, including gold, might be measured. There have been proposals, including one for a commodity dollar, by means of which the number of grains into which a dollar would be convertible should be varied, from time to time, and by that means it was believed that a currency could be obtained which might, throughout a generation, have an unvarying purchasing power in exchange for a cross section of all other commodities.

The practical banking mind has rightly rejected the theory that such a plan would give to the currency issued under it the de-

The practical banking mind has rightly rejected the theory that such a plan would give to the currency issued under it the desired stability of value. Price is a function of the total volume of the purchasing medium. The total volume of the purchasing medium, in a country with such a highly developed banking system as modern nations have, includes not only the volume of currency but the volume of banking credit turned into bank denotity.

deposits.

This principle is recognized in the bill, and an effective means for the control of the volume of bank credit is set up in section 209, which gives to a Federal open-market committee power to change the requirements as to reserves to be maintained against bank deposits. This power, together with the other open-market operations which are conferred upon the Federal open-market committee, are adequate levers with which Congress through its designated agency may assume its constitutional prerogative to regulate the value of the currency.

In order so to regulate the value of the currency these powers are necessary and practical. They must be exercised by such a body as Congress designates, but I believe there is the gravest danger in conferring them upon a committee of the Federal Reserve bank, as is proposed by this measure, or upon any other body which might be created, unless Congress defines its objective in exercising the power to regulate the value of currency. The measure before you, in fact, provides for the establishment of a managed-currency system, but it should not leave the determination of the policy in the hands of any regulatory body. Congress should itself determine what the policy is to be, and I doubt if it has the constitutional power to shift that responsibility to a body which it creates.

doubt if it has the constitutional power to shift that responsibility to a body which it creates.

If this view is correct, it means, in effect, that Congress must itself designate the price level which it desires to establish and maintain. It would be most dangerous to attempt to transfer to any organization that Congress might create the power to determine and change this fundamental policy.

The use of the various levers of control (the open-market operations and the variation of the legal percentage of reserves which banks must hold against their deposits) must be placed in the hands of an executive regulatory body, but the decision as to the objective—that is to say, the price level which is to be reached and maintained—should be the responsibility of Congress and of Congress alone. Congress alone.

No caprice of judgment, no changing opinions of a small group No caprice of judgment, no changing opinions of a small group of men, no subordinate committee, subject to the pressures either of business, or of politics, should be endowed with that power. It seems to me logical and inescapable that in regulating the value of money Congress must itself assume the responsibility of stating clearly the objective, and that objective would be a declaration by Congress of the precise price level that is to be permanent and that can be changed by no one except by Congress itself.

The regulation of the value of currency is not properly a banking function. It has, in fact, far too long remained a banking prerogative. There should be clear differentiation between the business of granting bank credits and the fundamentally important policy of regulating the value of currency.

The implications that flow from these principles seem to me to policy of regulating the value of currency.

The implications that flow from these principles seem to me to be that Congress should declare in the exercise of its power to regulate the value of currency that a dollar is henceforth to have a steady and unchanging purchasing power, as measured by a price index; that Congress should declare the point at which that price index should be maintained; and in conferring the openmarket operations and the power to regulate the percentage of reserves that a bank must hold against the total volume of bank credits, represented by deposits, it must direct the exercise of those powers so that any change in the value of currency above or below the price level set by Congress shall be corrected by the manner in which these open-market and reserve powers are exercised.

cised.

That is to say, that, whenever the price index indicates a price level below the point which Congress had declared as representing its policy in regard to the value of the currency, there should be no room for the free play of caprice or opinion in the minds of the small group of men upon whom are conferred the duties of using these regulatory open-market powers. They should be compelled automatically to inflate and raise prices, if the current price index is below the standard point that Congress has designated; and they should be under the same compulsion to deflate if prices rise above that standard level rise above that standard level.

The responsibility is on Congress to fix the standard level and the compulsion should be upon the men who operate the levers of the compulsion should be upon the men who operate the levers of control automatically to work the levels of control so as to attain the objective which Congress has set up.

There is an analogy here to the powers of our Supreme Court. The nine members of the Supreme Court need have no opinion individually as to whether a law passed by Congress is good law or a bad one. Their individual opinions are not of moment.

There is much to be said about many features of the bill that you are considering. It is useless to enter into detailed discussion until the two cardinal points are grasped. The stabilization of the dollar by attaching it to a sound standard of value, the price index, is the first one. The second, an equally important point, is the creation of an executive body to carry out the will of Congress under a definite, controlling mandate.

Very truly yours,

F. A. VANDERLIP.

REPORT OF ARMY APPROPRIATION RILL.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in order to keep the parliamentary history of the bill complete, I desire to state that, under authority of the order of the Senate of Thursday last, on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations I filed with the Secretary of the Senate on Friday, March 1, the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, with amendments, and an accompanying report (No. 230).

REPORTS OF MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 935) to authorize the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to lend Army and Navy equipment for use at the national jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 231) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1940. A bill to fix the value of subsistence and rental allowance under the Pay Readjustment Act of June 10, 1922 (Rept. No. 232); and

S. 2105. A bill to provide for an additional number of cadets at the United States Military Academy (Rept. No.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports there-

S. 724. A bill for the relief of James T. Moore (Rept. No. 234); and

H. R. 3266. A bill authorizing the maintenance and use of a banking house upon the United States military reservation at Fort Lewis, Wash. (Rept. No. 235).

Mr. CAREY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1850) to amend an act entitled "An act to recognize the high public service rendered by Maj. Walter Reed and those associated with him in the discovery of the cause and means of transmission of yellow fever", approved February 28, 1929, as amended, by including Roger P. Ames among those honored by said act, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 236) thereon.

Mr. DUFFY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 438) for the relief of Roy Chandler, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 237) thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. LONERGAN (for Mrs. Caraway), from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on February 28, 1935, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 31. An act to provide for the issuance of a license to practice the healing art in the District of Columbia to Dr. Chester C. Groff; and

S. 402. An act to amend section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. LONERGAN:

A bill (S. 2108) granting a pension to Ann M. Callery; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NEELY:

A bill (S. 2109) granting a pension to Hazel Chalk; and A bill (S. 2110) granting a pension to John S. Wilson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BYRD:

A bill (S. 2111) for the relief of Raphael Levy; and

A bill (S. 2112) for the relief of Flora Jacobs, administratrix of the estate of A. L. Jacobs, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2113) authorizing the appointment and retirement of Robert W. Moss as a lieutenant (junior grade), Dental Corps, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HATCH:

A bill (S. 2114) for the relief of D. E. Woodward and Mrs. Murray A. Hintz; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COSTIGAN:

A bill (S. 2115) for the relief of Horace M. Case; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 2116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas N. Pray; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BONE:

A bill (S. 2117) for the relief of Grant A. McNeal; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2118) extending the provisions of the pension laws relating to Indian war veterans to Capt. H. M. Hodgis' company, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WAGNER:

A bill (S. 2119) for the relief of Amos D. Carver, S. E. Turner, Clifford N. Carver, Scott Blanchard, P. B. Blanchard, James B. Parse, A. N. Blanchard, and W. A. Blanchard, and/or the widows of such of them as may be deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2120) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city of Hudson, New York; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. ROBINSON:

A bill (S. 2121) relating to loans by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 2122) for the relief of Tony Woodick; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STEIWER:

A bill (S. 2123) granting a pension to William G. Madden (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2124) providing for the final enrollment of the Indians of the Klamath Indian Reservation in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 2125) for the relief of Lawrence Hyder; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2126) for the relief of Ralph Riesler; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2127) to amend section 4471 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended; to the Committee on Commerce

A bill (S. 2128) to regulate the hours of employment of women employed in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

A bill (S. 2129) authorizing the retirement of Joseph F. Becker as a lieutenant commander, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 2130) granting a pension to Anna L. Sweeney; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2132) to correct the military record of Edward A. McGown: to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 2133) granting a pension to D. H. Waide; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NORRIS:

A bill (S. 2135) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A bill (S. 2136) to provide for the removal of the monument to Casimir Pulaski from the triangle at Pennsylvania Avenue, Thirteenth Street, and E Street NW., to the east end of the triangle formed by Pennsylvania Avenue, E Street, and Fifteenth Street, in the city of Washington, D. C., and to authorize the appropriation therefor; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. GORE:

A bill (S. 2137) to provide for the appointment of one additional district judge for the eastern, northern, and western districts of Oklahoma; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

(By request.) A bill (S. 2133) granting a pension to Lora Kizer Russell; and

(By request.) A bill (S. 2139) granting a pension to Susie Wichita Te-kits-kush; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BARBOUR and Mr. MOORE:

A bill (S. 2140) for the relief of certain purchasers of lands in the Borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SMITH:

A bill (S. 2141) to provide for the payment of salaries to certain referees in bankruptcy; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 2142) for the relief of certain blind persons disabled in the military or naval service of the United States; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHIPSTEAD:

A bill (S. 2143) for the relief of Asa J. Hunter; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 2144) extending the obligation of bonds of contractors for public buildings to include payment of compensation to injured employees; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

A bill (S. 2145) extending the time for repayment of the revolving fund for the benefit of the Crow Indians; and

A bill (S. 2146) for the relief of certain Indians of the Flathead Reservation killed or injured en route to dedication of ceremonies of the Going-to-the-Sun Highway, Glacier National Park; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma (by request):

A bill (S. 2147) to reduce the area of the Fort Peck irrigation project in the State of Montana, and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 2148) to provide for the leasing of restricted Indian lands of Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. COSTIGAN, and Mr. HATCH:

A bill (S. 2149) to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. HARRISON:

A bill (S. 2150) for the relief of Edwin Dewitt T. Dobbs (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2151) for the relief of Mrs. Leonard T. Boice, widow of Leonard Theodore Boice; to the Committee on Claims

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2152) to amend title 1 of the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, known as the "Agricultural Adjustment Act", and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

A bill (S. 2153) to provide for the prevention of blindness in infants born in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

A bill (S. 2154) granting a pension to John Hofmann; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 72) authorizing and directing the Comptroller General of the United States to certify for payment certain claims of grain elevators and grain firms to cover insurance and interest on wheat during the years 1919 and 1920 as per a certain contract authorized by the President; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 73) authorizing a preliminary examination or survey of Redondo Beach Harbor, Calif.; and

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 74) authorizing a preliminary examination or survey of Santa Monica Harbor, Calif.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SHIPSTEAD:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 75) authorizing and directing the Comptroller General of the United States to certify for payment certain claims of grain elevators and grain firms to cover insurance and interest on wheat during the years 1919 and 1920 as per a certain contract authorized by the President; to the Committee on Claims.

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, TEX.

Mr. SHEPPARD. On behalf of my colleague, Mr. Con-NALLY, and myself I introduce a bill providing for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in Texas. I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point and that following the bill three letters be printed in the RECORD on the subject of this park, which is to be on the American side of the Rio Grande in Texas, and on the subject of negotiations with Mexico suggesting a Mexican national park on the Mexican side of the river adjoining the Texas park, in order that we may have what will eventually be an international park on the Rio Grande in the Big Bend section. The three letters are respectively from Secretary Howe to myself, from Acting Secretary of State Phillips to the President, and from Secretary Ickes to the President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it so ordered. The bill (S. 2131) to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park, in the State of Texas, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A bill to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park, in the State of Texas, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That when title to such lands as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary for recredetermined by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary for recreational park purposes within boundaries to be determined by him within the area of approximately 1,500,000 acres, in the counties of Brewster and Presidio, in the State of Texas, known as the "Big Bend area" shall have been vested in the United States, such lands shall be, and are hereby, established, dedicated, and set apart as a public park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people and shall be known as the "Big Bend National Park": Provided, That the United States shall not purchase by appropriation of public moneys any land within the aforesaid area, but such lands shall be secured by the United States only by public and private donations. and private donations.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized in his discretion and upon submission of evidence of title satisfactory to him, to accept on behalf of the United States, title to the lands renim, to accept on behalf of the United States, title to the lands referred to in the previous section hereof as may be deemed by him necessary or desirable for national park purposes: Provided, That no land for said park shall be accepted until exclusive jurisdiction over the entire area, in form satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, shall have been ceded by the State of Texas to the United States.

Sec. 3. The administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid park shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", as amended: Provided, That the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, known as the "Federal Water Power Act", shall not apply to this park.

The letters presented by Mr. Sheppard were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, March 1, 1935.
My Dear Senator Sheppard: Referring further to your letter of February 16, regarding the proposal for a national park in the Big Bend section of Texas on the Rio Grande River, the Presi-dent has asked me to send you the enclosed copies of letters which he has received from the Department of State and the In-terior Department, together with the report prepared by the National Parks Service of the Interior Department, relating to the Big Bend area

The President feels that this will give you such data as you may need in the preparation of any bill you may desire to present to the Senate.

Very sincerely yours,

Louis McH. Howe, Secretary to the President.

Hon. MORRIS SHEPPARD, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, February 26, 1935.

My Dear Mr. President: I have received your memorandum of February 19, 1935, addressed to the Secretary of State and the the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a copy of a letter dated February 16, 1935, from the Honorable Morris Sheppard, United States Senate, with reference to an international park project in the Big Bend section of Texas and the adjoining section in Mexico, and suggesting that the matter be taken up with Mexico.

Prior to the receipt of your memorandum the Department had eccived a communication from Senator Sheppard in regard to this project. I informed the Senator under date of February 23, 1935, that the Department will be glad to take up the matter with the Mexican Government, through Ambassador Daniels, at such time as there is definite assurance that the park on the Texas

I am today sending copies of this letter, of your memorandum, and of its enclosure to the Secretary of the Interior for his con-

Faithfully yours,

WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Acting Secretary. THE PRESIDENT, The White House.

> THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, February 27, 1935.

THE PRESIDENT

The White House.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have received from the White House a copy of Senator Morris Sheppard's letter of February 16 to you, regarding the proposal to establish an international park along the Mexican border, and have noted your request for a report on this subject.

Under separate cover I am sending to you a field report pre-pared by the National Park Service regarding this matter. The proposal involves lands in the Big Bend area in Texas and in the adjoining Provinces of Chihuahua and Coahulla in Mexico. I recently approved the recommendation of the National Park Service that the area referred to in Texas be established as the Big Bend National Park. Proposed legislation to provide authority for this action is now being drafted for submission to the Congress.

The possibility of an international park in this region meets with my approval, and I recommend that, if legislation is passed by Congress authorizing the establishment of a national park on the United States' side of the international boundary line, the Mexican Government be invited to cooperate with the United States in the establishment of such an international park.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES, Secretary of the Interior.

INFLUENCING OF WORKERS' VOTES

Mr. VAN NUYS. I introduce a bill relative to influencing the votes of workers in national elections, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred. I also ask that an accompanying paper be printed in the RECORD with the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so

The bill (S. 2134) to prohibit employers from influencing the vote of their employees in national elections was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it is unlawful for any person or corporation to influence or attempt to influence, through fear or intimidation, the vote of any person employed by them, in connection with any election at which Presidential and Vice Presidential electors or a Senator or Representative in, or a Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, Congress are to be voted for.

SEC. 2. Any corporation violating any of the provisions of this Act shall be fined not more than $5,000; and any officer, director, or agent of any such corporation who violates or consents to the violation of any of the provisions of this Act and any person, who is an employer as above described, who violates or consents to the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both

The accompanying paper was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Legislation which guarantees to every worker the right to vote as he deems proper without the intimidation of "loss of job" is sought in a bill introduced today by Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat, Indiana)

The Van Nuys bill is designed to halt the coercion and intimi-dation of employees by their employers in elections for national

It would make it unlawful for any "person or corporation to in-fluence or attempt to influence through fear or intimidation the vote of any person employed by them, in connection with a national election."

Senator Van Nuvs would fix the penalties for violation of this measure designed to safeguard the right of the ballot guaranteed under the Constitution as follows: a corporation found guilty of violation shall be fined not more than $5,000 and any officer, director, or agent of such corporation shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

This legislation comes as a result of a Nation-wide survey made by Senator Van Nuvs of the methods of vote coercion and intimidation which are used in industrial centers.

dation which are used in industrial centers.

"The bill which I am introducing is intended to correct the very reprehensible practice of certain employers in attempting to control the votes of their employees through fear and intimidation", Senator Van Nuvs said.

"I have visited factories during closely contested national elections and have seen huge placards displayed throughout the plants to the effect that 'If — is elected President this plant will close within 30 days'

"I have had affidavits presented to me saying that the foreman and paymasters of certain institutions told their employees that unless they voted for certain candidates they need not report for duty after election.

"I have known employees to lose their jobs by reason of the fact that they wore certain campaign buttons in the lapel of their

"These are only a few of the methods used in the past by certain unscrupulous employers to control the votes of their employees.

"It doesn't make any difference whether my party or opposing parties are the beneficiaries of this infamous practice. It is wrong and must be corrected", asserted Senator Van Nuys.

"The right of every American citizen to espouse the cause of and vote for the candidates of his own choice is a sacred privilege of American citizenship, which must be preserved.

"Upon the preservation of this sacred right depend the integrity and stability of our democracy.

"I shall vigorously press the passage of this measure at this session."

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

H. R. 6223. An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

AMENDMENT TO WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. FRAZIER submitted an amendment providing that none of the funds appropriated in the War Department appropriation bill shall be used for or toward the support of any compulsory military course or military training in any civil school or college, etc., intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5913, the War Department appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

REFERENCE OF BILL TO AMEND INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, on the 4th of February the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] by request introduced a bill (S. 1632) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by providing for the regulation of the transportation of passengers and property by water carriers. The bill was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. It would seem to me, since measures relating to commerce have been referred to the Committee on Commerce, that the particular bill referred to should likewise have gone to that

The Chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, Mr. Wheeler, is not now present, and therefore I do not wish to propose anything except to make the record clear that it is the feeling of the Committee on Commerce that this bill should have gone to that committee rather than to the Interstate Commerce Committee, in order that it might be given the consideration by our committee to which it is entitled. I shall not press the matter this morning but shall confer with the Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York undoubtedly understands there is no rule of the Senate with regard to the reference of Senate bills introduced. The Senator from New York may introduce a bill that properly should be referred to the Committee on Irrigation; but if he asks that it be referred to the Committee on Finance, it will go to the Committee on Finance. There is absolutely no rule of the Senate regarding the reference of bills except that all appropriation bills must be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COPELAND. Let it be understood that I am in no sense criticizing the Chair. He is always just and fair and generous in the extreme. I was speaking particularly to the point that the bill to which I referred was introduced by the Chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce with the request that it be referred to his committee. The protest I am entering now is that it should have been referred to the Committee on Commerce for consideration. The least we should be expected to submit to would be to have a joint hearing on the particular bill. However, I shall not press the matter, but certainly I desire the Chair to understand there was no intention of reflecting upon him.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Chair is quite right in stating the situation with reference to the rule, but the practice has grown up in the Senate to refer all bills to committees having jurisdiction of the subject matter to which they relate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's statement is correct insofar as Senators themselves permit the Chair to pursue that practice. The parliamentary clerk, under ordinary circumstances, refers all bills to the committees having jurisdiction, but where a Senator requests that a bill be sent to some particular committee it is the custom of the Senate, the Chair is informed, to refer the bill to such committee.

Mr. McNARY. I think that is a correct statement. I think the Senator introducing a bill should be entitled to have the bill referred to the committee which he believes has jurisdiction. I do not know but that correction should be made by the Chair in the case of an apparent erroneous reference of a bill. Certainly, as one Member of the Senate, I shall do my utmost to protect the Chair as best I can in the situation.

ALLOCATION OF FUNDS UNDER N. I. R. A.

Mr. BYRD. I send to the desk a resolution which I ask to have read, and I further ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read. The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 91), as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States is requested to furnish immediately to the Senate an itemized statement of allocations made for projects out of the appropriation of $3,300,000,000 authorized by an act entitled "An act to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes", and approved June 16, 1933; and shall furnish to the Senate the following information, to wit:

First. Total cash disbursed to March 1, 1935.

Second. Balance unexpended out of the amount appropriated.

Second. Balance unexpended out of the amount appropriated. Third. A list of projects both Federal and non-Federal and their locations on which disbursements have been made, the amount of such disbursements and an estimate of the cost of completing each project.

Fourth. A list of future allocations authorized, both Federal and non-Federal, which the Government of the United States is obligated to make and on which no expenditures have as yet been made.

Fifth. A list of projects to which allocations of money were made and the money subsequently impounded, and why impounded.

Sixth. A list of allocations of money for public works that have been diverted to pay ordinary or other expenses of the Government Seventh. Copies of memoranda or agreements committing the United States Government to the building of public works upon which no expenditures have as yet been made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest that the resolution go over for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over under the rule.

CLAIMS FILED WITH UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS TO TEXAS.

Mr. SHEPPARD submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 92), which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations is hereby requested, in connection with claims originally filed with the United States Commissioners to Texas in 1872 and 1873, or any claim or claims arising out of the same circumstances not then so filed with the Government of the United States but subsequently presented to or espoused by it, whether on account of property losses or the death or personal injury of any citizen of the United States, to secure from the Secretary of State information as to the basis upon which the United States contemplates under the protocol of April 24, 1934, or agrees thereunder, or has agreed previously thereto, to settle the said claims or to compromise, foreclose, abandon, or offset them against claims of Mexico admitted to be valid against the United States; and further

That the Committee on Foreign Relations is requested on receipt Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations is hereby

That the Committee on Foreign Relations is requested on receipt of such information to examine the question of justice and sufficiency of the settlement or settlements contemplated or already made in connection with said claims; as well as the question as to whether or not the losses upon which the claims aforesaid were founded, constitute valid grounds for recovery against the United States; and the further question whether the United States should be held responsible for the difference between the amounts realized or to be realized under the negotiations and dealings with Mexico and the just and sufficient amount found to be properly due the original claimants or their successors in interest; and to report its conclusions on the matters mentioned herein to the Senate.

INVESTIGATION OF "MORRO CASTLE" AND "MOHAWK" DISASTERS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. Fresident, on the first day of the session my colleague [Mr. Wagner] submitted Senate Resolution 7, proposing an investigation of the Morro Castle disaster. Then, after the Mohawk disaster, he presented another resolution. Both resolutions were consolidated, approved, and reported, with amendments, by the Committee on Commerce, and then referred on February 8 to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. It is now about a month since that happened, and I should like to inquire from the chairman of the committee when we may expect action of this matter?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I can say to the Senator from New York that it is my hope that we may have a meeting of the committee within the next few days to act on the resolution referred to, and on several other resolutions which have been referred to the committee. The committee was not able to meet during the last week because of the holding of meetings by other committees to which the members of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate belong.

Mr. COPELAND. I am gratified to hear the statement of the Senator from South Carolina, because there is a great deal of agitation in my section of the country regarding those disasters and anxiety to have some action taken.

Further than that, the Secretary of Commerce has sent to us a number of bills founded, we assume, upon those disasters, and before any satisfactory action can be taken by the Committee on Commerce it should have the authority proposed to be conferred by the resolution.

MONOPOLISTIC PRACTICES UNDER N. R. A.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement for the RECORD. I have before me a letter from the Secretary of the Central Board of Purchases of Milwaukee. This letter, and a second letter which I have, disclose how effectively some of the trusts of this country at this time are operating. The letter says:

Please note the attached press release. Since this release was issued, the N. L. Keuhn Co., of this city, who had courage to submit the bid 8 percent below the trust price strictly in accordance with the President's Order No. 6767, which permits the quoting of prices from 1 to 15 percent below prices filed with the code authority, and who, as a result, was awarded our contract, has informed us that when this contract was awarded to him, Mr. A. D. Kunze, secretary of the Rubber Manufacturers' Association of New York, wired every manufacturer of fire hose in this courty warning them not to accept or fill an order for fire hose from the Kuehn Co. for delivery to the city of Milwaukee.

You will also find a letter received from the BiLateral Fire Hose Co., Mr. Clay Baird, president, showing the manner in which he requires his agents to bid the trust price. I am also enclosing a copy of our complaint to the Federal Trade Commission.

I now read a paragraph from the statement of Mr. Baird, who had submitted the trust prices. He says:

If you find any deviation from these prices, report it to us at once. If you find that to secure business there has been any extra hose promised or furnished, any donations made in the way of supplies, or any discounts, give us this information promptly so we can stop the filling of the order.

Again, the letter from which I first quoted says:

In a recent interview with a fire-hose manufacturer, he informed me that he had signed an agreement with the Rubber Manufacturers' Association at New York that he would not sell his hose below the price agreed upon by other fire-hose manufacturers, and that all the other manufacturers had signed the same agreement. He admitted that it was an illegal document, contrary to the anti-trust laws, and yet he felt morally obligated to abide by it. He also stated that the price would advance to 94 cents per foot very soon.

Mr. President, I will not read further, but I ask that these letters and the data which accompany them be referred to the Committee on Finance, which is to investigate the question of trusts and monopolies in connection with the N. R. A. Here is a complete case on record showing the most defiant attitude upon the part of the Rubber Manufacturers' Trust toward the antitrust laws and claiming to be acting under the code. Indeed, they appear to look to the code for justification of their exploiting the people.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The papers presented by the Senator from Idaho will be referred to the Committee on Finance

PUBLICITY OF INCOME-TAX RETURNS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, last week I appeared before the Committee on Finance relative to the question of the publicity of income-tax returns and the so-called "pink slips." As I understand the matter, after my personal statement to the committee a subcommittee of the Committee on Finance was appointed to meet with a House committee, and, according to newspaper reports, which are conflicting, there is some difficulty in the matter. May I inquire of the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], who is chairman of the subcommittee, what is the present status of the proposed "pink-slip" legislation?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think I am not disclosing any secret or conveying any information of which the public is not fully aware when I say that a subcommittee of six was appointed by the Chairman of the Finance Committee to confer with a committee which might be named by the House; that the two committees met, and, after a rather full conference, it was disclosed that there was a great deal of difference of opinion between Members of the House and Members of the Senate. I think the consensus of opinion is that legislation on the subject should originate in the other House and that the Senate might with patience await the action of the body at the other end of the Capitol. What action will be taken there, of course, I cannot say. I think the subcommittee of the Senate was unanimously of the opinion that the Senate should not do anything until the House shall have taken action.

Mr. COPELAND. I am obliged to the Senator for the statement he has made. It has been repeatedly stated that there is a feeling on the part of some Members of the House, including the Chairman of the Committee on Rules, that this particular matter might originate in the Senate. I sincerely hope there will be no delay because the 15th of March is approaching, and action should be taken, if possible, before that time. In the committee itself, I think I may say without divulging anything I ought not to divulge, that it appeared to me after my presentation, that it was the general understanding that we should return to the condition which prevailed in former years and which would be satisfactory. I hope there may be an early report.

WHAT ABOUT INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY—ARTICLE BY RT. REV. JOHN A. RYAN

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in the magazine Catholic Action for March 1935 appears an article by Rt. Rev. John A. Ryan, D. D., from which I read:

Despite some favorable indications, the prospects of industrial recovery or even of a steady movement in that direction are still far from reassuring.

Mr. President, without taking the time to read the remainder of this article, I ask that the article be printed in the Record as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

WHAT ABOUT INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY?

WHAT ABOUT INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY?

(In the opinion of Monsignor Ryan, director of the N. C. W. C. social action department, prospects for our immediate industrial recovery are far from reassuring. It is admitted on all sides that purchasing power in the hands of the present 10,000,000 unemployed is fundamental to any return to a normal economic condition. Answering the question "How can this purchasing power be supplied?" Monsignor Ryan states: "First, by providing at least $5,000,000,000 a year for 3 years to carry on public works, thus enormously increasing employment, both directly on the public projects and indirectly in private industries; and, secondly, by gradually reducing the working week to 30 hours in order to increase the total volume of wage payments.")

(By Rt. Rev. John A. Ryan, D. D.)

Despite some favorable indications, the prospects of industrial recovery or even of a steady movement in that direction are still far from reassuring.

Since the middle of last September the general level of business has risen at an average rate of 41/2 percent a month; nevertheless, it is still 11 percent lower than it was in July 1933. If the recent it is still 11 percent lower than it was in July 1933. If the recent rate of improvement should continue, the index of business activity would reach the 1929 figure about the middle of next October. Nevertheless, this result would not represent satisfactory conditions, for in 1929 there were upward of 3,000,000 workers unemployed. Since that year the productive capacity of our industries has increased between 10 and 25 percent. It is not improbable that business at the 1929 level would mean as many as 5,000,000 unemployed.

improbable that business at the 1929 level would mean as many as 5,000,000 unemployed.

Unfortunately, it is quite unlikely that business will continue to improve at the rate of 4½ percent a month during the coming spring and summer. Prophecy is a dangerous and thankless exercise, but conditions and trends seem to be the same now as they were at the end of last May, when I forecast a decline in business activity from then until the beginning of September. As a matter of fact, the declining process continued until the middle of that month. Now, as last May, the temporary increase in the demand for goods has become fully supplied and is about to be converted into a decrease. This condition seems to have already arrived in the steel industry, which suffered a falling off in operations in the week ending February 9.

Of course, the fundamental and enduring cause of our slow industrial recovery is the lack of purchasing power in the hands of millions of our people who would buy enormous quantities of goods if they had the money. The purchasing power of the 10,000,000 who are still unemployed is restricted to the meager sums of money which they receive by way of a dole, or of relief. Until the Government does something to multiply this purchasing power at least three times, business cannot greatly improve, for the simple reason that it cannot sell adequate quantities of goods.

According to present indications the Government that is the

According to present indications, the Government, that is, the Congress and the President, will not adopt the measures necessary to provide this amount of purchasing power. Therefore, the rise in the general level of business, which has been almost continuous since September 15, will in all probability soon be supplanted by a movement downward—unless the Supreme Court decision in the gold-clause cases is followed by wide-spread inflation.

The disagreement between those of us who take this view of the industrial situation and those who think that improvement will The disagreement between those of us who take this view of the industrial situation and those who think that improvement will somehow continue is fundamental. No reconciliation or compromise is possible between these two views and viewpoints. The older theory, which is still accepted by the great majority of business men and has not been sufficiently discarded by the present administration, is that depressions and recovery come about automatically; that in order to attain and keep prosperity it is only necessary to produce goods and provide plenty of credit for production. The opposite theory holds that large production will not automatically bring about sufficient consumption, and that deliberate efforts must be made to put sufficient purchasing power into the hands of those who will use it in exchange for consumption goods. If the masters of industry have not the good sense to distribute sufficient purchasing power to the masses the deficiency must be supplied by governmental action.

Referring to these two theories in an article published in the New Republic, February 20, 1935, the distinguished British economist, John Maynard Keynes, writes: "The gulf between these two schools of thought is deeper, I believe, than most of those on either side of it realize." This judgment is even truer of economic thinking in the United States than in Great Britain. Mr. Hoover's administration accepted the older theory and strove to get the country out of the depression by providing easy credit in order to stimulate more production. As we know only too well, that attempt was a disastrous fallure.

Unfortunately, the same theory has been toyed with occasionally by the present administration. The condemnation of the bankers for not making loans easier to the industry, the endeavor to get business men to borrow from the E. F. C. and the Federal Reserve Board, the enormous ballyhoo carried on by the Federal Housing Corporation to facilitate and accelerate loans for house repairing and house building, the encouragement given to the depression.

These attempts have all failed for one simple reason: Men do not want to borrow money to finance production for which there exists no adequate purchasing power; nor do they seek loans, even on easy terms, to improve or build houses when they have no good prospect of being able to repay the amounts borrowed. The concessions to the older theory by the present administration are in sharp conflict with its efforts to increase the purchasing power of the masses. We cannot travel in opposite directions at the same time.

What, then, should Congress do to put more purchasing power in the hands of those who would use it? Two things: provide at least $5,000,000,000 a year for 3 years, if necessary, to carry on public works, thus enormously increasing employment both directly on the public projects and indirectly in private industries; and gradually reduce the working week to 30 hours, in order to increase the total volume of wage payments. So far as urban industries are concerned, there are no other ways by which an increase in their activities can be profitably achieved or justified. It would seem to be an elementary proposition that production cannot and will not be long continued unless the products are sold. Equally elementary is the proposition that the products will not be sold unless sufficient purchasing power is put into the hands of those who desire to buy. These are mainly the 10,000,000 unemployed.

Precisely because I am afraid that these measures will not be adopted, I feel almost certain that the business improvement of the recent months will not be continued in the months immediately.

recent months will not be continued in the months immediately ahead of us.

At the end of one of his most famous dissenting opinions some 3 years ago, Justice Brandeis wrote this sentence: "We must let our minds be bold." To enact the two measures that I have just sugminds be bold." To enact the two measures that I have just suggested would require courage on the part of our legislators; to support them would require not only courage but the abandonment of long-cherished theories on the part of business leaders. Several United States Senators desire to cut in two the $4,000,000,000 appropriation for work relief recommended by the President. They fear the bad effect of so much borrowing upon Government credit, Apparently they are not so much concerned about forcing millions of their fellow citizens to subsist on an inadequate dole. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States also demands that the appropriation be reduced by two billions and for the same reason—fear of a prolonged Government deficit. fear of a prolonged Government deficit.

In passing it should be noted that Public Works have not yet received a fair trial. Only a little more than one-fourth of the $3,300,000,000 appropriated in June 1933 had been actually ex-$3,300,000,000 appropriated in June 1933 had been actually expended, paid out for labor and materials, at the end of September 1934. This was the record of more than 15 months. At the end of 1934 the total amount expended since June 1933 for public works of all sorts, through loans as well as outright grants, was only a little in excess of two and one-half billion dollars. This sum covered expenditures by the Civil Works Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps, emergency housing, and loans to railroads, in addition to what are commonly known as "P. W. A. disbursements." In the years 1928 and 1929 the money spent for construction of various kinds by public authorities and by private persons and corporations aggregated at least three times two and one-half billion dollars. It is small wonder, then, that the public works actually executed since June 1933 have made a relatively feeble impression upon employment and business.

Legislators and business men alike seem to think that they are works actually executed since June 1933 have made a relatively feeble impression upon employment and business.

Legislators and business men alike seem to think that they are suggesting an insuperable obstacle to adequate appropriations for public works when they ask, "Where are we going to get the money?" Here are three answers: The national income in 1929—that is, the value of the goods and services produced that year—amounted to almost $90,000,000,000. The national income for the year 1934 has been authoritatively estimated at $52,000,000,000. Here is a potential $45,000,000,000, and this is many times the amount recommended for expenditure upon public works. Again, there are some $30,000,000,000 on deposit at the present time in the national banks. This proves that even in hard times there exists a social surplus of which a small part would be sufficient to meet this horrendous governmental deficit. The final answer is heavier Federal taxes upon incomes, inheritances, and excess profits.

Whichever theory, the antiquated or the realistic, is adopted by the Government, the country will face great risks. But those attending the governmental provision of purchasing power to the masses are incomparably smaller than those which are involved in a policy of drift and hoping against hope that somehow recovery will be brought about automatically. If recovery should follow upon the adoption of an adequate public-works program and the 30-hour week, the problem of paying for the deficit would be easy and simple. If recovery should not result from these measures, the country would be in no worse position than will certainly result from reliance upon the automatic method. In other words, there country would be in no worse position than will certainly result from reliance upon the automatic method. In other words, there is a good chance that the public works and the 30-hour method would be successful, while the failure of the opposite policy is about as certain as any future contingency in our complex industrial society. As between probable success and certain failure, it ought not to be difficult for any realistic person to make an intelligent to the second of the

GEORGE WASHINGTON-ADDRESS BY POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by the Honorable James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at Peoria, Ill., on February 22 last.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PROBLEMS OF THE PRESIDENCY

It is not exaggeration to say that Washington has been in every Federal administration since the founding of the Republic. If the influence of the first President has not been manifest otherwise you may be assured that those who attack the administration are certain to contend that the incumbent has abandoned the precepts of his first governmental ancestor.

We cannot make an exception even of the initial administra-tion, for Washington himself, when he sent in a treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation with Great Britain, was assailed for the alleged "selling out his country at the behest of the New York merchants." His famous utterance in his farewell address, referring to entangling alliances, was scouted, and it was gravely asserted in one diatribe that the reason he put that provision in his valedictory was that "Washington had lately forced the United States into a treaty with Great Britain; that the treaty gave great privileges to England, and now, lest similar concessions be granted to France, he would have all political connections with Europe closed."

President Washington had acknowledged a congratulatory message from the New York Chamber of Commerce.

"Did the common people mean to put themselves on a par with the merchants and traders", commented the New York Journal with heavy satire. Please do not forget, gentlemen of the Creve Coeur Club, that I am speaking of the year 1795. To resume the quotation, "Were 5,000 of the mass to weigh against 400 stockholders? Let the swinish creatures not approach the presidential sanctuary with their gruntings. Was he to be pessented. 400 stockholders? Let the swinish creatures not approach the presidential sanctuary with their gruntings. Was he to be pestered with their opinions and have his nerves unstrung with their advice? Was he not sovereign, infallible, immaculate, omniscient? Hardened and presumptuous wretches, they did not deserve so good a monarch!"

a monarch!"

It took some time for the Father of his Country to get used to this sort of bombardment. He had had plenty of experience even before he became President, for as commander of the Continental troops, in addition to the lack of resources, the embarrassment of disconnected colonies quarreling about their quotas of troops, the system of short-term enlistments, lack of supplies and equipment, he was bedeviled by cabals to suppliant him and was subject to constant faultfinding because he did not win victories in pitched battles and did not keep the British out of New York and Philadelphia.

When he came to the Presidency although he was idelized by Philadelphia.

When he came to the Presidency, although he was idolized by the people, almost every move he made was denounced in the newspapers, and not infrequently in Congress, as paving the way to a dictatorship, if not to a crown. He was even arraigned because he rode in a carriage instead of going afoot or on horseback as became the Executive of a free democratic people. For a time he bore it all patiently and in silence. Once he broke out at a Cabinet meeting, declaring that he would rather be in his grave than in his present situation; rather be on his farm than be emperor of the world, and yet they were charging him with wanting to be a king. ing to be a king.

Later on his friends, over the signatures of classical Roman statesmen—which was the custom at the time—answered the attacks in the newspapers, and gradually the President ceased to pay any attention at all to them. He was not moved to comment even when his announcement that he would not serve a third term was declared to be because he knew he could not be elected and so was retiring to save himself from the shame of being supersected.

superseded.

And yet during all this period of defamation and abuse Wash-And yet during all this period of defamation and abuse Washington continued to be the people's hero. Apparently our fellow citizens of 144 years ago paid no more attention to the clamor of hostile politicians than they do today. Washington's Birthday was celebrated throughout the country even though Congress, after observing the anniversary for years, discontinued it to the accompaniment of comments that these celebrations were all part of the effort to accord George Washington kingly honors.

You today may be amused at the childish assaults under which our first President functioned while he was getting the country.

our first President functioned while he was getting the country into step for the long march of progress. In a general way all of the early Presidents had similar experiences. The hysterics of their critics have become mere historical curiosities, even though at the time the outcries were filling the air it might have seemed to a remote observer that the Nation was in convulsions and that the shipwreck of Government was imminent.

our politics always has been exciting. In the frenzy of campaigns and with a congressional election every 2 years and a Presidential election every 4 years it is difficult to say when a campaign begins. As a matter of fact, politics is never adjourned. Each election is a prelude to the next one, and nearly always it is the President who is the target of most of the firing. This is true even when the batteries are, for reasons of expediency, directed at the President's Cabinet or those others to whom are intrusted important duties under him.

As I suggested in the beginning, Washington is responsible for

As I suggested in the beginning, Washington is responsible for most of the customs of the White House. It is the precedent set by him that determines how much of state and how much of informality there is in the Presidential residence.

There is a general impression that Government publicity activities are of modern creation. We find a stately reference to this subject in Washington's Farewell Address when he said: "In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion it is essential that public opinion be enlightened." That does not sound very different from the utterance of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to this effect. He has said: "We need to have discussion of public questions in the cities, hamlets, and on the farms throughout the length and breadth of the land." I only give you these two quotations to illustrate that though every President had a new set of problems to solve, the philosophy of the great office remains essentially the same.

I have recited to you a few instances of the strange interpreta-tions put upon the acts of our first President. Hardly any of his successors escaped the same sort of partisan distortion. Jefferson was abused as a usurper of power when he effected the Louisiana Purchase, which his critics announced to be without the authority of the Constitution. New England threatened to secede when President Madison went into the War of 1812. Jackson was de-nounced as a Communist when he tackled the abuses of the bank-ing system. And so on down the line. ing system. And so on down the line.

I am not here, however, to give you a lesson in history. I merely wished to refresh your mind as to a particular phase of our political progress as a sort of background to a short discussion of present-day problems and present-day criticism.

day problems and present-day criticism.

President Roosevelt came to his office at the climax of a situation unparalleled in the life of the Republic. I need not tell you men how bad that situation was. On the 4th of March 1933 there was not a bank in the country that was at all sure from day to day if it could open its doors, and not one which was not besieged by constantly increasing crowds of panic-stricken depositors coming to take out their money. Nor was this panic unreasonable, for thousands of banks had failed and nobody knew whether there was safety anywhere. Business was almost at a standstill. About 15,000,000 people were out of work. Prohibition had given rise to gangs of enormous power, buttressed by enormous sums of illicit wealth.

The country looked to the new President to straighten things illicit wealth.

The country looked to the new President to straighten things out. I do not think I need tell you with what courage, decision, and skill he set about his task. For a time he was unhindered and unhampered, because the Nation was in such a state that any course that promised even an effort to make things better was felt to be a blessed relief from the period of drifting and inaction. But in a short time politics came again into the picture and the 1934 congressional campaign was on. Timidly at first some obscure figures began finding fault with the emergency measures Congress had authorized the President to take. As the campaign grew hotter, Congress was denounced by more prominent spokesmen of the opposition as having abdicated its authority in granting the President these powers. dent these powers.

dent these powers.

Before we were well into that campaign Franklin D. Roosevelt was accused on one hand of setting up a dictatorship and on the other hand of inaugurating a regime of communism. What he really was doing was setting up the machinery which in his judgment was best calculated to restore our industrial structure, to correct as far as possible the unendurable unemployment situation, and to take over the burden of keeping alive those unfortunates who, through no fault of their own, were destitute. This was a burden that had overleaped the capacity of private charity. Government, and Government alone, was capable of dealing with it.

The President's critics keep insisting that this or that branch of emergency service has broken down. What the people generally think about it was indicated by last November's election, when practically every senatorial candidate who had supported the President's policies was reelected and practically every man who had taken an opposite tack was defeated. And the same is true in even greater measure as to the House of Representatives.

I am not very fond of statistics myself, but I should like to call

I am not very fond of statistics myself, but I should like to call your attention to some recent figures from the Internal Revenue Bureau. I note, for example, that the income-tax collections during the calendar year of 1934 summed up something over $200,000,000 more than those of the previous year. Now, I know that the average citizen doesn't throw up his hat in celebration of having paid more taxes. So the tax receipts furnish an excellent index to the financial condition throughout the country. Now, I must ask you to do a little sum in arithmetic. The incometax returns furnished by the Treasury in July last, being the close of the fiscal year, showed an increase of about $70,000,000 over those of the year before. In other words, we collected $130,000,000 more during 1934 than the amount the taxpayers presented as their obligation for the fiscal year ending last July 1. Of course, the periods covered are not precisely the same, but the comparison is near enough to illustrate this point. The excess of payments, as the Treasury informs me, is due in large part to back taxes. Our income-receiving population, which was unable to meet tax payments when they fell due, had attained such a degree of prosperity that they were not only able to take care of their current obligations but to pay up what they were short the year before. I am not very fond of statistics myself, but I should like to call their current obligations but to pay up what they were short the year before.

Let us take up the subject from another angle. One of the saddest indexes of the depression was the steadily diminishing amount of our exports. Well, our exports during 1934 went up approximately half a billion dollars over those of 1933. That means that in 1 year we gained 33 percent, where previous years showed a continuous drop.

showed a continuous drop.

If you want a further index, suppose you look at the banking side of the situation. The Federal Reserve Board recently issued a report showing that bank deposits increased in 1934 over the previous year $5,700,000,000, and that during the year there were fewer bank failures than at any time since 1920. In 1932 the bank failures averaged 15 a day.

Now the bank-deposit figures must reflect two things: One, they reflect the natural consequence of the increased incomes, and the other, the rebirth of confidence in our financial institutions.

institutions.

Perhaps we should all be better satisfied if the heavier volume of deposits was out working in the form of investments, but everything cannot be done in a day. The first big step toward business recovery which, of course, involves amelioration of the business recovery which, of course, involves amelioration of the unemployment problem, was to cure people of their fear that their money was only safe under the mattress or hidden in an old sock. The bank deposits show that the era of this kind of hoarding is over. A banker told me recently that farmers were coming in with bundles of the old-time big currency that has been out of circulation generally for several years.

This indicates that the public's frame of mind is back pretty nearly to where it was before the terror of the depression came upon us and those big bills were hidden away. In the orderly course of things this money is going to seek investment. The restless American business man is not going to let his capital remain idle much longer. In this connection I note a rather significant poll that was taken by the United Business Service of Boston. They asked for expressions of opinion from the presidents of 1,650 corporations as to the business prospects of the coming year. Eighty-seven percent of these answered "yes" to the inquiry, "Do you expect an increase in total business next year?" Sixty-four percent of them expressed their expectation of employing more workmen.

In citing these figures to you I merely want to show that the administration is on the right track; that, despite all the criticism, despite all the prophecies of doom and disaster, this country is getting along pretty well. Our dollar is the strongest of world currencies, as evidenced by the inflow of gold into this country. Our bonds are at a premium, and generally the credit of the United States is at a high point here and abroad.

The Supreme Court, in sustaining the Government's position in

The Supreme Court, in sustaining the Government's position in regard to contracts payable in gold, has confirmed this statement. It pointed out that the present dollar had approximately the same purchasing power as the old dollar, and that, therefore, the people who sought to get more than the face value of their bonds had no case.

One hy one the verticus factors in the new deal emergency.

One by one the various factors in the new-deal emergency measures come before the courts, and on every essential point so far their validity has been sustained. This is interesting, in view of the cries of the administration's opponents that the Constitution is being shot to pieces.

Thomas Jefferson more than a century ago might have been looking prophetically at our own day and age when he said:

"Some men look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence and deem them like the ark of the covenant—too sacred to be touched. They ascribe to the men of the preceding age a wisdom more than human and suppose what they did to be beyond amendment. I knew that age well; I belonged to it and labored with it. It deserved well of its country. It was very like the present but without the experience of the present—I am certainly not an advocate of frequent and untried changes in laws and constitutions, but I know also that laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind."

Just keep these facts in mind when some of our gloomy brethren begin moaning to you about the uncertainties of the future and express their shock and concern at the magnitude of the relief fund which Congress recently provided.

The expenditure of the fund is an absolutely necessary part of the recovery program. People cannot be left to starve in the richest country in the world. Nobody wants direct Government relief to continue a day longer than it has to continue. And after 2 years of experimentation, it has been demonstrated that the most practical form of relief is through public works. In no other way can the demonalization of a considerable portion of our population be avoided.

Every nation has learned that people once hardened to the dole in many cases here no ambition to change their status. So the "Some men look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence

Every nation has learned that people once hardened to the dole in many cases have no ambition to change their status. So the work plan was substituted, on the theory that it not only preserves their self-respect but makes them eager to find another position where the wages will naturally be better.

position where the wages will naturally be better.

Next comes the question of how the debt incurred by the United States in these relief measures is to be discharged. Well, we had a huge debt at the close of the World War and the taxes, progressively reduced, took care of it without anybody experiencing any particular hardship. Why should anybody assume any different course of events in relation to this debt incurred in order to maintain our people until they can find work? And, incidentally what possible alternative is there?

A good many people have cited the example of Great Britain. Does any American believe that in this period of adversity the United States could impose such taxes as they pay in England? On the other hand when people are making money a tax burden is borne with ease, and in the years to come we may be sure that it will require no great length of time to bring the whole expenditures of Government within the Budget.

Another complaint you hear nowadays is that the new relief

Another complaint you hear nowadays is that the new relief funds are to be disbursed by the President, the point being made that he should be hedged about and told how the money is to that he should be hedged about and told how the money is to be distributed by congressional enactment. We know from experience what has happened in the past, with each Congressman eager to secure particular favors for his own district; with the "logrolling" and "pork barrel" departures inseparable from the pressure to which individual Congressmen are subjected. I do not mean by this to charge Congress either with inefficiency or rapacity. It is simply that a group aggregating 500 Members could not administer such a fund with the elasticity and care that it deserves. Moreover, if it required a separate act of Congress to determine each project to be financed the people would starve to death before the money was allotted, for each project would be debated and each section would insist on compensation for what some other section got. As well might Congress have undertaken to tell the Secretary of War where and how the war appropriations should be expended as that it should tell the President in this war against adversity how, when, and where this relief work should be done.

You are practical men. I do not have to tell you of the con-

You are practical men. I do not have to tell you of the contrast between now and when the depression was at its lowest depth. You have seen the President in action. You know that under his administration we have gained on the depression, and you certainly can trust Franklin D. Roosevelt not to let his country down. His job is only half done. You can make completion of it easier or harder; speedier or slower by cooperating with him or by opposing him.

It isn't a question of politics except to the extent that the essence of politics is good government. When I tell you that political success over the long haul is dependent on good government, I am indulging in no campaign argument. True, political strategy and political tricks have occasionally won an election, but it is true in an even greater degree that no election amounts to much in the general history of things unless those elected are able to satisfy the people that their administration is honest, intelligent, and just.

It was not the Democratic party that put Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House. It was the votes of that vast section of our people who are independent in thought and on whom the party label rests but lightly. These flocked to the Democratic standard, not because that standard bore the Democratic insignia but because its candidate promised certain things and his life in public service told them that the promises would be kept.

There is no easy, swift method of correcting such a situation as that in which the country found itself 2 years ago. It's a slow, arduous process to rebuild national prosperity. Our President works no miracles. What has been accomplished has been the result of the deepest thought and the utmost industry of which

It is this picture I wish to leave with you—that your Nation's affairs are in capable hands; that nobody has anything to fear from the future beyond the long, hard pull that lies between us and contentment.

contentment.

Undoubtedly some are impatient. Undoubtedly some regard the new processes with apprehension. Undoubtedly the specially privileged shudder at the thought that these privileges should in any way be modified. It has been so at every stage in our history. Every step in our progress has frightened somebody. But, after all, what is there to be afraid of? All that is being done is what the Constitution permits, and all that is being done is being done under the direction of a stout-hearted, conscientious President, with no wild theories, such as taking the profit out of business, but a simple purpose to make this a better, happier country than it has been during the past few years.

EXPORT OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES—STATEMENT BY SECRETARY WALLACE

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I request unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement made by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, Wednesday, January 30, 1935.

The statement deals with our exports, and particularly with exports of agricultural commodities. It deals with a subject that is receiving much attention and discussion at this time, and provides much valuable information.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXTENT OF REDUCTION OF COTTON EXPORTS

In August 1934 the exports of cotton were 83 percent of the 10-year average (1923-33) exports for that month. Since August monthly exports have been running only between 50 and 60 percent of the 10-year averages for the corresponding months. In December, the last month for which we have figures, cotton exports were 62 percent of the corresponding monthly average. For the whole 5-month period from August to December cotton exports were 60 percent of the 10-year average, and 55 percent of the exports in the corresponding period in 1933.

Prestically all of our foreign markets have shared in the decline

Practically all of our foreign markets have shared in the decline in cotton exports, with the greatest reductions taking place in the shipments to the so-called "gold bloc" countries, including France, Belgium, Italy, and for this purpose also Germany. Japan is, in fact, the only important market that has maintained its purchases of our cotton on a scale comparable with the 10-year average.

REDUCTION OF EXPORTS NO GREATER IN COTTON THAN IN OTHER LINES

It is important to note, however, that the decline in exports has It is important to note, however, that the decline in exports has not been confined to cotton. Movements of all our other principal agricultural exports except tobacco, but including lard, cured pork, wheat, and apples, have been reduced even more than has cotton. The exports of lard, for example, have fallen from around 50 percent of the 10-year average in July to less than 25 percent in December. The exports of industrial goods—that is, finished and semifinished manufactures—likewise show almost as great reduction as do cotton exports. During the 5-month period—July through November of 1934—the volume of exports of industrial products amounted to 66 percent of the 10-year average, while the volume of all agricultural products were 52 percent and the volume of cotton exports 62 percent. On a value hasis the comparative of cotton exports 62 percent. On a value basis the comparative position is much the same. The value of the industrial exports was 56 percent of the 10-year average, while the value of agricultural exports as a whole was 45 percent and the value of cotton exports was 45 percent.

During the 1931 and 1932 seasons, it is true, the exports of cotton were far better maintained than were exports of most other commodities. That was the period when cotton was selling at 5 and 6 cents a pound. Now that we are no longer offering cotton at such bargain prices, it is not being snapped up so quickly.

REDUCTION IN FOREIGN CONSUMPTION OF OUR COTTON NOT SO GREAT AS IN EXPORTS

Foreign consumption of American cotton for the season to date shows much less decline from consumption in previous years than do cotton exports. In the first 4 months of the current season, from August 1 to November 30, exports from the United States amounted to 1,894,000 bales as compared with 3,360,000 bales for the comparable period a year earlier. Estimates made by the New York Cotton Exchange place foreign consumption of American cotton for the 4 months this season at 2,239,000 bales as compared with 2,844,000 bales in 1933. Foreign consumption of American cotton thus fell only 605,000 bales, or 21 percent, while exports from the United States fell 1,466,000 bales, or 44 percent. Instead of importing, foreign mills have been eating into their stocks of American cotton. This tendency is confirmed by available figures showing stocks of American cotton in European ports. As reported by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, stocks of American cotton in European ports totaled but 811,000 bales on January 18, 1935, as compared with 1,605,000 bales for the corresponding last year. It is, therefore, quite wrong to assume that foreign mills can or will shift from American to foreign cotton this year in anything like the degree to which American exports have Foreign consumption of American cotton for the season to date year in anything like the degree to which American exports have declined. Instead, after the stocks are used up, they will probably start buying from us in larger volume.

CAUSES OF THE DECLINE IN EXPORTS AND FOREIGN CONSUMPTION

As Dr. Tugwell will show in more detail the increase in world acreage and production has not been so significant as the public has been led to believe. Foreign acreage did increase 9 percent in 1933, it is true, just as our own cotton farmers increased their plantings 12 percent in the same year, before the plow-up campaign was put into effect. For the 1934-35 season, present reports indicate foreign production not more than 2 percent above 1933-34 season—world acreage estimates are not yet available. Outside of Russia and China, where production is dominantly for domestic use, the increases are even less marked. India and Egypt. our use, the increases are even less marked. India and Egypt, our principal competitors, show a continued acreage of 23.6 million in 1932, 25.6 in 1933, and 24.4 in 1934, compared with a previous record of 29.4 million in 1925. The widely heralded increases in Brazilian acreage are much more than offset by the recent declines in these two countries.

1. Decreased supplies of American cotton

During recent years the abnormally large supplies of our cotton have kept its price unusually low in comparison with prices of poorer cottons, such as Indian. As supplies of American are reduced relative to supplies of other cottons, its price will tend to rise in comparison with the prices of these competing cottons. This shift in relative prices does tend to shift foreign consumption to some extent to foreign growths, just as in previous years changes in the relative supplies of American and foreign cottons have been reflected in corresponding changes in relative prices and consumpreflected in corresponding changes in relative prices and consumption. In 1923-24, when American cotton constituted 51 percent of tion. In 1923-24, when American cotton constituted 51 percent of the world supply of all cotton, only 39 percent of all cotton consumed abroad was American. In that year American Middling cotton in Liverpool averaged 8.6 cents per pound above no. 1 fine Indian Oomra. In 1926-27, when American cotton constituted 62 percent of the world supply of all cotton, 47 percent of all cotton consumed in foreign countries was American. In that year American Middling in Liverpool averaged only 2 cents per pound above Indian Oomra. In actual quantity the supply of American cotton increased from 13,444,000 bales in 1923-24 to 23,473,000 bales in 1926-27, while the consumption of American cotton in foreign countries rose from 5,747,000 bales in 1923-24 to 8,897,000 bales in 1926-27. In contrast with the increase of 3,150,000 bales in the foreign consumption of American cotton between 1923-24 and 1926-27, there was an increase of over 10,000,000 bales in the supply of American cotton, while the price received by American farmers of American cotton, while the price received by American farmers fell from 28.7 cents to 12.5 cents per pound. Although exports increased nearly five and one-half million bales, the farm value of the cotton exported in 1926-27 was over $100,000,000 less than the farm value of cotton exported in 1923-24.

farm value of cotton exported in 1923-24.

There is some tendency for consumption and exports of American cotton to increase as the supply of American cotton increases relatively to the supply of all cotton and as prices of American cotton decline correspondingly, both actually and relatively to prices of foreign growths. The increase in actual consumption, however, tends to be less than in exports, for marked increases in exports go largely into increased stocks, and hence cannot continue very long. From the standpoint of supplies and prices of American cotton our problem is whether we wish to bring about such increases in foreign consumption and exports of American cotton as would result from increasing our supplies and reducing cotton as would result from increasing our supplies and reducing our prices again, or whether we wish to continue to restrict our supplies and see foreign consumers take only such quantities of our cotton as they will buy at prices more favorable to American producers.

2. Relatively high price of spot cotton

When prices of spot cotton are high relative to prices of futures, and when prices for near-month futures are high relative to prices for distant futures, merchants have difficulty in hedging their operations in the customary manner as the spread between nearmonth and distant-month futures does not provide for carrying costs. In such circumstances, consumers tend to purchase only current requirements, and merchants usually prefer to dispose of stocks rather than to acquire stocks for holding. The high price of spot cotton as compared with near-month futures, and the high price of 1934-35 crop-year futures as compared with prices of 1935-36 crop-year futures have no doubt had some adverse effect on exports on American cotton for the season to date. This may explain in part the tendency of foreign mills to deplete stocks of American cotton this season.

In current discussions some have claimed that the 12-cent loan on cotton has caused the high basis this year and disrupted the export trade. Undoubtedly, the 12-cent loan did help strengthen the basis, since it offered farmers an opportunity to store cotton in their own names and still get enough money to meet current expenses. As a result, a large volume of cotton has been stored that would otherwise have been forced onto the market, and thereby have caused interior prices to weeken.

that would otherwise have been forced onto the market, and thereby have caused interior prices to weaken.

It should be observed, however, that other factors also tended to cause prices of near-month futures to be high relative to prices for distant futures. In 1934 the drought, along with the acreage-reduction program, caused a material reduction in the crops of Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas. According to the December crop estimate, the crop in Texas is 2,395,000 bales this year, compared with 4,500,000 bales in 1932; the crop in Oklahoma is 325,000 bales, compared with 1,084,000 bales in 1932; and the crop in Arkansas is 875,000 bales, compared with 1,317,000 bales in 1932. These reductions caused in part by the drought are reflected in the total United States crop, which is estimated at 9,731,000 bales, as compared with 13,001,000 bales in 1932. The short crops of 1921, 1922, and 1923, when there was no Government program in effect, were each associated with a high basis, and in each of these years were each associated with a high basis, and in each of these years the prices of futures for delivery within the crop year tended to exceed the prices of more distant futures. For example, in November 1921 the price of %-inch Middling cotton in the 10 spot markets averaged 17.43 cents per pound, whereas the prices of the various New York futures were as follows:

	pound
December	17.61
March July	_ 17.41 _ 16.76
October of the following crop year	15.94

In January 1923 the price of Middling %-inch cotton in the 10 spot markets averaged 27.39 cents per pound, whereas prices for York futures were as follows:

	pound
January	27.18
May July	27.66 27.36
October	25.50
December	25. 28

Not only is this tendency shown in cotton prices for previous years of small crops but it has existed in a pronounced degree in grain prices this year. Chicago corn futures on January 20, 1935, closed as follows:

	Cents per bushel
May	83 1/8 -83
July	78 %
September	761/8

This so-called "old crop" futures for grain are consistently This so-called "old crop" futures for grain are consistently higher than new-crop futures for wheat, corn, oats, and rye on the various markets in this country. In comparison the price of Middling %-inch cotton at the 10 spot markets averaged 12.54 cents on January 25, 1935, compared with 12.50 for the March future, 12.55 for the July future, 12.47 for the October future, and 12.52 for the December future. Clearly, therefore, the situation is much more pronounced in the grain markets than it is in cotton, and it has been more pronounced in the cotton market in previous years than it is this year.

3. Decreasing supply of dollar exchange available to exporters

3. Decreasing supply of dollar exchange available to exporters

I have frequently pointed out the significance of the change of the United States from a debtor to a creditor country. Before the war a large part of our agricultural exports served, in effect, as payments on our debts to foreign countries. Since the war we have been in exactly the opposite position with foreign countries owing us more than we owe them. We no longer found it necessary to export in order to make payments on our debts, but nevertheless our exports continued through the decade of the twenties to exceed greatly our imports of goods and services. This was made possible by large new lending to foreign countries. In effect, we were lending them the money to buy our goods. Since 1931 our long-term investments in foreign countries have been greatly diminished and our international ledger has been balanced by a large outflow of short-term funds. This brings us down to the year 1934. We do not as yet have figures on the balance of payments for the entire year, but the Department of Commerce has made estimates for the first 6 months, and that, together with certain additional information, provides us with a rough picture of the situation. In 1934 our exports of goods for the year as a whole showed a substantial increase over 1933, while our imports increased to a much smaller extent. In other words, instead of moving in the direction of balancing our international payments through greater imports of goods and services, we moved further away from that position. For the year as a whole we shipped abroad about $500,000,000 more of merchandise than we imported. How was it possible for foreigners to pay for this large excess of merchandise exports? As I have said, we do not have a complete picture for the year as a whole, but we do not need all the detailed figures to put our finger on the principal factor, namely, the tremendous importation, in excess of $1,000,000,000, of gold. Part of this gold went to purchase American securities, it is true, but a large part went to balance the merchandise accounts.

This then is the resistant for most of the 16 ways of the content of the second of th can securities, it is true, but a large part went to balance the merchandise accounts.

This, then, is the position: For most of the 10 years after the war our imports failed to balance our exports and the excess was made up by exports of long-term capital. In the years from 1931 to 1933 the difference was made up by the exports of short-term capital. And finally, in 1934, the difference was made up largely by the importation of gold. It does not seem likely that we can continue to import gold in large volume, partly because we have such a large part of the world's supply already and partly because such a course would probably mean new monetary chaos abroad, and from such chaos we would stand to lose more than we could gain. Foreigners might still further default or postpone their interest and dividend obligations to Americans and instead pay for our excess of exports. Or we could go ahead again with the temporary expedient of placing large amounts of short-term banking funds in European capital.

Should none of these adjustments take place, and none of them seem to be of the sort to be encouraged, it is to be expected that an adjustment will be brought about in the balance between our exports and imports of goods and services. This, of course, might occur either through an increase in imports or through a decrease in exports. We are approaching the end of the period when we can continue trade by stop-gag expedients. We now have to face either a contraction in our excess of exports, of which cotton makes up such an important part, or we must make up our minds to bring in larger imports in order to make possible a continued large export trade.

Possible Domestic Cotton Programs in Relation to world markets.

POSSIBLE DOMESTIC COTTON PROGRAMS IN RELATION TO WORLD MARKETS

As Mr. Cobb will explain more fully, our production-control program was not designed to create a shortage of American cotton. It was developed to meet a situation because drastic declines in prices had failed to stimulate consumption adequately to relieve our markets of excessive supplies. The world carry-over of American cotton had risen from approximately 4,500,000 bales on August 1, 1929, to 13,000,000 bales on August 1, 1932. The production-control programs and the drought in 1934 have reduced the surplus. But the world carry-over of American cotton on August 1, 1934, was But the world carry-over of American cotton on August 1, 1934, was at the high level of 10,634,000 bales, and it is indicated that the carry-over will still be well above normal at the end of the current

But the world carry-over of American cotton on August 1, 1934, was at the high level of 10,634,000 bales, and it is indicated that the carry-over will still be well above normal at the end of the current marketing year.

There would appear to be three general alternatives for the cotton programs for the future: (1) A continuation of the severe control program until the surplus of American cotton is eliminated; (2) a program of moderate restrictions, resulting probably in a somewhat lower price and calling for a corresponding increase in the rate of processing tax, but with no direct price supporting efforts or loan programs; (3) the domestic-allotment program with no control of production, but with benefit payments on the domestically consumed portion of the crop, and a processing tax sufficient to bring the price on domestically consumed cotton to a parity level.

The cotton-control program already announced for 1935 is in line with the programs that were in operation in 1933 and 1934, and aims at a further reduction in the surplus. With average yields and a continuation of moderate improvement in demand conditions, it is expected that the present programs should bring the world carry-over of American cotton down to about 7,500,000 bales by the end of the 1935-1936 marketing year. The carry-over would still be above average, but it would represent a material reduction from the carry-over existing on August 1, 1932, before these programs were undertaken.

In continuing a program in this direction until the surplus of American cotton is completely eliminated, it would be necessary to keep a constant watch on the trend of acreage and production in foreign countries. The facts as to foreign competition, which Mr. Tugwell will present, show that recently there has been much less increase in foreign acreage than has been generally assumed, and that the potentialities for further increase are definitely limited. We must be ready to adjust ourselves, however, if foreign production should become a greater menace to our does not stimulate more increase in foreign acreages than has yet appeared, and if yields are not above average, it would seem that 1 or 2 years more of drastic control here might prove sufficient to bring world carry-overs completely down to normal levels.

A second possibility would be to shift to a program which in-volved continued but less drastic restriction of acreage and continued parity payments to farmers. Under such a program, further progress in reducing the excessive carry-overs would be spread over a much larger number of years, and cotton prices would not be increased toward parity so rapidly as under the other program.

Under such a program, it would probably be difficult to continue cotton loans at present levels, since there would be little assurance that cotton prices would soon recover to the parity level. If prices should decline materially under such a program, it would be necessary, of course, to increase the rate of the processing tax. By returning the proceeds of the tax to farmers it would be possible to assure producers of approximately parity prices for the cotton consumed in the United States. The restriction on acreage expansion would reduce the probability of excessive crops, such as that of 1926. Also, following years of unusually high yields per acre, such as those of 1931, it would be easy to revert to a program of more stringent production control. In general, however, such a moderate program would not be aimed at further drastic reductions in carry-over, but would be designed rather to reduce the probability of excessive production. Such a program could not be construed by foreign producing countries as an invitation for them to expand their production.

The third alternative would be along the lines originally outlined them to expand their production.

The third alternative would be along the lines originally outlined in the domestic allotment plan. The essence of such a program would be to remove all restrictions from production, but to make benefit payments to farmers sufficient to equal the parity price for that portion of the crop entering domestic consumption, Farmers would be free to produce as much as they desired for sale at world-market prices. The rate of the processing tax and the amount of parity payments would depend upon how closely world demand held prices to parity levels. Under such program if prices were to decline severely the rate of tax would have to be increased, if the domestic mills did not rebel against such a high rate of tax. if the domestic mills did not rebel against such a high rate of tax. The net result to domestic consumers would not be altered materially; that is, the cost to consumers would remain at approximately rially; that is, the cost to consumers would remain at approximately the parity price level.

Mr. Johnston will discuss in detail the probable results of such a program. At this point I will merely summarize the facts he will present by saying that there are strong grounds for believing that such a program would not only not increase the gross income of cotton producers, but would definitely reduce it. In fact, the studies we have made so far suggest that even after allowing for the increased business that would be done by ginners, railroads, and exporters, the South would actually receive less total income from an unrestricted production of cotton than it would receive from a moderate production in line with world demands an unrestricted production of cotton than it would receive from a moderate production in line with world demands.

If this third program were put into effect this year it is probable that there would be a material increase in the cotton acreage. Unless business improves materially, it is probable that our cotton acreage under such a program would again reach the 45,000,000-acre level in existence in 1926, and in years of high yields we would again produce an 18,000,000-bale crop. The depressing effects of such large crops would be moderated, however, since farmers would at least get parity prices on that portion of the crop consumed domestically. Experience from 1929 to 1933 shows that low prices have a very moderate effect in reducing foreign production. It is improbable, therefore, that even under such a program we would force foreign producers out of cotton production at prices that would be acceptable to American farmers, and the net effect might be merely to force down world cotton prices without any significant beneficial result here or abroad.

The program for recapturing foreign trade by again offering our

The program for recapturing foreign trade by again offering our cotton for what it will bring appears, therefore, to have insuperable objections. For the future we must choose between the present program of drastic restriction and an intermediate program of production balanced to current consumption, while selling abroad only as much cotton as the world will take at reasonable prices to our producers. Instead of expanding exports by giving the cotton away, we must concentrate on helping the rest of the world to buy our cotton at prices at which we can afford to sell.

POSSIBILITIES OF EXPANDING FOREIGN BUYING POWER FOR COTTON

Possibilities of expanding foreign buying power we must take into account the fundamental problem of our balance of payments, which has already been mentioned. The United States is now, and will probably continue to be, a creditor Nation. Payments by foreigners of interest and dividends on American investments abroad will probably definitely exceed our payments of interest and dividends on foreign investments in this country. A considerable part of the purchasing power made available to foreigners through our purchases abroad will then have to be used to make these payments. This would seem to point definitely to a large increase in our imports of goods and services as the only hopeful basis for a substantial recovery in our exports. We must, therefore, explore every possibility of expanding imports, so as to give our foreign customers the dollar exchange needed to buy our cotton and other goods. We already bring in a considerable volume of imports free of duty, and an expansion in the quantity and value of these imports would depend largely upon improvement in our business conditions. Aside from the products now on the free list, our tariff and other policies tend greatly to restrict imports into the United States. At the present time this problem is being attacked chiefly through the reciprocal tradeagreements program which contemplates securing a reduction in trade between the foreign countries in accurate agreements for accurate of the products of the products of the products of the products of the product of the products of the product problem is being attacked chiefly through the reciprocal tradeagreements program which contemplates securing a reduction in trade barriers in foreign countries in reciprocal exchange for concessions made by the United States. This is undoubtedly a step in an effort toward import expansion, but, so far as the current season is concerned, it does not seem likely that the trade-agreements program will result in any substantial increase in imports.
While the trade-agreements program should continue to be pushed vigorously, other possible means of increasing imports should also be considered. I should like to mention as one possible approach a change in our antidumping and countervailingduty legislation, which now seems to be having a very restrictive effect upon imports, particularly from the countries still on the gold standard. It appears that many exporters in the gold-standard countries are in a position to quote competitive world prices, but importers in the United States in many cases refrain from purchasing at such prices because of the penalties under our antidumping legislation. In its present form this legislation allows little leeway for administrative action. It might be a good idea to make a change in this legislation which would provide more flexibility. For instance, we know of several cases where more of our cotton and other products might be sold in particular foreign countries if we would accept larger imports from those countries and where such increased imports are made difficult or impossible by our antidumping laws. At the present time we consider it dumping if a country exports at below its own internal level of prices. Changing our law so as not to call it dumping, so long as the goods offered by gold-standard countries were not offered below the world level of prices, might do much to break the export congestion which now impedes sales by the gold-standard countries.

Excitors a meterial increase of imports in excess of exports it is tries.

Falling a material increase of imports in excess of exports, it is obvious that we must continue, if the South is to have a fair price for its cotton, to engage in production control at least until the carry-over as of August 1 is down to 5,000,000 bales.

In summary, then, these facts stand out:

1. Cotton exports have declined slightly more than industrial products but less than most other agricultural products.

2. While cotton exports so far this season have declined nearly 45 percent from last year, consumption of American cotton abroad has declined only 22 percent. The sharp reduction in stocks abroad suggests that foreign purchases of our cotton would soon be resumed.

3. The unusual reduction in exports during the past 5 months is due to several cause

due to several causes:

A. Spot cotton relatively high compared to distant futures, tending to cause dealers and foreign consumers to defer purchases. The drought conditions, the shorter supplies, and the withholding of loan cotton by farmers have combined to support this high basis.

B. Reduced dollar exchange available abroad. During the past season, foreign purchases were facilitated by our extraordinary imports of gold. These and other means of financing exports without taking corresponding imports are approaching their end.

4. It is not clear that it will pay cotton producers to recapture completely their foreign markets; the largest exports in the past have always meant reduced incomes to cotton producers. This conclusion would be invalidated in case the United States again became a debtor Nation or greatly increased her imports over exports.

exports.

5. The domestic cotton program for the future will necessarily have some effect upon exports. There are three possibilities:

A. Continued drastic restriction until excess world supplies are eliminated. This might take 1 or 2 years after 1935, and might mean restriction of consumption of our cotton abroad during such production. mean restriction of consumption of our extent abroad during such period. An international agreement to restrict production would increase the effectiveness of such a program.

B. An intermediate program of supply restricted to current needs, with exports free to move at world levels. This would mean no further rapid progress toward parity prices, but increased mean no further rapid progress toward parity prices, but increased competition with foreign growths.

C. A domestic allotment program of benefit payments on domestic production and unrestricted production for export, at world levels. This would soon lower prices so severely that it would probably reduce cotton farmers' incomes from current levels, while not necessarily materially reducing foreign production duction.

duction.

6. The increasing inability of our foreign cotton customers to buy is the most serious factor. This can be corrected in a permanent way only by our taking imports in excess of exports, so as to provide foreigners the dollar exchange to pay the interest owing us and give them the ability to buy our exports at a fair price. Our reciprocal tariff bargaining program is working in this direction, but is too slow for much effect in 1935. To accelerate the program, it would be necessary to bring about:

A. Modification of our antidumping tariffs, as applied to gold-standard countries.

standard countries.

B. A general reduction in tariff rates.

If these steps cannot be brought about it will be necessary in fairness to the southern farmer to continue with cotton control at least until the carry-over is down to 5,000,000 bales.

GOLD AS A FACTOR IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS-ADDRESS BY SENATOR THOMAS OF OKLAHOMA

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] on the subject "Gold as a Factor in International Relations" before the Foreign Policy Association at Boston, Mass., on last Satur-

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A few days ago, while listening to the reading of our first President's Farewell Address in the Senate of the United States, your very kind invitation to attend this luncheon was delivered to me, and in the spirit of the occasion and with the cryptic admonitions of the Father of his Country finding reapproval in my consciousness, I made haste to accept.

My invitation stated that the subject for consideration and discussion would be Gold as a Factor in International Relations.

In approaching this most important and very far-reaching question we have a guiding lamp in that last address of General

Washington.

"A solicitude for your welfare", said Washington, "urges me to recommend to your frequent review some sentiments which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all important to the permanency of your felicity as a people."

At the time those words were uttered General Washington was 64 years of age, and of those years 45 had been spent in the service of his country. Let me quote a few of the entreaties of Washington:

"Cherish public credit."
"To preserve credit use it sparingly."
"Avoid the accumulation of debt."

"To pay debts there must be revenue."
"To have revenues there must be taxes."

To the foregoing let me add:
To secure taxes there must be profits.
To have profits there must be business.

To have business, either domestic or international, we must have workable monetary system or we are forced to resort to barter. Extended international barter is impossible, and successful domestic barter is impracticable.

The greatest economic necessity of any ambitious nation is a workable and practical system of money and credits.

Every nation has its own domestic plan for the issuance and control of both money and credits.

One of the first acts of President Washington was to direct Alexander Hamilton, his Secretary of the Treasury, to formulate a financial system for the new Nation. Secretary Hamilton recommended that the Nation should use gold and silver at the natural ratio of approximately 16 to 1 with the dollar or unit to be of the value of a Spanish milled dollar and to contain 371½ grains of pure silver. This act was passed and approved on April 2, 1792. For almost 100 years the silver dollar was the standard of our system of money.

of money.

In 1873 the silver dollar was abandoned as our standard coin. In 1900 the gold dollar was made the standard, and save for a few months in 1933-34 the gold dollar has been and now is the standard of our American monetary system. Formerly the most ambitious and active nations were on some form of a gold standard. Today only a few remain, and they are only on a pseudogold

Today and for centuries past over one-half of the people of the world have been and are on a silver standard.

Today, because of conditions not necessary to mention, world exchange and national domestic money systems are chaotic.

Almost without exception the monetary units of the several nations are now undergoing change, adjustment, and regulation. Why have so many nations gone off gold? Has gold in the past, is gold today, and will gold in the future be a factor in international relations?

If you will tell me how to control the world value of gold, I will tell you how to keep the world at peace.

That may seem to be an extravagant statement, but let us look at the facts

The world value of gold controls the price level of every goldstandard nation. The price level in any country determines the standard of living of the people of that country. Their desire to maintain or to raise the standard of living causes them to erect tariffs and trade embargoes, which precipitate commercial warfare. Then follow diplomatic irritation and, too often, war at

No nation or group of nations has found a way to control the world value of gold. Great Britain perfected and for more than a century managed the international gold standard for the gold-using world. Until the World War caused violent dislocations, the value of gold remained relatively more stable than the value of many other commodities. Therefore gold continued to be accepted as a reasonably dependent measure of value. Man hadrit cepted as a reasonably dependable measure of value. Men hadn't invented anything better.

The World War brought a violent decline in the value of gold. Warring nations went off the gold standard and onto paper money, while they exported their gold reserves to neutral countries in exchange for food and munitions. A billion of dollars of gold poured into the United States. As gold became cheap, commodities became dear. In 1920 it required 10 ounces of gold to buy a bale of cotton. Other primary or basic commodities of worldwide use became correspondingly dear.

With the war over, nations returned to the gold standard. The wide use became correspondingly dear.

With the war over, nations returned to the gold standard. The demand for gold to rebuild reserves behind paper currencies caused gold to rise in value. It required less and less gold to buy a bale of cotton or a cow or a bushel of wheat. France returned to the gold standard in 1928 and within a year a veritable panic of gold hoarding spread over the world. At the pit of the depression a bale of cotton could be bought for 1½ ounces of gold anywhere in the world, not counting trade barriers and transportation costs.

The value or buying power of gold, measured by the average.

The value or buying power of gold, measured by the average price of all the principal basic commodities, showed the following variations: If we take the buying power of gold in the year 1926 as 100, its pre-war buying power was 146. By 1920 it had fallen to 69. By 1933 it had risen to 250. Still many people imagine that the way to get stability is to make all money equivalent to a fixed weight of this one unstable commodity—gold.

It was this great rise in the value of gold—not overproduction of other commodities—which caused the world-wide collapse of commodity prices. World trade almost stopped. Because people could not sell their goods they imagined there was overproduction, when there was, taking the world as a whole, only maldistribution and underconsumption. So people turned their attention in almost every country to controlling production.

As Walter Lippmann says in an illuminating article in the March issue of the American magazine:

"The easiest place to begin is with the goods and services of foreigners. So, in a depression, tariffs are raised to a point where they become embargoes. Tariffs are followed by measures to cut down the production of crops and raw materials. This may be done by burning them or by dumping them in the ocean or by paying men not to grow crops or by plowing crops under. Then there are too many men for the jobs. So the next step is to compel those who have the jobs to work fewer hours and if possible to produce less while they work. There are too many factories. So laws are passed forbidding new factories to open, forbidding old factories to install new machinery, forbidding manufacturers to sell below cost. Too much money had been invested. So laws are passed making it difficult to invest new money.

"Each step in this restriction seems perfectly reasonable to those who cannot sell their goods. Yet the thing as a whole is perfectly insane."

The price level in every country was thrown into a tailspin by the world rise in the value of gold. It meant deflation in every country that was on a gold standard, whether prices were quoted in paper dollars, paper pounds, francs, guilders, pesos, yen, or what not. All property, all securities, all bank credit money and all paper money are affected by the changes in the world value of gold so long as the currency of a country is kept equival the devastating deflation of the last 5 years—so long as that country remained on a gold standard.

Unfortunately, people the world over understood very little about the processes of deflation. They did not understand how prices are controlled, and the way they rise and fall. Unfortunately, all prices do not fall the same distance or at the same rate. Farmers and other producers of primary or basic commodities learned the lesson first because their prices declined rapidly. On the other hand, taxes, wages, retail prices, cost of living, interest charges, and debts decline very slowly, if they decline at all. If the prices of all goods and services fell equally and at the same rate, it would be possible to go through deflation—that is, depression—with relatively little disturbance. It is possible to do business profitably on a low-price level or a high-price level. The trouble arises when the humpty-dumpty of prices is forced down from his high wall.

If an autocrat could decree that everyone should pay a dime from his high wall.

If an autocrat could decree that everyone should pay a dime where he had previously paid a dollar, and if such decree could replace instantly all outstanding contracts, we could go from a high-price level to a low-price level without disaster. But we are tied by laws, constitutions, contracts, habits of thought, the moral indignation of those who believe that a contract payable in a pound of flesh or an ounce of gold must under any circumstances be enforced—we are bound by all these inhibitions. The gold standard was a rope around the neck of every people, with world forces pulling at both ends.

standard was a rope around the neck of every people, with world forces pulling at both ends.

The impossibility of deflating taxes, debts, and other inflexible charges down to the level of commodities forced one nation after another to abandon the gold standard in order that deflation might be checked. Thirty-three other nations did this before we saw the light and acted.

The gold-standard die-hards say this was the wrong thing to do.

The gold-standard die-hards say this was the wrong thing to do. They say that leaving the gold standard caused commodity prices to fall. What is their answer to the fact that prices in terms of gold fell steadily and uncontrollably not only before the United States went off the gold standard but before Great Britain took that step 18 months earlier? It was not abandonment of gold that broke world commodity prices. It was the inadequacy of the gold standard itself.

People of the few remaining Transports that broke world commodity prices. It was the inadequacy of the gold standard itself.

People of the few remaining European gold-bloc countries are still struggling with this Gordian knot. Their prices are held down to the low level of world commodity prices measured in gold. So long as the purchasing power of gold remains high, the world value of basic commodities measured in gold must remain low.

Not battleships, nor airplanes, nor machine guns, nor marching men give dominating power to a nation. It is ability to master and manage economic forces in a modern world. The latest available comparison shows that, despite the world depression, Japan increased its industrial production, since 1928, from an index point of 100 to 149. In the same period, United States industrial production fell from 100 to a low point of 60, and rose only to 69.

A Japanese banker who visited Washington recently was asked by a friend of mine for the explanation. He tapped his forehead as he replied: "We have a Finance Minister who is very wise up here. He depreciated the yen enough to make much industrial activity and much work."

Japan raised its price of gold relatively higher than any other nation. It should be noted that the five nations with the highest index of industrial production as reported by the statisticians of the League of Nations last August had raised their price of gold higher than the nations with lower industrial activity.

Nevertheless, the economic brain of the largest bank in the United States sees no relationship between the price of gold—or the gold content of a currency—and the problems of recovery. This bank economist testified before the Senate Committee on Agriculture at a recent hearing in Washington. He admitted that the value of gold has become very high, and in his judgment would remain high for decades; but he recommended doing nothing; or, if anything at all, he would put more gold back into the dollar!

If his prediction is correct—that the value of gold will remain high for decades—what is the common-sense thing for us to do? Should we wait for decades for the world value of gold to fall, and during those decades endure more deflation, more depression? Or should we adjust our dollar price of gold in order to avoid lowering the prices of all goods and services and property whose value is measured in dollars?

That was the question that confronted every nation before it

That was the question that confronted every nation before it left the gold standard and raised its price of gold and went on a

That was the question that confronted every nation before it left the gold standard and raised its price of gold and went on a managed currency basis.

It seems to me that there was no sensible alternative. The best banking minds in England recognized that change was necessary and desirable. To avoid criticism, England went through the formality of paying out the last gold sovereign before formally discontinuing gold payments, but the British foresaw the situation and months in advance prepared for it.

We, on the other hand, blundered along for 18 months more, until we had 17,000,000 people unemployed and all our banks closed, and then we, too, cut loose from the gold incubus.

The official British price of gold formerly was 84 shillings 9½ pence an ounce. On yesterday the pound was worth 145 shillings 7 pence, and is changed every day, if necessary, to keep the sterling pound stable in purchasing power. If gold continues to increase in value, you may expect to see the British price of gold advanced much higher. The British are determined not to have their economy wrecked by adherence to gold, for they have learned that a fixed weight of gold, particularly under present world conditions, cannot be a stable measure of value. You should bear in mind that many of the raw materials and agriculture producing countries comprised in "sterling area" have a higher price for gold than the mother country—25 to 30 percent higher.

The reason for going off the gold standard and raising the dollar price of gold in the United States was so little understood by our people, particularly by our bankers, that some people still have chills at the very thought of any change whatsoever. Nevertheless, change was necessary, and it has been effective.

President Roosevelt saw the problem clearly. He started down the right road of monetary adjustment. He refused to let France dominate the London Economic Conference with its desire to rush the rest of the world back to a gold standard. Mr. Roosevelt dominate the London Economic Conference with its desire to rush the rest of the world back to a gold standard. Mr. Roosevelt has resisted at home and abroad the pressure from internationalist banking interests who imagine that international-exchange stability is more important than stability in a nation's domestic price level.

price level.

I believe the President made a great mistake in not resisting bankers' demands still further. It was a mistake to return to a fixed gold price 13 months ago. Bankers said it was necessary to "stabilize"—to make the dollar equivalent to some fixed weight of gold. They said this would restore confidence at home and trade abroad. So the President gave in when he should have refused. He has now tried the bankers' old gold prescription for 13 months—and recovery has slackened: unemployment has 13 months—and recovery has slackened; unemployment has increased.

Why? Because the world value of gold, the purchasing power of gold, was and still is and will continue indefinitely to be far out of line with our $35 price.

Thirty-five-dollar gold means continued low prices for our farm products and other basic commodities. Drought and crop destruction together have made some farm products temporarily high. But the world will not recover by destroying wealth. It needs more wealth. It needs to produce more and to sell more, at higher prices, at profitable prices.

In years gone by, with meager issues of money, with restricted extensions of credit and with a low debt structure the little cube of gold of some 31½ feet square was sufficient to form the keystones of the several monetary systems professing to operate on a gold standard.

Developments of recent years have changed national and inter-national economies throughout the world.

What has happened here has been duplicated almost every-

Today our National, State, county, city, and local public expenditures exceed $15,000,000,000 annually. Our total private interest bill is another $10,000,000,000 annual burden.

We have an estimated total massed public and private debt burden of over $250,000,000,000.

To pay our taxes for 1 year would require three-fourths of all the monetary gold in the world.

To pay our annual interest bill would require one-half of all available world gold.

And to pay our accumulated debts would require 12½ cubes of gold the size of the only one in existence.

Not only is our own financial system out of gear, but likewise the systems of other nations are quivering in the balance. In the silver countries silver first fell and now is increasing in value, causing the economies in such countries to change as the value of silver fluctuates.

In the so-called former and present "gold-bloc countries" gold is an itinerant, vacillating, and irresponsible globe-trotter. During the past few months over $100,000,000 in gold have come to us each month. On Tuesday, 2 days ago, our monetary gold stock amount to $8,524,000,000. World prices have been, and are today, computed in terms of gold. Gold is still used as the basis for the issuance of currencies and in settlement of international balances, hence when gold leaves any country, unless such country has a surplus of gold, that country's domestic economy must of necessity suffer. This stream of gold now coming to America is destroying the nations whence it comes, and upon reaching the States is again buried and hoarded. This shifting of gold is leaving a trail of destruction, havoc, and chaos in its wake, and instead of benefiting us, through the damage to and loss of buying power of our trading neighbors, we are being positively injured and damaged, if not internationally, economically destroyed.

Let me summarize:

Let me summarize:

For months past, and now, the demand throughout the world is universal for the stabilization of currencies. The future of our economic system, the stability of our form of government, and the fate of civilization itself depends, first, upon the proper adjustment of our financial system, and then, second, upon our cooperation with other nations in developing and stabilizing world currencies and exchange.

To guide us in this necessary effort the following specific things should be done.

things should be done.

This stream of gold coming to America should be checked, if not entirely stopped. We have adopted a policy of increasing our monetary silver stocks. To check the flood of gold coming to us we could agree to accept silver at a slight premium and thus increase our silver stocks and at the same time stop the threatened destruction of the monetary systems abroad.

By accepting and securing silver and then issuing certificates against such silver we could thereby expand the currency. Such a policy, if carried forward, would operate to remove some 26 cents of excess value from the domestic dollar. This accomplishment would tend to raise the general price level and with profitable prices our banks will begin to make loans again, thereby increasing and stimulating the activity of credit and deposit increasing and stimulating the activity of credit and deposit money

While all agree that stabilization is desirable and must come, yet it is disheartening to reflect that now no country save per-haps France and the nations dominated by France are ready for stabilization. England is not ready to even discuss the Obviously the United States is not now ready to say that the present value of our dollar should be made permanent. Should there be division on this point I would ask of those who disagree, which dollar, the foreign gold-valued dollar or the domestic-valued dollar should be the basis for stabilization.

Our supreme duty as a nation and as a government is to adjust and regulate our own domestic monetary unit not in the interest of either bondholders, silver-mine owners, debtors, or creditors, but in the interest of our domestic economy, and then we will but in the interest of our domestic economy, and then we will be ready to discuss world stabilization of currencies in the interest of world progress, world prosperity, and world peace.

In conclusion let me say that it is time that the banks and the holders of securities stop, look, and listen.

The fight that I have made has been as much in the interest of the creditor as the debtor class. Heretofore the debtor has been in special need of a friend at court. Now it is the eleventh hour for the creditor class. They need all the support that can be brought to bear to maintain the validity of contracts and the collectibility of legitimate debt claims.

But the only way to make debt claims collectible is to make them honest, so that they will be supported by public conscience.

No claim is honest that is repayable in an excessively valued dollar.

Our present dollar calls for payment of 126 cents in value of products and services.

products and services.

Equity as well as self-interest demands that the creditor class shall help restore the dollar to honest value.

The Congress willed that property values should be restored. It placed in the hands of the President the monetary powers necessary to do this effectively.

It is now the creditors' turn to appeal to the President to use these powers decisively and at once.

OUR PLUNDERING GOVERNMENT-SPEECH BY SENATOR LONG

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a radio speech which I delivered over the National Broadcasting Co. system on Sunday, February 10, 1935.

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen, the introduction which my friend has Ladies and gentlemen, the introduction which my friend has given me is not quite complete. I wanted it to be more or less complete—that I am still in the Democratic Party; so I am going to reintroduce myself to this audience, hoping that you will believe that I am even a better Democrat than I was here 3 or 4 years ago. In fact, I believe you already know that. I am HUEY P. LONG. I am now a United States Senator. I am also national Democratic committeeman from the State of Louisiana; I am also the chairman of the Louisiana State Democratic Committee, and I am also the head of the Louisiana Democratic Committee; and I am also the head of the Louisiana Democratic majority organization, as well as being a member of the National Democratic Party councils. And I intend to make you a speech along the lines of democratic government for the few minutes that have been assigned me by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

This being a Sunday night, it would be better that I perhaps stay within the confines of the Scriptures as much as I can, so I will read from Proverbs, chapter 30, verses 7 to 9, as follows:

"Two things have I required of Thee; deny me them not before

I die:

"Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me:

"Lest I be full, and deny Thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain."

That ends the quotation from Proverbs, written by Solomon, the wisest of all men. I am not going to reread, but I want to restate for fear some may not have grasped the entire significance of that little phrase that I have read; I will restate the theory. "Give me neither riches nor poverty", says the Scriptures, "lest I be vain and say, Who is the Lord, or if I be poor, I become a thief."

The Bible takes it as axiomatic that one is as evil as the other; that is, that an extremely rich man is as evil as an extremely poor man, and the Bible takes it as axiomatic that the extremely rich man must by the nature of the thing be an evil man; and the poor man, and the Bible takes it as axiomatic that the extremely profit man must by the nature of the thing be an evil man; and the poor man must by the nature of the thing be in the direction of a thief. Now, that is the Bible. Maybe you don't think so. Wait a minute; I will give you a little more: St. Matthew 19:23, 24:

"Then said Jesus unto His disciples, "Verily I say unto you that a rich man shall hardly enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

"'And again I say unto you it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of God."

of God."

Of course, many people have been trying to tell you that that Biblical commandment meant something else; they have been trying to tell you that it didn't mean a needle but some hole in the wall; but when you go back up and read Proverbs and then read St. Matthew you have quite some little difficulty in saying anything except what the Bible said it means; that is, that it is practically impossible for a rich man to enter heaven; but if you have any doubt about it, let me read you something else. I read you from the Book of James, chapter 5. That is in the New Testament:

"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you."

shall come upon you."

That will be found in the fifth chapter of the Book of James. Following along those lines, it says:
"Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth;

"Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

"Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten.

"Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire."

So, then, ladies and gentlemen, while I am not presuming to preach you any sermon, I am only undertaking to establish (and I can, cite you a bundred other quotations can be a common to the control of the your services. I can cite you a hundred other quotations equally as cogent). I am only seeking to establish that extreme poverty is looked upon by the Bible as the substance to make a man a thief, and extreme riches is looked upon by the Bible to make a man just as bad. And so said Solomon, and so say the various other provisions of the Scriptures. Riches or poverty make of a man just the exact opposite of Riches or poverty make of a man just the exact opposite of what is intended by the Bible, and by the Lord. You will find, my friends, that God knew, and that we ought to know, that no one can have very much more than he needs without depriving someone else of what he must have to live. But if very rich people we must have, then naturally we must have very poor people. To have very rich people, we have to have very poor people. The whole thing is a see-saw; when one set of our people go high up in the air, the common people must come way down, and if the side of the see-saw on which the rich people sit is pushed up too high, the other side must carry us down in the ground. So has America's see-saw worked, that the very rich have gone so high, that the very poor are going down into their graves.

graves.

But there could be a see-saw on a near an even level, where we could go up and down, but never so low as to wreck us. That is the kind of a see-saw we want. Not exactly a level for everybody, but don't have one man so high that he must of necessity crowd another man to his grave.

God said none too rich; none too poor. For, said the Lord, the rich will defy the Lord and the poor will become a thief.

"Feed all with food convenient to them."

I happened at one time to be Governor of the State of Louisiana—from 1928 to 1932. When I became Governor of that State we had 1,500 men in the penitentiary. During the depression times that I served as Governor, that 1,500 men grew to 3,000 men in the penitentiary—double the enrollment in the penitentiary in 4 years. Now, I don't think I had inculcated into the population that kind of a disposition, that there would be twice as many convicts in the penitentiary in those 2 or 3 years' time as prior to my time as Governor. So I undertook to look into the matter and find the reason. The days of the depression only tended to make people criminals, I found.

Now, my friends, I am going to skip just a little bit of what I had intended to say to wheth people criminals, I found.

Now, my friends, I am going to skip just a little bit of what I had intended to say tonight, to get to the cold facts as to what is responsible for conditions, and the correctives which I am going to apply. Speaking over this broadcast tonight from coast to coast I notice I have a large number of eastern stations. I didn't know that when I came here, so therefore, some of the manuscript which I had prepared will be discarded, because I am particularly anxious that I may be permitted to reach into this eastern territory and to say some of the things I have often wanted to be heard by the people living in the Eastern States. I am going to read you from Theognis, one of the great Greeks. I am going to read you from him for this reason, that I am not unmindful that many people think the Scriptures is a worn-out book. It is not, but there are some people who don't accept the Bible and say some men are smarter than the Scriptures, and they particularly point to the philosophers of ancient Greece, and among those most often referred to are such men as Socrates, Plato, and Theognis.

I suppose Plato is looked upon as being probably the greatest—Theognis probably the next. I am going to read you from Theognis, one of the Greek philosophers, then I will read you from Plato. Said this great Greek philosopher in these words:

"Fullness (plenty) hath ere now destroyed far more men, look you, than famine, to wit, as many as were desirous of having more than their share."

than their share.'

than their share."

Also, a little later on, if you care to have me read, I will give you what Plato said along the same lines. Here is what Plato said:

"The citizen (of this ideal republic) must indeed be happy and good, and the legislator will seek to make him so; but very rich and very good at the same time he cannot be."

In other words, said Plato, long before the birth of Jesus Christ, it is impossible for a man to be very rich and very good at the same time. Now, you may think that it is a different proposition in America. Well, ladies and gentlemen, there never were fortunes made in any country through as many tactics of brigandages and through as many crimes and demeanors of men in his position as the American fortunes. I am not going to undertake to defame those men, but I can take you any fortune you wish to write me about and show you it has not been amassed by any tactics other than by force and crimes. I can take you the Morgan fortune, about and show you it has not been amassed by any tactics other than by force and crimes. I can take you the Morgan fortune, the Rockefeller fortune, or the Mellon fortune, or any fortune you wish to inquire about. The Rockefellers broke every railroad rate and every railroad law ever put on the books before they got them. They sent more men to their graves than all of the bandits in Chicago can kill if they lived to be 1,000 years old apiece.

The Morgan fortune was started by J. P. Morgan, Jr., who was the father of the J. P. Morgan of today, selling some refused carbines to Fremont's army. Many other things might be declared responsible for the Morgan fortune. The Bosco fiasco in South and Central America is sufficient to condemn the Mellon fortune, but just let us say they were all properly and well acquired. Leave it at that; however they were acquired you cannot get away from the Scriptures or the philosophers who say that it is impossible for a man to be very good and very rich at the same time.

for a man to be very good and very rich at the same time.

Now, maybe then you don't believe the Greek philosophers, or maybe then you don't believe the Scriptures either. Then I will not ask you to believe anything very difficult; I am not going to ask you to believe fractions. I will only ask you to believe the simple tables of arithmetic—and if you will concede the principles of the four elementary problems of arithmetic—addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, I will have no fault with you tonight, but before going into that, let me give you another succinct proof as to whether or not this country was properly founded and whether or not it is still being steered on the course it was originally intended. originally intended.

I am going to read to you from the Covenant of the Pilgrims. You have talked about the Pilgrim Fathers, some of my wise critics, and you have said I am preaching a doctrine contrary to the doctrine of the Pilgrim Fathers on which the country was the doctrine of the Pilgrim Fathers on which the country was founded. Well, of course, you newspaper people who have written that—not all of you newspapers have written that—but you magazines who have written, and you would-be statesmen (and that is about as good as any of us ever get to be, is the class of a would-be statesman), but some of our great statesmen who said I am going so far as to say I am going counter to the Covenant of the Pilgrim Fathers—did you ever read the Covenant of the Pilgrim Fathers? I know you didn't, and I will read it to you. Here it is. I am now reading from the Bradford history presented by the New England Society in the city of New York to its members (pp. 56, 57, 58): its members (pp. 56, 57, 58):

its members (pp. 56, 57, 58):

"It will be meete I here inserte these conditions, which are as followeth: (This is the old Pilgrim Contract.) Year 1620, July 1st."

Now I am going to skip to no. 7, if you don't mind:

"7. He that shall carie his wife & children, or servants, shall be alowed for everie person now aged 16, years & upward, a single share in ye division, or if he provid them necessaries, a duble share, or if they be between 10, years old and 16, then 2, of them to be reconed for a person, both in transportation and devision."

Just before that, I read you no. 6:

"6 Whesever corneth to ye colonic hereafter, or putteth any

"6. Whosoever cometh to ye colonie hereafter, or putteth any into ye stock, shall at the ende of ye 7. years be alowed proportionably to ye time of his so doing."

Now I read you no. 5, because I am reading you in inverse order: "5. That at ye end of ye 7. years, we capital & profits, viz. the houses, lands, goods, and chatles, be equally devided betwixte ye adventurers, and planters; wch done, every man shall be free from other of them of any debt or detrimente concerning this adven-

In other words, the Pilgrim Fathers had a contract that they would keep the word of the Lord. The Bible commanded them that at the end of 7 years that they ought to remit all debts, and they ought to see that the wealth was redistributed, so none would have too much, and none would be too poor. And the Pilgrim Fathers who founded the country wrote it into the Covenant, not to do what Huey Long said, because I am not advocating an equal division of the wealth every 7 years, but they said more than I ever said, in order that they would never have such a thing as concentration of wealth in the hands of the few, that every 7 years they would divide up the wealth among all of them equally, and at the end of every 7 years they would remit all debts. Now some of you wise men who have been talking about me not minding the faith of the Pilgrim Fathers, go off and read that and weep a little bit more and see what other faith is there that has been unminded by the proposition I have offered in the United States Senate.

been unminded by the proposition I have offered in the United States Senate.

My friends, today a young man attending Columbia University came to see me. I knew him in Louisiana, and his folks were always friends to me, and they voted for me for every office I ever ran for. He came along today and told me he could not keep up his course at college unless he could borrow $250. He wanted me to loan him $250. And I didn't have it to loan to him. And I thought how tragic it was that that young man had to go away and be turned away from Columbia University while undertaking to complete an ordinary course at college, which he had the mental capacity to absorb, while other people have the opportunity by reason of the wealthy condition of their parents, but don't have the mental capacity to do it.

So I said to this young man, "I am very sorry for you. But," I said, "before you leave I want to give you something." And I gave him the educational program of the Share Our Wealth Society. Let me tell you what that is. We propose, if we have the capacity to conscript soldiers and train them year after year, that we will do no conscripting, but that just the same we will train these people in other lines. We propose that education will be taken over as a function of the United States Government and that every girl and boy will be permitted to absorb an education not only through grammar school and high school but through colleges and vocational and professional training, and the living costs and school costs and other such costs will be absorbed as a matter of Government costs.

Now you say where are you going to get the money? Wait a moment. That is not all we propose. We say further we ought matter of Government costs.

Now you say where are you going to get the money? Wait a moment. That is not all we propose. We say further we ought to guarantee through our share-our-wealth program that we will afford to every deserving family in this country, and by deserving we mean every family not in the penitentiary or insane asylum, or even those in the insane asylum for that matter—we say we will guarantee to every deserving family in this country a home and the comforts of a home, and included in such comforts would be such things as a radio and automobile, and such other conveniences and necessities of life.

We would guarantee up to not less than $5,000, or an average

We would guarantee up to not less than $5,000, or an average of one-third of the average wealth in this country—to every deserving family to begin with. Then we would reduce the hours of employment to 30 hours a week, maybe less, and 11 months to the year, maybe less. We would reduce employment to such a the year, maybe less. We would reduce employment to such a condition that we would share the work so that people would work only so long as it became necessary to produce the things needed by the people, and that we would reduce the hours so much as would be necessary to have everybody employed, rather than to have one employed too much of the time, and some employed none of the time.

to have one employed too much of the time, and some employed none of the time.

We would include in our program old-age pensions to those above 60 years of age of around $30 to $40 to the month. Also, ladies and gentlemen, we would undertake to discharge along with that, the bonus that we owe to the soldiers.

Now you want to know where are we going to get the money? We will levy a capital levy tax on all big fortunes in the United States. We will say to a millionaire: "We are not worried about your first million dollars. If you wish to be a millionaire, we will not worry about your first million dollars, and that is more than you can spend during your lifetime and your children's lifetime adequately and properly." But we will say if you wish to be a millionaire, we will not be concerned with that, but if you wish to be above a millionaire we will step in for the welfare of the country to a certain point. So we will say, keep your first million dollars. But after you have got more than one million, we charge you 1 percent on the second million, 2 percent on the fifth million, 4 percent on the sounth million, 8 percent on the fifth million, 64 percent on the sixth million, 32 percent on the seventh million, 64 percent on the eighth million, and 100 percent on the ninth million, which means that in time that there would be no man in this country that could own more than two and one-half to four million dollars. And that would be our limit upon the amount that any one man would be permitted to own in this country, and when we have done that, we will throw into the Treasury of the United States Government tomorrow $165,000,000,000,000.

And with $100,000,000,000 we can give to every family in this country a home and the comforts of a home, and with the balance of the money we can have an improvement program which will discharge every obligation this country owes to its citizens and continually supply the entire population of America through employment and other facilities that reducing these fortunes of the big men tunes of the big men would give the Government the means with which to do so.

Ladies and gentlemen, this is HUEY P. Long talking, for the enefit of those who have just tuned in, and for the benefit of those who yet remain.

Now, let us see here. We have organized Share Our Wealth Societies. Maybe some of you good people here in the East who are listening to me don't believe what I am saying. You don't believe it is possible to have that much money, do you? Well, there is a big financial writer here in this country called Roger W. Babson, hired by Wall Street and the newspapers of Wall Street. Let's see what he says. Mr. Roger Babson says in 1934:

"With intensive production and proper distribution, every family in the country should receive an income of $10,000 per year, with everybody from 20 to 50 years old working 8 months annually."

Now, Mr. Babson says that there is $10,000 a year in earnings. Well, now, let's reduce this financial writer's figures by two and say there is $5,000, and then let's say we will give $3,000 of that to the multimillionaires to spread among their children, and things of that kind in years to come; that would still leave an income of not below $2,000. That would be sufficient, after a man has a home and the comforts of a home, that all might live in respectability.

I am not going to read some other figures to support that, but I have them here and anybody who wants them can write and get them. Mr. Roosevelt has had two men who made this estimate. One of them estimated there would never be less than $4,370 to the family, and the other estimated there would never be less than $5,000 to the family. Take any set of figures you want, and it is two times as much as I contend to be necessary to carry the entire American population.

American population.

Why have this misery and this distress in America? why have this misery and this distress in America? Why have people naked for the want of clothes to wear? Why have our people homeless? Why have all these millions of unemployed? We have the food to feed the people. Why let it rot while people starve? We have the clothes and the cotton and wool to make more clothes and more than anyone will ever need to wear. Why have all of them fall to pieces and mold while people shiver for the lack of them? We have the houses to live in and the material and labor to build more houses to live in. Why have men, women, and children crying for a place to rest their heads, while the walls inside the houses fall to ruin lack of human habitation?

for lack of human habitation?

Why? Because Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt has refused to carry out his promise to pull down the size of the big fortunes and to use the money thus taken to end all such things as poverty among the people. With all these many extra things which we have, with this surplus of food, clothes, and houses, to let our people go to ruin for the lack of them is a shame on the birth of manhood. The United States is like a fool carrying a loaf of bread under his arm and starving to death at the same time. We propose to share our wealth.

pose to share our wealth.

pose to share our wealth.

What are we going to do about these debts? We have $252,-000,000,000 of debts, public and private debts. Two hundred and fifty-two billion dollars! That is $2,000 to every man, woman, and child in the United States in debts. In the days before the war—in the old slave days in the South—a colored man could buy his freedom for $1,500 or $2,000; and yet today, ladies and gentlemen, all of the whites and all of the blacks come into this world with $2,000 of debts as their inheritance. There used to be a time when we carried a silver spoon and a cup or a baby rattle to a baby at the time of his birth. We have changed that. Today we tie a $2,000 debt around his neck, and many are never Today we tie a $2,000 debt around his neck, and many are never able to pay it throughout their entire lifetime.

Europe owes us $11,000,000,000 that we can't collect, and we

Europe owes us $11,000,000,000 that we can't collect, and we had to excuse Europe. We gave Europe a moratorium of 1 year, and they take a moratorium after that; and we gave them a year and they take the balance of the time. Now, if Europe can't pay the $11,000,000,000,—and that includes England, France, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Lithuania, and every other Slovakia they have got over there—if all of them put together can't pay $11,000,000,000,000, then how are 125,000,000 people ever going to pay $252,000,000,000?

Now, if you will turn back to the law of the Lord, Deuteronomy, fifteenth chapter, the first verse, you will find where He commanded you have got to remit these debts every seventh year. Now, I have been condemned because I wrote a law in Louisiana that all persons burdened with debts which they could not pay would have the right to have these debts suspended on proper showing. They have defamed that law, but in Louisiana it has saved many a person, and I would rather have that.

Well, we have had other things to contend with. I see here is a little report from Kansas City, Mo. I read to you from the Kansas City (Mo.) Journal-Post of Monday, January 7, 1935.

[From the Kansas City (Mo.) Journal Post, Monday, Jan. 7, 1935] EVICTED WOMAN WISHES ROOSEVELT COULD SEE 'FULFILLMENT' OF

"Mrs. Kathleen McDonald sat on the edge of a bare bed Monday

"Mrs. Kathleen McDonald sat on the edge of a bare bed Monday morning and watched movers, under the watchful eyes of a deputy sheriff, carry the furniture from her home at 3743 Main Street.

"President Roosevelt', she said, 'told the Nation only a few months ago that no one would lose a home by foreclosure. I wish he could be here this morning to see these movers, backed by the circuit court and the sheriff, throw me out of my house.'

"A moving man entered the room.

"'I'm sorry, lady', he said, apologetically, 'but we have to have the bed now.'

"KICKED OUT. PENNILESS.

" KICKED OUT, PENNILESS

"Mrs. McDonald arose and walked to the window-stared out at the damp, foggy street scene. Her voice choked, tears streamed down her cheeks.

"'Oh, God', she sobbed, 'why do they have to do this to us.
This home represents the life savings of myself and my sister—$20,000—and now we're being kicked out, penniless.

"'This house was not only our shelter but our livelihood, for we kept roomers. Now we're losing it, and we have no place to

We do not even know where we'll sleep. We'll have to hunt jobs and begin all over.

"'I wired President Roosevelt Monday morning, but I don't suppose he'll answer. And just to think, he said that no home would be foreclosed."

would be foreclosed."

Oh, yes; my good friend Mr. Roosevelt rode in on the program that he was going to bring poverty to an absolute end. He was going to bring poverty to an absolute end! He promised to bring down these big fortunes. He promised to see there was no such thing as a man without a home and the comforts of a home. He promised there would be no such thing as an unemployed man or woman, and how many have you got unemployed today? Twenty-one million unemployed; and if you consider the fact that 54 percent of the farm labor is unemployed today and if you will Twenty-one million unemployed; and if you consider the fact that 54 percent of the farm labor is unemployed today, and if you will add these to the industrial statistics, you have got 21,000,000 unemployed; and if you doubt that go over and take the statistics of the E. R. A.—the relief organization—and you will find that today they have got 19½ million people on the relief dole today; going to show you there is probably more than 21,000,000 unemployed. Count 2½ to 3 people to every unemployed person, since 1 man usually earns the bread for 3, and you have half of the American people today unemployed; and that does not include the doctor, the lawyer, and the candlestick maker, or the professional man, because while he may give up his office he is still hoping somebody will come along and give him a little business.

Right in my mail today I received a letter from Kansas City signed by a little girl. It reads:

KANSAS CITY, KANS., January 19, 1935.

Dear Senator Long: I listened to your speech over the radio.

And you quoted verses from the Bible. I also read the Bible.

I do not believe Mr. Roosevelt has a Bible. And if he did have he could not read it. I am a poor little girl 12 years old, or I would buy him one. So if you will please buy Mr. Roosevelt a small Bible and mark the chapters of Deuteronomy, the eleventh chapter to the twelfth, subject a blessing and a curse:

Fifteenth verse: "And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle that thou may eat and be full."

Sixteenth verse: "Take heed to yourselves that your heart be not deceived and aye turn aside and serve other gods and worship them '

Seventeenth verse: "And then the Lord's wrath be kindled against you. And He shut up the heavens that there be no rain and that the land yield not her fruit, and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the Lord giveth you."

I believe in God and I think God must have closed up the heavens last summer as a warning to some of the selfish ones on this certh.

this earth.

Yours truly.

DOROTHY MCKIENZIE, 1204 Bunker St.

Well, Mr. Roosevelt don't have to read the Bible; all he has to do is read his own promises and keep them. If Roosevelt will keep his promises to the American people, we won't have all of this trouble.

this trouble.

Ladies and gentlemen, the bank deposits show two-thirds of 1 percent own two-thirds of 100 percent of all the money in the banks. In other words, two-thirds of 1 percent own what two-thirds of 100 percent ought to own. That is the disproportionate balance that maintains today in regard to the bank balances. What is the correction? The only correction is, ladies and gentlemen, that we must return to the law of the Lord: None shall be too big; none shall be too little. We should go out and start immediately so that we will have the jubilee brought back to where it was intended. Maybe not so completely as the Bible intended, but in some respects, that the fortunes of the little will not be allowed to become less, and the fortunes of the big will not be allowed to become bigger. That being done, our problems are all solved.

Why have those uneducated? Why have people in misery?

problems are all solved.

Why have those uneducated? Why have people in misery? Why have people homeless? In this distress, the Lord has smiled upon this land, so I invite you, I beg you, I beseech you, come into the Share Our Wealth Society; organize in your community a Share Our Wealth Society—not on socialistic lines, not on communistic lines, not on the lines of fascism, not on the lines of bolshevism, but on the lines that we will say that when a man reaches up into the millions of dollars, he has enough, and when a man who is below the average of a home for his family, that he has not had enough. That program which says we will shorten the hours and take up the slack in labor. That program which guarantees to every boy and girl the right to be educated according to their mental capacity, and not according to the financial capacity of their parents.

ity of their parents.

I hope you will join our Share Our Wealth Society. This is HUEY P. Long, United States Senator, talking to you. I hope you will go into your neighborhood, and into the neighborhood next to you there, and get your friends to organize Share Our Wealth Societies.

If you want any information, write to me here in Washington, D. C., and I will give you any information which you may need without any charge whatever. I hope, ladies and gentlemen, that you may see fit to help in this work. I thank you.

UNERAL SERMON ON THE LATE SENATOR WALSH, OF MONTANA

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I present and ask leave to have published in the RECORD the sermon delivered at the funeral of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, in the Cathedral of St. Helena, on March 9, 1933, by the Right Reverend Victor Day.

There being no objection, the sermon was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

"Thou hast loved justice and hated iniquity." (Heb. i:9.)

Back to the "hills of home" come the mortal remains of Montana's illustrious son. A sorrowing Nation has paid him due tribute. Today, his fellow citizens of Helena and other communities in this Treasure State, gather to assist at these solemn funeral rites and to accompany his lifeless body to its last earthly munities in this Treasure State, gather to assist at these solemn funeral rites and to accompany his lifeless body to its last earthly resting place.

A national figure for many years, Thomas James Walsh achieved the success that comes from distinguished service. He was born at Two Rivers, Wis., June 12, 1859. His early education completed, he taught as principal of several high schools in Wisconsin, and, while so engaged, continued his studies with such marked success that he was awarded a life certificate on an examination covering all the branches of a college curriculum. He received the degree of bachelor of laws from the University of Wisconsin in 1884, and, associated with his brother Henry Comer Walsh, he took up the practice of law at Redfield, S. Dak. In 1890 T. J. Walsh moved to this city of Helena where he established his permanent home. His ability as a lawyer, while still a young man, soon won for him the wholesome respect of the members of his profession. This appreciation of his talent increased as time went on. A keen student of government, he entered the political field about 30 years ago, and crowned his devoted interest in the people of this community and State by 21 years of outstanding service in the Senate of the United States.

Thomas J. Walsh was gifted to a high degree with both mental and moral qualities. He combined high character with eminent talent. His brilliant intellect, his deep and extensive knowledge of national and international law, his logic in argument, his skill as a parliamentarian, all contributed to win for him the esteem and admiration of State and Nation.

"Thou hast loved justice and hated iniquity." We feel we are voicing the national opinion when we apply to Senator Walsh these words in which the royal psalmist, in prophetic vision, sang the love of justice in Christ. Public opinion will chisel these glorious words into the enduring granite of the Walsh tombstone. Generations yet unborn will remember him, above all, for his constant love of justice and his uncompr there the memory of Thomas J. Walsh will be an inspiration.

For more than 40 years Senator Walsh was both a devout and devoted member of this Cathedral parish. Its growth has kept pace with the material development of the State. At the time of his coming eight priests, under saintly Bishop Brondel, ministered to the spiritual needs of the white people of all Montana. Catholic children in Helena attended school in a frame building constructed in the sixties. The Cathedral congregation worshiped in a small brick church which crowned the eminence still known as Catholic Hill. In the transformation accomplished through the intervening years, Senator Walsh played a conspicuous part. The vice chairman of the building committee that supervised the planning and erection of this magnificent Cathedral, he contributed liberally toward its completion, and left one of its stained glass windows as a memorial to his deceased wife. In the construction of St. Helena School and of Carroll College, he gave the benefit of his wise counsel and generous support. He was a leader in the movement that resulted in the establishment of Resurrection Cemetery, where soon his mortal remains will be laid to rest. During the many years of my incumbency as the pastor of this parish, he was ever ready to devote his time and talent to consider and to solve various problems referred to him.

His Christien plets, was as unostantations as it was anlichtened. lems referred to him.

His Christian piety was as unostentatious as it was enlightened

His Christian plety was as unostentatious as it was enlightened and sincere. Regular in the practice of his spiritual duties, he was truly exemplary in his private life.

So it is that church and state join today in paying a final tribute of respect to the memory of this great and good man. Fitting it is that this joint tribute be given to one whose life so well exemplified the perfect harmony of this twin allegiance.

We bow in humble submission to the providence of God that guides the destiny of men and nations. In his unscrutable designs, He sent His messenger, Death, to stay the hand stretched out to grasp the last rung on the ladder of success. The Faith that gave vision, strength, and courage to the illustrious deceased is also to us, on this occasion, a source of supreme consolation. "We have not here a lasting city, but we seek one that is to come" (Heb. xiii: 14).

"I am the resurrection and the life." Christ said. "he that is to come "(Heb. xiii: 14).

"I am the resurrection and the life," Christ said, "he that believeth in Me, although he be dead, shall live" (John xi: 25). May this divine promise be eternally fulfilled for His faithful follower! May the light of the Sun of Justice shine upon him forever! May this assurance bring consolation to the bereaved members of his family and his friends! And may his noble soul, and souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace!

SENATOR GORE'S REPLY TO OKLAHOMA CORRESPONDENTS

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have published in the RECORD two editorials, one entitled "The Blind Senator Sees", from the Chicago Daily News, and the other entitled "A Proper Rebuke", from the Washington Post, both editorials relating to the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore].

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Chicago Daily News, Tuesday, Feb. 26, 1935] THE BLIND SENATOR SEES

The acme of the superfluous would be a gift of the Complete Letter Writer to Senator Gore. He is his own perfect edition of that work. Certain of his constituents in Oklahoma wired him that if he did not vote for the $4,000,000,000 work-relief bill, he might as well stay out of their county in his next senatorial race. The Senator will be due to run again next year.

Doubtless the Senator is familiar with Solomon's cagey advice that a "soft answer turneth away wrath." But there are certain sorts of wrath which it is more creditable to invite than to avert.

So the Senator wrote:

"This will acknowledge your exceedingly diplomatic and hospitable telegram. It shows how the dole spoils the soul. Your telegram intimates that your votes are for sale. Much as I value votes, I'm not in the market; I cannot consent to buy votes with whose, I'm not in the market, I cannot consent to buy votes with the people's money.

"I owe a debt to the taxpayer as well as the unemployed. I shall discharge both. None but the bully resorts to threats, and none but the coward yields to them."

And now the folks back home know that their blind Senator can e the difference between a public-works dole and a public-service duty.

[From the Washington Post, Monday, Feb. 25, 1935] A PROPER REBUKE

Senator Gore's reply to the mayors of two Oklahoma towns who tried to intimidate him deserves inscription in a niche where all legislators may read it. In matters pertaining to his duty as a representative of the people, the blind Senator has unusually keen perception. And his courage in the face of political threats is not constituted to the people.

open to question.

The mayors of Halleyville and Hartshorne had ordered Senator Gore to vote for the $4,880,000,000 public-works resolution "or stay out of this county in the next senatorial race." Apparently the Senator welcomed this impudent challenge to his integrity as an opportunity to express his resentment against political intimidation in general. He replied:

"Your telegram intimates that your votes are for sale. Much as I value votes, I am not in the market. I cannot consent to buy votes with the people's money. I owe a duty to the taxpayer as well as to the unemployed. I shall discharge both.

"None but the bully resorts to threats, and none but the coward yields to them."

Regardless of whether Senator Gore is for or against the public-

Regardless of whether Senator Gore is for or against the publicworks measure, the rebuke he has administered to politicians trying to control his vote is a remarkable precedent. It is a known fact that orders—most of them more tactfully couched than the mandate from Haileyville—are frequently sent to Members of Congress by political bosses. That Congressmen sometimes yield to these special interests is one of the most serious weaknesses in our governmental structure.

our governmental structure.

Only when groups seeking special privileges and political lobbyists are put in their place can legislation be lifted above the level of the pork barrel. Senator Gore's declaration of independence from influence of this sort is especially salutary at a time when it is broadly hinted that political pressure will be applied from the constituencies of dissenting Senators to revive discredited

THE WORK-RELIEF BILL-ADDRESS BY SENATOR RUSSELL

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a very fine radio address delivered by the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell] on Saturday, March 2, 1935, on the work-relief bill.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Address by Senator RICHARD B. RUSSELL, Jr., of Georgia, over the Dixie network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Saturday, March 2, 1935:

The most important matter demanding the immediate atten-The most important matter demanding the immediate attention of the Congress is consideration of the $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill. This measure passed the House of Representatives by an overwhelming vote in the early days of the session. It was thoroughly considered and discussed in the Senate Committee on Appropriations, of which I am a member, for more than 3 weeks, and after having been debated on the Floor of the Senate for several days finally encountered such difficulties that it was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations, where it now rests. The immediate cause of this action was the adoption by the Senate, by a margin of one vote, of a proposal known as the McCarran amendment, which would compel the payment of the prevailing wage scale for all services performed.

It is the theory of the advocates of the McCarran amendment is the theory of the advocates of the McCarran amendment.

that the expenditure of public funds at wages less than the prevailing rate will have a tendency to pull down the prevailing rate to lower levels.

rate to lower levels.

It appears to me that the advocates of this proposition overlook a number of compelling considerations, which make it most unwise to write such a provision into the bill. Indeed, the Senate was advised that the President would veto the measure if this were included. No one wishes to destroy the prevailing wage scale, least of all the President of the United States. He has at all times shown the most genuine interest in the welfare of all those who toil and has embarked the country upon a militant program to better living and working conditions and to increase the income of labor.

It must be borne in mind that this is not, strictly speaking, a public-works measure. It is primarily a relief measure. It is It must be borne in mind that this is not, strictly speaking, a public-works measure. It is primarily a relief measure. It is designed to aid farmers in distress, as well as the laborer out of work. It is a concentration of all of the great powers of Government and the resources of this Nation to strike one final, mighty blow at unemployment and to wipe out forever the dole system, under which three and a half millions of employable citizens and their families are being supported out of public funds. It is not deat unemployment and to wipe out forever the dole system, under which three and a half millions of employable citizens and their families are being supported out of public funds. It is not designed to come into conflict with labor now employed. Instead of injuring labor it is to aid labor and to fight distress and conditions which have made the dole necessary. As a matter of common sense it appeals to me that a man regularly employed at a security wage sufficient to maintain himself and family in a respectable manner, even though he receives less than the prevailing wage, is far less a menace to the jobs and wages of those now at work than the man who has no job at all, but who is living from hand to mouth on grocery orders or a weekly pittance. The great menace to the prevailing wage structure in this Nation today is not a work-relief program which will give regular employment to three and a half million citizens now idle. If the existing wage structure is destroyed and torn down, it will be by the three and a half million unemployed who are now on relief and whose circumstances are such that they will accept a job at any wage. If they are put to work this danger is removed.

We must not forget that, in addition to these three and a half million, there are approximately six and a half millions of other citizens who are out of employment and have no jobs, but who have not been forced onto relief rolls. If the program embodied in this measure can be carried out as the President desires, instead of injuring the prevailing wage structure, it will create a great demand for labor in every private field of endeavor. Approximately one-half of the fund provided will be expended for labor; the demand for labor in every private field of endeavor. Approximately one-half of the fund provided will be expended for labor; the remainder will be expended for material. The purchase of such an enormous quantity of material will stimulate all lines of industry and will insure a continuance of employment of those who now have jobs. As business increases the employers will be compelled to turn to a labor market from which three and a half million workers have been removed. This in itself gives assurance that there will be no reduction in the existing scale and also holds a promise of a job to numbers of the unemployed who are not now on the relief rolls.

relief rolls.

The people of the United States will not be deceived by the argument that this vast activity in every line of business brought about by the employment of three and a half million people who today have no jobs can in anywise injuriously affect the existing wage scale. Senators who voted against the McCarran amendment are just as jealous to preserve the existing wage, and if possible to increase it, as those who supported the proposal. Those who approve applying the existing wage theory to this program are seeking to leave the hands of the President untied so that he may take care of the greatest possible number of our unemployed and at the same time bring about public improvements of substantial value and benefit to the country, to be used long after this money shall have been spent.

shall have been spent.

The National Government cannot always provide large sums for The National Government cannot always provide large sums for public-works projects, and at the same time maintain the integrity of the Nation's credit. Every effort is being made to encourage the absorption of the unemployed by private business. A great deal has been accomplished in this direction. Payment of the prevailing rate of wages would doubtless chill this process, if it did not defeat it altogether. This was no doubt what the President had in mind when he said in his message to the Congress that "compensation on emergency public projects should be in the form of security payments which should be larger than the amount now received as a relief dole, but at the same time not so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment or the leaving of private employment to engage in Government work."

It would be folly to undertake so huge an expenditure of public funds on any other basis.

To make assurance doubly sure that the wage structure should not be injured by payment of the security wage, I offered an amendment on the subject, which the committee adopted, which is in part as follows:

is, in part, as follows:

"In the event the President shall determine that the rate of wages paid is affecting adversely or is likely to decrease the prevalling rates of wages paid for any work of a similar nature in any city, town, village, or other civil division of the State in which the work is located, the President shall immediately fix the rate of wages at an amount not less than the prevailing rate of wages paid for work of a similar nature in such locality."

This amendment affords complete protection to the existing wage structure throughout the United States. It is difficult to understand the position of those who are willing to entrust the President with expending the enormous sum of almost $5,000,000,000 in almost any manner he sees fit and proper, and for almost any purpose which he may determine, and yet at the same time are unwilling to entrust him with the proper administration of this mandatory provision which safeguards the prevailing wage structure. structure

Especially is this true in view of the personal assurance of the President, in the form of a letter over his own signature, that he would assume personal responsibility for the protection of he would assume personal responsibility for the protection of the existing wage scale.

Is there anything in the record of the President which would cause anyone to doubt that he will protect the interests of labor? The very measure which he proposes launches the Government upon the greatest effort for the relief and welfare of labor any nation has ever known. The bill is a labor bill from beginning to end, to provide for those who want to work and cannot find a job. I venture to say that the present President of the United States has done as much or more for labor than any man who has ever lived on this continent. He has sponsored and supported measure after measure to protect and better the conditions of those who toll. In view of this known disposition on the part of our President, it is incomprehensible to me that anyone can fear the result of leaving this matter in his hands.

It is unfortunate that there should be delay and uncertainty as to the enactment of this measure. It is more unfortunate that it should be jeopardized and threatened with strangulation in the name of labor.

Not only is this a labor bill, providing funds to be administered by a true friend of labor, but it is a recovery measure, to stimulate private reemployment throughout the Nation. It is being supported in the interest of the unemployed, to provide work instead of dole, a sense of security instead of a spirit of despair, of self-respect and good citizenship to replace soul-destroying charity. ing charity.

It is essential that some action be taken on this measure at a very early date. The funds of the Relief Administration are almost exhausted. Unless something be done, in but a few days most exhausted. Unless something be done, in but a few days available funds will be gone, and we may hear cries of distress from hungry people. The Civilian Conservation Corps can only operate until March 31. Those who would oppose this work-relief bill must give consideration to this phase of the matter. We cannot afford to temporize with human misery. We cannot afford to longer tantalize human beings who are in poverty and who have long been out of work. We must not crush the hopes we have stirred that soon they will be enabled to again earn their livelihood in the sweat of their brows.

hood in the sweat of their brows.

I hope and trust that within the next few days it will be possible to bring this measure onto the floor of the Senate again, and that favorable action can be had. Only this action will afford protection to the existing wage structure of the Nation. Only this will justify the patient faith of those now on the relief rolls and in distress that their Government is determined to bring this depression to an end. Nothing else can give the final impetus to the great movement for the restoration of normal conditions of employment and a balanced functioning of business and industry throughout the country. throughout the country.

THE AGRICULTURAL SITUATION

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter on the farm situation from B. D. Dykstra, of Iowa, a farmer, scholar, editor, and economist.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ORANGE CITY, IOWA, February 1935.

Senator L. J. DICKINSON,

Washington, D. C.

Honorable Sir: Would say, first of all, that we much value the regular receipt of the Congressional Record through your kind mediation. One of the boys said last night, "Dickinson is still Republican." That has special significance in these latter days. I read with personal interest your reply to the editor of the National Teachers' Association. One may well doubt whether Mr. Myer, from his peculiar connection with the T. V. A., was an impartial reporter of matters carried on in the great southern valley. The various addresses on Lincoln's birthday have more than a The various addresses on Lincoln's birthday have more than a passing meaning. These men, such as PLUMLEY, of Vermont; Fish, of New York; KNUTSON, of Minnesota, have evidently breathed the spirit of Lincoln deeply to inspire the Republican Party of our time with the needed vigor for a resurrection in these days.

There is indeed much of interest and alarm in the present po-There is indeed much of interest and alarm in the present political situation. It may be in fact a necessary discipline for the Republicans to have the role of minority. Such minorities are like the Jews in Babylon; the best survives. Majority may rule; minority often saves. It has been in my mind for some time to communicate to our Senator from Iowa my observations and reflections upon the agricultural situation, especially as I find matters in northwestern Iowa, in South Dakota, and in Minnesota, where these States touch us with conditions kindred to our own. I might not venture any authoritative opinion on banks or finances, except that in a general way of common honesty, I do not understand how all this borrowing and spending of public funds can come to any ultimate benefit for our Nation. But I am no banker. On the great American issue of farming, however, I consider myself well qualified to say somewhat.

My ancestry were farmers in Europe; I passed my life upon the farm in these parts of Iowa till the age of 30. As a student, educator, missionary, and journalist I have spent another 30 years among a distinctively rural population. Fact is that for some 26 years I lived in South Dakota. This may lead you to suspect that I have never been able to admit the surplus, so loudly proclaimed in these latter years; even in the last. I love the farm and the in these latter years; even in the last. I love the farm and the farmer.

My peculiar circumstances during the last 6 months have intensified my general concern with the problems of agriculture in these parts. In connection with certain functions and activities it was my unusual fortune to enter upon some 1,200 farmsteads. I actually visited in these homes and barns, and with the eye of a practical expert I have taken note from observation and conversation. I have talked with farmers and their wives, often intimately, upon their affairs, as one may "over the tea cups" or over a cup of coffee. I have taken particular inventory of the stock of supplies in feed and fodder on these farms, and then in comparison with a year or two ago. The county of Sioux came under my most frequent observation. This year it is commonly understood to have been a fairly favored county in Iowa. But this one fact I would state most emphatically: There is no surplus in northwestern Iowa. I said this to a representative from the Iowa department of agriculture last fall. He was from Ames and surprised. It was a patent fact that most of southern Iowa had failed, but he imagined that in these northwestern counties there was enough and over. In my own township, average farmers could have fed their corn crop by Thanksgiving. In other parts of the county, farmers on 160 acres were buying corn at 85 cents a bushel before New Year; and that was just for their ordinary stock. Farm upon farm had not produced enough potatoes for own consumption. This was felt to be some hardship. When a Sioux County farmer must buy corn and potatoes, conditions are not normal.

When I questioned these men about the actuality of surplus, they usually admitted frankly that it did not exist: in fact, it must buy corn and potatoes, conditions are not normal.

When I questioned these men about the actuality of surplus, they usually admitted frankly that it did not exist; in fact, it never had. Of course, I met a few enthusiasts for the new order of things. But a thoughtful young farmer, William Pennings, in favor of control and reduction, freely allowed that he could not afford to feed his poultry, though he had the grain on his place. Prices were too high. It took me a day to buy 2 bushels of oats in a section where oats is the leading crop after corn. As it is, I cannot secure feed for a small flock of poultry, except perhaps at prices even high above high market prices. All such should not be in a section famous for corn and grain. Many of these farmers have openly allowed to me that "they prefer 50 bushels of oats at 20 cents to 20 bushels at 50 cents." In the former proportion they would have 30 to feed and 20 to sell, whereas the 20-bushel production left no margin to market.

Now, Mr. Dickinson, I state these details because I am certain

Now, Mr. Dickinson, I state these details because I am certain Now, Mr. Dickinson, I state these details because I am certain that therein you have a cross section of actual conditions over an extensive area of our region. May say that I visited these farms on bicycle or afoot. Mr. Wallace might not note such minor matters as he passes over half a dozen States in half a day per airplane. Might say that I traveled 1,800 miles on the bicycle these latter months. And then one sees things. And, incidentally, I gathered some sadly amusing contradictions in the general agricultural management in our parts. I told this man from Ames about it. too. about it. too.

cultural management in our parts. I told this man from Ames about it, too.

In the northwestern part of our county, near Hawarden, Profesor Bakke has for some years conducted an experimental process of eradication of weeds. It is an expensive venture. There are various sorts of weeds, such as pigeon grass, Russian thisties, creeping jennies, and the like. I suggested to my friend from Ames that we had better cease to destroy pigeon grass. It is a prolific crop, requires no seed or seeding, resists drought, and was sold in our county at $6 a ton and trainloads of it. Our farmers, after receiving pay for land left idle, reaped a handsome harvest of the aforesaid pigeon weed. Why destroy it? In passing, the sad fact of existing scarcity is evident when farmers buy and sell weeds for hay. In South Dakota, Russian thisties are stacked like alfalfa. Strange to say, I met a case among my farmer friends in South Dakota where a herd of Holstein cows was maintained in good state upon a pasture of creeping jennies. This is considered one of the most noxious weeds. I suggested to our man from Ames that we had better pause in our program of weed extinction. On my own place of 10 acres the boys have, during the drought last summer, daily gathered all the weeds they could find to maintain a few cows. Rather than crop reduction, we might add weed production.

All told, we find that weeds have actually been in demand to supplement forage. The curious contradiction of economic measures occurs that on the one hand we go to expense for eradicating weeds, while, on the other hand, the weed crop proved at the end of the season to be a marketable product at some $6 per ton. In towns of Hospers and Sheldon I saw huge piles of baled pigeon grass for shipment into the Dakotas. The handling of that material was grossly abused. During the rainy season we had, much was baled in a wet condition. Large quantities came to the needy districts utterly worthless for feed,

We have been perplexed at all the makeshifts of the A. A. A. in managing these so-called "contracted acres." Constantly new and changed orders come from the center of power. Farmers actually had to wait for instructions from morning to morning. Sometime during the summer the decree came that fields might be planted to some kind of corn or cane; but this had to be so planned that no ears should be produced! Thousands of goodly acres might have yielded a moderate corn crop, which would have relieved the existing scarcity of real corn in all these western parts. Again and again I meet men who cannot feed their dairy stock as they should. We need butter and milk and cream. At present high prices the children of the urban population are underfed in these prime essentials of nourishment. prime essentials of nourishment.

Now, I think the administration of Mr. Wallace tacitly admits that a practical shortage exists. They have therefore proposed to reduce the production greatly; only 10 percent less corn, I understand, than the basis of 1932-33. On these contracted acres any crop practically may be produced. Only upon corn "the curse" still is left to lie. "Too much corn," warns Mr. Wallace. He is seeking by his farm papers to frighten the farmers with corn at 10 cents next fall. He supposes that Dakota might plant unusual acreage. Suppose they do. It would take three good crops to put that State in normal condition in the supply of corn. Years ago it was the policy of farmers there to conserve their extra corn of the previous year, or even two. I have seen 26 summers there. There will at best be off years. Mr. Wallace ought not to worry about a surplus of corn in South Dakota or in the Dakotas. I have seen years when 12,000 bushels were harvested on a single large farm. Last fall I saw no trace of a crib of corn in the area west of Tyndall in such counties as Douglas and Charles Mix.

Some have seen much merit in the sealing of corn. They say Now, I think the administration of Mr. Wallace tacitly admits west of Tyndall in such counties as Douglas and Charles Mix.

Some have seen much merit in the sealing of corn. They say that large profit would have gone to the speculators. It is more likely that the big market would have been oversupplied and that the general price might have been reasonably lower. As it is, prices are too high by common admission, especially for the large areas which have to buy. At any rate the sealing of corn has no merit of its own. The high price has been caused by the unprecedented failure in production.

It wish indeed that an attitude might be cultivated in these unprecedented failure in production.

I wish indeed that an attitude might be cultivated in these parts that we should seek to produce all we fairly can. There should be some rotation of crops, but that is another story. The Farm Bureau and similar agencies have always taught that. I have no doubt that Mr. Wallace and his co-laborers feel at heart that production ought to be stimulated. But they have this new deal in agriculture by the ears like the man who held a wolf. He feared to let go, lest the beast might bite. The present administration has staked its reputation upon a program of control and reduction. They wish at all hazards to maintain the principle of control somewhat like the British tax on tea in the Colonies. Just a nominal tax, and thus a mere nominal reduction.

My simple summary of the situation, as I sense it among the

My simple summary of the situation, as I sense it among the Colonies. Just a nominal tax, and thus a mere nominal reduction. My simple summary of the situation, as I sense it among the rank and file of our farmers here and among the 1,200 which I met personally on their places, is that they would gladly have this entire cumbrous and bungling and corrupting system of control over with. They are still forced in line of the program by much propaganda and some temporary apparent gains in certain cash payments by Government. There is much unnatural restraint by landowners upon their renters. Everybody is in for some cash dole or other. But there is the fiddler to pay. The papers of Sioux County divided among them $800 for boosting the corn-hog plan; there has been no end to conferences at large and locally. Directly or indirectly much time and money was wasted.

I have not entered upon the confusion, the undue advantage taken by many, the actual graft with it all. The time must be again when farmers shall do their own farming. They must not be allowed to degenerate still further under an arbitrary system of guardianship such as has been invoked over them. Let our real American farmer, of the type of men from Vermont, once again enter upon the glorious gambling with God and nature and their own inventive initiative. To the Republican Party we must henceforth look for a restoration of that precious personal freedom, as formerly the Jeffersons and the Jacksons defended it. The Democratic Party has betrayed that charge. I am indeed pleased to see that you and other staunch men see their mission ever more clearly even through the darkened glass which the present regime would have you use to the confounding of all things.

I am very sincerely.

I am very sincerely, Your constituent member,

B. D. DYKSTRA.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY-REPORT OF SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The VICE PRESIDENT. There appear to be no resolutions coming over from a previous day.

WHEN THE BALLOT BOX IS FOUND

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, as this is the last order of the day before we take up the calendar, I want to submit an inquiry. I only have newspaper reports to the effect that Mr. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, said he was transmitting some papers to the Senate today. I inquire if those papers have reached the desk?

The VICE PRESIDENT. They have not reached the Chair. The Chair does not see them on his desk.

Mr. LONG. I shall have some further remarks to make later. I presume the Senate will be in session a little while longer today.

Mr. President, it has been an old custom back in my part of the country that when we send for a ballot box to investigate it and those having the ballot box in their possession take 2 or 3 weeks to send the ballot box, it is expected to come up straight. We asked for this information from Mr. Ickes 3 weeks ago. The thing does not look right to me. It rather looks like there is something up the tree when we have to wait around here so long. In other words, it looks like the ballot box is liable to come in all straight.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that is a gratuitous statement, a wholly unwarranted reflection upon the Secretary of the Interior.

The Senator from Louisiana has been absent from the Senate for a week or 10 days, running the State of Louisiana. He necessarily is compelled to divide his time. He is unable constantly to give us the favor of his presence. So long as a state of martial law exists in Louisiana he finds it necessary to run down there and settle controversies. Every week he calls the Legislature of Louisiana into session and passes such statutes as seem to please him. He asks the legislature to O. K. his measures without consideration and then returns to give us the pleasure of his company here.

So far as the delay that has occurred in sending the report to the Senate is concerned, I wish to say to the Senator from Louisiana that the Secretary of the Interior advised me some days ago that he was ready to send his report. There was no business to be transacted by the Senate, and we were not in session. I understood that the Senator from Louisiana was returning today. I thought perhaps he would like to be here when the reply to his resolution was communicated to the Senate, and I suggested that it be sent in today.

There is not one circumstance upon which to justify the very foul insinuation that was carried in the words of the Senator from Louisiana.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair say to the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Arkansas that he is advised by the Secretary that the report is here, and in the ordinary course of events it would be submitted to the Senate at the conclusion of the morning business. If the Senator desires to have it submitted at the present moment, of course it will be the pleasure of the Chair to do so.

Mr. LONG. Do I understand the Chair to say that the report is now here?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. LONG. Oh! I beg the Chair's pardon. I had understood the Chair to say that it was not here.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; the Chair said it had not been laid before him.

Mr. LONG. I beg the Chair's pardon.

In answer to my friend from Arkansas, he is a little bit concerned about Louisiana. The State of Louisiana unfortunately likes to have the attendance of all its citizens in legislative matters. Louisiana has a rather peculiar custom.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am prepared to agree with the Senator that it is unfortunate that his attendance is required. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. That is to be taken with an understanding of just exactly how it is to be looked upon, and where I might be all the time. I might be outside of Louisiana in the near future.

Mr. President, as I was saying, Louisiana has a custom of inviting all citizens to come before the committees considering legislation. No man in Louisiana is too high or too low but that the chairman of every committee says, "Is there anyone here who would like to be heard on this bill?" and it is the custom in Louisiana that no one will be denied a hearing, and as long as he desires, before a legislative committee. Beginning in 1916, I began to go before those legislative committees; and year by year, as time passed on, they began to see the wisdom of what I was advocating before those committees.

Mr. ROBINSON. Particularly when the Senator put the State under martial law.

Mr. LONG. No; the State is not under martial law, Mr. President. That is not true, and the Senator from Arkansas ought to know better than that.

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, no, no, no! I had understood that martial law had been put into effect and that it still prevails in the State. I do not understand that it is Statewide.

Mr. LONG. Only in the Standard Oil domicile. That may be all of the State that the Senator from Arkansas knows about.

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, no; Standard Oil nothing! The capital city.

Mr. LONG. That is the Standard Oil domicile.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is not the capital city of Louisiana under martial law?

Mr. LONG. The Standard Oil domicile.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Louisiana has a way of blaming everything on Standard Oil—Standard Oil!

Mr. LONG. Oh, no; the Senator from Arkansas is wrong about that. That is where the Senator is always saying things that he later on is sorry for. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let there be order in the galleries. The occupants of the galleries will kindly refrain from audible expressions.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I desire to see if I correctly understood the Senator. Am I to understand, from what he says, that the capital of Louisiana is the domicile of Standard Oil?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir. We have been trying to change that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. And has not the Senator succeeded? Mr. LONG. Near about, at this time. In other words, Mr. President, when some four or five hundred armed men announced that they were going to take the capital of Louisiana, some sixty men said they would not; and that condition has abated in the capital city. In other words, Louisiana is a State of law and order, and proposes to remain so.

For the benefit of the Senator from Arkansas let me say that Louisiana has been passing some legislation. Mr. President, if you will look at the newspaper map which is published and sent out by, I think, the Associated Press of New Orleans, you will see a large map there with numbers and figures on it showing why Louisiana is in the best position of any State in America. You will see from a map that is published in the anti-Long paper, the Times-Picayune of New Orleans, and sent out, I understand, Nation-wide, that Louisiana requires less relief than any other State, takes care of its own, pays its debts, has a balanced budget and a million and a half dollars surplus in the treasury; home owners are being relieved of taxes; schools are run 9 months of the year; all school children are given free school books; young boys are sent to the State institution of learning to study medicine practically free of any tuition charge at all, whereas it costs four or five hundred dollars a year to go anywhere else; a charity hospital, including the insane asylum, has not only taken everybody out of the jails and cribs and barns, but it has an immense surplus capacity, and has $150,000 surplus, and has not even drawn the February appropriation.

That is the way in which they are running things down there. No other State is being run like that today. We have a debt-moratorium law down there which I had the pleasure of helping draw. We do not allow any man to be foreclosed upon for a debt he cannot pay. You cannot take his furniture, nor his bedding, nor his bedstead, nor his wife's wedding ring, nor his home, nor his farm. You have to give him a chance to pay out under the abnormal circumstances now prevailing.

With that kind of good work going on, I would not be half so selfish as my friend from Arkansas thinks I am if I did not go down there and get my name in the pot, and let the people understand that I was one of those helping to do that kind of beneficial work in the State of Louisiana. Mr. President, there is not even an anti-Long ticket down there. The anti-Long ticket ran for 3 years and quit, and up to this time we have not even got an opponent, though the election is coming on.

But my friend from Arkansas said he told the Secretary of the Interior I would want to be here when this report came in. We asked for this report a long time ago, about 21/2 weeks ago, and finally the resolution was passed. I thought the documents would be here the next day, and the next day, and the next day, or the next week. No; they have not come in. Finally, however, we are informed today that they have come.

What I said was not an insinuation. As a matter of fact, any time you call for a ballot box in order to investigate the ballot box, and the election commissioners hold it out 15 days and then send it in, the ballot box is straight, 99 times out of 100.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. In all fairness, the Senator understands that the resolution contemplated and required a search of a very voluminous record.

Mr. LONG. I did not know it was so voluminous.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am telling the Senator that my information is that the record is voluminous.

Mr. LONG. I cannot conceive why it should have taken over a day to go through it and find anything. A department must be very inefficiently administered that cannot lay its hands on anything there in a day or two. That I understood from the public press that the minute this resolution was passed, Mr. Ickes hastily summoned Mr. Glavis and immediately went into the matter. I want to get back to the statement I made, though, to which the Senator from Arkansas has taken exception, and then I want to proceed from that point on-that any time you call for a ballot box, and you have to wait 15 days to get it, the ballot box always comes up straight. That has been the record ever since I have been in elections.

I used to try to count the ballots of my opponents. Every time we tried to get hold of the ballot box we were told that the clerk had gone and he had the key. Then we would go out and hunt up the clerk and he would be gone fishing and about the end of the week he would say he did not have it, the register of voters had it locked up. Then we would go and hunt up the register of voters, and about 3 or 4 days later we would finally pin him down, and he would say, "Well, I declare, I have not got the ballots. I gave the whole thing to the president of the police jury and he locked up the ballots in the police jury room; " and in about 15 days we would go there, and of course we would lose the election every time, and the ballot box would be just as straight as

This resolution was sent up to the Interior Department 15, 16, or 18 days ago, and we asked the Secretary to send us the report he had on these significant concerns in which Mr. Jim Farley had been taking a leading hand. knew there was certain "dope" he ought to have up there anyway. We knew there was certain information he could not keep from having; but when Mr. Ickes delayed, it might not have looked so bad had he not taken occasion in the meantime to send out some public statements once a day for a while. This man who has taken all this time, 15 days, to look up these data, in the meantime was explaining to the people that Jim Farley was a good man, and that he never had investigated Farley, and that he thought there probably was nothing to HUEY P. Long after all. In other words, this bird to whom we sent this resolution took 15 days to locate something that he ought to have located in 30 minutes.

If the office is run half as efficiently as we are told it is, there is not anything up there which could not have been located in 15 minutes, or, at the outside, in 3 or 4 hours he could have located anything up there, if there were anything like a respectable set of files. I can do so in my office, and I have considerable files there. I can locate in 10 minutes' time almost any letter a man has ever written to me during the last 15 or 20 years. If this man had kept such an efficient department as he has said he keeps, he would not have had to be taking up his time issuing these smokescreen statements that Farley was all right.

I have not read Ickes' report. I know what is in Ickes' report without reading it. It took too long to get it here. It took 15 days. Fifteen days!

Mr. President, men are men. There is no difference in men, whether in the North, the South, the East, or the West; men are men, whether of high or low degree. I have been in politics too long for anyone to feed me a part of a tainted beef and tell me the balance of it is going to taste all right. I have said on the floor of the Senate before that you do not have to eat a whole beef to tell when it is tainted Sending this report here as late as it is sent is an effort to whitewash the Postmaster General. Why? We do not need to have anything Mr. Ickes has said to prove the case against Mr. Farley. I have enough under lock and key, can call enough witnesses before the committee, so that the case of Mr. Farley will not even admit of doubt.

I have been informed this morning that the Postmaster General's resignation has already been discussed over at the White House, and some even think it has been given, and some even think that they have brought a man here with whom they are now discussing whether or not he will not take the job of Mr. Farley and let him step out of the job as Postmaster General. That rumor is going around the Capitol today.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have heard no such report. Will the Senator be good enough to state the source of his information?

Mr. LONG. I have heard that Mr. Murphy has been brought here from the Philippine Islands, that he is here now, and that they were discussing whether or not to put him in the job of Mr. Farley.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator state the source of his information?

Mr. LONG. No; I will not tell the source of my information, because that would not do any good to the person who told me: but he is right close up to the throne, right on the inside. I have plenty of them coming to me and telling me, and I am not going to disclose any of their names.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. Did I understand the Senator to say that Mr. Murphy is here?

Mr. LONG. I have been told Mr. Murphy is here, or had come here, or would be here.

Mr. BAILEY. Does not the Senator know that it would have required a notice of at least 3 weeks to get him here?

Mr. LONG. I do not know. The Senator is smarter about those matters than I am.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator does not know the distance between here and the Philippine Islands?

Mr. LONG. I did not know he had to get notice.

Mr. BAILEY. Then how did he know he was to be offered the position?

Mr. LONG. I do not know, unless they told him.

Mr. BAILEY. If they told him and brought him here, they must have done that at least 3 weeks ago.

Mr. LONG. Suppose the Senator inquires, and sees whether he is not in town now.

Mr. BAILEY. No; that is not my business. Mr. LONG. I think he is in town now.

Mr. BAILEY. If he is in town now, he must have been notified as much as 3 weeks ago.

Mr. LONG. I do not know when he was notified.

Mr. BAILEY. That would be prior-

Mr. LONG. I do not know whether he came here for that purpose or not.

Mr. BAILEY. That would be prior to any accusation the Senator made, and would have no relevancy to it.

If you want an easy bed for him to fall on, that is all right. Let us just say they had it arranged 3 weeks ago to get him out now. I do not want to take the credit of Farley getting out. Let us say that Murphy started 3 weeks ago, before I brought this matter up; and just put him out on an easy bed, and let Big Jim get back into the boxing business, and framing up these building matters, the paying of $1,000 by the man under indictment, and that $50,000,000 loan to the B. & O. railroad matter down in West Virginia so as to elect a Senator. Let us get him out of the job. I will withdraw here and say that he was ready to get out anyway. Let us just say, according to what the Senator from North Carolina would suggest, that if Mr. Murphy left 3 weeks ago, then nothing I have introduced here has anything to do with running Farley out. Let us just admit that. Get him out. That is all we want.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is that the only purpose-

Mr. BAILEY. If that is the object, the Senator's statement that he was informed today, relative to this inquiry, is utterly without foundation, according to his own statement.

Mr. LONG. How is that?

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator was informed today that Mr. Murphy was here—

Mr. LONG. I have been informed that Mr. Murphy is here; yes. Some days ago I was informed he was here, and I have been informed again today that he is here.

Mr. BAILEY. And now the Senator concedes that if he was brought here he was notified at least 3 weeks ago?

Mr. LONG. I do not know whether he was ever notified or not.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator is assuming that, he just said. Mr. LONG. No; I did not say I was assuming that he was given any notice.

Mr. BAILEY. What did the Senator say?

Mr. LONG. Only the statement I made, that I was told Mr. Murphy was here in this city, or had been here, and that Mr. Murphy was being considered and talked of to take the job of Mr. Farley, and that Mr. Farley's resignation had already been planned, and that one of them told me it had actually been given.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, the statement made by the Senator from Louisiana was that Mr. Murphy had been sent for and was here for this purpose and with reference to this inquiry.

Mr. LONG. Very well; I do not know just what verbiage I used; but Mr. Murphy, as I understand, is here for that purpose now. Let the Senator go on and investigate.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the Senator yield further to me?

Mr. LONG. I yield for a question. I want the Senator to make his speech not out of my time.

Mr. BAILEY. I do not intend to make a speech at this time

Mr. LONG. Very well.

Mr. BAILEY. I do not think we should sit here and permit the Senator from Louisiana to make a speech in which he casts insulting and disgraceful aspersions upon the Department of the Interior. He did it. He said that the delay indicated that there was "something dead up the creek."

Mr. LONG. Just a minute, Mr. President. I have not yielded to the Senator for a speech. I yield only for a question, and not for him to make a speech.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.
Mr. LOGAN. What became of the morning business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana is speaking by unanimous consent. If any Senator should make a point of order, the Chair would be obliged to sustain it.

Mr. LOGAN. Will not the Senator from Louisiana kindly refrain from continuing his remarks until we get through with the call of the calendar?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I did not hear any objection to the speech of the Senator from Arkansas or to what the Senator from North Carolina said. I think the Senator ought to allow me to make my few remarks. I have yielded to all these interruptions, and so it does not seem quite generous to object to me continuing after I have yielded.

Mr. LOGAN. The Senator from Louisiana has apparently embarked upon a long speech. Senators are waiting here for the call of the calendar; many have committee meetings to which they desire to go; indeed, I wish to go to one myself; some have reports to make, and it seems to me manifestly unfair for the Senator from Louisiana to take up the time and keep Senators from transacting business.

Mr. LONG. If I am not interrupted, I will be through in 5 minutes. Most of my time has been taken up by the Senator from Arkansas, the Senator from Wyoming, and the Senator from North Carolina, and if I am not interrupted I can soon close my remarks. I want to be courteous to Senators.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, if the Senator is not interrupted, he will fill the air of America with unfounded insinuations. I propose to interrupt him.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, why not have an investigation of Farley and let us see whether the charges are unfounded. Just let us investigate and see who is telling the truth. If I do not rock this thing from stem to stern, if I do not make the Senator from North Carolina take to the tall timber—you will never hear of him again. He will blow out of here like the March wind. [Laughter.]

I understand the committee of the Senator from Tennessee meets today. I never have found out from the newspapers what kind of a meeting it is to be. I was going to ask my friend the Senator from Tennessee a question about that before I conclude. There is some kind of a meeting of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads set for today. I think they are to pass upon considering whether or not they will have an investigation of Mr. Farley. Manifestly, the only thing to do is to investigate the case of Farley. That is the only thing to do, not to have me slandered by the Senator from North Carolina to the effect that I am slandering someone else without substantive proof.

Let us have this thing done. Let us find out if that B. & O. Railroad official got that definite message that he had better go a certain way while that loan of $52,000,000 was pending.

Let us find out whether I have those original letters in my file, or photostats of them, wherein Mr. Farley's henchman, acknowledged by Farley, said to the man under indictment, "Send me $1,000, and I don't mean maybe", and got the $1,000.

Let us find out whether all those malicious charges are true. Let us find out whether or not there was a building to be built; that the low bid was rejected one time, and then they bid again, and the low bid was rejected the second time; then they bid again, and the low bid was rejected the third time; then they bid again, and that time Stewart & Co., buying materials from Jim Farley's company, bid low and was given the contract, and after getting the contract, they changed the specifications, without advertisement or competitive bidding. Let us find out whether that is true.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have made inquiry as to the truthfulness of the statement made by the Senator from Louisiana that Mr. Farley had already filed his resignation, or contemplated resigning, and that it is in contemplation that Mr. Murphy, the Governor General of the Philippines, is to succeed him. I am informed by the highest authority that there is not one word of truth in the statement, not the slightest foundation for it, nothing upon which such a declaration could be based.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President-

Mr. LONG. Just a minute, Mr. President. I should like to be asked to yield the floor. Let me reply first to the Senator from Arkansas.

The Senator may have been informed recently from the highest authority. I have had some information from there, too, once or twice.

Mr. ROBINSON. Does the Senator mean to imply that the statement from the highest authority cannot be relied upon touching a matter of that character?

Mr. LONG. What is the highest authoriy?

Mr. ROBINSON. The President of the United States.

Mr. LONG. I will say this: That the President of the United States is sometimes mistaken.

Mr. ROBINSON. The President could not be mistaken about a matter of that sort.

Mr. LONG. Well, I do not know.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator's charge is of such a nature that the President would possess information of the matter, and the Senator knows it; and if the President does not possess information of it, it is conclusive proof that the declaration is wholly untrue.

Mr. LONG. I stated that the President could be mistaken, like all fallible humanity. I myself have known of the President being mistaken.

Mr. ROBINSON. But the Senator from Louisiana is the only man who cannot be mistaken!

Mr. LONG. Oh, no. I admit that I can make a mistake.

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, does the Senator make that dec-

Mr. LONG. Oh, yes. I made one mistake concerning the Senator from Arkansas one day.

Mr. ROBINSON, Yes?

Mr. LONG. Yes; I did.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Arkansas has never made any mistake concerning the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Perhaps he has not. Perhaps not. I do not think he has either, because he took my word and it was kept.

But I will not go into the matter that it is just as possible for the President to make a mistake as it is for me. I will not go into that matter.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. In all good faith, from my standpoint, this involves a question of integrity.

Mr. LONG. All right.

Mr. ROBINSON. It is not a mere question of mistake. The Senator from time to time has arisen on the floor and abused Mr. Farley. He has employed language which I think it is questionable whether it should be employed, particularly in view of the fact that the person affected by it has no opportunity of replying.

But the Senator this morning, in the remarks that he is continuing, made a statement which everyone who is honest and who knows will realize should not have been made unless the Senator thought he had substantial evidence to support it. When I declared that the highest authority informed me there was no foundation for it, the reply of the Senator from Louisiana was that the highest authority, the President, could have been mistaken.

It is not subject to mistake. It is a matter about which a mistake could not be made. It is a question of truth, a question of fact so simple in its nature that it is either true or untrue, and I have declared that, according to the information obtained from the source which I mentioned, the statement is untrue.

Mr. LONG. Now, Mr. President-

Mr. ROBINSON. It does not make any difference-

Mr. LONG. I should like to give the Senator from Arkansas this statement, so he will not get so excited.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am not excited in the least. The Senator well understands that I am in as good a humor as the circumstances will permit.

Mr. LOGAN. A point of order. I ask for the regular order

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I reply to that-

The VICE PRESIDENT. One moment. The Chair is going to have order in the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. The Senator from Louisiana will suspend. The Chair is going to try to conduct the proceedings of the Senate according to the rules. The Chair understood the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] to make a point of order. The Senator from Kentucky demanded the regular order?

Mr. LOGAN, I did.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is the calling of the calendar. The clerk will call the first bill on the ralendar

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT

The bill (S. 944) to amend section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act was announced as first in order.

Mr. McNARY. On behalf of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] I ask that the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to be heard on that bill. First, I will answer what the Senator from Arkansas said and what I said will be explained by repeating what I said. I said I had known the President of the United States to make mistakes before. He is a man with multifarious duties and can sometimes have a bad memory. That is possible with every man engaged in such affairs.

Mr. ROBINSON. Does the Senator from Louisiana maintain in this presence that the resignation of a Cabinet member in this administration under charges is a matter of such a nature that the President would forget that it had taken place? The Senator said that the resignation had already been tendered. Does the Senator think that that is a matter that could be subject to mistake?

Mr. LONG. Now, I will answer the Senator without interruptions.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. LONG. I stated that my understanding is that it is to be given or may have already been given. The record of the official reporter will verify what I say. But I say further that the President could be mistaken. I have known him to be mistaken on simple matters. Do I not know that I went to the White House on either the 5th or 6th day of March about an amendment that was to go into the bank bill? I understood the President to say it went into the bank bill. I went over and saw the Secretary of the Treasury. I understood from him that the President said he was not in favor of it. I ran back to the President and I understood him to tell me he was in favor of it. I came on the floor the next day, and still I understood that he had not decided about it. Some days later the President, I understood, expressed himself more or less to be in favor of it, but he was several days remembering.

That is not all. I have a good memory.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I wish to point out to the Senator from Louisiana that when one's faculties do not work one is seldom conscious of that fact.

Mr. LONG. That is true. Mr. ROBINSON. If memory fails you concerning a subject, you are not always conscious that your memory is at fault.

Mr. LONG. I admit that.

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes. So I just point out to the Senator from Louisiana that while we are all subject to defects in memory and are likely to forget things, there are some things which by virtue of their nature we cannot forget, and I think this is one of them. If a Cabinet member under charges had tendered his resignation, the President would know it and would not forget it.

Mr. LONG. Yes, Mr. President. I will not go further on that matter. I have given one fact as a case in point. Men can forget; men do forget. I say that I have been informed that it is contemplated that Mr. Farley either is to resign or that maybe he has already resigned, and that Mr. Murphy was to be asked to take his place, and had been suggested here to take the place. I know where I got my information. I never have failed, as I recall, in any proceeding here to prove everything I have ever said on this floor, and I do not remember any case yet where it has not been admitted.

Now, we have had a good many investigations here which I have provoked, and I do not remember one of them when the so-called "outlandish charges" which I have been accused of preferring have not always been proved, and to my knowledge the facts have been admitted. I do not remember a single one of them when that has not been the case.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Louisiana has expired.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, let us see what this bill is before it is passed. The discussions of the Senator from Louisiana and my own discussions in his time have not related to the subject matter of the bill.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; certainly.

Mr. LONG. In order that I may take out of his time what he took out of my time?

Mr. ROBINSON. I want a look at the bill first. I desire to find out what the measure is. This is Order of Business No. 48, and it is a bill to amend the Federal Trade Commission Act in an important particular. I see the chairman of the committee who reported the bill is present. Now, I yield, first, to the Senator from Louisiana, who wished to interrupt me.

Mr. LONG. Well, I will go ahead and let the Senate pass

Mr. ROBINSON. I should like to have the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] explain the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the bill has gone over.

Mr. ROBINSON. The bill has gone over?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

CURTIS JETT

The bill (S. 243) for the relief of Curtis Jett was announced as next in order.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I merely wish to conclude with this statement, that there have not been any random charges made in this Farley case. They have all been specific. The days and the dates and the names and the figures have all been specified, and in many cases the photostatic proof has been exhibited. It is a matter that should take an investigating committee, which is duly authorized, but a short time to find out about. The only way to handle this matter is to handle it in a reasonably expeditious way. Let us have a show-down. We have had a whole lot of defense made for this man here, not on the facts, but on whether or not I have submitted these matters without proper proof. It is due to me, it is due to the Senate, it is due to Mr. Farley, and the President of the United States that we have an investigation.

What is going to happen this morning I do not know. I think, however, that we had better have it known in the Senate.

I should like to ask my friend from Tennessee [Mr. Mc-Kellar] a question. Am I supposed to come before the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads?

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator wish to come?

Mr. LONG. That is just up to what the Senator wants me to do. I do not think it is exactly——

Mr. McKELLAR. We expect to hold an executive session at 2 o'clock. If the Senator wants to come before the committee, we shall be glad to have him come.

Mr. LONG. No, sir; I do not ask that. I have stated the case here and I will not request an invitation. I am just at the service of the committee in such capacity as it sees fit. I do not know what the Senator wants to do. I should think that what the Senator ought to do would be to hold an executive meeting and recommend that an investigation be held. I think that would be satisfactory.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understood that from the statements which the Senator had made in the RECORD, all of which we have before us.

Mr. LONG. Then, I just want it understood. I am not inviting myself or asking an invitation to come before the committee.

Mr. President, if we were to let this $52,000,000 loan business go unquestioned, if we were to let these rejected bids that have been published from day to day go without any scrutiny, if we were to let these men be sent to the penitentiary for collecting money from Government employees, with countless letters going out from Farley's organization collecting from the same people, for which violation others are being sent to the penitentiary, if we were to let postage stamps worth $100,000 be passed without notice, if we were to let these open flauntings of the law—

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask the Senator from Louisiana if it is not true that he has collected, or caused to be collected, from State employees in Louisiana a percentage of their compensation for political purposes?

Mr. LONG. In answer to the Senator from Arkansas, I will say that we have never, in violation of any law, collected a nickel.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that is not an answer to my question.

Mr. LONG. Oh, yes; it is.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask the Senator if he did not say in the cloakroom, in the presence of some 15 or 20 Senators, that the way to do it was to do it like he does it in Louisiana, or substantially that, namely, require every man who has a job to pay a percentage of his salary to support the organization?

Mr. LONG. Not in those words, as the Senator has put it. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROBINSON. I did not pretend to quote the exact words.

Mr. LONG. No; the facts are that in Louisiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Alabama, and nearly every other State in America they do solicit campaign contributions from employees and officers of the State. There is no State law against it; but there is a Federal law that makes it an offense to collect from a Federal employee, and men have been sent to the penitentiary, including Mr. Langer, of the State of North Dakota, as late as last year, for collecting $170 from Federal employees. Yes; the way we got part of the money we sent to the Democratic national campaign was by collecting it from State employees—voluntary contributions. There never was one made involuntarily, as the Senator well knows. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Louisiana has expired.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GEORGE. I inquire if Calendar No. 48, being the bill

S. 944, is still before the Senate? The VICE PRESIDENT. That bill was passed over. Mr. GEORGE. I merely wished to make that inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Calendar No. 2, being Senate bill 396, and Calendar No. 48, being Senate bill 944, were passed over, the Chair is advised, and at this time Calendar No. 54, being the bill S. 243, is before the Senate. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 243) for the relief of Curtis Jett was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, Curtis Jett, who was a member of Troop I, Sixth Regiment United States Cavalry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private on July 23, 1893: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

ROBERT E. MASTERS

The bill (S. 1266) for the relief of Robert E. Masters was announced as next in order.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to conclude and I hope I will not be interrupted. I am not undertaking to try this case without evidence. My friend from Arkansas wants to try every matter in the world. Now, I want to answer just what he said. He asked me whether or not my organization, including myself-because I knew they did it-did not solicit or invite or, at least, accept funds from employees of the State. Yes; they and nearly every other State do so; but there is a Federal law against such contributions being solicited from Federal employees. I am not arguing whether or not I would have voted for that law, but it is nonetheless the law; and under that Federal law they have convicted Governor Langer in North Dakota, and he has been removed from the office of Governor, for collecting $170. Also, under the Federal law they have indicted little L. L. Merrigan, of the office of the collector of internal revenue in New Orleans, for receiving funds in the last campaign, and the indictment is there now. That is the law of the Federal Government. Under it two Republicans have been indicted, and one has been convicted, by district attorneys who owe their appointments to James A. Farley, the patronage dispenser of this administration.

There is such a thing as equality in the law. If the Senator from Arkansas wishes to say that the man who collected from a Federal employee did no worse than the man who collected from a State employee, let us take that as the law and turn Langer loose. Do not come here with a conviction resting on Mr. Langer, of North Dakota, and with an indictment pending against Mr. Merrigan in Louisiana on the ground that they collected insignificant sums of money, amounting to a few hundred dollars, from Federal employees, and in the same breath let go free Mr. Farley, who collected hundreds of thousands of dollars from the same Federal employees and sent his political enemies to the penitentiary and profited by the same business that he claims to be a violation of law on the part of others.

If my friend from Arkansas wishes to say that the Federal law is a mistake, that the man who collects from a Federal Government employee or a man who will allow a Federal Government employee to contribute is no worse than the man who will allow a State employee to contribute, let us say so; do not let us make fish out of one and flesh out of another. Certainly, I will tell you, part of the preelection campaign money of the Democratic Party came in that way from State employees. A part of the Republican campaign fund, for aught I know, may have come that way; I do not know about that; but I do know about the Democratic Party, because I was one of the men helping them to get their money. We did it, and we did it legally, and we did it properly; we did it in the best way possible, because we did not go to any corporation and ask for a dime.

We made it up among ourselves the best way we knew how, according to the law. But what I am insisting is that when you use the processes of justice to send one set of men to the penitentiary for what the man who is in charge of it is doing himself, it is a perversion of the law. What I have stated is the law, and I am going toward the letter of the law. Mr. President, on the letter of the law, you cannot excuse Farley on the building contracts; on the letter of the law, you cannot excuse Farley on the stamp matter; on the letter of the law, you cannot excuse Farley for phoning down to West Virginia when a $52,000,000 loan depended upon the stand that a railroad official took in the election for the United States Senate. On the law—

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator has expired. Is there objection to the present consideration of Senate bill 1266?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 1266) for the relief of Robert E. Masters was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Robert E. Masters, who served as a private, Company K, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, United States Army, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service on March 27, 1903: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1404) to promote the efficiency of national defense was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 213) to amend section 113 of the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. 1109; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 203), and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. GEORGE. Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1506) to change the name of the Pickwick Landing Dam to Quin Dam was announced as next in order.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, at the request of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], I ask that the bill may be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 170) for the relief of Alva A. Murphy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over!

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 883) directing the retirement of acting assistant surgeons of the United States Navy at the age of 64 years was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over!

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MACK COPPER CO.

The bill (S. 1878) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Mack Copper Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, heretofore I objected to the consideration of this measure. I have been promised by the attorney representing the claimant that he would furnish me with some of the testimony which was adduced before the Court of Claims. As soon as that is produced and I shall have had an opportunity to examine it, I shall have no objection to the consideration of the bill on its merits. However, under the circumstances, let it go over for the present.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

TERESA DE PREVOST

The bill (S. 1360) for the relief of Teresa de Prevost was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before the bill is considered I should like an explanation of it.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, when the bill was reached on the calendar the other day the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] asked for an explanation. I requested him to read the report which the Committee on Claims had made, and he assured me he would do so. I shall state briefly the facts in connection with the claim.

While the origin of the claim is back in the distant past, I do not know how long ago, perhaps in the seventies, one of the South American Republics, or, perhaps, two of them, destroyed some ships belonging to the Alsop Co. The claimants prosecuted their claim for many years, and at last the matter was referred to the King of England and arbitrated. The King of England awarded to the American claimants some $800,000 or more. The Secretary of State, I believe, was directed to distribute the money among the claimants.

Now we come to the claim of Mrs. Prevost, who is a South American lady, very much distressed and perturbed about the matter as some Senators know, I expect, from having consulted with her. Her father was a member of the Alsop Co. Mr. Prevost had a partner named Hobson. Mr. Hobson borrowed $25,000 from Mr. Prevost back in the seventies. He never paid the interest on it, nor could he pay the principal of the note, but he always, in writing and otherwise, assured Mr. Prevost that, if they ever collected the claim out of the Alsop claims, his note would be paid. After Mr. Prevost died Mr. Hobson wrote the son of Mr. Prevost, who was the executor, saying that was what he wanted done with his part of the money. Moreover, he made a will and added a codicil or paper in connection with it, in which he said he wanted this note paid, with the interest, amounting to something over $100,000.

The Hobson heirs, Hobson having died, had perhaps $100,000 coming out of this claim. In some strange way someone connected with the office of the Secretary of State at the time, who had been interested in the matter, resigned his place to represent the Hobson heirs. He procured the payment to the Hobson heirs of this money that should have gone to Mrs. Prevost. Many efforts were made to get the matter considered by the Department of State, but the Department took the position time after time that it could only pay direct claims and could not pay assigned claims.

In my judgment, after having gone over the matter as carefully as I know how, and having dug into the musty old records in the case, it seems to me that in justice and in fairness this money belonged to the Prevost heirs, and that it was paid wrongly by the Department of State to the Hobson heirs. Mrs. Prevost, who is the heir of her father, has no remedy unless the Congress of the United States shall make the appropriation. She was entitled to the full amount of her note with interest, but the Committee on Claims eliminated the interest and has provided that $25,000 shall be appropriated to cover her entire claim. The money was paid to the heirs of Hobson when it should have been paid to the heirs of Prevost.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. LOGAN. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Does the bill protect the United States against prosecution of any claim by any other of the heirs of Prevost?

Mr. LOGAN. Yes; it does.

Mr. KING. What attempt was made, if any, to compel the man who had been employed by the Government, and who was familiar with the matter and resigned in order to become attorney for the Hobson heirs, to pay the amount involved?

Mr. LOGAN. The matter was discussed with the State Department a great deal. He collected $30,000 out of the money as his fee. There was no legal way to make him pay it back. I do not say there was anything wrong about it. Not only did he resign and get out of the State Department to represent the Hobson heirs, but as soon as the matter was settled he went back into the State Department.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on last Monday I objected to the consideration of the bill and promised the Senator from Kentucky that I would read the report. However, before I had an opportunity to read it the Senator made the same explanation to me that he has since made on the floor. I thought the explanation was a valid one, and I have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1360) for the relief of Teresa de Prevost, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$100,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$25,000" and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Teresa de Prevost the sum of $25,000, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for losses sustained by reason of alleged irregularities in the distribution through the State Department to claimants under the so-called "Alsop award of July 4, 1911", made by the King of Great Britain as arbitrator: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys to be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading. read the third time, and passed.

UNION SHIPPING & TRADING CO., LTD.

The bill (S. 741) for the relief of the Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd., against the United States of America for damages alleged to have been caused by a collision on April 25, 1918, near Paulilac, in the Gironde River, France, between the Spanish steamship Consuelo (at the time of the collision the British steamship Reims) and the American steamship Berwind, then in the transport service of the United States War Department, may be sued for by the said Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd., in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said suit (in accordance with the principles of libels in rem and/or in personam), and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages (including interest) and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the said Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd., or against the said Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd., in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That at the trial of said suit the written report or reports concerning said collision made by the pllot, master, any officer or member of the crew of the steamship Bervind, who is not available to testify because he is dead or cannot be found, may be admitted in evidence: Provided further, That such notice of the said suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within 4 months of the date of the passage of this act.

C. B. DICKINSON

The bill (S. 1694) for the relief of C. B. Dickinson was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection until I make a brief statement?

Mr. KING. Very well.

Mr. NORBECK. I wish the Senator would read the report accompanying the bill. It is not charged there was any unfairness or extravagance involved. A new superintendent came on the job during the building program, and it was afterwards held that he had carried certain items into the wrong account, and payment was refused. The matter was submitted to the Department and the report shows that the Government got full value for the money expended.

Mr. KING. My recollection is that the Department advised against payment of the claim upon the ground that the contract had been violated and the enactment of this bill would establish a precedent which would be rather harmful to the Government.

Mr. NORBECK. No; that is not the report of the Depart-

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, my understanding is that the officer expended for one purpose funds which had been appropriated for another purpose. The Government got the full benefit of the appropriation.

Mr. NORBECK. That is the construction put upon the case by the Comptroller General.

Mr. ROBINSON. There was an objection made on the ground that it might constitute a precedent which would encourage administrative officers to make unlawful expenditures of money.

Mr. NORBECK. That is the only question involved. The Department officials say they have no objection to paying the claim although they do not want it considered as a precedent for other cases.

Mr. KING. Very well; I have no objection. Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Vice President while in the chair a little while ago stated he had no objection to handing down at this time the data sent here by Mr. Ickes. If there is no objection on the part of the Senate and, inasmuch as Mr. Ickes has made his return to the Senate, I should like to have it handed down so Senators may see it. as it will probably be taken over by the committee.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it is not in order now to call up the matter. I suggest to the Senator from Louisiana that he let the report be referred to the committee, and then it will be accessible.

Mr. LONG. It was not asked for by the committee or for the committee. It was asked for by the Senate and for the Senate. I am not a member of the committee. The committee is not hearing evidence. It is not a function of the committee as yet. The information was called for by the Senate and for the Senate. The resolution which I submitted and which was adopted resolved that Mr. Ickes send this matter to the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, it is proper to refer it to a committee.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is whether there is objection to the present consideration of the bill which has been under discussion.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1694) for the relief of C. B. Dickinson, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 7, after the word "aggregating", to strike out "$3,412.91" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,-402.39", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of C. B. Dickinson, former superintendent and special disbursing agent at the Pierre Indian School, Pierre, S. Dak for payments aggregating $3,402.39, in making repairs to various buildings of the school plant.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 574) relative to Members of Congress acting as attorneys in matters where the United States has an interest was announced as next in order.

Mr. DUFFY. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BURTON STEARNS ADAMS, DECEASED

The bill (S. 236) for the relief of the heirs of Burton Stearns Adams, deceased, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed,

Be it enacted, etc., That in recognition of the fact that Burton Stearns Adams lost his life while in the performance of his duty as an employee of the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, and in recognition of the fact that his death resulted from overexertion in connection with the performance of official duties, the United States Employee's Compensation Commission is hereby authorized and directed to receive the claim of Emma E. Adams, widow of Burton Stearns Adams, and to grant compensation to the widow and dependent child in the amounts prescribed by the Federal Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, and amendatory acts, to be allowed in the case of an employee whose death occurred in line of duty.

MORSE DRY DOCK & REPAIR CO.

The bill (S. 743) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the claim of the Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Morse Dry Dock and Repair Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $331,879.25, in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for repairing and reconditioning the steamships Princess Matoka, Poca-hontas, Susquehanna, Potomac, America, and George Washington, as found by the Court of Claims and reported in Senate Document Numbered 141, Seventy-third Congress, second session: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of and no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contracts potential. connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwith-standing. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

REFUND OF TAXES TO BUILDING-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 279) to extend the time for the refunding of certain taxes erroneously collected from certain building-and-loan associations, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That claims for the refunding of any taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected from any building-and-loan association, or savings-and-loan association, under the provisions of section 231, paragraph 4, of the Revenue Acts of 1918 to 1926, both inclusive, may be presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue not later than 6 months after the passage of this Internal Revenue not later than 6 months after the passage of this act, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is hereby authorized and directed to receive, consider, and determine, in accordance with law but without regard to any statute of limitations, such claims as may have been presented heretofore and not allowed and such claims as may be presented within the period above named, when and where and only when it be found and determined that such taxes were collected upon the erroneous interpretation of the law passed upon and condemned by the United States Supreme Court in the decision rendered in the case of United States v. Cambridge Loan & Building Co., reported in Two Hundred and Seventy-eighth United States Supreme Court Reports, page 55: Provided, That no interest shall be allowed on any of these claims.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to such claimants as have presented or shall hereafter so present their claims, any amounts allowed in the determination of any claims so defined and which shall have been presented in accordance with this act.

sented in accordance with this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan] explain this bill?

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, this bill relates to the same matter we have had under consideration a number of times. The taxes were paid under a statute which was thereafter declared unconstitutional; and this is a bill authorizing the refunding to building and loan associations of taxes they

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM CORNWELL AND OTHERS

The bill (S. 535) for the relief of William Cornwell and others was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,944.25 to the persons whose names appear below, as compensation in full for damages done to their property by the overflow of Turkey River, said damages having been caused by the construction by the Government of a wing dam on Turkey River: William Cornwell, $72; Peter P. Adams, $202.50; Edward Mosier and John Smith, jointly, $165; W. J. Borrett, $90; Joe Graybill, $82; Pat Barry, $186.25; Clarence Wachendorf, $155; George Hefel, $150; John Hefel, Jr., $96.25; Mat J. Adams, $131.25; Leo Ludovissy, $86.50; Joe Ludovissy, $85.50 Joe Ludovissy, $85.50 Tom Kolker, $75; Earl Wentworth, $70; Henry Meyer, $172.50; and John W. Smith, $125: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary not-withstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

C. O. MEYER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 537) for the relief of C. O. Meyer, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to add at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to C. O. Meyer the sum of $297.86. Such sum represents the amount paid to C. O. Meyer as substitute carrier while he was postmaster at Meyers Mill, S. C., and which amount was charged by the Department to the account of C. O. Meyer: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or actorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE LAWLEY & SON CORPORATION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 998) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of George Lawley & Son Corporation, of Boston, Mass., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to add at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $92,781 to the George Lawley & Son Corporation, of Boston, Mass., being the difference between the actual cost of the construction of two torpedo boats and the amount paid under the contract entered into for the building of said boats, as found by the Court of Claims and reported in Senate Document No. 135, Seventy-third Congress, second session: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FIRST CAMDEN NATIONAL BANK & TRUST CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1472) for the relief of the First Camden National Bank & Trust Co., of Camden, N. J., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of section 606 of the Revenue Act of 1928, as amended, relating to closing agreements, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the First Camden National Bank & Trust Co., of Camden, N. J., the sum of $11,120.97 in full satisfaction of its claim for refund of taxes erroneously paid for the year 1927 on income derived from tax-exempt securities: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Kentucky whether this bill comes in the same category with others to which reference has been made.

Mr. LOGAN. No, Mr. President; this is an entirely different matter

This bank paid to the Treasury as an income tax some $11,000 that it did not owe. Nobody disputes that, not even the Treasury Department. The matter came about in this way:

There had been a consolidation of some banks, and when the income-tax returns were made up and sent in items were included which required the payment of this $11,000 tax. Later the income-tax agent, in checking up the tax down there, presented to the bank what is known as a "closing agreement", admitting final settlement, and that neither party had any claim against the other.

It appears that at that time the agent of the Government perhaps knew that the bank had paid more than it should have paid to the extent of $11,000. After the bank discovered the facts the Department would not refund the money upon the ground that the bank had signed a paper in which it was agreed that both sides were square. The Committee on Claims, after considering the bill last year and this year, had no doubt that the money collected from the bank when it was not due should not be kept by the Government because of the formal signing of this paper when the agent of the Treasury Department perhaps knew the facts at the time he asked the bank official to sign the paper.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KORBER REALTY, INC.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 428) authorizing adjustment of the claim of Korber Realty, Inc., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claim of Korber Realty, Inc., under lease no. VBr-806, dated April 28, 1931, on account of failure to restore to former condition quarters occupied during the period ended June 30, 1932, by the Albuquerque office of the Veterans' Administration, and to allow not to exceed $500 in full and final settlement of said claim. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for payment of the claim: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. M. DOOLEY FIREPROOF WAREHOUSE CORPORATION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 937) for the relief of the J. M. Dooley Fireproof Warehouse Corporation, of Brooklyn, N. Y., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "appropriation", to insert "and in full settlement of all claims against the Government", and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the J. M. Dooley Fireproof Warehouse Corporation, of Brooklyn, N. Y., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement of all claims against the Government, the sum of $16,650, being the value of certain property seized by Federal prohibition agents, which property was subsequently ordered returned by the District Court for the Southern District of New York, but which was found to have been either sold, destroyed, or otherwise disposed of under orders of a United States marshal: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The resolution (S. Res. 35) authorizing the Committee on the Judiciary to investigate certain phases of the National Industrial Recovery Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

SCHUTTE & KOERTING CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1056) authorizing adjustment of the claim of Schutte & Koerting Co., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claim of Schutte & Koerting Co., under contract NOs-2018, dated December 27, 1926, for certain experimental work in the manufacture of valves for submarines, and to allow not to exceed $7,337.10 in full and final settlement of said claim. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $7,337.10, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for payment of said claim: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID A. WRIGHT

The bill (S. 713) granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear the case of David A. Wright was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Court of Claims be, and hereby is, given jurisdiction to reinstate, reopen, and rehear the case of David A. Wright, of Winona, Mo., against the United States, no. 261-A, in said court, and upon the pleadings, evidence, and other proceedings in that cause, and such other proceedings, if any, as the court may deem necessary or proper, to readjudicate the same and determine the amount of costs or expenditures, if any, which the said David A. Wright may have expended or incurred in 1918 in the rehabilitation of a manufacturing plant (commonly called the "Allis-Chalmers plant") at 1150 Washtenaw Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and in the beginning of production of heavy-duty lathes, to meet the needs, or the then anticipated needs, of the Ordnance Department for any gun-relining or gun-manufacturing project initiated and under way in the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, in reliance in good faith upon any promise or assurance given him by Maj. Charles D. Westcott, Ordnance Department, United States Army, or Howard Abbott, an engineer in the plant section of the production division of the Ordnance Department, that the said David A. Be it enacted, etc., That the Court of Claims be, and hereby is, tion division of the Ordnance Department, that the said David A. Wright would receive a contract, or contracts, for the manufacture of heavy-duty lathes that would absorb such costs or expenditures, of heavy-duty lathes that would absorb such costs or expenditures, notwithstanding such Ordnance Department projects may have been contingent upon the continuance of the war and may have been abandoned because of the signing of the armistice of November 11, 1918, and notwithstanding section 3744 of the Revised Statutes: Provided, That the Court of Claims shall be of opinion that the said David A. Wright made or incurred such expenditures in reliance in good faith upon the belief that Major Westcott or Mr. Abbott possessed the authority to make such promise or assurance on behalf of the Ordnance Department and that he was justified in doing so under the circumstances.

MINNIE C. DE BACK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1392) conferring upon the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, southern division, jurisdiction of the claim of Minnie C. de Back against the Alaska Railroad, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, after the word "damages", to strike out "including reasonable attorneys" fees and cost of suit", so as to make the bill read:

fees and cost of suit", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, southern division, to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Minnie C. de Back, of San Francisco, Calif., against the Alaska Railroad for general and special damages, by reason of personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by her on or about July 3, 1931, while a passenger aboard one of the trains operated by such railroad.

Sec. 2. In the determination of such claim the Alaska Railroad shall be held liable for any tort committed by any of its servants to the same extent as if it were a private person.

Sec. 3. Such claim may be instituted at any time within 1 year after the enactment of this act, notwithstanding the lapse of time or any statute of limitation. Proceedings for the determination of such claim, and appeals from, and payment of, any judgment thereon shall be in the same manner as in the case of claims over which such court has jurisdiction under the first paragraph of paragraph 20 of section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire why the claim was not referred to the courts in Alaska, where it is alleged the tort was committed, rather than to compel the Government to bring its witnesses from Alaska to California.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, this is a matter in which the senior Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] is primarily interested; but I have a rather definite recollection about

The woman was in Alaska, on a railroad train operated by the Alaska Railroad, and she there received very grievous personal injuries. She was in the hospital at Anchorage for a long period of time, extending over weeks. Ultimately she was brought back to California, and she there was hospitalized for a substantial time, and thereafter was in ill health. I think the basic reason for giving jurisdiction to the court in California is the impracticability of this woman going to Alaska to litigate her case because of her condition of health, and it was felt that the Government could try the case in the California jurisdiction practically as well as in Alaska. I believe that is the real explanation. It is a concession made because of the necessities of the woman's situation.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CARMINE SFORZA

The bill (S. 209) for the relief of Carmine Sforza was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500 to Carmine Sforza, which sum was paid by the said Carmine Sforza to the United States on the bond of Domenico Guerrera: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any executor account of the property of the prop excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $500 viction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $500.

SANFORD A. M'ALISTER AND ELIZA L. M'ALISTER

The bill (S. 1037) authorizing adjustment of the claims of Sanford A. McAlister and Eliza L. McAlister was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claims of Sanford A. McAlister and Eliza L. McAlister, for the 6 months' death gratuity as provided under the act of December 17, 1919 (41 Stat. 367), as extended to Reserve officers flying the air mail, by the act of March 27, 1934 (48 Stat. 508), in connection with the death, April 5, 1934, of John Leland McAlister, late second lieutenant, Air Corps Reserve, and to allow in full and final settlement of said claims an amount not in excess of $506.25 to each claimant, payable under the appropriation available for payment of the 6 months' death gratuity in the case of Air Corps Reserve officers under the act of March 27, 1934.

The bill (S. 1038) authorizing adjustment of the claim of Elda Geer was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claim of Elda Geer for refund of duplicate collection made from her for the transportation, on the United States Army transport Republic, which sailed from Balboa, Canal Zone, September 3, 1933, for San Francisco, Calif., of one automobile, Ford sedan, motor no. A-4356902, and allow said claim in the sum of not to exceed $26. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $26, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the payment of said claim.

GENERAL PULASKI'S MEMORIAL DAY

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 21) authorizing the President to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, which was read, as follows:

Whereas the 11th day of October 1779 is the date in American history of the heroic death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, who died from wounds received on October 9, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, Ga.: and

Ga.; and
Whereas the States of West Virginia, Illinois, Michigan, Tennessee, Indiana, Wisconsin, New York, Nebraska, Texas, Minnesota, Delaware, Maryland, Arkansas, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Ohio, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Kentucky, South Carolina, Connecticut, California, Nevada, and other States of the Union, through legislative enactment, have designated October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; and
Whereas the Congress of the United States of America has by legislative enactment designated October 11, 1929; October 11, 1931; October 11, 1932; and October 11, 1934, to be General Pulaski's Memorial Day; and
Whereas it is flitting that the recurring anniversary of this day

Memorial Day; and
Whereas it is flitting that the recurring anniversary of this day be commemorated with suitable patriotic and public exercises in observing and commemorating the death of this great American hero of the Revolutionary War: Therefore be it Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all governmental buildings on October 11 of each year, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches, or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies commemorating the death of Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, Senate Joint Resolution No. 22, which is identical with the joint resolution now under consideration, was introduced by me in response to numerous requests from Connecticut, and other sections of the country, and also because of my own belief that the United States should proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day for observance of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

I do not wish to attempt to present here an account of what General Pulaski did for our country to justify the honor which my joint resolution would bestow. He has been repeatedly praised by historians and our great national leaders since the time of his heroic participation in the Revolutionary War, and every school child knows of his contributions to America. At least 25 States have enacted laws designating October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, and the United States Congress enacted laws for such observance in 1929, 1931, 1932, and 1934. It is the purpose of my joint resolution to make this annual observance permanent, and to authorize the President to issue a proclamation calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all governmental buildings on October 11 of each year, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches, or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies.

The date of October 11 was chosen because it was on October 11, 1779, when General Pulaski died from wounds received 2 days earlier at the siege of Savannah, Ga. His death was one of America's greatest losses of the Revolutionary War. Undoubtedly he was one of the most impressive personalities of American history. Admired by Benjamin Franklin, commended by General Washington, and known as a personal friend of "Light Horse Harry" Lee, the fame of Count Casimir Pulaski rests on a firm foundation. In Poland he had a foremost reputation as a soldier, a leader, and a man who loved liberty. It was only natural for him to come to the aid of Washington when the fight of the American Colonies for freedom was begun. He did so at a great sacrifice; and when we think of General Pulaski we should always think of a man of handsome physique, of liberal education, and of high social position, who could have married and settled down to a life of ease and complacency, but who, out of loyalty to the ideals which he cherished, chose a career of many hardships and much bitterness. Of a proud and firm personality, he had to contend with many petty and vacillating men.

But it was this lifelong exertion that ennobled his efforts and enshrined his name. Holding a prominent place in the niche of fame in his native land, he should be assured of l even greater glory in these United States that he helped to create. He shall ever be known as the founder of American cavalry, and as the intrepid warrior who twice saved Washington's army from disruption; and among the patriots of all nations he shall ever be remembered as the hero of two hemispheres.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate Joint Resolution 22 and Senate Joint Resolution 32, which are identical with the joint resolution just passed, will be indefinitely postponed.

PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT OFFICES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 147) to alter the amount apportioned to certain States for public employment offices affiliated with the United States Employment Service, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 (a) of the so-called "Wagner-Peyser Act" (act of June 6, 1933, ch. 49; 48 Stat. 113, 114; U. S. Code, title 30, sec. 49 (d)) be amended by adding at the end of the second sentence thereof the following clause: ": Provided, however, That in apportioning said 75 percent of amounts appropriated after January 1, 1935, under this act, the Director shall apportion not less than $10,000 to each State", so that, as amended, sections 5 (a) shall read as follows:

sections 5 (a) shall read as follows:

"For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is hereby authorized to be appropriated (1) the sum of $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, (2) $4,000,000 for each fiscal year thereafter up to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, (3) and thereafter such sums annually as the Congress may deem necessary. Seventy-five percent of the amounts appropriated under this act shall be apportioned by the Director among the several States in the proportion which their populations. among the several States in the proportion which their population bears to the total population of the States of the United States bears to the total population of the States of the United States according to the next preceding United States census, to be available for the purpose of establishing and maintaining systems of public employment offices in the several States and the political subdivisions thereof in accordance with the provisions of this act: Provided, however, That in apportioning said 75 percent of amounts appropriated after January 1, 1935, under this act, the Director shall apportion not less than $10,000 to each State. No payment shall be made in any year out of the amount of such appropriations apportioned to any State until an equal sum has been appropriated or otherwise made available for that year by the State, or by any agency thereof, including appropriations made by local subdivisions, for the purpose of maintaining public employment offices as a part of a State-controlled system of public employment offices; except that the amounts so appropriated by the State shall not be less than 25 percent of the apportionment according to population made by the Director for each State for the current year, and in no event less than $5,000. The balance of the amounts appropriated under this act shall be available for all the purposes of this act other than for apportionment among the purposes of this act other than for apportionment among the several States as herein provided."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have just inquired of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] with regard to this bill. I am advised that it merely makes a redistribution in a more equitable way of funds which are authorized to be appropriated for the activities of the Department of Labor.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the purpose of the bill is to make it possible for some of the less prosperous and less populous States to have a minimum which the Department feels is necessary in order that their employment services may be upon an efficient basis. The amounts taken from the other States are individually negligible. They do not run over a few hundred dollars. The committee considered the matter very carefully, went over the report of the Secretary of Labor, and the bill was reported out unanimously. It is my understanding that it will not cost any additional money.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to submit for the Senate's consideration two of the contracts coming under Mr. Farley's scrutiny.

James A. Stewart & Co. was low bidder on granite, and the Severin Co., of Chicago, was low bidder on limestone, for the new Federal courthouse.

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask from what the Senator is

Mr. LONG. I am reading from a memorandum just supplied to me by my secretary. These are facts that have been lately assembled that we think we can prove without any trouble.

The granite bid was $400,000 higher than the limestone bid. The Stewart Co. was low bidder on granite, but the granite was $400,000 more than the limestone. It was decided to award the contract to the Stewart Co. on the basis of the granite.

When the contract was advertised for the new post office at Vesey Street, in New York City, the James A. Stewart Co. was low bidder on limestone this time and the George F. Driscoll Co. was the low bidder on granite. It was just turned around. In the first contract Stewart bid low on granite and the Severin Co. bid low on limestone. The second time Stewart bid low on limestone and Driscoll bid low on granite. What did they do that time? The Treasury Department reversed itself in this case and decided to accept the limestone because it was cheaper than the granite.

In other words, they had two buildings to construct. The Severin Co. bid low on the limestone one time and Stewart bid low on the limestone the next time. In each instance the limestone was hundreds of thousands of dollars cheaper than the granite, but when the Severin Co. bid low on limestone the building was constructed of granite, and when Driscoll bid low on granite the building was constructed of limestone.

If this thing is not investigated, it is going to smell to Heaven before we get through with it.

COLUMBIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1180) to amend section 4865 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the number of beneficiaries from the several States and Territories authorized by section 4865 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for admission to the collegiate department of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, be, and it hereby is, increased from 125 to 145.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I ask just the effect of the proposed amendment to the existing law?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I have been asked by the Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, who could not be present today, to endeavor to answer questions, if any should be raised, concerning any of the measures reported from that committee.

The bill to which the Senator from Florida refers is one to increase "the number of beneficiaries from the several States and Territories authorized by section 4865 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for admission to the collegiate department of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf."

Because of the pressure which is placed upon the various States, it has been found impossible for them to take care of all the poor unfortunates who are totally deaf, and the proposal in the pending measure is to make provision for increasing by 20 the number received in the institution.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STATISTICAL STUDIES

The bill (S. 857) to authorize the Department of Labor to continue to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to authorize the Department of Labor to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes" (73d Cong., ch. 118, 48 Stat. 582), and the authority therein conferred shall be, and hereby are, extended until April 13, 1937.

PAYMENT FOR EXTRA LABOR IN NAVY YARDS AND SHORE STATIONS

The bill (S. 872) for the allowance of certain claims for extra labor above the legal day of 8 hours at the several navy yards and shore stations certified by the Court of Claims was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow to the respective persons the respective amounts found by the Court of Claims to have been underpaid to said persons, for labor performed at the several navy yards and shore stations herein named, in excess of the legal day of 8 hours, as set forth in Senate documents herein enumerated, and for which purpose the sum of $332,342.74, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated. That the payment of said respective amounts is to be in full for, and receipt of same to be taken and accepted in each case as a full and final release and discharge of their said respective claims for extra hours above the legal day of 8 hours at the several navy yards and shore stations.

yards and shore stations.

That the said navy yards and shore stations and Senate documents are as follows:

CALIFORNIA

Mare Island Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 713, 714, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 279, 447, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1085, Sixty-second Congress, third session.

FLORIDA

Pensacola Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 500, Sixty-first Congress, second session; 778, 791, Sixty-first Congress, third session; and 155, 200, 287, 756, Sixty-second Congress, second session.

MARYLAND

United States Naval Academy: Senate Document No. 1055, Sixtysecond Congress, third session.

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 382, Sixty-first Congress, second session; 150, 151, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1083, Sixty-second Congress, third session.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Portsmouth Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 315, Sixtieth Congress, first session; 431, Sixty-first Congress, second session; 770, 811, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 152, 153, 154, 206, 278, 715, 847, 848, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1058, 1076, 1077, 1082, Sixty-second Congress, third session.

NEW YORK

Brooklyn Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 108, Sixty-first Congress, first session; 287, Sixty-first Congress, second session; 777, 792, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 198, 286, 717, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1057, 1079, 1080, Sixty-second Congress, third session.

PENNSYLVANIA

League Island Navy Yard, Philadelphia: Senate Documents Nos. 330, 332, Sixtieth Congress, first session; 710, 716, 717, 774, 795, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 185, 714, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1081, 1084, 1086, Sixty-second Congress, third

RHODE ISLAND

Naval torpedo station, Newport: Senate Document No. 715, Sixty-first Congress, third session.

VIRGINIA

Norfolk Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 509, Sixtieth Congress, first session; 711, 793, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 146, 205, 446, Sixty-second Congress, second session; and 1056, Sixty-second Congress, third session.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Washington Navy Yard: Senate Documents Nos. 288, 432, Sixty-first Congress, second session; 712, 771, 772, 775, 776, 794, Sixty-first Congress, third session; 120, 145, 199, 200, 202, 276, 277, 724, 757, 849, Sixty-second Congress, second session; 1078, Sixty-second Congress, third session; and 354, Sixty-third Congress, second session.

SEC. 2. That where the payment to be made under this act is less than $1,000, and the person who rendered the service is dead, and no demand is presented by a duly appointed legal representative of his estate, payment may be made to the decedent's widow or legal heirs as is provided by existing laws relating to the settlement of accounts of deceased officers or enlisted men of the Army (34 Stat. L. 750): Provided, That in all cases where the original claimants were adjudicated bankrupts, payments shall be made to the next of kin instead of to the assignees in bankruptcy: And provided further. That wherever under this act it is provided that a payment be made to an executor or an administrator, whether original or ancillary or de bonis non, and such executor or administrator is dead or no longer holds his office, payment shall be made to the successor therein, his title to hold such office being established to the satisfaction of the Comptroller General of the United States.

SEC. 3. That no part of the amount of any claim appropriated for in this act in excess of 20 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any attorney on account of services rendered in connection with said claim: Provided, That in each case, payment for which is herein provided, the Comptroller General shall deduct a sum equal to said 20 percent and pay the same to the attorney or attorneys who appeared for the claimant in the Court of Claims, as found by said court, and as set forth in the Senate documents aforesaid; and in event of the death of said attorney or attorneys, payment of said 20 percent to be made to his or their legal representatives, upon execution of a full release and a complete discharge to the claimant for all services rendered therein, and after the payment of such fee the balance thereof to be paid to the claimant. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum which in the aggregate exceeds 20 percent of the amount of any item appropriated in this act on account of services rendered or advances made in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, quite properly this bill should go over, and possibly later today or at some time tomorrow be made the unfinished business. It could not be considered under the rule which appertains to the consideration of bills on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Under objection, the bill will be passed over.

CONFIRMATION OF POST-OFFICE NOMINATIONS

As in executive session,

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I interrupt the regular order long enough to ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, to have the nominations for postmasters on the Executive Calendar considered? My reason for asking unanimous consent at this time is that I am obliged to be present at a committee meeting this afternoon.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask whether the postmaster at Ethel, Miss., is on the list?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; Mr. President. The post offices in Mississippi on today's list are Glendora, State College, Tchula, and Tunica. As I stated, the reason for making the request is that I am obliged to attend a committee meeting, so I will not be able to be present during the remainder of the afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Frazzer in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee. The Chair hears none, and the clerk will state the nominations of postmasters.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

CENSORSHIP

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, press censorship by the Roosevelt administration is assuming greater proportions every day. A recent example of this press gag is to be seen in the failure of a magazine called the "Redbook" to continue a series of articles on censorship.

In the February issue of this magazine there was printed an article on press censorship by Theodore J. Joslin. The lead of this article announced, "The study will be divided into four categories: First, wholesale hiring of Washington correspondents and editors by the administration; second, accusations of censorship by Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota; third, sporadic forays made by the N. R. A. on the newspapers of the country; fourth, dissatisfaction with methods practiced by Government agencies dealing with the press." The March issue significantly has no further reference to the series, nor did the article in the February issue contain any mention of the last three categories.

The public no doubt recalls that 25 days after Mr. Roosevelt assumed office and swore to uphold the Constitution of the United States there was introduced in the House of Representatives, and passed at his request, a bill which would have subjected editors and publishers to imprisonment in jail for 10 years and a fine of $10,000 if they printed anything without the administration's permission. Fortunately for the Republic, through the initiative of the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson], this bill was amended in the Senate and free speech legally preserved. Everybody remembers the President's testy displeasure at his being unable to include free speech in the press code.

Following this came the first communications bill, which established a complete press censorship. This was pointed out to the country by me, and I hope I had some humble part in getting some of the objectionable features removed, but there still remains a clause in the bill as passed permitting the President to declare an emergency, and then, upon that declared and planned emergency, to proclaim a censorship on all avenues of information to the people, including the mails. We may expect this any day now.

Even the relief bill, appropriating $5,000,000,000, which the President demands the authority to spend at his pleasure, contained when it came to the House a clause calculated to send to prison for 2 years and to fine anyone who would have the effrontery to even criticize the methods employed by the President in its expenditure.

Every bill introduced and passed during the last two sessions of Congress—and, judging from the pending emergency bill, the practice is to be continued in this Congress—has had coupled with it a censorship clause preventing the press or the public from securing any information regarding the operation of the acts.

It is well known that there is a gag on free speech in the House, and that no Member of Congress opposed to this administration is permitted to voice openly on the floor his objections or those of his constituents. Efforts are constantly being made to prevent the use of the Congressional Record in the Senate by any Member opposing new-deal fallacies, though the "new dealers" prolifically use the Record.

Washington correspondents are for the most part in constant fear that they may send out news which offends the administration, and that as a result they may be discriminated against in the handing out of news by Government departments. In many cases letters have been written to the editors of papers complaining about the stories sent out by correspondents, and in this fashion the correspondents are under an espionage which prevents the truth about what is transpiring from reaching the public.

Any Senator attempting to give the truth to the people concerning the hidden actions of this administration by speech or statement here in Washington is ignored by the press, because this punishing administration would immediately taboo a correspondent handling such news. Any Senator who is known to have a tendency to expose the unlawful connivings of this administration to keep from the people its true actions, and who makes such statements pertaining to the Government's business as should be known to the sovereign power of the Government, the people of the United States, will have his mail censored and such statements thrown into the wastepaper basket by order of the Postmaster General of the United States.

I hold in my hand six letters addressed to the Washington correspondents for the newspapers of my State, the same number as the number of corporations that have been stealthily organized in Delaware by the administration to take over every private business interest in the United States after we shall have appropriated the four billion lump sum. I wonder if this lump-sum appropriation bill was not sent back to the committee to give the administration time to figure out how they could avoid the light of day being let in upon the administration's connivings through the Delaware corporations to Russianize our Republic and transfer to the Government every private business industry in the United States. The Senate should adopt by amendment, or one similar to it, to prohibit the administration from committing this crime circumventing our representative Government. The administration well knows that in the discussion of this amendment the truth must come to light and its ulterior purpose in its planned emergencies disclosed.

These six letters are addressed to the Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis Tribune, Minneapolis Star, St. Paul News, St. Paul Dispatch, and Duluth Herald. The envelop addressed to the Minneapolis Journal—and the others are duplicates—contains the cancelation stamp of the Washington post office reading "Washington, D. C., October 19, 1934, 6: 30 p. m." These letters were excluded from the mails at the city post office in Washington, D. C., by order of the Postmaster General of the United States, Mr. Farley, the same gentleman who is concerned in a resolution proposing an investigation of other crimes, which resolution is before the Senate, presented by the courageous senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long]. The letters contained a speech on censorship, which I will read into the RECORD as a part of my remarks today.

The speech is as follows:

CENSORSHIP

Remarks of Hon. THOMAS D. SCHALL, of Minnesota, in the Senate of the United States June 16, 1934

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, the Senator has had read some utterances that reflect very grossly upon certain people, and really violated the rules of the Senate.

wiolated the rules of the Senate.

Mr. SCHALL. I do not intend to violate any rules, and I do not believe I have violated any rules in my past utterances. I have spoken the truth as I see it in reference to the personnel of this administration, and I intend to continue to do so, for God knows there was never a time in the history of our country when plain speaking was so imperative of what is going on here at Washington in taking from the people their Republic and substituting instead a Russian or Italian dictatorship as there is today.

Almost every hill we have passed this session has contained a a Russian or Italian dictatorship as there is today.

Almost every bill we have passed this session has contained a censorship, either directly or indirectly, and has in itself constituted a dictatorship. In the last special session 77 powers were filched from the judiciary and Congress by this administration under the guise of emergency which the administration now wants made permanent. Somebody, somewhere, ought to speak; and if it does hurt, I am sorry, for I place the welfare of my country above the welfare of any party.

Mr. Harrison. If the Senator will permit me, he may criticize as much as he wants to, but the poll of the Literary Digest shows that in the Senator's own State he is very much in the minority.

Mr. SCHALL. That may be true, but if the people of this country in the Senator's own State he is very much in the minority.

Mr. Schall. That may be true, but if the people of this country had not had all the avenues of information clogged as to what is going on here and had not been fed just what the administration wants them to be fed, the poll of the Literary Digest would tell a different story, because if the voters had the truth, there would be an understanding of the design and purpose of an ultimate dictatorship of this administration, which they would not tolerate if they knew. Somebody, somewhere, must speak, and since the Senate is the only place left in Congress where free speech is still prevalent, I shall attempt to do what little I can to call attention of the people of my country to conditions as they are. people of my country to conditions as they are.

Mr. Harrison. The other side has a very poor spokesman in the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. Schall. I am not judging as to that. In that case, the Senator from Mississippi ought not to object to the Senator from Minnesota speaking.

Mr. Harrison, I am not objecting. The Senator is doing the Democratic Party a great service. We hope he will continue. [Laughter.]

Mr. Schall. I shall continue to speak the truth as I see it; and if the people are able to get just an inkling of what is going on, I think it will be found that the administration has obliterated the Democratic Party. No one of any other party needs to injure the Democratic Party. They are doing it themselves in the dictatorship they have established.

WHEN THE KING CONTROLS THE PRESS

Mr. Schall. Mr. President, at the city of St. Paul the American Newspaper Guild was recently assembled in its annual convention. On June 7 Jonathan Eddy wired the American Publishers' Association urging opposition against section 606 of the Rayburn communications bill.

Without free channels of information"

Reads the message of the American Newspaper Guild—
"there can be no guaranty of liberty, and the Bill of Rights in the Constitution of this Republic becomes a naked fraud."

Still quoting:

"The American Newspaper Guild by its convention condemns section 606 (c) of the Rayburn communications bill as un-American and inhuman, an irresistible invitation to dictatorship in its ugliest form.' Mr. President, Senators will recall that the American Publishers Mr. President, Senators will recall that the American Publishers' Association has already gone on record against the press code of the N. R. A. Their fight is that the press code interferes with the freedom of the press. They ask that article I of the Bill of Rights, guaranteeing that no law or no secret subterfuge to secure the effect of such a law shall be passed abridging freedom of speech and freedom of the press, shall be set up by the Government as a basic interpretation of the N. R. A. press code. Their petition has been denied by the administration.

The sale and suppression of the news article, as well as the censorship and coloring of the news by the business office to meet the forced political policy of the Government and the ends of Federal publicity, is, therefore, denounced by the American Newspaper Guild as a "naked fraud", "the shame of thinly cloaked control", a system to transform reporting facilities into a grotesque political propaganda machine, "an irresistible invitation to dictatorship in its ugliest form "—a system at once "un-American and inhuman."

I cannot conceive, Mr. President, how any Senator, if he divests himself of his political interest, his affinity for administration patronage, and the appropriation hog trough, can doubt in his inner consciousness that this message of the news writers speaks the truth.

the truth.

British censorship of the press in the days of John Wilkes started a revolution throughout England and was partly responsible for emigration to America. Thomas Jefferson, who one time was worshiped in this country as the founder of Democracy with a big "D", had in mind the persecution of John Wilkes, John Milton's defense of free printing, and Lord Glenville's attempt to throttle the press in order to stem the rise of American independence, when he wrote article I of the American Bill of Rights calling for the rights of free speech and the freedom of the press. Under free speech and a free press George III could not hold in subjection the freemen of the Thirteen American Colonies.

Colonies.

Mr. President, let the majority here remember that what happened on American soil on July 4 may also happen on the second Tuesday in November. It is not easy to throttle independence in America. That was shown when a certain administration tried it in a crude way on the old printing office of Lovejoy and again at the office of William Lloyd Garrison in Boston.

An administration may think that it controls the press when it imposes an N. R. A. press code with "Crack-up" Johnson to enforce the code. Even kings are compelled to change their minds. There was one time an archbishop who bewalled the fact that, if he had served his God as well as he served the king, he would not have been deserted at beheading time.

Does any Senator doubt that censorship of news communication is un-American? When Garrison declared, "I will not yield an inch, and I will be heard", did he not speak the truth? You can hear it yet ringing through the Civil War and through Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg.

Mussolini still thinks that he became the permanent emperor coln's speech at Gettysburg.

Mussolini still thinks that he became the permanent emperor of all Italy—a larger edition of Caesar—when on January 1, 1927, he clamped down a censorship on the press of Italy. But verily he is receiving his reward, for yesterday's press says that Mussolini or the Italian Government admits that economic conditions are worse in Italy than they have ever been before. And America is not yet committed to the Fascisti program of press censorship, of farm domination, of N. R. A. monopoly, now reigning in Italy.

If this administration chooses—and one of its Cabinet mem-

If this administration chooses—and one of its Cabinet members says "America must choose"—to set up Mussolini and his press censorship as a superior guide of new-deal democracy, a superman ranking above Thomas Jefferson, it is its political privilege, as it is the privilege of the Senate majority. But do not forget that the American people have memories. Tugwell and Moley of the "brain trust" may tell you that the ideas of "76 are forgotten. Article I of the American Bill of Rights they also

As to the followers of Tugwell and Moley, that may be true in a way—or does it merely express a desire or a fear? But those memories and those convictions and the American common sense and way—or does it merely express a desire or a tear? But those memories and those convictions and the American common sense and common honesty behind the memories still prevail in every county in the States.

On July 4, 1934, you may not hear the Declaration of Independence read in any gathering of "brain trust" orators. July 4 may well disappear as a national holiday of an administrative dictatorship. But in the farm hinterland of America, in the town halls and churches, in the village groves and schoolhouses, the ideas of 1776, the doctrine of article I, the call of Jefferson and Lincoln, will bring the people together on July 4, 1934.

No "crack-up" administration can do in America what the Glenville administration failed to do in England 200 years ago—permanently throttle the freedom of the press. Every attempt—the press code, the Rayburn bill, the censorship of the radio and telegraph, the suppression of public documents now in Government vogue—simply drives home to the people in the homes and plow furrows that censorship and suppression mean simply that there is something which the governing majority has to conceal.

No administration with a righteous cause wants press censorship or the throttling of the news.

No administration that is true to the principles of Thomas Jefferson has anything to conceal.

Jefferson has anything to conceal,

If you are aping Mussolini and are blind followers of a Moley, if you take Tugwell as your guide in place of Jefferson, you need a press censorship, lest something may happen in November. You need the press code of the N. R. A., so that the workmen of America may not discover that they are serfs of "Crack-up"

You need what the American Newspaper Guild calls "un-American and inhuman", lest the people of the United States may read from now till November the accounts of the greatest wave of strikes and riots and incipient rebellion against dictatorial rule that has ever yet risen on American soil.

Put into force your force bills. Throttle the press with your press code. Strong arm, by your new gag rule, both Houses of Congress. Prevent, as you did the other day the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson], a Senator from discussing his own amendment. Force upon the country a censorship of press communications.

You simply deepen the conviction in the public mind that you have something to conceal. Then they will want to know what those things are that you are hiding in fear.

They will dig up the old last year's almanac and find that you got their votes on the false pretext that your tariff making was to be "free from Executive interference."

They will read in the Congressional Record of January 3 the Executive message demanding that the temporary dictatorship shall be made permanent, which means good-bye to government by

The people.
Your press censorship and your censorship of news communications will not prevent the public from reading the Budget message of January 4 in the Congressional Record—that the Treasury deficit is to go to $7,000,000,000 under new-deal financing, that the public debt is to go to $30,000,000,000 under "brain trust" bold experiment, that the Government monthly outgo now exceeds the yearly outgo during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, that the disbursements of the new deal exceed the revenue receipts about 3 to 1, and that a year of this kind of "recovery" still leaves the farmer in bankruptcy and 10,000,000 unemployed and 20,000,000 the farmer in bankruptcy and 10,000,000 unemployed and 20,000,000 still under Federal dole.

the farmer in bankruptcy and 10,000,000 unemployed and 20,000,000 still under Federal dole.

No wonder those "new dealers" need a press censorship, will be the popular verdict. They need an N. R. A. press code. They need a news censorship of communications, which has all been stealthily planned and arranged for in the just passed communications bill. They need a "Crack-up" Johnson—a new Lord Glenville, They need the administration magazine of Moley, owned by Lord Admiral Astor, of the flagship Nourmahal.

Then they will read again that old article I, written by Thomas Jefferson. And they will say:

"If 'America must choose', as a Cabinet member suggests, our choice for guidance would be Jefferson and Lincoln, Milton and Garrison, rather than the new-deal, Tugwell-Moley bunch. As between the N. R. A. and the U. S. A., the old-fashioned U. S. A. is good enough for us. As between a 'doctored' press and a free press, we prefer ours without doctors. As between the blue eagle of Russia and the old American banner, we choose the old red, white, and blue—the Stars and Stripes of our daddies, the emblem of the American Republic."

It is vital to the life of our Republic that my Resolution No. 248 or a similar resolution should be passed to appoint a committee of Searcters to stand guard during the adjournment of

It is vital to the life of our Republic that my Resolution No. 248 or a similar resolution should be passed to appoint a committee of Senators to stand guard during the adjournment of Congress to protect the people in their right of freedom of the press and freedom of speech from the insidious underground methods being used by the administration and his left- and right- and bowers to keep the facts from the bright rays of today's sun. Make no mistake, it is the administration that is demanding censorship of the press, and his subordinates are only carrying out his desires.

Congressional records show that the first attempt by Roosevelt censorship of the press, and his subordinates are only carrying out his desires.

Congressional records show that the first attempt by Roosevelt to censor the press was made 25 days after he assumed office. On that day there was introduced into the House of Representatives by Mr. Sumners of Texas, House Resolution 4220, which provided a fine of $10,000 and 10 years' imprisonment for any publisher who dared to print any article concerning our Government which was not passed as matter for publication by Roosevelt or one of his duly authorized agents. Under the whip of the President of the United States the bill passed the House, but that section relating to publishers was stricken out in the Senate.

Referring to the report of the Judiciary Committee of the House on this bill, I quote the following:

"The executive branch (Roosevelt) of the Government has requested the enactment of this legislation at the earliest practicable date, and has satisfactorily demonstrated to the committee the need for it. The legislation is by its nature very properly auxiliary to the emergency legislation enacted and to be enacted by Congress at the present session."

Could anything be plainer or more definite as to the ultimate purpose? Roosevelt was asking for dictatorial powers over the Government, under the guise of emergency, and a censorship bill by which he could put any publisher in jail for 10 years who dared to criticize any of his acts.

The Dill-Rayburn wire-control bill is the new wedge to censorship of the press of the United States. Under its provisions a committee of Congress is to report back to the next session Roosevelt's ideas of wire control. This bill places telegraph and telephone companies under the same restrictions as the radio. Everyone knows that the radio is censored by the Roosevelt administration.

The President desires censorship even more than he did in the first session when he demanded passage of the Sumners bill.

The President desires censorship even more than he did in the first session when he demanded passage of the Summers bill. Even more now because if the truth is told to the people from now until election there will be returned an anti-Roosevelt Congress. Since the committee appointed under the Dill-Rayburn bill will be named by his agents, its report can be forecast in advance as favoring censorship of press dispatches.

Thus, for this reason alone if there were not plenty of others, the safety of the Nation lies in getting over to the voters of the Nation what is going on behind the governmental scenes. If our Republic is to endure, a vigorous campaign should be waged against every candidate who will not pledge himself to support article I of the Constitution of the United States. I am ready to go anywhere or do anything I can to help.

The press must be protected in its freedom. The newspapers are entirely too reticent about this matter, and the people must take it in hand for themselves, as their future liberty is all dependent on the right of a free press and free speech. These are the two essential weapons to get back for us the rights already stolen from us by this administration under the guise of "recovery." The new deal is a "double deal."

Mr. President, with this speech was enclosed a statement, the essence of which I have several times stated upon this floor, and I am glad of the opportunity of here again reiterating it, for the information contained therein concerns the conduct of our Government, and should be reported by the people's representatives to the sovereign power, the voters of the United States—and whose duty is it under his oath, as he sees it, if not that of a United States Senator? The statement is as follows:

Although this attempt by the Democratic gang to buy the coming election by using money from the United States Treasury is the most reprehensible political corruption ever attempted in American politics, the farmer should be advised to take the money because he will be taxed for it. He will have to pay it back with interest whether he takes it or not.

It is estimated that the cost of this political dole compaign in

It is estimated that the cost of this political-dole campaign in office help is about 14 percent of the money paid out. That another 25 percent sticks to the fingers of those who distribute it; this taken with the interest will put the farmer in debt about double what he has received.

Not to exceed 25 percent of the populace is now on the dole. If Roosevelt can continue his chaos until he has 55 percent on the dole, he will then have a majority. This will give him the power to abolish the Constitution and realize his ambition to set up a ommunistic dictatorship.

Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah] not long ago accumulated some very interesting figures which more than verify the accuracy of this statement, and I understand he intends to introduce a resolution providing for the investigation of this very subject. My earnest prayer is that he will do so.

At the instance of Mr. Farley, a post-office inspector visited me and warned me I had no business to criticize the actions of the Government through the United States mail under my frank. I sent word back to Mr. Farley that I was under the impression I could use my frank for any Government business, and that certainly included criticism of any action contemplated or practiced by the Government contrary to the Constitution and the welfare of the people as I saw it. I further told him I thought the frank had been given to the people's representatives for the very purpose of keeping them informed as to what the Government was doing. That I, for one, as a sentinel of the people, would not stand idly by with cold-sealed lips and not give the alarm insofar as my voice would carry when I could clearly smell the smoke of the set fire that would burn down our American institutions-and that no public-works-allotment money to my State would make any difference in my attitude.

I also had several visits from internal-revenue men who said they came from Baltimore, though I pay my income taxes in St. Paul, Minn. They claimed that they could not understand how it was possible that I had $1,000 of bad debts in 1932. I told them to tell Mr. Farley that if he had served in Congress for a couple of terms it would be very easy for him to understand how a Senator might happen to have a thousand dollars in bad debts though his income was only his salary. I also told them that I had been in Congress 20 years, paying my income tax out of my salary, and this was the first time I had had pressure attempted to be put on me in this petty manner, but that they should tell Mr. Farley that their visit to me would have no effect on what I had to say in the Senate or elsewhere, and that I intended to continue my fight for the people and the country.

Just the day before a set fire burned my barn or garage, above which my two boys slept, at Berwyn Heights, Md., my daughter placed my finger upon a hole in the rear of my car that a .45-caliber bullet had evidently made.

In Minnesota several months ago press censorship was completely accomplished by use of a sawed-off shotgun that was directed into the head of an editor who was attacking the new deal.

Mr. President, we have before us the $5,000,000,000 public-works bill, and the charters of the six Delaware corporations which I succeeded, with the invaluable help of the minority leader, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], after about an hour's effort, in having read into the RECORD, which gave Mr. Roosevelt the power to organize and operate newspapers everywhere in the United States. With a club of this character the Roosevelt administration can force even those few papers who have not succumbed to his various methods of subjugation to either get in line with him or go out of existence.

Through the medium of the income-tax department of the Treasury the newspapers are threatened with the loss of advertising if they print the truth about what is happening here in Washington. With this sword of Damocles hanging over their heads they are given columns of falsehoods daily to print. Every bureau and every commission, be it ever so small—and there are 47 new bureaus and 13 new commissions—is equipped with a high-priced, high-salaried press department where falsehoods are manufactured and given to the Nation.

Never before in the history of this Nation has our Government stooped to such lying and deceit as we have witnessed in Washington during the past 2 years. Fully 99 percent of all the statements issued by these Government press agencies are falsehoods. They are designed to deceive the people and make them believe their Government is trying to help them, when just the opposite is the purpose of this maladministration of our affairs.

Innumerable cases could be cited of such news duplicity. Every day a dozen or more of these untrue statements are handed to the press, printed, and broadcast as truth. Not even under the absolute rule of the Soviet in Russia are so many bare-faced untruths given out as Government facts. Our Government has resolved itself into a propaganda bureau for disseminating falsehoods to its citizens.

Perhaps the most monstrous untruths were the press releases sent out on the founding of the N. R. A. The cost of these lies to the taxpayers amounted to more than $100,000 a day for months. The people were assured that the N. R. A. was for the forgotten man and to help the little fellow. It is not necessary now, after 2 years of its existence, to point out this glaring untruth. Everyone with ordinary intelligence now knows that the N. R. A. was organized for two purposes only. First, to crush the little business man and give the international bankers an opportunity to organize trusts without fear of being prosecuted under the antitrust laws. Secondly, to raise prices in this country so that European bankers could ship their products in over our then existing tariffs to successfully compete with manufacturers in the United States. These two facts were pointed out by those who originally opposed this piece of foreign legislation, but their votes were drowned by the $100,000 a day hullabaloo.

We could go on with examples of this kind ad infinitum. The truth is not in this administration nor in the mouths of its press agents. Look at the falsehoods we were told concerning the recognition of Russia. This was to bring us millions of dollars in trade and the repayment of the debts owed us. We received neither, but certain persons did get valuable oil concessions in Russia and we got thousands of Russian propagandists sent in here to work out, in conjunction with our communistic "brain trust", how to destroy our Republic.

In the current issue of the American Mercury a Mr. Eugene Kelly gives his description of what he has called "distorting the news." In many particulars he is correct. Aside from his apparent personal animosity to certain Washington newspaper correspondents, his article contains many interesting facts. His attempt to show the correspondents at fault is, of course, attacking the effect instead of the cause.

No newspaper correspondent could hold his job and send to his newspaper anything but the false statements issued by the Government departments. His newspaper does not want to incur the wrath of the new deal. It does not want to take a chance on having much of its advertising withdrawn, as has been done in cases where a publication dared to print the truth. The correspondent knows that 99 percent of these statements are lies; but he, as an individual, cannot correct the abuse and his newspaper does not want to be singled out and made an example of new-deal wrath.

The newspapers are not at fault; the newspaper correspondents are not to be blamed; the fault lies with Congress for permitting any administration to grow so great in its own estimation that it believes it can lie and get away with it. The time has come to put a stop to this chicanery in the name of the United States Government. Congress should shake these liars and their bosses loose from the roots of our Government before the whole Nation becomes contaminated. Honor and honesty must be returned to our Government, so that when a public statement is issued the people may know it is to be believed.

Mr. Kelly makes a good point in his article in the Mercury by showing how effectively this administration gags not only the press but the public. He discloses how the A. A. A. brought about desired results with a community voting public in connection with the corn-hog program.

On October 17, 1934, this Bureau announced that approximately 66 percent of all producers voting in the cornhog referendum meeting favored continuing the program through 1935. In reply we quote Mr. Kelly:

The press agents of the A. A. A. forget to add that this 69 percent represented actually 31.1 percent of all the farmers who had corn-hog contracts. In other words, there were at this time 1,200,000 signers of these contracts and of this number 374,584 voted to continue the reduction program.

Farmers, on being notified concerning this vote, were instructed not to attend and vote if they opposed the Roosevelt program; and, therefore, only less than one-third took part in the proceedings, although the A. A. A. heralded it as a great victory for their destructive program. At least this was so in Wyoming, where Charles E. Llewellyn, the extension agent for the A. A. A., in his letter to the farmers said:

If you are against control production do not attend any of the meetings scheduled below.

Fifteen months ago the newspapers of the United States, relying on information furnished them by the propaganda division of the Department of Agriculture, informed the public that 95 percent of the cotton farmers of America had declared for the Bankhead cotton bill.

What happened was this: There are approximately 4,000,-000 cotton farmers in the United States. The Department of Agriculture sent a questionnaire in general terms to a selected list of about 46,000 cotton farmers. Of this number, 22,000 replied. Of the 22,000 who thus replied, 95 percent declared that they favored the principle of production control. There was nothing said about the Bankhead cotton bill.

Consequently, instead of 95 percent of the 4,000,000 cotton farmers in America declaring for the Bankhead cotton bill, 95 percent of one-half of 1 percent declared for the principle of production control, which, in plain English, is about one-half of a farmer out of every hundred, which means that on this atom of fact they built their mountain of falsehood and distributed it throughout the press and the radio of the United States.

As I have stated, the March issue of the Redbook does not note the slightest reference to the press-censorship articles, nor does it explain why this exposure of the Roosevelt administration was dropped.

Anyone can see what happened. The Roosevelt administration somehow in all probability did the same thing to the Redbook that it did to the Washington Spectator and Mirror. It got word to the publishers that if the articles appeared, the advertisers would withdraw.

The only difference between the Redbook and the Washington Spectator and Mirror is that the Redbook got scared and withdrew its articles, while the Spectator printed the articles and lost all its advertising.

The following articles in the Washington Spectator and Mirror are among those that cost that publication all its advertising, which articles I incorporate in and make a part of my remarks, as follows:

[From the Washington Spectator and Mirror, October 1934]

THE SCHALL INCIDENT

On August 23 last, at the request of the Columbia Broadcasting Co., Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota, was scheduled to address the Nation over a national hook-up. Senator Schall had not been invited before to use the air waves, and being in the midst of a campaign against censorship of the press and radio it is probable that the Columbia invited the Senator to speak for the purpose of convincing the public that their chain at least was not under the thumb of censorship.

Senator Schall, as is obligatory, submitted in advance a copy of his address, which was on censorship. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Columbia called Senator Schall on the telephone and advised him that they were postponing his talk from 9:45 until 10 o'clock that evening, although the speech had been advertised as to be delivered at the former time. They said, however, they would announce the change. At 9:45 that evening the announcement was made from New York saying the Senator would speak at 11 o'clock daylight-saving time. This confused a great many listeners, but despite that fact a great many persons heard the address, which was in full as follows:

"The 'brain trust' is preparing a recommendation to the Roosevelt Communications Commission providing for a national press service patterned after the Tass of Soviet Russia, the Havas of France, and the Stefani of Italy. This service is to take the place of the Associated Press, the Hearst News Services, and the United Press. It will be operated on the taxpayers' money and will have exclusive use of all Government news and be in a position to give its service only to those newspapers loyal to the Roosevelt dictator-its service only to those newspapers loyal to the Roosevelt dictator-

"The present plan is to make a small charge for the service, but consideration is being given a suggestion that loyal administration newspapers be furnished the news service free. This plan is essential for the passage of the press censorship bill to be offered at the next session of Congress, because censorship will cause the suspension of the present news services.

"Since the Roosevelt administration is so determined on press censorship it may be interesting to the public to know how this un-American idea gets so much consideration. The War Departun-American idea gets so much consideration. The War Department at Washington has a list of 37,000 persons employed in Washington by various foreign governments and foreign business interests. Many of these persons have American citizenship. Their business in Washington is to break down tariff barriers and force foreign goods made by cheap foreign labor into the markets of the United States. Every one of these alien-minded propagandists is openly advocating press censorship. The reason is not strange. The last two sessions of Congress voted secret tariff hearings and virtual dictatorship powers to Mr. Roosevelt. In the past these foreign emissaries were dependent for their success on the reaction they were able to develop on the people of the United past these foreign emissaries were dependent for their success on the reaction they were able to develop on the people of the United States. But since we now have a complete dictatorship, it is no longer necessary to take the public into their confidence before securing decisions favorable to foreign countries. The only fly in the ointment for these foreign allies is the fact that the newspapers still have the freedom for criticizing un-American and unfair decisions. Hence, the press censorship is a very necessary weapon.

"It is impossible to list all the activities of these European and Asiatic agents who are attempting to destroy the United States by this form of intrigue. A few examples explain very simply their methods. The representatives of the French lees industry have about succeeded in closing all our lace factories so that lace made by French peasants in sweatshops may flood this country. More than 50,000 persons, dependent on this industry in the United States, will shortly be unemployed.

"A course of highly paid secret agents is now employed by for-industry in the United States, will shortly be unemployed.

"A corps of highly paid secret agents is now employed by foreign molasses interests in holding open our ports to the entry of their blackstrap. If Mr. Roosevelt would stop the importation of this product, corn would sell at $1 per bushel regardless of the amount we produce. In other words, the millions of barrels of industrial alcohol now made from blackstrap would be produced from corn. Another group representing foreign sugar interests has succeeded in blocking the production of sugar in the United States. The United States produces but 20 percent of the sugar it consumes and were we to take our excess wheat land and plant it in sugar beets we could retain $200,000,000 which we send each year to foreign countries for sugar and be further assured that there would be no over-production of wheat. that there would be no over-production of wheat

"While our farmers starve another contingent of foreign manip-

"While our farmers starve another contingent of foreign manipulators are shipping millions of pounds of frozen and canned beef and pork into the United States. Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt, who wants to save the farmers, has been purchasing the meat for the C. C. C. camps in cans from Argentine Republic.

"A legion of other foreign agents is working night and day in Washington destroying our industry and our agriculture. We are importing cotton from British Egypt, gunny cloth from British India, blistered copper from Canada and Africa, while our copper mines remain idle, china, glassware, shoes, electric-light globes and every other conceivable article of manufacture. Milk and cream come from Canada, canned tomatoes from Italy, green peas cream come from Canada, canned tomatoes from Italy, green peas from Mexico, hides and cheese from Australia. Surely this army of 37,000 foreign agents needs the protection of a press censorship and certainly the Congressmen and Senators who have brought this to pass will need its cloak to hide their wrongdoing.

"If we can elect a Congress composed of true Americans, they will decread from the Way Department the news of these 37,000 will demand from the War Department the names of these 37,000 foreign spies and their proper prosecution."

For some reason after listening to these facts the Roosevelt administration was seized by panic. Hampson Gary, acting chairman of the new Communications Commission and in full control of radio, ordered 15 minutes reserved for himself over the same broadcasting chain the next night and he proceeded to denounce Senator Schall for his statements concerning a Government news service. He was notably silent on the fact that 37,000 foreign agents are in the United States attempting to destroy our internal and external trade.

President Roosevelt then seized his pen and dashed off a telegram to Senator Schall demanding that the Senator furnish him with evidence concerning the national press service and that he would investigate it, but no word concerning the 37,000 secret agents here to undermine the United States.

By way of reply Senator Schall sent the following letter to the President:

AUGUST 25, 1934.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
President of the United States,

White House.

"My Dear Mr. President: Your telegram to me bears out the suggestion of the constant effort to mislead and fool the public. Your desire to make yourself appear before the people of the United States as a champion of a free press may be as insincere as your promises to the people when you accepted the Democratic nomination at Chicago with the statement that you were for their platform 100 percent. To date you have not kept one of the covenants you pledged the people at that time. Let me recall your testy anger at your disappointment in keeping out of the press code the expression of a free press.

For me to chronicle all of the attempts of your administration.

For me to chronicle all of the attempts of your administration to throttle the press and free speech—all known to you and approved by you in advance—would be but to recite incidents with which you are entirely familiar. If it were not for the fact that I see in your request for information an attempt on your part to appear as a victim of your own bureaucracy instead of its chief organizer, I would be inclined to ignore your telegram.

But since you assume a clock of innocence and since your telegram.

to appear as a victim of your own bureaucracy instead or its chief organizer, I would be inclined to ignore your telegram. But since you assume a cloak of innocence and since your telegram to me is in the hands of the press, it becomes my duty as a sentinel of the people to do what little I can to mitigate their deception by citing specific evidence of your intention to force a censorship of the press so that your acts and the acts of your communistic bureaucrats might be hidden from public gaze.

I refer, as you are quite aware, to the statement of your Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Sumners of Texas, in connection with the passage of the press censorship bill by the House in the special session of Congress called by you. Under your whip it passed the House and if the Senate had not taken out the poison a publisher who had not gained your approval or the approval of some of your appointees could be sentenced to 10 years imprisonment. The evidence convicting you of a desire to censor the press 25 days after you swore to uphold and defend the Constitution is in print in the archives of the House of Representatives. Mr. Sumners of Texas, in his statement, says the bill was introduced at the request of the Executive and is necessary to the success of the recovery legislation. Mr. President, in my opinion, secrecy and press censorship are never necessary when motives are pure.

Every Government department under you is now cloaked in censorship. Almost every bill that has been forced through Congress by you has been in itself a little censorship, a little dictatorship either giving blanket powers to you or to some of your left-or right-hand powers. According to Garrett Garet you usurped in the extra session of Congress 77 powers belonging, under the Constitution, to the judiciary and Congress and when the next Congress met you asked that these powers be made permanent. How many powers you have taken from Congress and the judiciary in this last session I have not been able to gather specifically as yet, but they are many. You have created some 47 bureaucracies. These bureaucracies are clothed with power to make their regulations law. These regulations cover something over 2,000 pages of dictatorship laws made by your appointees of whom not more than I percent has had the sanction of Congress.

Your Secretary of the Treasury has two billions of the peoples' Every Government department under you is now cloaked in Your Secretary of the Treasury has two billions of the peoples'

Your Secretary of the Treasury has two billions of the peoples' money which he is expending under the protection of a press censorship which you demanded and approved.

You demanded and sanctioned passage of a bill permitting you to secretly fix tariff rates and clothe your acts with a press censorship second to nothing ever before even suggested in the legislative annals of the United States, and this too contrary to your Democratic Party platform and contrary to your former specific, vigorous, and forceful denunciation of such.

The communications bill, originally introduced by you, contained a press censorship clause which was stricken out before the bill was passed but it still gives you the power to inaugurate a Government telegraphic news service, under which, as one example, you immediately put out of business the three radio stations of Mr. Ford.

You ask me for information concerning what you yourself have done. Are you attempting to secure the facts so that you may be in a position to refute yourself?

Yours truly,

THOS. D. SCHALL.

President Roosevelt responded to this letter with a curt telegram which terminated with the statement, "the incident is closed."

But not being of the same opinion Senator SCHALL replied with the following letter:

AUGUST 26, 1934.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,

President of the United States,

White House.

My Dear Mr. President: Your second open telegram to me in nowise explains the various attempts of your administration to secure legislation censoring the press of the United States.

You requested evidence from me concerning your own acts. I cited you three instances of your efforts to keep the public from securing, through the press, facts concerning the attempts of your bureaucracy to communize the United States.

You say you are acting in good faith. Then why not as a starter, remove the censorship bars against the press that you have placed in all your departments?

Your conclusion to me that the incident is closed will in no way, Mr. President, satisfy the people of their fear of where you are unconstitutionally steering their Republic. As a representative of the people I dare not under my oath to support and defend the Constitution let it rest there. The people of the United States want to know from you why their Republic is being gradually cast aside for a dictatorship.

cast aside for a dictatorship.

If you desire specific information as the basis of my reasonable inference that the Government is about to coordinate its various and sundry publicity functions into a national press service, you have only to assemble the following makings thereof:

The White House daily statements, political and economic, which in plecemeal form, not only determine the policies of the world's greatest bureaucracy, but likewise, the major part of political press publication. The free expression of an independent minority giving the public daily exposures of White House blunders and dangerous experiments is naturally disquieting and therefore must be controlled. be controlled.

The press code which aims to dominate the publishers in the conduct of their business, and your opposition to include therein the freedom of press demanded by the publishers' association of which there should have been no dispute, since it is a part of the Constitution and is guaranteed in the Bill of Rights.

The Rayburn Communications Act, controlling radio, telegraph, cable, and telephone communication, which the American Newspaper Guild pronounces a menace and the foundation of the worst form of dictatorship.

Your control of the business offices of the press by Government investment of $1,000,000,000 in the preferred shares of over 6,000 banks—without the credit support of which the publication of a great daily newspaper, or even a magazine and book publishing enterprise having national circulation, would be a business impossibility.

Your domination of all departments of the bureaucracy, in particular, all bureaus publishing current economic data, by which the great bulk of the data is politically slanted and damaging data suppressed, with the evident design to foist upon the public the sundry bold experiments of the new deal. In short, it seems to me your administration's intent is evident and it has become in lock, stock, and barrel simply a group of publicity machinery not yet assembled for efficient and smooth operation, but if the people return to you another spineless Congress the defects no doubt will be remedied and what we fear will have come upon us.

Your administration has set up its magazine, called "Today" edited by Brain Truster Raymond Moley and financed by Admiral Vincent Astor, of the flagship Nourmahal. What is now needed is a day and night national news service that will cover the is a day and night national news service that will cover the daily press field.

All dictatorships and most kings and emperors have their official organs. In Germany President Hitler has created his ministry of publicity, with Goebels at the head. The Russian Soviet has the Taas Agency. Nothing goes out in Italy but with Mussolini's sanction. The news service of the Washington administration might appropriately be called the 'WHP'—or 'White House Press'—which would function as the official news service of the new deal. of the new deal.

In all fairness, Mr. President, you must admit that you have the makings already at hand. Is it too much for me to call the attention of the Nation to the danger threatened, and, as Patrick Henry well put it, when he was advocating that the Colonies throw off the yoke of George III, "I know of no way of judging the future but by the past."

Sincerely yours,

THOMAS D. SCHALL.

The Schall incident which President Roosevelt declared closed has been reopened by the discovery of correspondence between Senator C. C. Dill, Mr. Roosevelt's representative in the Senate, and the radio stations of the country.

It develops that at the very moment President Roosevelt was denying to Senator Schall and the public the intention of the denying to Senator Schail and the public the intention of the administration to organize a Federal censored news service. Senator Dill was engaged in the act of organizing such a system. Photostatic copies of Senator Dill's letters fell into the hands of Senator Schail with the result that the Senator dispatched the following letter to President Roosevelt:

SEPTEMBER 25, 1934.

Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
President of the United States,

My Dear Mr. President: On last August 24, in response to a radio speech I had made the evening before in which I declared that the administration was formulating plans to establish a Federal telegraphic news service, you addressed a telegram to me and gave it to the press.

In this telegram response and gave it to the press.

In this telegram you requested information concerning your attempts at press censorship and your efforts to establish a national telegraphic news service to be operated under Government censorship. At the same time you attested your opposition to press censorship. I reiterated at that time to you the series of attempts made by your administration to control the opinion of all newspapers by law and dictatorial edict.

Your reply failed to square with article I of the Constitution. You branded my letter "vituperative" and declared "the incident closed" but in my second letter I advised you, Mr. President, that the incident was not closed and I now wish, in connection with your statement to me that you were as much opposed to press censorship as I, to call your attention one glaring and significant fact that the incident cannot be closed if I am to keep my oath to uphold and defend the Constitution.

During the past session of Congress, Senator Clarence C. Dill acted as your spokesman and adviser on all radio and telegraphic press service matters. It was he who, at your request, introduced your communications bill containing a press telegraphic censorship clause which was stricken out later on the demand of a majority of the Senators who still have some appreciation of their oath to support article I of the Constitution.

Your able spokesman, Senator Dill, in the face of your denial Your able spokesman, Senator Din, in the lace of your definite that you intended, as I stated, to inaugurate a press telegraphic service, announces that such a service operated under Government censorship and censored by Government license must be established. Your Government-censored telegraphic service is to be operated over the radio.

I cite you the address made by Senator Dill in Cincinnati on September 17 before the National Association of Broadcasters. I hesitated from calling this evidence to your attention, hoping that you would publicly denounce this initial attempt to destroy our press services and in their stead create a Governmentstroy our press services and in their stead create a Government-censored press agency which Senator Dill's proposition would surely do. I take it, and the public must take it, that by your si-lence you have given that consent that Senator Dill must know exists and that I inferred when I made my statement concerning this matter weeks ago.

Mr. President, I beseech you to immediately denounce this scheme to force press censorship by this round-about move. Unless you do so I feel that the public will lose faith in your future promises.

Cordially yours,

THOMAS D. SCHALL.

The White House was silent as the tomb.

But on October 14, some 2 weeks later, up jumped Postmaster General Farley to the rescue. Among other things, Mr. Farley said: "All this talk about the administration establishing a censorship of radio and the press in order to perpetuate its existence is only the cry of desperation on the part of a weak and discredited minority, which is growing more impotent daily.

minority, which is growing more impotent daily.

"And the charge that plans are about to set up a Government-controlled news agency to disseminate propaganda via the radio is equally absurd and groundless. As some wit observed: 'We have nothing to hide.' So we have adopted the open-door policy, taking the public fully into our confidence on all matters of public policy. As a result, the people are looking to us as never before to right their wrongs and to provide ways and means whereby they may live and be reasonably happy and contented."

It will be seen at once that Mr. Farley's statements are not exactly borne out by the facts. So incredible were his statements that Senator Schall dispatched him the following open letter:

OCTOBER 18, 1934.

Hon. James Farley,

Postmaster General, Post Office Department, Local.

My Dear Postmaster General: I have read with much interest your statement in the press a few days since in which you declare my fight against press censorship and the establishment of a Government-censored telegraphic news service to take the place of the Associated Press, the Hearst News Services, and the United Press is Knowing as you do that I have photostat copies of the letters sent out by your coworker, Senator C. C. Dill, attempting to inaugurate this censored news service, I am at a loss to comprehend this colossal bluff. Do you think the whole country has gone insane because in an unguarded moment it was foolish enough to believe Mr. Roosevett's campaign slogan that "it couldn't be worse." You selve know that 25 days after his insurantion Mr. Roosevet.

You also know that 25 days after his inauguration Mr. Roosevelt attempted to pass a bill censoring the press and with a penalty for noncompliance of 10 years at hard labor for publishers.

That the administration again attempted the same thing by leaving a "freedom of the press" clause out of the N. R. A. newspaper code.

That the President's communications bill at first permitted the President to censor all press dispatches.

The administration having failed in these three attempts your coworker Senator Dill is attempting to start a Federal censored news service. Every bill that came out of the White House and was passed by the last Congress contained a censorship clause. Every department today is closed to the press and forty odd carefully picked administration press agents pass on what news is to be given to the public.

At the present moment you are engaged in attempting to censor my mail, the mail of a Senator of the United States, over which under the Constitution and its bylaws you have no authority unless it is used for private purposes.

It seems you and the dictionary disagree on the definition of the word "censorship."

Cordially yours,

THOMAS D. SCHALL.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY—REPORT OF SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior and Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works, submitting, pursuant to Senate Resolution 78, calling on the Secretary of the Interior for a report in connection with an investigation of the Public Works Administration program (agreed to February 15, 1935), a report concerning Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I think the report should be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads,

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long], however, indicated that he desired to see the report before it goes to the committee. He is not present at the moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report would be available to the Senator after it was referred to the committee.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the report, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

The motion was agreed to.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the War Department appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	King	Robinson
Ashurst	Couzens	La Follette	Russell
Austin	Cutting	Logan	Schall
Bachman	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Bankhead	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barbour	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	George	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gerry	Maloney	Townsend
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Trammell
Bulow	Glass	Moore	Truman
Burke	Gore	Murphy	Tydings
Byrd	Guffey	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Van Nuvs
Capper	Harrison	Norbeck	Wagner
Carey	Hastings	Norris	Wheeler
Clark	Hatch	Nye	White
Connally	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Tributa and and tributant
Coolidge	Johnson	Radcliffe
Copeland	Keyes	Reynolds

Mr. DONAHEY. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. Bulkley] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. My colleague the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are detained from the Senate by illness.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Pope], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] are necessarily detained

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The clerk will read the bill.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Military activities—General Staff Corps—Contingencies, Military Intelligence Division", on page 8, line 6, after the word "information", to strike out "$46,000" and insert "$107,000", so as to read:

For contingent expenses of the Military Intelligence Division, General Staff Corps, and of the military attachés at the United States embassies and legations abroad, including the purchase of law books, professional books of reference, and subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals; for the hire of interpreters, special agents, and guides, and for such other purposes as the Secretary of War may deem proper, including $5,000 for the actual and necessary expenses of officers of the Army on duty abroad for the purpose of observing operations of armies of foreign states at war, to be paid upon certificates of the Secretary of War that the expenditures were necessary for obtaining military information, $107,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Adjutant General's Department—Field exercises", on page 9, line 17, to strike out "$350,465" and insert $446,774", so as to read:

For all expenses required for the conduct of special field exercises, including participation therein by the National Guard and the Organized Reserves, comprising allowances for enlisted men for quarters and rations, movement of materiel, maintenance, and operation of structures and utilities, and any other requisite supplies and services, $446,774.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Welfare of enlisted men", on page 10, line 3, after the word "purposes", to strike out "and" and insert "at", so as to read:

For the equipment and conduct of school, reading, lunch, and amusement rooms, service clubs, chapels, gymnasiums, and libraries, including periodicals and other publications and subscriptions for newspapers, salaries of civilians employed in the hostess and library services, transportation of books and equipment for these services, rental of films, purchase of slides for and making repairs to moving-picture outfits, and for similar and other recreational purposes at training and mobilization camps now established or which may be hereafter established, $34,940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Finance Department, pay, etc., of the Army", on page 10, line 14, after the word "Army", to strike out "including not to exceed five medical officers"; in line 24, after the word "increasing", to strike out the comma and "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time"; on page 11, line 10, after the word "exceed", to strike out "five retired officers on active duty, $5,676" and insert "85 retired officers on active duty, $142,200"; and in line 22, after the word "available", to strike out "$6,238,656" and insert "$6,299,516", so as to read:

For pay of not to exceed an average of 12,000 commissioned officers, $33,307,100, no part of which sum shall be available after September 30, 1935, for the pay of more than 11,750 commissioned officers whose original commissions are dated prior to June 1, 1935; pay of officers, National Guard, $100; pay of warrant officers, $1,479,568; aviation increase to commissioned and warrant officers of the Army, $2,033,029, none of which shall be available for increased pay for making aerial flights by nonflying officers at a rate in excess of $1,440 per annum, which shall be the legal maximum rate as to such nonflying officers; additional pay to officers for length of service, $9,257,465; pay of enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $51,069,333, together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000 enlisted men; pay of enlisted men of National Guard, $100; aviation increase to enlisted men of the Army, $503,782; pay of enlisted men of the Philippine Scouts, $1,050,447; additional pay for length of service to enlisted men, $4,480,400; pay of the officers on the retired list, $11,538,900; increased pay to not to exceed 85 retired officers on active duty, $142,200; pay of retired enlisted men, $13,201,160; pay not to exceed 60 civil-service messengers at not to exceed $1,200 each at headquarters of the several Territorial departments, corps areas, Army and corps headquarters, Territorial departments, corps areas, Army and corps headquarters, Territorial departments of embarkation and debarkation, $72,000; pay and allowances of contract surgeons, $51,576; pay of nurses, $893,560; pay of hospital matrons, $600; rental allowances, including allowances for quarters for enlisted men on duty where public quarters are not available, $6,299,516.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 14, after the words "in all", to strike out "$141,059,670" and insert "$141,257,054"; and in line 18, after the word "discharges", to strike out "$140,774,670" and insert "$140,972,054", so as to read:

Provided, That during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, no rental allowance shall accrue to any officer of the Government in consequence of the provisions found in section 10, title 37, United States Code, while occupying quarters at his permanent station not under the jurisdiction of the service in which serving but which belong to the Government of the United States, or to a corporation the majority of the stock of which is owned by the United States, in excess of the rental rate charged for such quarters on March 5, 1934; subsistence allowances, $5,841,118; interest on soldiers' deposits, $30,000; payment of exchange by officers serving in foreign countries, and when specially authorized by the Secretary of War, by officers disbursing funds pertaining to the War Department, when serving in Alaska, and all foreign money received shall be charged to and paid out by disbursing officers of the Army at the legal valuation fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, $100; in all, $141,257,054, less $285,000 to be supplied by the Secretary of War for this purpose from funds received during the fiscal year 1936 from the purchase by enlisted men of the Army of their discharges, $140,972,054; and the money herein appropriated for "Pay, etc., of the Army" shall be accounted for as one fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the able Senator from New York, I should like to make one or two general inquiries regarding the bill.

May I inquire whether there are in the present War Department appropriation bill any construction items on behalf of the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. No; there are not. The committee had before it a request for a very considerable sum for construction, but we found that under the law it was necessary that estimates should be presented before they could be acted upon by the Appropriations Committee. Therefore there are no construction items in the bill, although there is in it a considerable item for the repair of barracks and buildings.

Mr. VANDENBERG. May I ask the Senator whether he has any information as to whether the War Department contemplates applying to whatever new instrumentality is put in charge of so-called "public works" for a portion of the contemplated four or five billion dollar work-relief appropriation as the source of its construction fund?

Mr. COPELAND. I have no doubt at all that that application will be made. I may say to the Senator in that connection that the Chief of Staff of the Army made it clear that they now have plans drawn with which they are ready to proceed involving about $137,000,000, and it was his testimony that within 12 months that much money could be profitably used for Army construction. I have no question at all that when the Senator succeeds in passing the pending $5,000,000,000 measure, there will be money there for this work.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I find in the Washington Post of March 2 an article from which I read only a single sentence. The article is discussing the War Department appropriation bill, which is now before us. The sentence reads as follows:

Another influential Democrat, Chairman John J. McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee, declared his committee had hoped to get $405,000,000 additional for the Army out of the workrelief fund.

Has the Senator heard of any sum of that monumental size which it is contemplated to detour from the so-called "work-relief program" for the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, my ears are now so attuned that I can hear only a billion mentioned. I did not hear so modest a sum as $405,000,000 mentioned. Aside from this, however, I will say that the only sum I heard mentioned was $137,000,000; and I may say that both in the subcommittee and in the full Committee on Appropriations an amendment was offered to this bill asking for the appropriation of an amount of money which was finally fixed at $132,000,000, and there was also included an outline of where the money was to be spent, covering, I should say, every State in the Union; but, for the reasons which I have heretofore stated, under the rules and under the law, it did not seem proper for us to come to Congress with that request as an addition to the appropriation bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator for his candor. As I understand the situation, then, we confront a War Department appropriation bill which is not only $45,000,000 larger than last year's appropriation, but we also confront the expectation that a considerable sum in addition, running all the way from the $130,000,000 which the Senator identifies to the $400,000,000 which the chairman of the House committee identifies, is to be secured from this so-called "work-relief" source, indicating a total increased Army expenditure of all the way from a quarter to a half billion dollars.

Mr. President, it seems to me that we are entitled—and in "we" I include my able friend from New York—to more specific information as to precisely what grand total the War Department and the Army contemplate seeking this year from the Public Treasury. Or, if you choose the other alternative, we are entitled to know what the $5,000,000,000 work-relief bill contemplates by way of expenditures. At one point or the other Congress and the country are entitled to specific information. We cannot indefinitely survive government by blank check and by lump-sum Executive decree.

I am not complaining about any appropriate expenditure for the Army. I want a strong and adequate Army, and I have never voted otherwise. I am the last man in the world to complain against legitimate preparedness. My complaint is not against the necessary funds allocated to the War Department by congressional action in the fashion contemplated by the Constitution. My complaint is against the divided method of allocating funds to the War Department, as a result of which only half of the appropriation is directly authorized by the Congress and the other half is procured under some general and loose so-called "work-relief" authority which is rested in the sole discretion of the President of the United States, and which is a complete mystery to those who must pay the bills.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield to the Senator from Florida. Mr. FLETCHER. My understanding is that this construction program was entered upon some years ago, and that we have been from year to year constructing buildings needed by the War Department, and that under that arrangement the construction program required only this $130,000,000 to complete it. The War Department has prepared plans and specifications, and all that sort of thing, for completing it; and I understand that the $130,000,000 will complete the construction of the necessary buildings required by the War Department.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Did the Senator hear me read a newspaper quotation from the Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, speaking of $405,000,000 additional?

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes; I heard that, but I do not know anything about it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If there is an identified $132,000,000 to be allocated to the Army under the work-relief fund, may I ask the Senator from Florida why we should not be given that specific item when the work-relief measure is before us, instead of being constantly told that nobody can give us any identified information whatever? Is it the Senator's understanding that this $132,000,000 is an identified item in the work-relief program?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not know about that. It is an item that has been specified before our committee and testified to, and I understand it is all that is claimed for completing this program of construction. I do not know about any other item.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, it seems to me this is an amazing contemplation which we confront.

On the other hand, when we have before us the War Department appropriation bill, which is presumed to supply the essential funds for the War Department for the next year, we are told that there is no available information respecting either $132,000,000, as testified by one, or $405,-000,000, as testified by another, which is to be spent upon a construction program in respect to the Army; and yet on the other hand, when we confront the $5,000,000,000 socalled "work-relief bill", and we ask for some specific information, just a few specific examples as to what the money is to be spent for, we are told that we cannot be given any example. Somewhere between those two horns of the dilemma somebody ought to be able to identify this prospective expenditure. We should not be left forever in mathematical mystery. Let it be remembered that this is the people's money.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. I may say to the Senator first that, speaking purely for myself and not as chairman of the subcommittee, I desire to have specifications for the projects for which we are asked to spend money. I want to know what they are. There is now in existence, however, a committee of the House receiving testimony and preparing a bill, as must be done under the law, regarding construction in the Army. I presume that at some time that bill will pass the House and come to the Senate for action. But the Committee on Appropriations decided that we were not justified, perhaps for reasons mentioned by the Senator from Michigan, in including such figures in this bill, because this is the bill for the operation of the Army for the next fiscal year, and has naught to do with the large items of construction which perhaps would serve the Army for the next half century.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator will readily concede, however, I apprehend, that prior to the last 2 years, when we began this habit of loose and general discretionary lumping of the appropriation powers in the hands of the Executive, War Department items, including those for construction, were always included in the annual supply bill which was submitted to the Congress. The Senator will concede that that is the fact?

Mr. COPELAND. That is true.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I come back to the proposition that if we are not to have specific information respecting the total expenditure to be made for the Army in the Army appropriation bill, but if we are advised that a substantial supplementary expenditure for the Army is to be made under the $5,000,000,000 pot-luck appropriation bill which is pending somewhere at the moment in a state of suspended animation, at least we ought to have specific information, when the $5,000,000,000 bill comes back for consideration, as to what portion of it is to be detoured for Army purposes.

The reason why I emphasize the matter is not captious; it is because we have had a demonstration of the futility of taking work-relief funds out of a so-called "work-relief appropriation" and using them for these service purposes if our real intention in the latter aspect is to relieve unemployment.

We had much the same situation under the original $3,300,000,000 appropriation bill of 1933. Under the terms of that bill the President, with entire legal authority—and I raise no question against the legality of his action—the President, in connection with the very Executive order which set up the Public Works Administration, authorized the allocation of $238,000,000 to the Navy for shipbuilding purposes, and $40,000,000 additional was allocated later, a total of $278,000,000 taken out of the $3,300,000,000 work-relief fund of 1933 for shipbuilding purposes.

Again I say, I do not complain against the use of necessary public funds to create an essential navy for the United States, but I complain that we build a navy with money presumably dedicated to work-relief purposes, and not in appropriation bills which are directly and specifically identified as Navy bills.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Russell in the chair). Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Can the Senator tell us how much was appropriated directly for the Navy a year ago?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not have that figure in mind.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Can the Senator tell us how much was allocated to the Army from P. W. A. funds?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Possibly the Senator from New York can reply to that.

Mr. COPELAND. What is the question?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. What amount was allocated to the Army from P. W. A. funds last year?

Mr. COPELAND. Between sixty and sixty-five million dollars.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. In addition to what Congress had already appropriated for the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Can the Senator tell us how much had been appropriated for the Navy directly?

Mr. COPELAND. No; I do not know about the Navy; I can speak only for the Army.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but briefly, but I want to support the observation I have just submitted, namely, that this is a most unfortunate way, upon the one hand, to make appropriations for the Army and the Navy, and it is an even more unfortunate method for the use of the funds which are given to the Chief Executive in blanket authority for the presumed purpose of creating immediate employment, to serve the economic crisis. It becomes, however, unwittingly, a species of deception.

The first lump sum appropriation under an act signed by the President on June 16, 1933, was for what presumptive purpose? It was for the purpose—reading from the act—"with a view to increasing employment quickly." I emphasize the word "quickly." Mark you, we were undertaking on June 16, 1933, to increase employment quickly, and in line, presumably, with the purpose to increase employment quickly, by Executive direction $238,000,000 in the first instance, and $40,000,000 later, or a total of $278,000,000 in all, was allocated to the Navy for shipbuilding purposes, out of this employment fund.

Mr. President, this is the 4th of March 1935. Some 20 months has passed, with greater unemployment in the land than ever. Has that $278,000,000 been used for the purpose of creating employment quickly? I do not intend to go into the matter in detail at the moment, because I do not wish to intrude upon the Senate's good nature this afternoon in this connection, but I do want to support the general challenge which I have submitted. I want to point out, first, that under the use of this authority, in the first instance through the allocation of P. W. A. money which was appropriated for the purpose of curing unemployment quickly, the chief thing that has happened with this $278,000,000 is the construction of 32 vessels, for which Congress made no appropriation, as well as 130 aircraft, and miscellaneous supplies for the Navy, for which Congress made no direct appropriation.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. NYE. It seems to me the point ought to be made at this juncture in the Senator's remarks that there is nothing at the time to reveal what portion of the money actually expended from the Public Works allocation has actually entered into the creation of new employment. In other words, quite to the contrary, there is a large amount of evidence that the greater percentage of the expenditure was for materials already in stock.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is entirely correct, and even though the sum be not subdivided, we confront the fact that on December 31, 1934, which was a year and a half after this fund was created for the purpose of curing unemployment quickly, 18 months later, out of this $278,000,000 which was taken out of the employment fund for the purpose of building up the Navy, only $94,000,000 has been expended, and, so far as we can discover, it will be 2 or 3 years more before the whole $278,000,000 will be used, which money was taken out of a fund, I repeat, which was supposed to be dedicated to the immediate relief of unemployment.

When we run down the schedule we find, for instance, that the two aircraft carriers which were allocated to the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. in 1933 with funds which Congress did not appropriate to the Navy, but with funds which Congress appropriated for the purpose of curing unemployment quickly, according to the language of the act—we find that those vessels on January 1, a year and a half later, were only 29 percent completed.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator will recall that it was frankly admitted by the responsible representatives sent before the committee by the Navy Department that the interest of the Navy Department was in naval construction rather than in reemployment, which was the purpose of the P. W. A. Act.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator is entirely correct, and all of the exhibits and all of the testimony indicate that when this $278,000,000 was taken out of the so-called "unemployment relief fund", it was taken out not primarily for unemployment relief, but primarily for the upbuilding of the Navy.

Here are some more exhibits indicating that the 1933 lump-sum work-relief appropriation was used primarily to build the Navy rather than primarily to take up unemployment For example, the New York Shipbuilding Co. got thirty or forty million dollars of that 1933 work-relief appropriation to build light cruisers which are but 15 percent completed today. In other words, the money did not serve the unemployment crisis. It got this money also to build destroyers, which are but 31 percent completed. The Philadelphia Navy Yard got a 1933 cruiser order, which is only 15 percent completed in 1935. The Mare Island Navy Yard got 1933 destroyer allocations, which are only 19 percent completed. Bethlehem got a cruiser contract, which is only 47 percent completed.

Is this the way to make appropriations for the Army and the Navy? I submit it is not. I submit that it makes a travesty of the annual appropriation bills, because these bills present a wholly incomplete picture of the expenditures contemplated for these departments. If you are going to exceed these regular appropriations by whatever additional drafts you later feel like making against the $5,000,000,000 workrelief bill, you leave Congress wholly in the dark regarding totals-and the totals tell the true tale. Still worse, if you are planning on making the $5,000,000,000 work-relief bill a veritable grab bag for these other departments, you mislead the country respecting the character and purpose of these gigantic appropriations which are sought in the name of immediate unemployment relief. I am more than ever convinced that there can be no remote justification for passing the $5,000,000,000 bill without a bill of particulars. The people are entitled to some degree of information respecting the uses to which their money is to be put. If the $5,000,-000,000 bill is to be used for the Army and the Navy, what other uses are contemplated concerning which we can only conjecture?

I wish to repeat, I am not objecting to the upbuilding of the Navy, but I am objecting to this method of making appropriations for the War Department and the Navy Department upon the one hand, and particularly to the existing method of making appropriations for the unemployed. I am again criticizing the $5,000,000,000 "pot luck" bill even more than the pending measure. It is an indefensible contemplation.

We confront precisely the same sort of a situation apparently this year. We are asked this time, not for $3,300,000,000 as in 1933, but we are asked this time for $4,880,000,000. The appetite is a progressive one. We are told that no one can identify any of the items which are to be covered by drafts upon this $4,880,000,000 in behalf of unemployment. Yet when we get into the War Department bill we discover that the War Department is deliberately planning to use a portion of this unemployment relief fund for War Department purposes, and apparently it is justified in the reliance. Yet Congress is denied all specific information regarding so-called "work relief", and we are told, by implication, that it is unpatriotic not to sign the blank check.

Of course, it is the theory that there is some degree of unemployment relief in these expenditures which are made for the War Department, but I am calling the Senate's attention to the fact that the same theory applied to the funds which were taken out of the $3,300,000,000 1933 bill in behalf of the Navy Department, and that if there was an expectation that this substantial portion of the unemployment relief fund was going to be used to cure unemployment quickly, the expectation has proven to have been a snare and a delusion, because the figures and the exhibits demonstrate that even at this moment nearly $200,000,000 of that money is still resting in the Navy Department against unfilled contracts which have been made for ships. Meanwhile the unemployed walk the streets.

I am protesting upon the one hand against this method of making appropriations for the War and Navy Departments, inasmuch as the appropriations are, in a sense, a subterfuge, since they do not present the complete and true picture respecting the public moneys which are to be used by these arms of the service this year.

I am protesting upon the other hand against the use of our unemployment work-relief programs as an indirect method of securing additions for the Army and the Navy under guise of serving unemployment, and I am asserting that this is one more exhibit to demonstrate why Congress is utterly within its rights and certainly basing itself in sound common sense when it insists that it shall be given some identification of the $4,880,000,000 which is asked this year for alleged work relief before it shall yield its consent upon this blanket score.

Before this pending bill is passed, Mr. President, I desire to reassert that I think the Senate and the House ought to have specific, identified information, first, as to how much the War Department actually expects to spend this year, and, second, how much of it they propose to get out of this $4,880,000,000 bill, which, theoretically at least, is dedicated to immediate relief for unemployment. We ought to know where the people's money goes. The five-billion work-relief bill, and its sponsors, thus far decline to tell.

THE MERCHANT MARINE (H. DOC. NO. 118)

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

I present to the Congress the question of whether or not the United States should have an adequate merchant marine.

To me there are three reasons for answering this question in the affirmative. The first is that in time of peace, subsidies granted by other nations, shipping combines, and other restrictive or relating methods may well be used to the detriment of American shippers. The maintenance of fair competition alone calls for American flagships of sufficient tonnage to carry a reasonable portion of our foreign commerce.

Second. In the event of a major war in which the United States is not involved, our commerce, in the absence of an adequate American merchant marine, might find itself seriously crippled because of its inability to secure bottoms for neutral peaceful foreign trade.

Third. In the event of a war in which the United States itself might be engaged, American flagships are obviously needed not only for naval auxiliaries, but also for the maintenance of reasonable and necessary commercial intercourse with other nations. We should remember lessons learned in the last war.

In many instances in our history the Congress has provided for various kinds of disguised subsidies to American shipping. In recent years the Congress has provided this aid in the form of lending money at low rates of interest to American shipping companies for the purpose of building new ships for foreign trade. It has, in addition, appropriated large annual sums under the guise of payments for ocean mail contracts.

This lending of money for ship building has in practice been a failure. Few ships have been built and many difficulties have arisen over the repayment of the loans. Similar difficulties have attended the granting of ocean-mail contracts. The Government today is paying annually about $30,000,000 for the carrying of mails which would cost, under normal ocean rates, only $3,000,000. The difference, $27,000,-000, is a subsidy, and nothing but a subsidy. But given under this disguised form it is an unsatisfactory and not an honest way of providing the aid that Government ought to give to shipping.

I propose that we end this subterfuge. If the Congress decides that it will maintain a reasonably adequate American merchant marine I believe that it can well afford honestly to call a subsidy by its right name.

Approached in this way a subsidy amounts to a comparatively simple thing. It must be based upon providing for American shipping Government aid to make up the differential between American and foreign shipping costs. It should cover, first, the difference in the cost of building ships; second, the difference in the cost of operating ships; and finally, it should take into consideration the liberal subsidies that many foreign governments provide for their shipping. Only by meeting this threefold differential can we expect to maintain a reasonable place in ocean commerce for ships flying the American flag, and at the same time maintain American standards.

In setting up adequate provisions for subsidies for American shipping, the Congress should provide for the termination of existing ocean mail contracts as rapidly as possible, and it should terminate the practice of lending Government money for shipbuilding. It should provide annual appropriations for subsidies sufficiently large to cover the differentials that I have described.

I am submitting to you herewith two reports dealing with American shipping: a report of an interdepartmental committee known as the "Committee on Shipping Policy", appointed June 18, 1934, by the Secretary of Commerce; and a report to me from the Postmaster General on ocean-mail contracts prepared pursuant to an Executive order of July 11, 1934.

Reports which have been made to me by appropriate authorities in the executive branch of the Government have shown that some American shipping companies have engaged in practices and abuses which should and must be ended. Some of these have to do with the improper operating of subsidiary companies, the payment of excessive salaries, the engaging in businesses not directly a part of shipping, and other abuses which have made for poor management, improper use of profits, and scattered efforts.

Legislation providing for adequate aid to the American merchant marine should include not only adequate appropriation for such purposes and appropriate safeguards for its expenditure, but a reorganization of the machinery for its administration. The quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative duties of the present Shipping Board Bureau of the Department of Commerce should be transferred for the present to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Purely administrative functions, however, such as information and planning, ship inspection, and the maintenance of aids to navigation, should, of course, remain in the Department of Commerce.

An American merchant marine is one of our most firmly established traditions. It was, during the first half of our national existence, a great and growing asset. Since then it has declined in value and importance. The time has come to square this traditional ideal with effective performance.

Free competition among the nations in the building of modern shipping facilities is a manifestation of wholly desirable and wholesome national ambition. In such free competition the American people want us to be properly represented. The American people want to use American ships. Their Government owes it to them to make certain that such ships are in keeping with our national pride and national needs.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 4, 1935.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, shall we continue with the bill until 3 o'clock?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGill in the chair). It is so understood. The clerk will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Travel of the Army", on page 15, line 13, after the word "employees", to strike out "$3,095,-630" and insert "$2,999,321"; and in line 17, after the word "for", to strike out "inspection of material or work under contract" and insert "travel in connection with development, procurement, production, maintenance, or construction activities", so as to read:

For travel allowances and travel in kind, as authorized by law, for persons traveling in connection with the military and non-military activities of the War Department, including mileage, transportation, reimbursement of actual expenses, or per diem allowances, to officers and contract surgeons; transportation of troops; transportation, or reimbursement therefor, of nurses, enisted men, recruits, recruiting parties, applicants for enlistment between recruiting stations and recruiting depots, rejected applicants for enlistment, general prisoners, cadets and accepted cadets, civilian employees, civilian witnesses before courts martial, dependents of military personnel, and attendants accompanying remains of military personnel and civilian employees; travel pay to discharged military personnel; transportation of discharged prisoners and persons discharged from St. Elizabeths Hospital after transfer thereto from the military service, to their homes, or elsewhere as they may elect, the cost in each case not to be greater than to the place of last enlistment; hot coffee for troops traveling when supplied with cooked or travel rations; commutation of quarters and rations to enlisted men traveling on detached duty when it is impracticable to carry rations, and to applicants for enlistment and general prisoners traveling under orders; per diem allowances or actual cost of subsistence while in a travel status, to nurses, civilian employees, civilian witnesses before courts martial, and attendants accompanying remains of military personnel and civilian employees, civilian witnesses before courts martial, and attendants accompanying remains of military personnel and civilian employees, of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, by transfers from other appropriations contained in this act of such amounts as may be required in addition to those herein provided for travel in connection with development, procurement, production, maintenance, or construction activities; and, with such exception, no other appropriation in this

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the able Senator from New York suspend further operations under the bill in order that I may suggest the absence of a quorum prior to taking up the special order at 3 o'clock?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask that the consideration of the bill be temporarily laid aside in order that we may proceed with the special order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Capper	Gerry	Long
Ashurst	Carey	Gibson	McAdoo
Austin	Clark	Glass	McCarran
Bachman	Connally	Gore	McGill
Bailey	Coolidge	Guffey	McKellar
Bankhead	Copeland	Hale	McNary
Barbour	Costigan	Harrison	Maloney
Bilbo	Couzens	Hastings	Minton
Black	Cutting	Hatch	Moore
Bone	Dickinson	Hayden	Murphy
Borah	Dieterich	Johnson	Murray
Brown	Donahey	Keyes	Neely
Bulow	Duffy	King	Norbeck
Burke	Fletcher	La Follette	Norris
Byrd	Frazier	Logan	Nye
Byrnes	George	Lonergan	O'Mahoney

Radcliffe Reynolds Robinson Russell Schall Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Smith Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Townsend Trammell Truman Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wagne Wheele White

Mr. ROBINSON. I desire to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are absent because of illness; that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Pope], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. DONAHEY. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. Bulkley] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. DIETERICH. I desire to announce that my colleague, the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The hour of 3 o'clock having arrived, under the special order adopted on February 28, the Senate will proceed, in executive session, to the consideration of the nominations of Richard P. Williams and John H. Russell for promotion in the Marine Corps.

The Senate thereupon proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGill in the chair), laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations in the Army, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

IN THE MARINE CORPS—NOMINATIONS OF GENERALS WILLIAMS AND RUSSELL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general in the Marine Corps and to the nomination of John H. Russell to be major general in the Marine Corps.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, in view of the fact that I understand there will be more or less discussion in opposition to the nominations of General Williams and General Russell. I desire at this time to make only a brief statement.

Russell, I desire at this time, to make only a brief statement. The Committee on Naval Affairs had before it the nominations of General Russell and General Williams. There was more or less complaint made against each of them. After considering the nomination of General Williams, and the complaint that was made, the committee reached the conclusion that the nomination should be favorably recommended. Since that time, so far as I know, but little has been said in regard to his nomination.

Relative to General Russell, there was more or less complaint made to the committee. We investigated the various criticisms, and reached the conclusion that they were based upon suspicions or upon hearsay and were unsupported by any facts which came before the committee.

I do not desire to go into all the details at this time. There was some criticism to the effect that General Russell dominated and controlled the promotion board; that the members of the board cast open ballots; that the Commandant of the Marine Corps knew how everyone voted, and thus was given an opportunity to dominate and control the board. The facts developed are that it was not an open ballot; that the names of those who were eligible for promotion were printed on a list; that each member of the board was furnished with this list, and he merely made a check mark opposite the name of the officer for whom he voted for promotion. The lists so marked were then placed in a box or other receptacle and probably mixed up and pulled out and the names were called off. From the explanation that was made—and I do not think the facts are controverted in the least—it was as much of a secret ballot as the average person casts on election day. The committee was convinced that there was no support for that contention.

Further, as to General Russell dominating the board, I cannot recall a single piece of evidence that justifies any such charge. He was the Commandant of the Marine Corps, it is true, but there is no evidence to show that he discussed the various eligibles whose names were before the board, nor that in any instance did he exert influence or log-roll in behalf of a single officer. General Russell said he refrained from doing anything of that character; that he urged the members of the board to vote upon the merits of the applicants; and that he did not attempt to use any influence whatever toward bringing about the promotions.

The committee was convinced that there was no evidence whatever that he had tried to dominate the board or that he had influenced the board; in fact, he stated that among those for whom he himself voted for promotion were officers who did not receive the necessary majority for promotion but, to the contrary, were among those who were not successful.

I think the whole trouble, in the main, has come about from the fact that, so far as the senior board is concerned, they had 18 eligibles for selection, and there were only 2 officers who could be selected for promotion out of the 18. It would be folly and a killing of time for me to say to the Senate that a condition of that kind would bring about dissatisfaction among some, at least. We know from our own experience in dealing with applicants for public offices and positions that for every such position which we may be able to fill, while, to use the common, street expression, we may make 1 friend and probably, if we are dealing with 18 applicants, we make 17 enemies.

I have not heard of any great number of officers, however, who complained. I think that they realize the situation and, in the main, they have had nothing to say. They know that inasmuch as only 2 could be selected out of the 18, of course the whole 18 could not be selected. I think that disposes of that criticism.

There was something said in regard to the board not selecting officers who had served overseas. The record discloses that there were equally as many overseas officers selected for promotion as there were those who had not served overseas. As a matter of fact, there were not any great number of high ranking Marine officers who were sent overseas; they were at their posts, and while they were, in the main, desirous of going overseas, and sought assignment overseas, they were unable to obtain such an assignment. That was true of General Russell himself. He was in Haiti, where it was thought by those in control of the Marine Corps and by the State Department that he was rendering a splendid service, and he was unable to secure an assignment overseas though he repeatedly endeavored to do so. It seems to me a little peculiar that overseas officers are claimed to have been discriminated against when, as a matter of fact, of the two boards with which he had connection, as in the case of the junior boards, the very large majority of officers who had been overseas were placed upon the boards that made the selections. There is nothing in the contention, as I see it; the facts do not support the idea that the boards were in anywise discriminatory as against the fighting men, as some of them said before the committee. We found nothing to justify that criticism.

A little incident was referred to here the other day about General Russell, when he was in Veracruz, having reported a threatened attack on the part of the Mexicans at the water-supply plant to which he had been assigned. General Butler was the person who brought up that criticism. General Butler, in his statement, referred to General Taylor, as I recall, and also to Colonel Clarke, as though they were his sources of information.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think it better to try to discuss the matter connectedly.

Mr. BLACK. I was going to say in reference to Colonel Clarke that I have a telegram which has just been handed me and which I wanted to read to the Senator in connection with Colonel Clarke.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Does not the Senator think I had better read his statement first?

Mr. BLACK. Well, if it is a statement from Colonel Clarke, the telegram is with reference to that statement. The telegram reads:

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

SENATOR HUGO BLACK

Senate Office Building:

Reported that Colonel Clarke, of this base, received telephonic orders Saturday to send air-mail statement relative Russell's conduct in Mexico. Clarke was selected, and his statement will be prejudicial.

May I ask if Colonel Clarke is in San Diego?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I presume so. The telegram is from San Diego, Calif. I have read the statement Colonel Clarke made. Of course, to say he was prejudiced because he had been selected for promotion is to impugn the motive of everyone who has any connection with promotion boards. At some time or other probably all these officers have been promoted. If we cannot trust officers of the Marine Corps to be honest and fair in considering the matter of promotions, what are we going to do? Are we going to establish a civilian board? Are we going to establish the Senate as a board to review all military records and to determine whether this or that officer should be promoted? It is very easy to say a person is prejudiced, but we have found no evidence in anywise to establish that there has been any prejudice exhibited upon the part of the membership of Colonel Clarke is one witness to whom General Butler referred when he was criticizing General Russell. His telegram is addressed to Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, headquarters Marine Corps, Washington, D. C., and reads as follows:

Relative to the El Tejar incident, early one morning the sentry on the water tower reported Mexican troops on the road about half mile from our camp. You sent me with a trumpeter to investigate. Upon arrival at the road I met the head of a column of Mexican cavalry advancing around a bend in the road. There were in sight probably one troop and about one-half of another, the rest being hidden by bend in the road. There was a major in command, so I have always assumed the force consisted of at least a squadron of cavalry. I signaled the Mexicans to halt, which they did, sending forward a lieutenant, who spoke English, and a trumpeter to parley. At this point you arrived and received the Mexican major's message which was to the effect that you were given 10 minutes in which to evacuate El Tejar or fight. You told him to go to hell, ordered me to remain in observation, and given 10 minutes in which to evacuate El Tejar or fight. You told him to go to hell, ordered me to remain in observation, and returned to camp to order out the command. I remained in observation for a few moments. The Mexicans then left the road, going into the trees and underbrush. By this time you had ordered the battallon into defensive positions and I rejoined my company. Aside from possibly a dozen shots fired by the Mexicans, nothing more was seen or heard of them. I actually saw between 100 and 125 Mexicans, and I know there were more concealed from view around the bend of the road. As I recollect, our orders were to defend the water works at El Tejar, but to do nothing to bring hostilities. nothing to bring hostilities.

That is what the man at the outpost has to say about that incident. He is one of the persons to whom General Butler made reference in testifying before the committee. That is quite a different story than the one being told about only one soldier coming forward.

A very important and significant fact in connection with the service of General Russell in Mexico was that he had been ordered to take the aggressive in nowise and that so far as possible he should avoid doing so. I have the orders which went through General Funston to that effect, and which also were approved by the War Department.

Did the military authorities in charge criticize General Russell for that? It remained for somebody outside, somebody who was antagonistic to General Russell-General Butler-to bring up a criticism of that character. To the contrary, instead of criticizing him, the military authorities commended him for the able and splendid manner in which he had served at that post. That commendation came from his commanding officer, General Funston, and from the War

We did not hear anything about this for 2 or 3 years, until probably one or two people were disappointed because 18 men were not selected for two promotions. I have never yet heard how 18 men could be selected for a civilian position or a military position when there were only 2 vacancies to be filled or 2 promotions that could be made. It took an incident of that sort to bring up this criticism in regard to General Russell.

There is further evidence on this matter. General Russell did ask this officer for a statement, and the message I have read came in reply to that request. But I have a telegram from another officer who was there at the time, who was not even asked for a statement. He is General Taylor. General Taylor voluntarily sent this telegram to General Russell, dated March 3:

In all fairness, I cannot stand by and see you so unjustly charged regarding the Mexican affair. As I was second in command, I can testify your conduct was perfectly correct and your orders to me will refute the allegations.

Through all the military channels the evidence is that General Russell's conduct and the policy he pursued in that incident have been approved. We have only the criticism of someone who was there whose statements unquestionably indicate, I believe, to every fair-minded person, that he is very much prejudiced against General Russell. I refer to General Butler. It is from him that the criticism came.

General Butler also criticized General Russell in regard to Haiti. General Russell had the commendation of the then Secretary of State, the commendation of the then President of the United States, and of General Lejeune, the Commandant of the Marines, as to his service in Haiti. It was rather significant, in discussing the matter before the committee, that General Butler stated that General Lejeune was one of the two outstanding soldiers in all America. He only mentioned one other as being in a class with General Lejeune. The committee made inquiry of General Lejeune as to what he thought of General Russell, inviting him to come before the committee, but on account of illness he was unable to do so. We also asked General Lejeune with relation to the promotion board. Let me read this letter from one of the greatest soldiers of America, an officer who for a long time was Commandant of the Marine Corps, and I think is quite generally appreciated by the service and the military authorities, both in the Marines, in the Navy, and in the Army. He is at present president of the Viriginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va. This letter is addressed to me as chairman of the committee:

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE, Lexington, Va., February 14, 1935.

Senator Park Trammell, Chairman Senate Naval Committee,

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: Confirming my telegram, sent last night, in answer to yours, dated the 13th instant, I desire to express my great appreciation of the committee's confidence in my judgment, as indicated by your message asking me if I was in a position to appear before the committee with reference to certain important questions pertaining to the Marine Corps.

It was with extreme regret that I had to answer your message to the effect that I was call of the confidence in the confidence to the confidence in the confidence to the confidence in the co

It was with extreme regret that I had to answer your message to the effect that I was still suffering from the results of the serious injury of which I was a victim some time ago. I also said that I was convalescing steadily but I did not think it advisable, on account of the likelihood of bad weather at this season, to run the risk of a set-back now, but I would write you my answers to the questions propounded in your telegram. I might say here that I can write much better than I can talk, as a hesitancy or difficulty in enunciation is one of the after effects of my badly fractured skull difficulty in entirectured skull.

After these preliminary remarks, I will now endeavor to answer the questions set forth in your telegram candidly, fearlessly, and briefly

I will first take up the question referring to the record of Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, the present Commandant of the Marine Corps, viz: I was Commandant of the Marine Corps from July 1, 1920, until March 4, 1929. During all of this period General Russell was on duty in Haiti and had been there about a year before I became Commandant and remained there about 1 year after I ceased to be Commandant, a total of about 11 years. I consider that he did magnificent work there. While he was there he put down a serious insurrection in a stern but merciful manhe put down a serious insurrection in a stern but merciful manner; he restored the finances of the country to a sound basis from a state of confusion, left by repeated revolutions extending over a number of years; he, militantly, required the Haitian officials to administer their offices in an honest manner; American officials, under his direction, furnished an example of probity, efficiency, and good judgment that I am confident will inure to the benefit of the Haitian people for a long time to come; he took and executed measures that worked a revolution in the health of the people, and that fostered the education, the welfare, and the prosperity of the people; and he was a great builder, leaving behind a magnificent network of highways, bridges, docks, and buildings.

Through it all he served in a triple capacity, viz, as senior officer present, high commissioner, and as the diplomatic representative of the United States.

sentative of the United States.

I observed his work closely while Commandant, and I do not hesitate to testify that he was a faithful servant of the Government and people of the United States and did his work well.

I have heard that he has been criticized for sevendent extensions.

I have heard that he has been criticized for serving on the Marine Corps promotion boards, contrary to the precedent established by myself. I invite attention to the fact that the present promotion or selection boards are not at all parallel to the former so-called "eligibility boards", which functioned when I was Commandant and on which I did not serve. The former eligibility boards placed on the list of eligibles all the colonels which the board considered were fitted to be promoted. From this eligible list the Secretary of the Navy and the Commandant (myself) selected the officer to be recommended to the President for promotion to the rank of brigadier general.

At the present time, the Commandant would have no voice in the selection of his subordinates to exercise high command in the line or to be appointed as heads of the staff departments who serve directly under him as members of his official family, were he not to serve as a member of the selection beards, and I do not hesitate to affirm that had not General Russell been willing to hesitate to affirm that had not General Russell been willing to serve as a member of the senior selection board he would have surrendered one of the most important functions of his office as surrendered one of the most important functions of his office as Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Furthermore, he knew that the report of the board would be criticized or attacked by those passed over and by their friends, and he, like a gallant officer and gentleman, refused to stand aside and let his juniors bear the blame alone.

I now take up the question of the best procedure for promotions. I am glad to have again the opportunity to give my views on this subject to the committee.

I convened a board while I was Commandant to draw up a on this subject to the committee.

I convened a board, while I was Commandant, to draw up a recommendation for a selection law, which in its final form was laid before Congress. I appeared before the House Committee on Naval Affairs to make a statement on the subject of the selection bill. I advocated it at length, with the outcome that the committee reported it favorably to the House and, after full discussion, it passed the House without amendment.

Later I appeared before the Senate Naval Committee, in advocacy of the House bill, and after extended hearings the bill was cacy of the House bill, and after extended hearings the bill was reported favorably to the Senate. Owing to the legislative jam, which then characterized the short sessions of Congress, it failed to be called up before March 4. It, therefore, did not become a law while I was Commandant as my term of office expired on that day.

I have always regretted that I did not number the enactment of the selection law for the Marine Corps as one of the major accomplishments of my terms of office, and I rejoice that the present law was enacted, as I believe, if perfected in accordance with General Russell's recommendations, it will work a beneficent revolution in the officer personnel of the Marine Corps, making it in fact, as well as in song and story, the most efficient military organization in the world.

it in fact, as well as in song and story, the most efficient military organization in the world.

I will conclude my letter with a statement relative as to how efficiently the promotion board's work has been done since the enactment of the Marine Corps selection law.

I will preface my remarks by the observation that the boards are composed of officers who are considered duty loving, fearless, and conscientious. It is the most heart-rending duty that I can imagine, because necessarily the members of the board have to pass over a great many of their brother officers.

It goes without saying that boards consist of fallible human beings as infallibility belongs only to divinity. Necessarily, therefore, boards sometimes make mistakes, but surprisingly few mistakes were made in the case of the Marine Corps boards. The system of promotion by seniority, I believe, has been far worse. The meritorious, the energetic, and the able have been smothered, very often, by the worthless, the lazy, and the stupid. To return to the old system of promotion by seniority, in my opinion, would be destructive to the morale of the officer personnel.

In conclusion, I desire to point out that in the future selection will be a comparatively easy matter, as only about one-seventh will be a comparatively easy matter, as only about one-seventh of each grade, instead of practically all of the efficers of the Marine Corps, will be subject to selection in any 1 year. The last 9 months have been a hard year on officers and their friends.

I thank the committee for having given me this opportunity to lay before it my views on this subject, in writing, and I hope that my statement is sufficiently clear and to the point.

my statement is sufficiently clear and to the point.

With high regards and best wishes, I am,

Your sincere friend,

JOHN A. LEJEUNE,
Major General, United States Marine Corps (Retired).

That is the letter which was received by the committee from General Lejeune, who for 8 or 9 years was the Commandant of the Marine Corps. He states his views with regard to the board and the action of the board.

There has been general criticism of the board on the question of the promotions made. On this point General Butler was before the committee, and either in response to a question or as a voluntary statement he said that the promotion board under criticism, and which he criticized, had made a lot of "bully" selections. I think he used the term "bully" selections, and he commented in particular in regard to one or two officers who had been promoted by the board as being fine selections.

Of course I have no controversy with General Butler, but he seems to be in the center of the stage. I should rather think, in regard to his attitude, that if an officer he considered all right was promoted, that was "bully work" on the part of the promotion board; but if he happened to think of someone else who did not get a promotion, that was all wrong. There is a prejudice in all cases where the men promoted did not happen to be those whom he selected. I do not think he objected specifically to more than about one promotion

In regard to the selection of the board, there were eligible for membership upon the promotion board 10 or 11 officers. The Commandant stated that one of them was not considered for membership upon the board because he himself was eligible for promotion at the time, and it was not thought proper for an officer to serve on a board when he himself probably would be brought up for promotion. So that reduced the number of eligibles to 10.

In the case of the first board that was appointed, 6 of the 10 were selected. The board is composed of six officers. Then, 6 months later, when another board was to be selected, General Russell and the Secretary of the Navy-of course the appointments were made by the Secretary of the Navyadopted a policy of not selecting more than 2 of the 6 who had served on the previous board. They only had 10 eligibles, or 11, if we can put the number at 11. So they selected six to serve on the first board last July, I believe. Then when it was necessary to name another board, they selected four officers who had not served on the previous board. That gave 8 members of the board out of an eligibility of 10 or 11. That did not look as though they were trying to pack the boards, or were trying to do anybody an injustice. I mention this matter because that criticism was made.

In the case of the junior boards, the same thing was true. There was some question about officers who were graduates of the Naval Academy dominating and controlling the board. On the first board only 2 out of the 6 were Naval Academy men. The others had either come from the ranks or from private life. In the case of the board which acted in January, there was only 1 Naval Academy man on the board out of 6, and all the others were from the ranks. So the facts do not sustain any contention in that respect, unless it be contended that 1 Naval Academy man had more influence than 5 men from civil life, or who came up from the ranks. I do not think anybody believes that to be so.

On the question of promotions, someone made the criticism that more officers were promoted from the Naval Academy than from other sources. The records do not disclose that criticism to be well founded. The records disclose that there was a larger percentage of promotions among marine officers who came from the ranks.

Let us consider the last selection board. General Mac-Dougall, who came from the ranks, was a member of the board.

There is talk about the question of fighting service. General MacDougall was overseas, and commanded a regiment overseas, so there was someone there who was active and went overseas.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I will ask if it is not true that General MacDougall arrived in France in September before the armistice in November and stayed at Brest until after the war was over?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know what station he had | there. Of course, I know that quite a good many of the officers-and I have very high regard and appreciation for them—went to France and stayed there for several months but were not in actual engagements, and quite a good many of them were away behind the lines. General MacDougall might not have been in actual conflict, but he was over there, and the criticism is met by the fact that he was per-

Of course, I know that my good friend the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Black] will have something to say about this matter. I do not know that it is necessary to go into all the details. I have mentioned some of the different phases.

There was some criticism, and I dare say it will be referred to, about General Russell as Commandant at the marine barracks in Quantico having received from the Shipping Board certain supplies which were stated to have been brought there to be used in the bachelor barracks, I believe, and later on some of the supplies were shipped to the headquarters here in Washington. A man named Davis, as I recall, wrote a letter to the Senator from Alabama in which he charged that those supplies were bought in violation of

We found that the supplies were bought by the Shipping Board long before any law was enacted in regard to any of the appropriation being expended for such supplies, so there was certainly no violation of law in that case. There was no moral turpitude involved whatever in regard to it. So, from my viewpoint, there was nothing whatever in that criticism and in that charge.

We in the Senate know that Congress has tightened up in regard to the appropriations which formerly were used for automobiles, which formerly were used for the purchase, probably, of certain equipment in officers' headquarters. But the change of policy, which I have favored and supported, was not in effect at the time in question; the transaction was absolutely a legitimate transaction, and there was not involved in it in any wise any moral turpitude, as I see the situation.

Mr. President, that matter involved the question of some furniture, some linen, some glassware, and so on, which had been selected and used in connection with the barracks at Quantico. The Shipping Board had an oversupply, and the Marine Corps asked if they would not deliver, on requisition, some of their supplies to Quantico. Later some of them were moved to the headquarters here in Washington. The question was raised as to it being a violation of law for any officer of the Government to get any personal benefit from an appropriation. The law which so provided was one passed 2 or 3 months subsequent to the time when these supplies were transferred to the Marine Corps; so, of course, General Russell was not violating any law in his action, and the Shipping Board was not violating any law at the time it transferred the supplies. This is along the line of some of the other criticisms.

Mr. President, I shall not go into all the details in regard to the different features of this matter, though I have a good deal of information here which I have not presented. But the committee was convinced that the criticisms were based on suspicion, and that the facts did not sustain the suspicions. Some of the charges were based on hearsay evidence, and the facts as developed by the committee did not sustain the hearsay evidence. The committee felt that the whole situation arose very largely on account of some officers being disappointed in not being promoted.

I very much sympathize with General Russell. I sympathize with anyone who has 2 places to fill and 18 eligibles ready to fill them. I sympathize with the man who has to make the selection, with at least a considerable number whom he cannot promote. If the Senate can solve that problem, I am sure it will do a piece of work which will be most gratefully received by Senators and by Representatives, and by everybody in public life, including Army and Navy officers. * I do not say that some who have criticized are not good people. As General Lejeune says, the matter of selection is a very trying work, and it is a grievous work for the officers to serve on these boards, because they cannot recognize and give all of the officers promotions. Some of their friends are bound to be disappointed, and some are bound to be denied promotions.

Of course, there is a great deal of difference between the present system and the selective system. Last year we had what were called selection boards, and the promotions were based on seniority. Under that system the Commandant made up a list of the senior officers, if there were two promotions to be made. He then recommended to the Secretary of the Navy those who he thought should be the 2 selected out of 10 seniors, we will say. Then the Secretary correspondingly would recommend to the President the 2 who should be selected from the 10 seniors. Therefore, the Commandant himself, if his recommendations were recognized by the Secretary of the Navy, made the promotions, and had no board. Likewise, the Secretary of the Navy, if the President recognized his recommendations, the Secretary basing his report upon the report of the Commandant, participated in the selection of those to be promoted, within the limitation of the seniors.

The present system was based on the idea of allowing more members on the boards, and of course more different elements in the Marine Corps and the Navy-for this is the same system that is used in the Navy-an opportunity to serve on the boards. It seems to me that is an improvement over the old system. Of course, I suppose some seniors may not have received promotions under the present plan.

I will conclude by saying that we investigated the facts to the best of our ability; we found nothing to convince the committee that General Russell had not been a faithful, efficient officer, and we felt that it was proper for the committee to recommend his confirmation by the Senate.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. King in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield. Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator has been on the Committee on Naval Affairs for a long time and is no doubt familiar with its internal policy and politics. Is is true that General Russell was identified with the same little crowd in the Marine Corps which former General McCawley dominated and controlled for so many years?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know whether he was or not. There might have been some suspicion about McCawley and there might have been some suspicion about General Lejeune; I have even heard that suggested. As a rule, when we have gone into the facts in these cases it has been found there has been nothing to support any such contention.

Mr. CONNALLY. I have never been a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, but there has been a pretty persistent feeling in the Congress for a great many years that the Marine Corps is a one-man corps, and that General McCawley for a great many years dominated it and controlled its policies and dictated who should be promoted and who should be demoted, and all that sort of thing. I was just wondering whether the Senator had any information indicating that to be the case now, and that General Russell succeeded General McCawley in that regard.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know whether he is his successor under that kind of an allegation or not. I think that almost any officer in the Army, or any officer in public position, who has the selection of either civilians or military officers, is going to be criticized, unless all are successful in their desires, just as the Senate is criticized. There cannot be a case where a committee passes upon the selection of officers or passes upon a question of legislation, involving heated controversy and a great division of opinion, but that someone will be disappointed and say the committee whitewashed or the committee was influenced by an ulterior motive. I usually make a little allowance when I find an officer criticized, instead of jumping at a conclusion, and believing that everybody is a scoundrel and a rascal except myself.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I am sorry if I provoked the Senator.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator did not provoke me at all. I am simply answering his question. There is no provoking about it.

Mr. CONNALLY. I realize, of course, that those who are objecting will always be dissatisfied, no matter what process of selecting is adopted. Although the Marine Corps is a small corps, the Senator does not mean to approve the policy of a one-man corps or that one man should dictate all the appointments?

Mr. TRAMMELL. No, Mr. President. There is no evidence that that has been done. The Senator from Texas cannot have heard all my statement. I mean to say to the Senator. so far as my position is concerned, that, in my opinion, there is no evidence to support any conclusion of that character.

Mr. CONNALLY. Frequently the best evidence is not eyeball evidence. Circumstantial evidence is also valuable.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Oh, yes.

Mr. CONNALLY. I will say that no officer from my State is involved, but over a long period of time I have been rather impressed with the idea that the Marine Corps was just a little organization that was in the palm of one man's hand-

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not share that view. Mr. CONNALLY. That he dictates his successors—

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not share that view.

Mr. CONNALLY. That he picks out those he wishes to promote. The principal places he wishes to fill are those of Commandant and adjutant-inspector. If he can get those two jobs in the Marine Corps, the Marine Corps belongs to

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not share that view; but if the Senator from Texas has that view, how does he propose to remedy the situation? I do not agree with the Senator.

Mr. CONNALLY. Of course, we who are not members of the committee have to rely on the Senator's committee. I am not complaining. I may be wholly in error. However, I was going to what I thought was the source of the information. I have no proof, but I have heard the same charges with reference to General Russell. I do not know General Russell. I was down in Haiti a few years ago, and I know that General Russell was ruling Haiti, and the Marine Corps, and everybody else in those territorial waters, like a Roman proconsul. He lived up on a big hill which I dared not approach, and he lived in great state, and every one stood in awe of him, from the humblest citizen of Haiti-and some of them are pretty humble—to the highest functionaries of the Government there.

I have no prejudice against General Russell; but if he has brought back to the Marine Corps this vice regal or almost regal atmosphere which he had around him in Haiti, I would vote against him just on general principles.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Of course, the Senator has a right to his views.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not prejudging the case. I shall wait and hear the evidence.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator from Texas has a right to his views. Of course, I myself would rather base my opinion with regard to General Russell's service in Haiti upon the statements of the officers of the marines under whom he served, the Secretary of War, and the then President of the United States. I would not attribute to them the bestowal of approvals which were not deserved, nor would I believe that the approval that General Russell received from General Lejeune was not deserved. I would say of that whole catalog of people in public office-those in the State Department, the President of the United States, the Commandant of the marines—that they would not have given General Russell a splendid commendation and approval for his work in Haiti unless they felt he deserved it. So I base my opinion on that. I never met General Russell until this controversy came up. I had no predilections for or against General Russell.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

when I was in Haiti the rumor was current there that General Russell, while in command, had forbidden and prevented the landing in Haiti of a United States Senator, the pretext being that the Senator had criticized on the floor of the Senate the policies of this Government in Haiti and in South and Central America in sending marines into those territories. I do not know whether or not General Russell prohibited the Senator from landing; but it was a current rumor in Haiti that this belted and booted military man had issued an edict, or had caused an edict to be issued, which had prevented a United States Senator from going into Haiti because he, General Russell, did not want that Senator there. If that be true, I should like to have the proof of it. If that be true, I shall vote against the confirmation of General Russell.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Let whoever made that statement prove it. General Russell states to the contrary, that he advised that it would be proper to admit the Senator, and he would have liked to see him admitted. The matter was then taken up with the State Department, and the State Department said it should be decided by the President. General Russell's statement is that he neither inspired nor encouraged the exclusion of the Senator, but, to the contrary, in its inception he advised against such action.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not think the committee ought to stop with hearing General Russell's statement. Has the committee no proof except from General Russell?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I might go out and make a statement about the Senator from Texas-and were I to make a statement about him it would not be anything against him, but it would be a complimentary statement-

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. Mr. TRAMMELL. But there are people who might make a statement about the Senator and it could not be said that they had proved their case simply because the Senator did not go out and get a great amount of outside evidence to show that they had said something which was not true. If I should hear a false statement made about me, I would not go around and get anyone to prove the contrary. I would say that the statement was a falsehood, and if there was not brought forth any other evidence except hearsay and suspicion of course I would let it go at that.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not surprised that the committee has no more evidence if that is the chairman's policy. The committee has called a man before it and heard his statement about the matter, and then it does not interrogate anyone else. Did the committee have before it the Senator who was supposed to have been excluded from Haiti?

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator who was excluded appeared before the committee once before and told about the incident. I do not think the Senator stated that General Russell might have had the order issued. General Russell was down there under the direction of the State Department. and General Russell stated that he did not inspire the order; that, as a matter of fact, he advised against it.

Mr. CONNALLY. It seems to me the question was serious enough, however, for the committee to have run the matter down and found out the facts about it. I have not any personal pique about it. I do not know General Russell.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I have no personal pique about it. Mr. CONNALLY. I never saw General Russell in my life. I am not particularly concerned with whether I ever see him or not; but in the case in question, concerning the Senator in question, I think if what has been said be true, the committee ought to bring proof of it to the Senate. If it be true, it would, to my mind, disqualify him for promotion, because whenever a military man gets the idea that the military is above the civil authority, and whenever he is temporarily in a place of great responsibility, such as that occupied by General Russell, he abuses what we have always conceived to be the functions of the civil and the military authorities, and I do not think he should occupy a high station in this Government.

Mr. TRAMMELL. We had no evidence whatever before the committee that General Russell caused the order to be Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not know what the facts are, but made. Does the Senator know that General Russell caused the order to be issued?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not know, but I have a darned good suspicion that he did. If I were on the committee, I would find out whether or not he did.

Mr. TRAMMELL. We found out all we could about the

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, while this subject is under consideration, I note that the Senator involved [Mr. KING] is presiding. This subject is one which agitated the country, attracted a great deal of attention in the newspapers, and there were flaming headlines all over the United States carrying the report that a Member of the Senate had been excluded from Haiti by an officer of the United States Marines. I myself should like to know the fact before I vote on this nomination. If the committee has not gone into the incident, I desire now to express to the Senator who is presiding the hope that before the debate shall have ended he will give us the benefit of a first-hand statement of fact upon the subject so far as he knows it.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is very satisfactory to me, Mr. President. I have a high regard for the Senator who is

Mr. CONNALLY. In connection with the suggestion of the Senator from Alabama, does not the Senator think it would be better to have the statement made in the com-

Mr. TRAMMELL. I certainly think so. Mr. CONNALLY. Would it not be better to let the Senator to whom the Senator from Alabama alludes appear before the committee, rather than make a statement in the open Senate?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think so; and I think all phases of the occurrence should be investigated, including any official orders which may have been issued.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, in view of the paucity of the evidence which the committee had, it seems to me, the whole matter ought to go back to the Committee on Naval Affairs for further investigation and report, when we will have some evidence upon which to act. If General Russell is innocent, I, for one, do not wish to have him punished; but if he is guilty of a small tithe of the things that have been charged against him, he ought not to be confirmed, and the Senate can act only on information furnished by the committee.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator from Texas speaks of the charges which are made against General Russell, and says, if they are so, then, thus, and so. Let us hear those charges. Hearings have been had. I am slightly familiar with the incident which is referred to concerning the exclusion, as it is stated, of a United States Senator from Haiti. That particular matter, as stated to me-and I am a new member of the committee, and therefore my word is of little value concerning it—that particular matter, as I understood, was one which the committee was asked not to attempt to go into; that such inquiry was not desired by any of those who were interested in it; and, an adequate explanation being made by General Russell, with the statement that had been originally made concerning it, it seemed to one individual upon the committee that there was nothing further that need be done respecting the matter.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I heartily agree with the Senator's statement. The position taken before the committee was that there was no request that the matter be entered into. It had been inquired into once previously, some year and a half ago.

Mr. JOHNSON. I am speaking of the recent hearings, which I attended constantly. If there were prior hearings upon this subject, I did not attend them, and I was not a member of the committee at that time. I desire to make that perfectly clear.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator is absolutely correct in regard to the hearings relative to the pending nominations. Some of the complaining parties said that they did not care to have that gone into, and there was nothing particularly done about it; there was no consideration of it.

Mr. JOHNSON. There was a statement made, however, concerning it on the part of General Russell, or, at least, inquiry was made, and that ended the matter.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is the situation. I do not think this matter should be referred back to the committee.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I am not making a motion, and I will say, if the Senator from Florida will bear with me for a moment, in reply to the Senator from California, that the Senator from Texas made no charges. I am just reporting what I understood were the charges. Now it occurs to me-

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, there is the difficulty. I do not know anything about the Marine Corps, I confess; I know nothing of its personnel: but I listened to the hearings. Now, the Senator refers to what he has heard. Let us hear what has been heard respecting General Russell, and, if he is unfit, let us reject his nomination; but, if the charges rest upon what somebody has heard and what has not been developed, for one I decline absolutely to reject the nomination.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. JOHNSON. I have not the floor nor the right to

Mr. BANKHEAD. I merely desire to ask a question right on that point. I should like to know if it is the Senator's idea that, when we are passing on the confirmation or rejection of an appointee, we ought to set a precedent that we cannot consider anything except testimony that has been presented to the committee?

Mr. JOHNSON. No.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That certainly has not been the rule since I have been here.

Mr. JOHNSON. Let anything be presented by those who wish to present it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Then why not let us go into this matter?

Mr. JOHNSON. Let us go into the subject with the utmost fullness. Let us make any charges that can be made. If they can be answered, then that is sufficient. If they cannot be answered, the evidence may be obtained that will answer If that cannot be done, then let us act as each Senator may see fit under his oath as a Senator. Thus far the matter has depended upon charges which have been made and published broadcast throughout all the land. I have grown old enough—I think my friend from Texas in his youth will not be wholly unsympathetic with me-that when a man has served nearly 50 years in a department I do not want his reputation torn to shreds by newspaper articles.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Allow me to say to the Senator from California that the Senator is the one who suggested that the reason why the committee did not go into these matters was that somebody came before the committee and said, "We do not want to go into those matters." That is what I brought to the attention of the Senate. It is the business of the committee to go into everything that is pertinent to the particular situation. The Senate has to rely upon the committee to do these things. I do not think it lies in the mouth of the Senator from California to lecture the Senate now because we want a little light on the subject when he admits that the committee, of which he is a member, did not see fit to go into it at all.

Mr. JOHNSON. Very well. Suppose the gentleman who is preferring charges said he does not want anything said about this particular matter that has once been investigated. Suppose the gentleman who is affected says that, as a personal matter, he does not wish this question to be involved in this particular controversy. Does the Senator think it is still the duty of the committee to proceed with an investigation that nobody desires and nobody requests?

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator is taking in a very large scope of territory when he says nobody wants it. There is evidently a considerable part of the Senate that does want it. I do not regard a confirmation as a private matter between | the man who is going to be confirmed and some other particular individual. A matter of confirmation is for the entire Senate to consider.

Mr. JOHNSON. No one regards it in any other fashion, so far as that is concerned. We ought not to get into that sort of attitude here. There is a question of confirmation before us. Let us proceed. If the Senator from Texas has a particular and distinct desire to present something, let us have it presented. We can try it out here on the floor and determine, perhaps, just exactly what the facts are. If we cannot, then we can get the facts, because they are at hand. But after a nomination has been deferred for quite a long period, after those who are interested in the nomination or in the prevention of the confirmation of the nomination say they do not desire to proceed to hear the statements as to a particular incident, to say now that we should delay confirmation in order that the committee may consider it further at the request of the Senator from Texas seems to me to be not wholly just.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I will say that the committee was in session off and on for a month or two considering this nomination, and the Senator did not make any complaint. No one else asked us to go into this particular matter. It came out when General Russell was nominated for the position of Commandant about a year ago. There was criticism at that time, and the committee then went into the question. At this time the matter did not come before the committee for inquiry or investigation, and the Senator who was interested stated he did not care to have the question brought up.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I desire my position made absolutely clear, since it is evident that reference is made to my statement. What I stated was that I was not going to bring that matter before the committee by reason of the fact that I had been requested not to do so. I have stated, and I state now, that I would not have voted for General Russell's confirmation because he kept a Senator out of Haiti. I will state again that if I knew of no other reason on earth to vote against his confirmation, that would be sufficient for me.

Mr. TRAMMELL. In my opinion that would depend on whether General Russell was acting under instructions from the State Department. He was there under the State Department representing the Government. It is my understanding, and I believe the understanding of the committee who had the matter up for consideration a year ago, that he was acting under direction of the State Department.

Mr. CONNALLY. Where did the State Department get the qualities of sovereignty?

Mr. TRAMMELL. They were acting in the capacity of appointing someone there to represent our Government. The matter no doubt went through the President, but the State Department handled the details, largely as it does in the appointment of an ambassador or representative of the Government to other countries. Of course, there is on the part of the committee no attitude of not wanting to investigate, but after we have had a dragnet out for sometime and opened a veritable Pandora's box of criticism based almost wholly on hearsay, when the matter was before the committee for 4 or 5 weeks, then it seems to me hardly fair that it should go before the committee again. We might as well discuss it here. The committee cleared General Russell. It is like a man having a case tried in court and the jury clears him, and before the judge can announce the verdict of the jury one of the losing parties in the case runs in and says, "I have found some new evidence and I want this case tried again." Perhaps that is not exactly analogous, but it is much like the present situation.

The committee was open for hearings and did have hearings off and on for at least 4 or 5 weeks. Unless something new has been developed and some evidence other than mere hearsay can be presented, the committee ought not to be asked to further consider the matter. We have had too much hearsay and too much suspicion. So far as matters coming before the committee are concerned, we have found no facts to support the suspicion and hearsay. We could pick out any Member of the Senate and find many people who would say, "I heard so-and-so", and "They say so-and-so", and "It is said this, that, and the other." I do not think many of us would be in sympathy with destroying a Senator because of that kind of criticism. We would want something more substantial than criticism of that character.

I have some good friends who were not promoted by the promotion board, men and officers for whom I have the highest regard, and I should have been delighted if they had been promoted; but still, just because they did not happen to be promoted, I do not think the board was all wrong, or that its members were actuated by improper motives. There are no facts or evidence to show that they were actuated by any improper motives, or that they did not go ahead and do their work honestly and conscientiously, in spite of the fact that I may have had one or two friends who did not happen to receive promotions.

We made the report, after investigating the facts, and thought it was proper for the committee to approve the nominations.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I wish to thank the Senator from Florida for his indulgence in yielding to me so often. I now desire a little time of my own.

The Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] suggested that the Senator from Texas had made some charges. The Senator from Texas made no charges. He repeated what he had heard from time to time, and he desired some light on the subject, and he thought the place to go for light was the Committee on Naval Affairs which had jurisdiction of this particular matter; but when the Senator from Texas inquired what the Committee on Naval Affairs knew about these rumors, the reply was that the committee knew

Mr. JOHNSON. No; Mr. President.

Mr. CONNALLY. Just a moment.
Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator is in error. I cannot permit that statement to stand unchallenged.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator desire that I yield to Mr. JOHNSON. Yes. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do. Mr. JOHNSON. I thank the Senator, and I say to him that he is utterly mistaken in what he has just said.

Mr. CONNALLY. Then I will try to correct my state-

Mr. JOHNSON. Let me tell the Senator the sequence of Mr. CONNALLY. One reason why I secured the floor was so that I could be indulgent to the Senator from California, and give him all the time he wanted.

Mr. JOHNSON. I admit that the Senator could not be better indulgent; but let me state to the Senator from Texas the sequence of events. I have just recently become a member of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Mr. CONNALLY. I judge so.

Mr. JOHNSON. Let the Senator wait a moment. I was not on the committee when this incident occurred. Does the Senator realize that last year there came before the Senate the nomination of General Russell for Commandant of the Marine Corps; that prior to the time when his name was first sent in this incident happened of which I heard, just as the Senator heard? That is the time referred to by the Senator from Florida, I assume, when investigation of this incident was made; but the name came before us. The incident was known. General Russell was confirmed as Commandant of the Marine Corps a year ago; and he now comes up under another nomination that is designed, as I understand, to make permanent what was a temporary appointment last year-not the appointment as Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Mr. CONNALLY. I understand.

Mr. JOHNSON. So it is not a question of the matter not | having been considered, as the Senator from Florida has said, but it is a question now of threshing the matter over again, when the committee was requested by the parties in interest not to thresh it over.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator for his very illuminating interruption. All I have found out is what everybody knew, and that is that General Russell was confirmed last year as Commandant, and now he is up for confirmation as a major general. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON. Yes. Mr. CONNALLY. Very well. How that touches the question the Senator from Texas raised I do not see. The question the Senator from Texas raised was about this incident that occurred in Haiti, in which it is charged that General Russell was the instrumentality through which a United States Senator was prevented from landing on Haitian soil. When I asked the committee what they had done about it, they said it was agreed between General Russell, I suppose, on one side, and some individual on the other sidethat they did not want to disturb that matter. I thought the committee was there to investigate such matters on its own initiative.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator will not let me answer his first question before interrupting me again.

Mr. JOHNSON. Then I will not interrupt the Senator.

Mr. CONNALLY. No; I yield to the Senator. Mr. JOHNSON. The Senator from Texas is peculiarly one who lends himself to interruption at times, kindly, pleasantly, with great courtesy, and the like; but I will refrain

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. The Senator shows great restraint—much more than he usually shows in thus holding himself in leash. I am always glad to yield to the Senator because he contributes to the interest of the

When I suggested that the committee ought to have obtained this information, the chairman of the committee said, "Why, the Senator from Texas did not come around the committee." No; I am not a member of the committee. I cannot go smelling around every committee. I am relying on the committee's doing its duty and bringing the facts to the Senate, where I am supposed to find them. This is the place where I ask for the information; and the answer of the committee is, "We did not go into that."

The chairman of the committee said, "Why, somebody said that the State Department prevented a Senator from landing in Haiti." Was any representative of the State Department before the committee? Nobody answers. If the State Department prevented a Senator from landing in Haiti, where the United States had interests, where the United States was maintaining a great military establishment, where the United States had a high commissioner, and representatives from whom the people ought to have information, why are not the orders of the State Department brought here?

Were those orders in writing? If so, they are now in the archives of the State Department. Is the Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] prepared to say that those orders were submitted to the committee? Is the Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell] prepared to say that those orders were submitted to the committee? If those orders were not written, how were they transmitted? They had to go by cable; they had to go by telegraph or wireless. There are records in the Department, I dare say, that would reveal the truth of that statement.

Mr. President, I am not prepared to say that some little bureaucrat sitting here in Washington in the State Department, simply because he wears white spats and a top hat, has authority to issue an edict that a United States Senator proceeding abroad on business affecting this Government-I mean, affecting it in the sense that he is a representative of the Government of the United States and has a right to go wherever this Government has interests-shall not enter such a place. If the State Department did such a thing, the fact ought to be revealed, and we ought to know where the jurisdiction of these departments extends. If General Russell, acting as a military autocrat, either issued the order himself or inspired the President of Haiti to ask for it, or indirectly inspired the State Department to ask for it-if that sort of an edict or ukase was issued by some little, bespangled, gold-belted military autocrat against the representative of his Government-I am not prepared to vote to confirm him, either as major general or as second lieutenant.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota. Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Let me call to the Senator's attention the fact that at the time the Senator was kept out of Haiti we were occupying Haiti with military forces. It was in our possession. We ought to know, and I think for the benefit of General Russell himself we ought to know, whether he was responsible for that order or whether it came from the State Department. If I were General Russell, I would not ask to be confirmed for any office if I had occupied the position he did and if I had issued the orders he is said to have issued.

I happened to be in Haiti a few days after orders had been issued that the Senator from Utah should not be permitted to land there. I drove from Port au Prince to Santo Domingo. When I came to the border, there was a gate of new planks with a padlock on it. I said to the Marine officer who was in the car with me, "What does this mean?" He said, "That is a barricade we built to keep Senator King out of Haiti." I said, "We have come to a damned pretty pass when American officers, drawing pay from the United States Treasury, have nothing else to do in occupied territory than to build barricades to keep an official of the United States Senate out of that occupied territory!"

I think the Senator from Texas has raised a very important point. If General Russell was responsible for that order, that is one thing. If the State Department was responsible for it, by what right would they order a Senator to keep out of territory occupied by American troops? I think the Senator has raised a most important point in this controversy.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Van Nuys in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield. Mr. BANKHEAD. I should like to inquire of the Senator, if we assume that the State Department issued the order, whether it would not be helpful to the Senate to ascertain what representations, if any, were made by General Russell to the State Department which led to the issuance of the order, and also to have the order to ascertain how General Russell construed it, and also find out what officer in the State Department assumed the authority to issue such an order.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. Those are very pertinent inquiries. They are matters which ought to be developed, and, if the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs will pardon me for seeming impertinent in asking these questions, I will say to the Senator from Alabama, as I suggested a moment ago, that if these orders are in existence, they can be brought before the committee, or they can be brought to the Senate.

I have heard several versions of this matter, one like that coming from the Committee on Naval Affairs, that General Russell merely carried out the orders of the State Department. If General Russell, on the other hand-and this is another version of the matter-did not want to act on his own initiative and interceded with the Haitian Government and induced the Haitian Government to suggest to the State Department that it was undesirable for the Senator in question to visit Haiti, that is something we ought to find out.

As suggested by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Ship-STEAD], we were then in Haiti, we were policing Haiti; in fact, we had control of the Government of Haiti, not in name, but in fact. The marines, through General Russell, were controlling the whole of Haiti, and the policies of that Government were dominated through the United States agencies. If either one of those sets of facts be true, I think it calls for the condemnation, and the most serious condemnation of General Russell.

The Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] seems to make some quibble about General Russell's having already been confirmed as Commandant a year ago. Suppose he was; that would not preclude the Senate from questioning his fitness for this advancement in rank, either now, or at any time since he was confirmed as Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Mr. President, I do not stand in such great awe of these militarists. The Senator from California said he would not want lightly to condemn any man who had served his country for 50 years. Neither would I. It does not make any difference to me whether a man served a minute or a hundred years; the question is as to the merits of the case. If General Russell has committed no wrong, of course, we should confirm him. But I want some facts on which to form a judgment. I want some proof. I think the Committee on Naval Affairs ought to interrogate the State Department. I do not think they ought to be content with the statement of General Russell. They said General Russell came before them and said this charge was not true, and they just let it go at that. There were other marine officers in Haiti at the time General Russell was there and they ought to be available.

I did not propose to oppose the confirmation of General Russell, and I am not now opposing it. I am merely modestly, and in a duly deferential manner, inquiring of the committee as to what proof they had on the question before us, and that mere inquiry seems to have aroused all this disturbance and commotion. All I want is the facts, and I do not think the committee has developed the facts.

Mr. KING obtained the floor.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield for a moment?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I merely wish to make a little statement in regard to the committee action.

The committee did not have this question before it in considering the pending nomination. As the Senate will recall, a little over a year ago the President appointed General Russell as Commandant of the Marine Corps, and this matter was an issue at that time. It was an issue before the President appointed General Russell as Commandant.

At that time the committee went into the matter rather extensively. I do not remember all the details. At this time, however, the question was not in issue against General Russell, and no one requested that the matter be gone into further. That accounts for nothing particular being done in the consideration of the pending nomination.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I have not the floor.

Mr. BLACK. I understood the Senator to make the statement that this question was gone into pretty fully when General Russell's nomination was sent in previously. I may state to the Senator that I made inquiry of several people at that time, and I could not find that any inquiry was made.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The matter was discussed before the committee quite a bit at that time.

Mr. BLACK. No evidence was taken.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The Senator from Utah [Mr. King], for whom I have the highest esteem, was before the committee at the time. I do not recall whether anyone else appeared or not. Some inquiry was made. The Senator from Utah stated that personally he did not care to pursue the matter. I will ask him whether that is not correct. That was a year and a half ago, when General Russell was appointed Commandant by the President.

Mr. KING. I will state what I said when I take the floor.

Mr. TRAMMELL. As to the recent action of the committee, no inquiry in particular was made about the incident, because the committee thought of it as a past transaction, and that the question had arisen and been passed on previously when General Russell was appointed Commandant by the President, about a year and a half ago.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, before the Senator from Utah proceeds, I suggest the absence of a quorum. I think we ought to have as many present to hear his statement as possible.

Mr. KING. I do not yield for that purpose.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. It is admitted that General Russell issued the order barring the Senator from Utah from Haiti? Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know what he did under the instructions of the Department. General Russell stated that he advised against having the Senator excluded at the time, that that was his attitude when the question first came up, and that after that it was handled through the State Department. We never went into any general inquiry of this matter during the previous hearing, which was over a year

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Was it inquired into at all a year ago?
Mr. TRAMMELL. Oh, yes; quite a little inquiry was made.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Then who issued the order; the State Department?

Mr. TRAMMELL. The statement was that General Russell was following instructions from the State Department, as I recall, but that he had advised the authorities in Haiti against the action which was taken, that he did not recommend or suggest that they exclude the Senator, but that on the contrary he advised against it.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Did he issue the order?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know. Being in command, he might possibly have signed the order. I have not seen the order. I would not say that he had signed the order at all, but being the representative of the American Government there, he may have done so. I do not know who really signed the order, but, as I understood, it was an order of the President of Haiti, and I understood that the State Department had advised General Russell, who was working under the State Department, to follow out their instructions.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Is it the contention, then, that following the instructions of the State Department, he issued orders to Borno to issue orders to keep the Senator out?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know all those details. I know that the attitude of General Russell, as repeatedly stated, was that he did not have anything to do with it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to resume the floor.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment more, and then I will not bother him further?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I think this point ought to be cleared up, because I believe it is important to know who issued that order, where the order originated, and who carried it out. So far as we know, if such procedure is allowed to continue, there may be orders issued to keep Senators out of the Senate. Behind that order was the military force of the United States to keep the Senator out, and for that reason I think we ought to know who issued the order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret that this discussion has taken place, and that the incident to which reference has been made should play such an important role in the consideration of the matter now before the Senate; but, in view of what has been stated during the discussion, I do not regard it as improper that I submit a brief statement relevant to such incident. I am sure that Senators understand that I have raised no issue in regard to the confirmation of General Russell; nor have I here or elsewhere sought to influence the action of the Senate committee or the Senate in passing upon the question of his confirmation.

Senators will recall that the United States a number of years ago sent military forces to Santo Domingo, Haiti, and Nicaragua. After I came to the Senate I protested against what I conceived to be a violation of the sovereign rights of those nations and urged that our military forces be withdrawn. I criticized my own Government and my own party for having sent military forces to Haiti and taken over the control and government of Haiti and her people. I offered resolutions insisting that we should withdraw our military forces from Haiti and Santo Domingo.

I denounced the course which had been pursued by the United States in destroying the sovereignty of Haiti, in abolishing its constitution, and in setting up a "puppet government." Our Government sent Admiral Caperton with a number of warships to Haitian waters to take possession of Haiti and assume political control over the island and its peoples. The military forces of the United States landed upon Haitian soil, overthrew the Haitian Government, and assumed complete control over the territory of Haiti and over its inhabitants. The legislative branches of the Haitian Government were driven from their chambers and prevented by the military forces of the United States from meeting or discharging the duties devolving upon them under the Haitian constitution.

Our military occupation was complete, and Haiti and her people were subjected to a foreign military control. A puppet President was named by the United States, but, as indicated, he had only such authority as was permitted him. After this phantom official had served our purpose, a change was made, and Borno, who was ineligible for the Presidency under the Haitian constitution, was made "President." He possessed no real power; he exercised such functions only as our Government, through its military forces, permitted. General Russell was sent to Haiti, with the high-sounding titles of brigadier general, American High Commissioner, and Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Republic of Haiti. There was no Republic of Haiti; whatever semblance of civil authority existed was only a shadow-only permissive-the real authority being the United States and its marines, under the command of the High Commissioner. I might add by way of parenthesis that our military forces in subjugating Haiti killed more than 2,500 of the Haitian

I believed that the military occupation of Haiti, which had been a friendly nation, and the maintenance by force of control over the people, constituted a great wrong. The course of our Government was resented by the Haitians and they appealed for relief and for the restoration of their own constitution, which had been replaced by the United States, and for the right to govern themselves.

I had offered resolutions in the Senate for an investigation of the situation in Haiti and had insisted that our military forces be withdrawn. In 1927 I made a visit to Santo Domingo, and purposed going from there to Haiti if time permitted. I had received scores of letters from the Haitian people, from those who had been members of patriotic organizations, who were interested in the welfare and happiness of their people and in the restoration of the Republic, which they contended we had destroyed. Having spoken for the people of Haiti and Santo Domingo, those people regarded me as their friend. While in Santo Domingo I received word that I was persona non grata in Haiti.

May I add, Mr. President—and I hope I will be pardoned for this personal allusion—I was welcomed in Santo Domingo by the President and people of that country because of the efforts which I had made to secure the withdrawal of American military forces from their country.

As stated, when in Santo Domingo I was notified that I would not be permitted to cross the borders into Haiti. I recognized that there was a de facto government in Haiti, though I did not believe that it was a de jure government. From the letters which I had received and from communications which came to me from persons who had come from Haiti and who visited me here in Washington, who were patriotic citizens of Haiti, I believed that if I went to Haiti there would be a demonstration, not against the Government of the United States but against the military control of their country and against what they believed to be a coercive and oppressive policy on the part of the United States.

Under the circumstances, I believed that it would be improper for me to enter Haiti, as I possibly might provoke some little trouble when I arrived there. I promptly indicated that I should not cross from Santo Domingo into Haiti.

Later, when I returned to the United States, I received a copy of what purported to be the order excluding me. It was signed by Mr. Borno and General Russell. I do not know to this day where that order originated, because I did not take enough interest in it afterward. I regarded it as a fait accompli, so far as I was concerned, and I made no inquiry to determine whether the order originated with General Russell or with Mr. Borno or with our Government. However, I was later told that representations were made to our Government that I was persona non grata with the Haitian authorities. Of course, I knew that if any representations were made to our Government upon which it acted they would be made by General Russell as the representative there of the United States.

Knowing that Borno was a mere puppet of the United States and that he was not President by vote of the people or by the wish of the people, but had the hatred and the ill will of 95 percent of the Haitian people, I believe that if an order emanated from him—or, rather, that he was a party to it—it would be ineffective without the military authority of the United States there.

I accepted the situation, in that the United States was in control of Haiti, and continued my efforts to secure its liberation from our military control.

I desire to say, in compliment to Mr. Hoover, that he pursued a course quite different from that of his two predecessors, and indicated to me upon several occasions that he would take steps to soften the situation in Haiti, with a view ultimately to having the military control over the island removed. After he was succeeded by the present occupant of the White House, the troops were gradually removed, until, as I understand, all of them have now been removed, and the Haitian people have elected their own President and are exercising the authority of a free people.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Did I understand the Senator to say that he saw an order excluding him or preventing him from coming into Haiti?

Mr. KING. There was sent to me from Haiti what purported to be a duplicate of an order signed by Mr. Borno and General Russell.

Mr. CONNALLY. Did it pretend to give the reasons for the Senator's exclusion?

Mr. KING. To be frank, I do not recall. I did not pay much attention to it. I think I can find it in my office.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. May I ask in that connection when was the first time the Senator ever heard the State Department was responsible for it?

Mr. KING. My recollection does not serve me in that particular. I know it was some little time after the incident. As I said a moment ago, I regarded it as a closed incident, a fait accompli. I was more interested in the Haitian people than in the reason for my exclusion. I was interested in continuing the fight to restore to the Haitian people their own government, to have them liberated from the military control of the United States; because I thought we had committed a great wrong against a defenseless people, as I believed we had committed a grave wrong against Nicaragua and Santo Domingo. Our flag has no right to float over a subject race nor have we any right to invade other friendly nations by military force.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell], chairman of the committee, made reference to the fact that when General Russell was nominated for Commandant I appeared before the committee. Someone asked me—I do not recall whether it was the chairman or some other member of the committee-whether I had anything to say in opposition to General Russell's confirmation. I said if it was desired that I appear before the committee I would do so; and accordingly I went to the committee room and briefly stated the fact that I had been excluded from Haiti, and added that the copy of the order which I had indicated General Russell's participation. I did not attribute it to him exclusively. In fact, I did not attempt to put the blame upon anyone. I merely stated that so far as I was concerned I was not interested in General Russell's confirmation; that I did not care whether he was confirmed or not.

I stated, however, that if I were called upon to vote I should not vote for his confirmation, not because of my exclusion but because of what I learned from the scores of Haitians with whom I communicated as to the character of the military government which had been permitted while he was military commander in Haiti. But, I said, so far as the incident in relation to my exclusion was concerned. I did not care to have it mentioned; that it was a closed incident and that I would not predicate my course in the matter at all upon that incident: that I did not care, so far as I was concerned in the consideration of the matter, whether he should be confirmed or not; that the matter was wholly indifferent to me. I might add that before a special committee of which I was a member for a short time, when an investigation of the affairs in Haiti and Santo Domingo under American rule was being had. I was convinced that under the military rule of the United States in Haiti wrongs had been committed and the cruel Corvee system had been introduced; that many poor Haitian people had been taken from their homes and compelled to work upon the roads of Haiti under that system.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. KING. Certainly.

Mr. CONNALLY. In his general investigation of conditions in Haiti at that time did the Senator determine whether or not General Russell dominated the President and the Government and all the functionaries of Haiti?

Mr. KING. I have said on the floor of the Senate many times that Borno was a mere puppet in the hands of the powerful military forces of the United States.

Mr. CONNALLY. Will the Senator bear with me further? That being true, is it not absolutely inconceivable that Borno would ever have issued such an order without the consent and encouragement of General Russell?

Mr. KING. I would not care to answer that question categorically. I think I have said all I care to say in regard to the matter. I regret the course of our Government in the Haitian adventure. I think it is not, and history will write it down as being not creditable to the United States. May I say that a number of lawyers some years ago made an investigation and made declaration that our military occupation was wholly unwarranted.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. The Senator knows of his own knowledge and from the record of our occupation of Haiti that Borno was made President as a result of our occupation?

Mr. KING. He was not made President by the Haitian people and was held in position by the military forces of our Government after the United States had selected him.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. He continued as President as long as we occupied Haiti, and as soon as our military occupation ceased he had to get out of the country.

Mr. KING. That is true. The Senator was in Haiti. He knows the facts concerning the military occupation as well as I do. I am sure if the Senate should desire the result of his investigation and observation while there, they would find confirmation of what I have said in respect to the military occupation by the United States and the oppressive course which was then pursued.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, whenever any incident occurs in which a United States Senator is involved, I am for the United States Senator. That goes without saying. I have a meticulous care for the dignity of the Senate which I trust every other Member of this body has as well. If an untoward incident occurs I may regret it, but I cannot always see that it should result in punitive measures concerning someone who may not be responsible.

Mr. President, I am not going to let this day pass without reading some of the statements which have been made concerning Russell's conduct in Haiti. Mr. KING. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. JOHNSON. I yield.

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator will not take it, from anything I said, that my position with respect to General Russell was to be determined by the incident in which I was interested.

Mr. JOHNSON. I understood the Senator distinctly to disavow such an attitude.

Mr. KING. Exactly.

Mr. JOHNSON. The whole discussion, as the Senator will recall, was brought about by the single untoward incident, that and that alone. It is only the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] who have referred to the conduct of the Government in Haiti

I read first the statement of Charles Evans Hughes of April 23, 1924:

The Honorable C. D. WILBUR,

Secretary of the Navy.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have been informed that you have MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have been informed that you have under consideration the question of nominating a brigadier general of the Marine Corps to be promoted to the rank of major general, and that the name of Brig. Gen. John H. Russell may receive consideration in this connection. Realizing that you may not have had an opportunity to become fully informed of the character of the work performed by General Russell during his occupancy of the position of American High Commissioner at Port au Prince, Haiti, I have taken this occasion to express my opinion of the services which General Russell has performed in this position. I am doing this merely for your information. am doing this merely for your information.

General Russell has discharged the duties of High Commissioner at Port au Prince since his appointment to that position in February 1922, in a manner which has been highly gratifying to this Department. He has not only eliminated friction and brought about a more harmonious and efficient cooperation between the various officials appointed by the President of Haiti upon the nomination of the President of the United States, but has at the same time established very friendly relations between the American diplomatic representatives and treaty officials and the Haitian Gov-

Owing to his energy and tact and to his whole-hearted devotion to his work it has been possible to make more satisfactory progress toward the execution of the objects of the treaty between Haiti and the United States.

I am, my dear Mr. Wilbur, Very sincerely yours,

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Because reference was made to the President of the United States just prior to the present President of the United States, I read his words in regard to General Russell's conduct in Haiti:

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Washington, October 29, 1930.

My Dear General Russell: In accepting your resignation as American High Commissioner to Haiti, I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the loyal and efficient manner in which you have fulfilled your difficult mission.

The material progress which has been achieved during the 8 years of your incumbency of the office of High Commissioner is substantial and impressive. Haitian finances have been placed on a sound basis, commerce has revived, adequate roads now connect the important cities, schools and hospitals have been built, agrithe important cities, schools and hospitals have been built, agriculture has been accomplished in introducing sanitary measures through the entire Republic. These results have been largely due to your administrative ability and the high-minded purpose which has animated you in the performance of your task.

I wish also to express my warm appreciation of the excellent spirit of cooperation with which you facilitated the important work accomplished by the recent commission for the study and review of conditions in the Republic of Haiti.

Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HOOVER.

Then on October 28, 1930, the Secretary of State wrote | the following letter:

My Dear General Russell: On the occasion of your tendering your resignation as American High Commissioner to Haiti, I desire to express to you my deep appreciation of the manner in which have been discharged the duties of your difficult mission since your appointment to the office of High Commissioner in February 1922

Your industry and your ability to guide and coordinate the work of officials under your direction has proved you to be a most able administrator and this, together with your spirit of friend-ship and sympathetic understanding for the Haitian people and ship and sympathetic understanding for the Haltian people and their problems, has resulted in accomplishments which have produced a marked betterment of conditions in Halti.

The task that confronted you when you went to Halti was one of great magnitude, and that you were able to master so thoroughly the needs and requirements of the situation, to promote the interests of Halti and foster close and friendly relations between the two Governments, is an outstanding accomplishment which resounds most highly to your credit.

I take this occasion to thank you for your loyal and faithful cooperation during the 8 years that you have been associated with the Department of State and to wish you every success for the future

Sincerely yours,

HENRY L. STIMSON.

Francis White, Assistant Secretary of State, in November 1930, in like terms commended the administration of General Russell in Haiti; and the President's Commission for the Study and Review of Conditions in the Republic of Haiti, under date of March 26, 1930, expressed in the highest terms the commendation that Commission had for General Russell and his activities there. The Secretary of State preceding Mr. Stimson, Frank B. Kellogg, had exactly the same sort of commendation for General Russell.

So it was all along the line with those who represented the United States Government in administrative or executive departments here, from the President down to those who were the immediate superiors of General Russell. It is only justice to him, in my opinion, in view of the discussion which has been held this afternoon, that the Senate should know that there was no executive or administrative officer in the Government of the United States, so far as I am aware, but who commended General Russell, stated that what he did in Haiti was a monumental work, and gave to him credit for the accomplishments made in that particular country.

This I thought, in justice, the Senate should know.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I have read the record of the hearings, and I think it is proper that the Senator from California should bring them to the attention of the Senate. However, by request of the President of the United States, who wrote that glowing letter, a commission of eminent men was appointed to go to Haiti and investigate the record of our occupation, and to take testimony from American citizens in Haiti and from Haitians; and, without exception, everyone who appeared before that committee asked us for God's sake to get out of Haiti.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon an interruption?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON. To what commission does the Senator refer, please?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I refer to the commission appointed by President Hoover which went to Haiti, conducted public hearings, and made the recommendation upon which was based the policy that resulted in the withdrawal of the marines from Haiti.

Mr. JOHNSON. Was that the commission headed by Gov. W. Cameron Forbes?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Yes. I have also read his letter to General Russell.

I do not mean to hold General Russell responsible for our occupation of Haiti. If we are to go into the matter of our record there, and the record of the revolution that caused the President of the United States to appoint a commission to go and investigate conditions down there, that is an entirely different matter. I think with profit for the future the Senate ought to know a little more than it gets from official sources here about our occupation of Haiti and our work down there.

If the State Department issued the order to keep the Senator from Utah out of Haiti, and General Russell carried out that order, of course, they would praise him for obeying it. I am not blaming General Russell for that order. I desire to know who was responsible for it. If he was responsible, we ought to know. If the State Department was responsible, we ought to know.

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I yield.

Mr. DUFFY. In that connection, that is the point which was bothering me somewhat—as to what authority the Department of State had to give such an order. I notice that in the testimony of General Russell he says:

Although I was American High Commissioner in Haiti and under the orders of the Department of State.

Apparently they had authority to issue such orders, if they were of that mind; and I think it would be quite informative for us to know if such an order was issued from the Department of State. If so, I do not see how any blame could be laid upon the general's doorstep.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Byrn in the chair). Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. If such an order was issued, it ought to be of record in the Department. But aside from the individuals who issued it, we ought at least to ascertain the fact as to the future policy, whether we are to tolerate bureaucrats issuing any such orders, whether in the State Department, the Marine Corps, or any other Department.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I think that is an important point. If the State Department has issued an order barring a Senator from entering any Territory occupied by United States troops, we ought to know upon what authority such order was issued. We ought to have the order, not only because it would be interesting to know upon what authority it was issued, but so that Senators may be put upon notice that whenever they travel they may in the future be met by orders from the State Department, to someone in the diplomatic corps, that we are not to be allowed to land.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. RUSSELL. I wish to ask what is pending before the Senate at the present time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the order of the Senate, the nominations of Gen. Richard P. Williams and Gen. John H. Russell for promotion in the Marine Corps are being considered. The two nominations are being considered together.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am not advised under what rule of the Senate these two nominations are being considered together. I have endeavored to watch the nominations very closely and to see that nothing was done that would compel the consideration of the two nominations at the same time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say that any Senator may ask for a division.

Mr. RUSSELL. It seems to me that each nomination should stand on its own merits.

The nomination of Richard P. Williams to be a brigadier general in the Marine Corps was reported to the Senate on February 6, something like 12 days before the nomination of General Russell was submitted.

I have not heard General Williams' name mentioned today in the entire course of the debate, and I was not advised that these nominations were being considered together. I ask that the nominations be considered separately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair has stated, the Senator is within his rights in asking that the nominations be separately considered. Therefore the question is, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Gen. Richard P. Williams?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I understood that we were considering the nomination of General Russell. I was not the original objector to the nomination of General Williams. I should prefer that we proceed with General Russell's nomination. I do not think the Senator who objected to General Williams is in the Chamber at the present time.

Mr. RUSSELL. All members of the Senate were advised that these nominations would be considered this afternoon, whether they were to be considered separately or jointly. I should like to be advised as to the rule under which these nominations are considered jointly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order was entered on February 28 that at 3 o'clock p. m. on Monday, March 4, 1935, the Senate should proceed with the consideration of the nominations of Richard P. Williams and John H. Russell for promotion in the Marine Corps.

Mr. RUSSELL. Is it the construction of the Chair that that would force the Senate to a joint consideration of these nominations?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has stated that the Senator had the right to ask for a division in the consideration of the nominations.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I shall object if the intention is to take up the nomination of General Williams before we complete the consideration of the nomination of General Russell. I do not object to having the nominations considered separately, and I think they should be so considered, but the Senator who objected to General Williams is not present, and I would not agree that the unanimousconsent agreement should be changed and have General Williams' nomination taken up at this time.

Mr. RUSSELL. As I understand, as a matter of right, any Senator would have the privilege of demanding that these nominations be considered separately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the information of the Senator from Alabama, the Chair will state that the nomination of General Williams is first to be considered. Under the rule, any Senator has the right to ask to have the nominations considered separately.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have made the request.

Mr. BLACK. I object. I shall not object to separating the nominations unless it is desired to take up the nomination of General Williams now. I do object to taking up the nominations of General Williams now, and for that reason I object to the separation, if that is to be the result.

Mr. RUSSELL. As a matter of right, I insist that these nominations be separated. I understood it to be the ruling of the Chair that any Senator had a right, upon his request, to have the nominations considered separately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the present occupant of the chair is advised, any Senator has a right to ask for a separation.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have demanded that right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Request has been made by the Senator from Georgia, and therefore the nominations will be considered separately.

The question now before the Senate is, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general in the Marine Corps?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, if that question is now to be submitted to the Senate, I shall desire to discuss it at length.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I think it would be impossible to dispose of this subject this afternoon, and unless there is some objection, it is my intention to move a recess in executive session so that the pending matter may be resumed tomorrow when the Senate meets.

I move that the Senate take a recess in executive session until 12 o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate, in executive session, took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, March 5, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 4, 1935 APPOINTMENT, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

Capt. George Stainback Deaderick, Infantry (detailed in Quartermaster Corps), with rank from July 3, 1930.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE MAJOR

Capt. James Lawrence, Signal Corps, from February 21,

TO BE CAPTAIN

First Lt. Robert Alwin Schow, Infantry, from February 21, 1935.

TO BE FIRST LIEUTENANT

Second Lt. Samuel Fayette Silver, Infantry, from February 21, 1935.

TO BE CHAPLAIN WITH THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT COLONEL Chaplain Clifford Lore Miller (major). United States Army, from February 23, 1935.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 4. 1935

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS

Olice F. Huson, Heber Springs.

MASSACHUSETTS

Patrick F. Shea, Fitchburg. Josephine E. Dempsey, South Ashburnham.

MISSISSIPPI

Martha B. Lowe, Glendora. Henry E. Wamsley, State College. Laura E. Turnage, Tchula. George O. Robinson, Tunica.

NEW YORK

Maurice F. Maloney, Haverstraw.

NORTH DAKOTA

Nellie Dougherty, Minot.

TENNESSEE

A. Klasen Broyles, Limestone. Robert T. Lee, Madisonville.

William G. Davis, Boerne.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, MARCH 4, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Rev. Joseph B. Baker, D. D., pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, York, Pa., offered the following prayer:

O God, our Heavenly Father, we gather this morning in profound gratitude for Thy continued favor upon us in times past. Invoke upon us from Thee Thy guidance and Thy divine blessing upon the work that lies at hand, for we realize that without that guidance we are all but poor, blundering, selfish mortals. With that guidance we somehow feel that we have a competency in leadership that is worthy of following; for then we know it is Thy wisdom rather than our own that is dominating. Do Thou be with us as we gather here this morning, and may we have come here with clean hands, with pure hearts, and with open minds. O, do Thou bless these men gathered here in this work so vast and yet so intimate. Do Thou give them that guidance from above that will make them safe counselors and guides for this great people. Do Thou give them vision with courage and courage with caution, giving due deliberation to the hard-earned, blood-bought wisdom of the past and yet not bowing a vassal knee to the past if it thwarts human welfare and blocks human progress.

Be with the President of our country. Bless all his counselors. Be with all executives everywhere. Bless the business men of our land, the school teachers, the fathers, the mothers, and laborers wherever they are. Do Thou bless the homes from which these men have come and their loved ones there, those in whom they are interested by ties of faith and ties of blood. Be with us all, our Heavenly Father, and help us to realize that every one of us has a contribution to make to the upbuilding of the kingdom of God upon earth. May we do an honest day's work while the swift fleeting hours of this life's day are going by, and when our work on earth is done and our race is finished, O do Thou receive us one and all, then, at the doorway of Thy beautiful, bountiful, heavenly home. We ask it in the Master's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, March 1, 1935, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object to ask a question, and I am not going to object, when are we going to get consideration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill?

Mr. BOLAND. I expect that to come up this week.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is 5 weeks tomorrow since I was told it would come up in a few days, and in the meantime there are thousands of people throughout the country losing their homes while the bill is being held up because somebody is dissatisfied with the way it is being handled. I hope the bill will come up this week.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we will get action on the Home Owners' Loan bill when the Rules Committee decides to investigate one way or the other, or give the House a chance to pass upon that question.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I modify my request, and ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, how long is this Democratic quarrel going to go on over there with reference to this Home Owners' Loan Corporation matter?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama. Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered that I requested consent last week, or the week before, to take up the Home Owners' Loan extension bill, but consent was not granted. I immediately introduced a resolution for a rule, which is pending before the Rules Committee. It is well understood that the Rules Committee has had other matters under consideration which precluded consideration of this resolution until this time. However, the chairman of the committee assured me this morning that the Rules Committee would, on Wednesday morning, hear the Banking and Currency Committee upon the resolution for a rule to consider the Home Owners' Loan Corporation extension bill. We or Friday of this week. Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, may I state to the House that the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH]. who is very much in favor of the passage of this resolution giving an extra clerk to each Member, is unavoidably detained because of the fact he is participating in a celebration over the inauguration of air mail and passenger service to his home town of Elkins, W. Va.

hope to obtain a rule and to take up the matter on Thursday

" PINK SLIP "

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a short

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I wish to address myself to the so-called "pink slip" provision of the revenue law.

An income-tax law was passed during the Civil War period. Early in 1863 the Commissioner issued instructions that the income-tax returns should be open for inspection only to revenue officers. The newspapers urged that they be allowed to print returns on income. Later the Commissioner ruled that the public should have free access to the returns. The New York Times said a properly organized revenue service would be able to guard against evasion, and then publicity would be unnecessary and a nuisance which Congress might be asked to abate. Later, it said, "The publicity given to the returns is offensive and objectionable."

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in a letter dated April 5, 1870, forbade the assessors to furnish lists for publication. The Congress on July 14, 1870, passed a law prohibiting the practice.

An eminent author of a work on Federal Internal Tax History, commenting on this publicity feature, said this:

It is very questionable whether the benefit received from publicity was not entirely offset by the injury it did because of the antagonism to the tax which it aroused.

Never since this experience of Civil War days, except for year, under the 1924 Revenue Act, has Congress reopened this highly controversial question until the "pink-slip' vision was enacted into law. This provision in the 1924 act which provided that the Commissioner make available the names, addresses, and amounts of income of taxpayers, was eliminated by the act of 1926, upon the following recommendations of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee:

Ways and Means Committee report (p. 9)-

The Treasury Department informs your committee that no useful purpose has been served by the publication of the amount of the income tax paid by the various taxpayers. The committee, therefore, recommends its repeal.

Senate Finance Committee report (p. 7)-

With no evidence before it of any useful purpose served by this provision, the committee recommends its repeal, as proposed in the House bill.

I may add that in no other country has such a provision been inserted in a tax law.

There is only one State in the Union that has incorporated the publicity feature in its income-tax law. Wisconsin did so in 1923. After this feature had been in operation 7 years, the Wisconsin Tax Commission, in its report (1930) made this comment:

[Excerpt from report of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, 1930] PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF RETURNS

The repeal of the secrecy clause by the 1923 legislature opened all income-tax returns to public inspection. The repeal was urged and passed upon the supposition that public inspection would result in fewer incorrect returns and in discovering much unreported income. These expected results have not materialized in any degree in the administration of either the individual or the corporation returns. There have been no instances where public inspection has brought forth unreported income, and as to its anticipated effect in producing more correct income returns, experience has shown that it has had the opposite effect. Knowing rience has shown that it has had the opposite effect. Knowing that their returns are open to inspection, taxpayers consolidate and condense their reports to make them as unintelligible as possible to those inspecting them, thus making their auditing by the commission or by the income-tax assessor more arduous, necessitating additional work, considerably more correspondence, and consequent expense and delay.

In most of the income-tax assessors' offices public examination of returns is infrequent and of little consequence, but in five or six of such offices and in the office of the tax commission such examination is attended by considerable annoyance and expense.

A survey shows that public examination is almost wholly without any public motive or significance, but that advantage is taken of it to serve purely private and personal interests. Our filed has shown that it has had the opposite effect. Knowing of it to serve purely private and personal interests. Our filed returns are used by credit organizations, which have men on hand almost constantly digging into the files. Returns are examined to prepare lists of prospective purchases of stocks and bonds and for other soliciting and advertising purposes. A common use of returns is to secure information in negotiating for the purchase of business properties, and very frequent use is made of them in delving into the intimate concerns of business competitors. Many such examinations are by competitors from without the State who offer the Wisconsin business no such reciprocal information or advantage. Income-tax files are also frequently used for information in court actions, and many examinations are made out of curiosity, and at times for the sole purpose of annoying and harassing a reporting taxpayer.

In the Milwaukee office the time of an employee for 2 hours of every day is taken in waiting upon persons who are using the files for private purposes. In the period between November 1, 1929, and September 22, 1930, over 3,000 files were examined in the office of the tax commission. The crowded filing room is frequently occupied by six or seven persons going through the files and crowding the desk room of regular employees. The entire time of one clerk is employed in serving these purely personal investigators, and at times other clerks are called upon to assist her.

The indiscriminate examination of returns is not only an impor-

The indiscriminate examination of returns is not only an imposition upon the reporting taxpayer but is also an imposition upon the State and upon its tax administration officers and employees. the State and upon its tax administration officers and employees. The commission does not favor any secrecy of returns that would bar examination in the public interest, but it does suggest that the promiscuous misuse of files for private purposes to the great inconvenience and annoyance of officials and the expense to the State ought to be discontinued. No other State or country having such files in custody permits such misuse of them. These files contain the record of the lifeblood and register the pulse of the person and private business affairs of our own taxpayers and should be accessible only when the public interest is concerned. concerned.

Here we have the experience of a sovereign State, an experiment covering 7 years, which ought to be given some weight by this House in the consideration of this important question.

I have had more protests by mail and by wire against the pink-slip provision than I have ever received in a given time in opposition to a provision of a national law.

The protests of people who bear the major burden of the taxes of the country ought to be given some consideration. I shall, if given the opportunity, vote to repeal the "pink slip" provision.

CONTINUANCE ON PAY ROLLS OF CERTAIN EMPLOYEES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. GREENWOOD, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following resolution for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 140 (Rept. No. 285)

House Resolution 140 (Rept. No. 285)

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of House Joint Resolution 189, a resolution relating to the continuance on the pay rolls of certain employees in cases of death or resignation of Members of the House of Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the resolution and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Accounts, the resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the resolution for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

REREFERENCE OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION FROM THE COMMIT-TEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE TO THE COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the rereference of certain bills and a joint resolution, the number and title of which are at the Clerk's desk, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 65. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the coast of Virginia, at or near the north end of Hog Isand, Northampton County; H. R. 1398. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near Crescent City, Calif.;

H. R. 1483. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of the lighthouse reservation in the village of Fairport, Ohio;

H. R. 2015. A bill for a Coast Guard station at the eastern entrance to Cape Cod Canal, Mass.;

H.R. 2016. A bill to liberalize the retirement law for members of the former life-saving service;

H.R. 2745. A bill to provide for the employment of American citizens in skilled positions on the Panama Canal;

H. R. 2831. A bill to provide for the construction of two vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work:

H. R. 3041. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of the Grindel Point Lighthouse Reservation, Maine:

H. R. 3049. A bill authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of the Morro Rock Lighthouse Reservation, Calif .:

H.R. 3265. A bill to liberalize the retirement law for members of the former life-saving service;

H. R. 3456. A bill to provide for the construction of six vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work;

H.R. 3479. A bill to authorize the conveyance of certain land to the lighthouse reservation at Chatham, Mass., to the town of Chatham;

H.R. 3975. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the coast of Georgia, at or near Sea Island Beach:

H.R. 4002. A bill to provide for the construction of two vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work;

H. R. 4140. A bill authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of the Morro Rock Lighthouse Reservation, Calif .:

H. R. 4239. A bill authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to convey to the city of Grand Haven, Mich., certain portions of the Grand Haven Lighthouse Reservation, Mich.;

H. R. 4664. A bill to liberalize the retirement law for members of the former life-saving service;

H. R. 4991. A bill authorizing superannuation disability pay for alien employees of the Panama Canal;

H. R. 5039. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to convey to Charles E. Robinson, of Isle au Haut, in the county of Knox and State of Maine, the Isle au Haut Lighthouse Reservation, Maine;

H.R. 5050. A bill to provide for the construction of four vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work;

H. R. 5256. A bill to provide for the construction of four vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work:

H. R. 5272. A bill to authorize the conveyance by the United States to the State of Wisconsin of a portion of the Eagle Bluff Lighthouse Reservation, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5379. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act. as amended, by providing for the regulation of the transportation of passengers and property by water carriers operating in interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes; H. R. 5927. A bill to provide for the construction of four vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work;

H. R. 6096. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the shore of Illinois, at or near Highland Park, Lake County; and

H. J. Res. 28. Joint resolution stating whether coastwise traffic should be subjected to governmental regulation under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules has been holding extensive hearings on House Resolution 46, introduced by the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney] to appoint a special committee to investigate the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

The holding of these hearings on this resolution have had nothing whatsoever to do with the consideration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. The rule for the consideration of that bill has only today come before the Rules Committee, and a hearing has been set at the first opportunity, on Wednesday, to hear the Banking and Currency Committee in reference to the request for a rule, with the hope that the bill may be taken up and considered on Thursday and Friday of this week.

In connection with the consideration of House Resolution 46, there have appeared in the RECORD certain charges concerning the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This morning, before the Rules Committee, at a public session, Mr. John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, appeared and made a statement claimed to be an answer to these charges.

I ask unanimous consent that this statement may be placed in the RECORD, and, pending that, I may state that on tomorrow, at 10: 30 o'clock, the Rules Committee will be pleased to hear any Members of the Congress in answer to this statement by Mr. Fahey.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, how long a statement is it?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Twenty-three pages.

Mr. TABER. That would mean 5 or 6 pages of the

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know.

Mr. FISH. I hope the gentleman from New York will not object. The matter has come up before our Committee on Banking and Currency, and it is a very important one.

Mr. TABER. The thing that bothers me about it is this: We will print it in the RECORD and it will serve no useful

Mr. O'CONNOR. If the gentleman will permit, it is for the information of the Members. We have no stenographic report of the hearings. Of course, if we had taken stenographic minutes we would have printed hearings which would serve the same purpose and have been more

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, if we do not have a stenographic report of the hearings and bring in and print and circulate the testimony of one witness, the people and the House have but the one side. It seems to me if you are going to publish one of your hearings, you should publish all of them.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In that connection, the gentleman may recall that on several occasions these charges have been placed in the Record by Members of the House and they are already before the House.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York that he be permitted to print in the RECORD the statement of Mr. Fahey?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to object, but under the circumstances, I shall object.

Mr. SWEENEY. If I cannot make a statement, Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 20 minutes next Friday morning after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs of the Committee on the District of Columbia may have permission to sit during sessions of the House.

Mr. O'CONNOR. For how long? Mr. ELLENBOGEN. For 1 week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

TOWNSEND OLD-AGE PENSIONS

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] today filed a petition, which is at the Clerk's desk. This petition seeks to bring to the floor for consideration and debate the Mc-Groarty bill, commonly known as the "Townsend old-agepension bill."

In this connection I would request that those who are interested in this humane measure come to the desk and sign the petition in order that early action may be had thereon.

I have in my hand a request from the City Council of the City of South Pasadena, requesting the Congress of the United States to give fair and impartial consideration to the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan.

For the information of the Republican Members, I will say that South Pasadena is composed almost entirely of Republicans. For this reason I hope that the Republican Membership will evidence the fullest measure of cooperation, and that, with the Democrats, we will obtain the required number of signatures to bring this question up for a decision as soon as possible.

I wish to compliment my colleague from Montana [Mr. Monaghan], who has taken such an active part in the Congress in the interests of social security. It was Mr. Mona-GHAN who headed the delegation which had a conference with the President recently on the subject of old-age pensions. Mr. Monaghan submitted the following letter to the various Members of Congress, informing them of his activities and requesting that the Membership sign his petition:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., March 2, 1935.

My Dear Colleague: Insistent is the clamor for an old-age pension; not a pauper's dole but a system that will be a proper step toward national recovery; a pension reasonably high enough to encourage aged men of all trades and occupations, even in the more remunerative walks of life, to leave their posts and thereby create opportunity for the employment of middle-aged and younger men.

As chairman of the Congressional Legislative Strategy Committhe for the Promotion of Social Security I will place on the Clerk's desk in the House of Representatives, Monday noon, March 4, a petition for the discharge of the Ways and Means Committee from further consideration of the McGroarty bill H. R. 3977, asking that it be considered on the floor of the House on either the second or fourth Monday of April.

As you, of course, know the signing of this petition in no wise is a commitment to the Townsend old-age-pension plan but merely an indication of desire for free and open debate on the measure and opportunity for proposing amendments.

Machines have robbed a large portion of the American public f a decent livelihood through pursuit of normal occupations, of a decent livelihood through pursuit of normal occupations, and a sound old-age-pension system, based upon the proper means of raising the money, would go far toward solving the problem of maldistribution. Therefore I urge you to sign this petition for the purpose of establishing a sound system of pensions that will permit the aged American citizen to raise his head high to heaven and proudly walk as a man amongst men.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH P. MONAGHAN, Chairman Congressional Legislative Strategy Committee for the Promotion of Social Security.

As Mr. Monaghan has so aptly stated, the signing of this petition is in no wise a commitment to the Townsend oldage-pension plan, but it is indeed an evidence of a receptive attitude on the part of the Member to any thought or plan which has for its purpose the relief of our suffering people. It is, moreover, in accordance with the principles of democracy that the Congress should give the fullest measure of sympathetic consideration to a plan so widely supported as is the Townsend plan, so broad in its scope and so humanitarian in its purpose.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on a subject which will carry an explanation of the desire of Members of the House for additional clerical allowance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following:

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The original plan of the founders of this Nation was, that it should be a nation wherein the people should have a voice in their own government. To this end the House of Representatives was instituted, the Members of which were to be elected by the people, to represent them and to reflect their opinions. The term of the Members of the House was purposely fixed at the short term of 2 years, in order to make them more responsive to popular opinion, and to permit the people to change them frequently, if they proved to be unresponsive. This is as it should be—and as it must be—if we are to continue to have a truly representative form of government.

The theory of a representative government is, that it shall be run in the interest of the greatest possible number of people, which in the ultimate means in the interest of all of the people. Let no one imagine for a moment that all of the elements within this Nation are desirous of a truly representative form of government. Far from it. As we become more advanced we become more highly organized, and so, we have a constant struggle on the part of highly organized minorities to control the functions of government. This they attempt, and very often accomplish by bribery, by political intimidation, or by convincing the representatives of the people that they-these organized minorities-are the voice of the people. By far the most dangerous of these methods is their attempts to make their wishes and opinions sound like the voice of the people. This they do by carrying on a campaign of selfish propaganda which they hope will be mistaken for the voice of the people. I am sorry to say that in a great many instances they are successful in their attempts. All of this should remind us that "eternal vigilence is the price of liberty."

Lobbying has long been resorted to as a means of influencing legislation. It is a perfectly respectable and legitimate practice as long as it is carried on honestly and without exerting undue influence. Committee hearings are held upon all pieces of legislation before they are brought to the floor, at which any interest, either for or against, is given an opportunity to present its side. The practice of lobbying has fallen into disrepute, however, because for many years it was productive of so much corruption and bribery. Scandals resulted which shocked the Nation and lobbying came to be frowned upon at seats of governments. In consequence the questionable lobbyist disappeared from legislative halls, but did not cease his activities. He discovered an easier, safer, and less expensive method of operating. He now goes to the people of the Nation and in a subtle manner gets them to do the lobbying.

This is an age of easy communication. The mail, telephone, telegraph, newspapers, periodicals, and radios have made it so. These agencies are all very valuable to the people if rightfully used. On the other hand, they can easily be used in a manner very detrimental to the public interest. These agencies of communication are eagerly seized upon by organized minorities as vehicles to be used in the spreading of propaganda designed to further their own selfish interests.

Propaganda, as it is generally considered today, is information used in spreading but one side of a question. It is almost sure to be misleading and quite often is untrue. Selfish interests often present to the people information which, if mailed, borders on being misuse of the mails. They will take a part of a certain piece of legislation, often no more than the number and title of the bill, and seek to persuade the people to write to their Senator, Congressman, State senator, or legislator asking or demanding that he vote either for or against it. In consequence, the official will receive a flood of letters or telegrams, practically every one of them identical in form and wording.

Often these missives will state that the sender has carefully read or is thoroughly acquainted with the legislation, even though it may comprise 200 pages, and to become even casually informed upon the matter may require weeks of study and extensive research. Such practices are reprehensible, unjust to the people, unjust to the official, and are dangerous to the welfare of the Nation. Such campaigns are, almost without exception, conceived in selfishness, based upon deception, and often evilly designed.

Now, any member of a legislative body who is conscientious-and most of them are-is always very glad to receive the views of his constituents. Most legislators, in fact, make an effort to obtain them. Unless he obtains them he cannot efficiently perform his duties. What he desires, however, is their own views and opinions honestly arrived at after due consideration of both sides of the question. He does not wish to receive opinions which are manufactured and sold to the people by misinformation. He does not wish an opinion forced upon employees through fear of losing their jobs. Such expressions are not the voice of the people, and by no manner of reasoning can they be interpreted as such. The enemies of popular government are adept at manipulating, not only within but also without their own domains. Selfish interests work in a subtle manner and all too often start a movement to the detriment of the people, craftily induce the people to do the shouting, and they make them pay the bill. What a travesty of representative government.

Many extensive lobbying campaigns are carried on regarding a piece of legislation, which has merely been introduced and has no chance whatever of even reaching a hearing before a committee. Ten legislative bodies sitting all the year around could not even begin to consider the bills introduced before them each session. No sooner, however, is a piece of legislation introduced than word goes throughout the Nation seeking to persuade the people to write their legislator regarding it. Much of such propaganda comes from fanatical individuals or organizations who wish to use the public as a sounding board for their own ideas. They always meet with a certain measure of success. Quite often some legislator introduces a bill and resorts to such a campaign in order to attract attention to his bill. Usually this is his one and only means of attracting attention to it or to himself.

Thousands of these communications received are in the form of a printed post card or letter. All the sender had to do was sign and mail. Often the mailing is done for him, and the fact that many of the replies are returned is proof of the fact that many of the names are fictitious. Anything to create the impression that there is an overwhelming wave of popular sentiment either for or against a measure. Should a reply be sent asking the communicant what he objects to, or favors, in a certain bill, if the communicant answers at all, he will usually frankly reply that he never even read the bill in question, but that his letter was written at the request of a third party.

Another form of lobbying is by petition. It is a well-known fact that a petition can be circulated, and unlimited signatures obtained, regardless of the contents of the petition. Instances are quite common of petitions filled by children going or coming from school. Many petitions are received every name of which are obviously signed by the same hand. Some of them are plainly the work of cranks. Many are deliberate efforts to deceive. Upon the receipt of a genuine petition one is almost sure to receive many communications asking that the sender's name be disregarded on the petition. There are numerous societies, alliances, and leagues with various prefixes or suffixes for the promotion, prevention, or regulation of this, that, or what not. They represent themselves as speaking for multitudes of members. Some of them are commendable in their purposes. Most of them are busybodies and self-appointed guardians of other peoples' morals or business. These last accomplish nothing but to add to the confusion, as they never lack their champions who occupy

Now, the citizens of this Nation should take an interest in the Government of the Nation. It is their duty to do so, in fact. This is their Government and it is what they make it. They should be free to write to their legislators and express their opinions upon legislative matters. They should be honest with themselves, however, and honest with all concerned. They should be as cautious of endorsing a strange piece of legislation as they would be of endorsing the check of a stranger. This insidious method of lobbying is growing by leaps and bounds and should be stopped.

The expense of handling the tons and tons of such matter in the National and State Capitols is enormous. The money to pay for it comes from the pockets of the people in the form of taxes. It is one of the causes of expansion of the various agencies of government. It is a question of which the people of the Nation should be informed. That is the object of this article.

The people should keep themselves informed upon the questions of the day. They should not form opinions from hearing but one side of a question, as most questions have two sides, with merit to each. The press is an excellent source of information upon legislative matters, both as to the news columns and the editorial page. Most of our newspapers keep careful trace of all important legislation which will come up for action and report its progress daily. Usually they present enough of both sides of a question as to enable their readers to form an opinion. There is no need for the people to permit their opinions to be manufactured for them in a wholesale manner by selfish interests. Well thinking citizens should resent any attempt in this direction. They should reflect that any interest which finances a gigantic lobby has a selfish purpose in view. It should certainly be quite evident that any interest financing such a campaign has a plan to secure a return of the money expended. We do not need to look very far into the past to see where such movements have returned all expenses manyfold.

Selfish propaganda broadly and loudly spread is often mistaken for the voice of the people. If so, the people are to blame for the results. The Nation-wide reaction on the question of our entrance into the World Court is a fine example of the expression of the will of a well informed people. Let us have more of the free and honest expression of the voice of the people, but less of the expression of "his master's voice."

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to recommit the bill H. R. 5732, because of a mistake in the printing of the original bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, what is the nature of the bill?

Mr. KELLER. It is a bill providing for printing for the blind.

There was no objection.

BREAK-DOWN AND FAILURE OF ADMINISTRATION POLICIES AND PLEDGES

Mr. DARROW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a radio address by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DARROW. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I insert a speech by Representative HAMILTON FISH, Jr., over the National Broadcasting Co. network, Saturday evening, March 2, 1935, as follows:

Monday, the 4th of March, will mark the second anniversary of the rule of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was elected by an unprecedented majority and came into office backed by the good will, the hopes, and aspirations of the American people.

The administration honeymoon has cracked up, as was inevitable, on a series of broken promises and pledges and on unsound, unworkable, and socialistic experiments.

What a difference a few years make! Acclaimed by all the people for declaring a bank holiday, for salvaging the deposits and assets of the banks, for attempting to reduce governmental expenditures and balancing the Budget, the restoration of business confidence, the employment of labor, and return to prosperous times appeared to be assured.

ous times appeared to be assured.

For the first 6 months following President Roosevelt's inauguration most of the people regarded him as a Moses, sent to lead us out of the economic wilderness. All of a sudden the sound promises and pledges contained in the Democratic platform were repudiated and trampled under foot, and a host of socialistically inclined "brain trusters" were ushered into key positions in the Government service, who delighted in making a laughing-stock out of Jeffersonian principles and party promises. Economy, a balanced Budget, sound money to be preserved at all hazards, 25-percent reduction in Government expenditures, consolidation of departments and abolition of useless commissions, and promises to stop borrowing to meet deficits were all cast saide as if con-of departments and abolition of useless commissions, and promises to stop borrowing to meet deficits were all cast aside as if contagious and thrown into the limbo of forgotten things.

The "brain trust", composed of radicals and visionaries without political training or economic experience, became the sponsors, with the President's blessings, of a mass of impractical, unworkable, unsound, and socialistic legislation that has destroyed business of the president ness confidence, increased unemployment, impoverished the people and retarded recovery.

ness confidence, increased unemployment, impoverished the people and retarded recovery.

It has taken the American people 2 years to find out the extent of the failure of the new-deal administration, first, because the first 6 months of the Roosevelt regime was admirable and the bad effects of the unsound legislation was not felt immediately, and, secondly, because we are in the midst of a government by propaganda and ballyhoo, emanating from hundreds of political publicity agents paid out of the Treasury of the United States to uphold and defend the new-deal policies and build up the myth of Roosevelt and recovery in the press and over the radio. The people back home were literally swamped with mass propaganda, and the facts only after 2 years are beginning to seep through that Roosevelt and recovery are not synonymous, but that Roosevelt and ruin are rapidly endangering the welfare of the American people.

"To sin by silence when we should protest makes cowards of us all." It is the duty of the Republican Members of Congress, representing the minority or opposition party, to expose and criticize the blunders of the administration without fear or favor. For 2 years we have been soft-pedaling our criticisms and indulging in mere shadow boxing at the expense of the "brain trust." The time has come to place the blame for the break-down of the administration policies and pledges squarely where it actually belongs—upon the shoulders of President Roosevelt. It is mere evasion and cowardice to attempt to hold Professor Tugwell, Miss Perkins, Donald Richberg, Honest Harold Ickes, and James Aloysius Farley responsible for the accumulation of ills and failures of the Perkins, Donald Richberg, Honest Harold Ickes, and James Aloysius Farley responsible for the accumulation of ills and failures of the administration, when they are but appointed agents of the President.

Now that the administration has reached the half-way mark, thoughtful Americans are beginning to realize that the President is steadily grasping for more and more control and rapidly accumulating vast autocratic powers until the whole structure of our Government is menaced.

Government is menaced.

The most astounding example of this policy is his insistent demands that $4,000,000,000 be turned over to him without limitation or restriction. For the first time the people back home are beginning to see through the now apparent scheme of an autocratic dictatorship and one-man rule in the United States, in place of our constitutional and representative form of Government. Our American system is hanging in the balance, as we march serenely on into Government ownership and operation, state socialism, collectivism, a tyrannical and crushing bureaucracy, and an autocratic dictatorship at Washington.

The most critical period of American history since the Civil War is in the making at this moment in an undisguised attempt to set up a virtual dictatorship at Washington, no longer temporary but permanent and autocratic.

permanent and autocratic.

permanent and autocratic.

The abdication and surrender of legislative powers at the arrogant demands of the President by a partisan, supine, and subservient Congress is a gross betrayal of the constitutional rights and liberties of the American people and will be one of the main issues in the next presidential campaign, along with the destruction of business confidence, the increase in unemployment, and the high cost of living to 125,000,000 Americans on the necessities of life.

The control of the purse strings is the main reason for the existence of Congress, and when a cowardly Congress, at the insistence of the autocrat in the White House, strips itself naked of its legislative powers and leaves its members mere rubber stamps without any more clothes than Gandhi, it amounts to actually changing any more clothes than Gandhi, it amounts to actually changing our form of government without the consent of the governed.

The President of the United States, the Democrats admit, was the author of this disgraceful bill which took away from Congress its very lifeblood, the control of appropriations.

I call on all Jeffersonian Democrats and Republicans to oppose every attempt to weaken and destroy representative and constitutional government by establishing a superman in the Executive Mansion and a dictatorial government patterned after fascism, Hitlerism, communism, and every other alien ism except Ameri-

This administration, while advocating free-trade policies with European nations, has for the first time in history set up economic barriers within the United States by imposing various processing taxes on the necessities of life, the increased cost of which must

Secretary Wallace predicted a few days ago that the price of food will increase another 11 percent in the next 6 months, and in particular that the price of meat would rise 22 percent in the same period. This is typical of what is happening to the American wage earners, consumers, and the 12,000,000 unemployed under the present administration, which has destroyed their buying power, depreciated their dollar, increased unemployment, and retarded recovery.

How long will the American wage earners and consumers support an administration that was elected by their votes and in return impoverishes them and destroys the American standard of living and of wages? The inevitable consequence of the free-trade policies of President Rossevelt and Secretary Hull is to reduce the standard of living of our wage earners at a time when the cost of living on necessities of life are increasing rapidly by governmental manipulations. manipulations.

manipulations.

The ruinous policy of President Roosevelt and his confirmed free-trader, Secretary of State Hull, to bring the cheap labor of Europe, Asia, and South America in competition with American labor can only result in further unemployment and reduction in our wage scale and standard of living. It already threatens to ruin the textile, cement, glass, manganese, and beet-sugar industries.

The Democratic Party is showing its true colors as a low wage-scale party, but, contrary to its past policies, it has turned upon the consumers by making frantic efforts to increase the cost on necessities of life. The price of pork, the poor man's food, is skyrocketing. There are 20,000,000 less pigs in the United States than I year are and a smaller number than at any time in the last 50 rocketing. There are 20,000,000 less pigs in the United States than I year ago and a smaller number than at any time in the last 50 years. During this period our population has increased from 50,000,000 to 125,000,000. The tragedy of the new-deal folly and birth control of pigs is that of the 6,000,000 slaughtered 4,000,000 were destroyed and served no useful purpose. Today the increasing price of pork is rapidly putting it beyond the reach of the wage earner's budget. The killing of the pigs, and particularly the sows with little pigs, was not only a blunder but a crime against nature, and those responsible should be impeached, or at least kicked out of the Government service. But there again the old axiom holds good—that the principal is responsible for the acts of his agents.

old axiom holds good—that the principal is responsible for the acts of his agents.

The Republican Party believes in establishing an equilibrium or party between the products of agriculture, the factories, and the mines which is impossible under the N. R. A., which raises the price of everything the farmers buy. But, as a general proposition, the Republican Party is opposed to any program of scarcity and wanton destruction in a Nation that has abundant resources, especially when there are 12,000,000 Americans unemployed. The destruction of surplus crops does not answer the unemployment problem, as it does away with jobs. Neither does it help to distribute farm products to the millions of needy and hungry Americans nor solve the distribution problem.

the distribution problem.

the distribution problem.

There can be no prosperity for the farmer or wage earner until sound principles and common sense prevail in government. As a member of the National Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation, I contend that the farmer's problem has not yet been solved, and will not be until it is solved fairly, honestly, and on a sound basis. All the farmer is asking is the cost of production plus a reasonable profit on what he produces.

I am opposed to the extension of the N. R. A. for 2 years, as requested by the President, without drastic modifications. The N. R. A. has all but strangled the small business man and has hampered and harrassed business generally. It has helped to destroy business confidence so that there is a dark cloud of fear and uncertainty hanging over the country today. Business men go to uncertainty hanging over the country today. Business men go to sleep at night with a headache and awake in the morning with

What is needed more than anything else is the restoration of business confidence and a cessation of drastic regulations, ukases, and Executive orders, and various complicated codes, such as for the curled-hair manufacturing, horse hair dressing, dog food, feather, and the cosmetic container industries.

If I had my way, I would scrap most of the N. R. A. codes, leave one general code for fair competition and several subordinate ones dealing with natural resources, such as coal and oil, and so forth, and retain the child-labor provisions and restrictions against sweat-

I voted for the N. R. A. on a voluntary and temporary basis, in a great emergency, hoping it would help in putting American labor to work. We now find, according to the American Federation of Labor, that there are between one and a half and two millions more unemployed than a year ago. Moreover, the Blue Eagle has become a Soviet vulture, backed by force and coercion, enforcement agents, spies, and jail sentences and nests on smokeless factory chimneys.

The President is now claiming that the Senate is wrecking the relief program by adding the prevailing-wage-scale amendment. The only person responsible for wrecking relief is the President himself, when he coupled the emergency-relief measure of $880,000,000 with the $4,000,000,000 blank check for public works that he demands in defiance of the Constitution, and that the separation of the powers of Government be turned over to him without qualifications. without qualifications. Even patriotic Democrats in the Senate refuse to vote to destroy our representative system of Government or create a huge election fund out of the Treasury of the United States. There is no Republican Member who will not vote to pass the $880,000,000 emergency relief bill any time it is brought up in Congress, which the Democratic leaders should have done a month ago and can still bring up and pass within 24 hours.

In conclusion, I indict the Democratic administration on its record for the past year as the greatest failure in American history. I challenge it with having destroyed business confidence, squandered American resources, wrecked commercial air transportation, and with impairment of the national credit. I accuse it of having imposed unsound, unworkable, and socialistic measures upon the Nation that have increased the cost of living, impoverupon the Nation that have increased the cost of living, impoverished the American people, and increased unemployment. I denounce it for undermining our free institutions, turning the Constitution into a scrap of paper, and changing our representative form of government, without the approval or consent of the American people, into an autocratic and dictatorial form of government. I condemn it as having no economic policy except to pile debt upon debt by borrowing, more borrowing, and still more borrowing, without any thought of balancing the Budget or of the inevitable day of reckoning and collapse of credit and bankruptcy of the Government.

I charge it with having honeycombed the various departments of the new deal with radicals, Socialists, and near Communists and contributors to communism, and for having done more to promote class hatred and class antagonism than all previous administrations since the founding of the Republic.

Unfortunately recovery is a myth, and a mirage shown by the Unfortunately recovery is a myth, and a mirage snown by the tragic increase in unemployment. The American people have now had a taste of the incapacity and incompetency of the "new dealers"—I will not say Democrats—to govern within the bounds of reason and moderation. What have they done? They have examined and interfered in everybody's affairs. They have threatened every corporation and endowment. They have criticized every profession and vexed every trade. No one is certain of his property, and no one knows what new regulation or restriction will be forthcoming the next day.

The American people have had almost 2 years of it, and I am convinced that the tide is rapidly turning against such a policy of regimentation and confiscation and that the American people have already made up their minds that they have had enough.

I predict that the very people who elected President Roosevelt, after 2 more years of unsound policies, high cost of living, and walking the streets looking for a job, will turn to the sound policies of the Republican Party and help elect a Republican President in 1936 as the only means of bringing about recovery and a return to prosperous times.

THE UTILITY BILL

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, Members of Congress are being flooded with propaganda against the pending utility bill. There has come to my desk this morning evidence of the most outrageous "racketeering" I believe I ever have known. I have a letter in my hand which explains what I mean and which reads as follows:

Representative RANKIN,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Representative Rankin: I am an employee of the Public Service Electric & Gas Corporation of New Jersey. Within the last few days, I and thousands of other employees of this public-utility company have been forced by the threat of losing our jobs to write to our Senators and Representatives in Congress protesting against the passage of the Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. Each employee was compelled to write three letters which were dictated and sent out by the executives of this company who then dictated and sent out by the executives of this company who then proceeded to charge each employee 9 cents for the stamps. We were not asked if we wished to write the letters. Nor was the Holding Company Act explained to us. We were simply given a sample letter (1 of which I enclose) and told to write 2 letters to our 2 Senators and 1 to our Representative. Any employee who had not written the three letters by 4 p. m. on Thursday, February 28, was denied his pay check until he had written the letters.

As a citizen of the United States and one who desires to see As a citizen of the United States and one who desires to see the country saved from communism, I emphatically protest against this coercion of employees by the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, and by other public-utility companies throughout the country, and I earnestly request you to expose this trickery in the House investigation.

I request that my name be kept confidential as my job depends Respectfully yours.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman name the company he alludes to?

Mr. RANKIN. It alludes to the Public Service Electric & Gas Corporation of New Jersey.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman give us the name of the person who wrote the letter?

Mr. SNELL. Why not put it all in? Mr. RANKIN. Here is the letter which he says the company had him write to his Congressman:

DEAR SIR: The utility-holding company legislation which will destroy all holding companies, good or bad, should be opposed by all fair-minded people. I hope that you will cast your vote against it.

Your views on this would be appreciated.

Yours truly.

That is the letter which he says they wrote for these | people with the demand that they send it to you.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of special orders, as well as business on the Speaker's table, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that tomorrow, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and of present special orders, he be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I shall not object to this request of the gentleman from North Carolina to address the House tomorrow, but I shall object to any more requests for permission to address the House on Thursday or Friday of this week, because we hope to take up and dispose of at that time the home owners' loan bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

HOLDING COMPANIES

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, undoubtedly every Member of Congress is receiving a tremendous amount of mail, as I am. In many of the letters Members are informed that if they support the Rayburn bill to regulate holding companies they will be killed politically. I am unable to answer all of the letters that I have received, but I want the people in my district to know that I am going to support that bill 100 percent, and they can do what they please about it. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to incorporate therein a radio address delivered by the national commander of the American Legion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks and to include therein a radio address of the national commander of the American Legion. Is there objection?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Is that the address delivered 2 days ago, wherein he complains that nothing has been done for the Nation by this administration?

Mr. FISH. This is an address upon adjusted compensation. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that the same address to which the gentleman referred the other day?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. And that is the same address which the gentleman agreed to put in at the same time Mr. Parman's remarks were incorporated?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Permission has already been granted

Mr. FISH. Not for me to do it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. For Mr. Parman to put it in before his remarks.

Mr. FISH. They want me to put it in; that is all.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It will be put in the RECORD in any event, and under the circumstances I am constrained to object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House has disposed of the bill H. R. 6028 today I may be permitted to address the House for 8 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that after the House has disposed of the bill H. R. 6023 today he may be permitted to address the House for 8 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Do I understand that the order of business today will be the calling of the Consent Calendar?

The SPEAKER. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Are we going to get to the Consent Catendar this afternoon?

The SPEAKER. It is proposed to call the Consent Calendar today.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call the attention of the gentleman from Ohio to the fact that there are six of us here who are waiting for the call of the Consent Calendar. I have no desire to object to the gentleman addressing the House, but I do not want to be compelled to hang around all afternoon waiting for that calendar to be called.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

ADJUSTMENT OF CERTAIN CLAIMS OF FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS, ETC. (H. DOC. NO. 117)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith a report by the Secretary of State recommending the enactment of legislation for the purposes described therein.

The recommendations of the Secretary of State have my approval, and I request the enactment of legislation for the purposes indicated in order that this Government may meet the obligations outlined in the report.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 4, 1935.

RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENT WITH BELGIUM

The SPEAKER. Under a previous order of the House the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. TREADWAY, for 15 minutes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Warren, be recognized immediately following the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina will be recognized on the bill H. R. 6028 as soon as the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts are concluded.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and in connection therewith to insert references to the agreement reached last week with the Belgian Government.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks and to include certain excerpts from an agreement reached last week with the Belgian Government. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FOREIGN TRADE TREATIES

Mr. TREADWAY. I am not sure whether the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARLAN] or I will have the last word in our friendly debate, but I shall keep trying.

My reason for this is not to have an argument directly with him, but to keep bringing to the attention of the people the inequity of a law which was enacted in the Seventy-third Congress at the behest and under the dictation of the administration, whereby the rights and privileges of the American people under the Constitution have been ruthlessly and unconstitutionally set aside and new methods of government adopted in a way not authorized by the electorate of the country.

Up to the last Congress every tariff rate put into effect from the beginning of the history of this country had been acted upon by the elected representatives of the people, including the changes made under the flexible provisions, where a tariff yardstick is definitely designated. I therefore want to avail myself of every opportunity possible of acquainting the people of the country with the impositions placed upon them by Public Law No. 316 of the Seventy-third Congress, known as the "Reciprocal Tariff Act."

The speech of the gentleman on Friday, March 1, is quite academic, but where it enters into any discussion of this question it is so inaccurate and so open to attack that before proceeding further let me refer very briefly to a few of the statements which he made.

I find he supports the method of star-chamber proceedings to which I have seriously objected and presents a picture showing bound volumes of hearings. There is nothing easier than to have a photograph taken, but it is a very different matter to pry into the secret meetings held with representatives of foreign governments in which this country's tariff policy is now determined and certain domestic industries are marked for slaughter.

I defy the gentleman from Ohio or any man holding views similar to his to show wherein any manufacturer of goods competitive with importations from Belgium was given the slightest information as to whether his products would be affected or the slightest information as to the amount of reduction in the tariff on those products previous to the announcement on Wednesday, February 27, that this reciprocal treaty had been ratified by representatives of the two governments.

Mr. HARLAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I am very sorry, but I cannot yield in the short time I have. I decline to yield, Mr. Speaker.

Was any opportunity given to American producers to be heard on the agreement after it was drawn up? There was not. Was any opportunity given to Congress, which under the Constitution has the sole power to fix tariff rates, to approve or disapprove of the reductions in duties provided by the agreement? There was not. The terms of the agreement were not given out until it was too late for American industry to say anything about the actual reductions effected or for Congress to do anything about them.

The gentleman from Ohio, in a speech a short time ago, tried to draw an analogy between the method of conducting these trade agreements and the method of writing a tariff bill in Congress. The only analogy is that the Ways and Means Committee holds public hearings before writing a new tariff bill, and that the terms of the bill are not known until after the hearings. After the bill is reported to the House, the representatives of the people have the right to say whether they will approve or reject it. Congress does not have the power to approve or reject the trade treaties.

After a tariff bill goes to the Senate, domestic manufacturers, producers, and importers have the opportunity to be heard on the bill as passed by the House, and the Senate has an opportunity to amend it. Finally, each House has the opportunity to vote on the conference report.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. TREADWAY. I decline to yield, Mr. Speaker.

There is another difference which is very fundamental. When Congress writes a tariff bill it does not consult with representatives of foreign countries as to what duties to impose. It does not permit foreigners to dictate our tariff rates. Instead it recognizes that the determination of our tariff policy is a domestic matter.

This brings me to another point, namely, that tariff duties not only have reference to the regulation of foreign commerce, but to domestic commerce and industry as well. Therefore, when the Democratic Congress enacted the Reciprocal Tariff Act it gave foreign countries an opportunity to help determine our internal commercial policy as well as our foreign commercial policy. For example, the Belgian representatives not only had a part in promoting exports of Belgian cement to the United States, but they also had a part in destroying the domestic cement industry.

In this connection, I desire to refer to the three privileged resolutions which I presented on January 28. These resolutions called upon the State, Commerce, and Agricultural Departments for the very information which I stated has never reached Congress, or the parties interested in knowing what items are under consideration in these foreign trade negotiations.

These resolutions were referred to the Ways and Means Committee. I did not expect them to meet with the favorable consideration of the administration. In view of the great pressure of pending matters before the Ways and Means Committee I agreed with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cooper] that I would not exercise my rights of calling these resolutions up until such time as he was ready to report upon them for the committee. This Congress is by right entitled to have the information these resolutions call for, but the absence of affirmative action on them is further proof of the statement I reiterated that starchamber methods are being used in violation of the rights of our citizens.

It was reported in the press that the Belgian representatives were particularly pleased with the signing of the trade agreement with their country. And why should not they be? They have visions of a greatly enlarged market in this country for the products of Belgian producers, including cement, plate glass, structural iron and steel, linen fabrics, flax, photographic paper, and so on. They would not be so pleased unless they expected their nation to receive the greater benefit. That is why they are pleased. [Applause.] They realize it is a one-sided agreement. They are getting all the benefit of the bargain; we are not.

At this point I want to call attention to some figures in the press release given out by the State Department at the time the Belgian agreement was announced. On the first page of the release I find a table showing the total export and import trade of this country with Belgium since 1926. The 1926 and 1934 figures are as follows:

Year	United States exports to Belgium	United States imports from Belgium
1926	$99, 299, 000 49, 814, 000	$77, 793, 000 26, 174, 000

Referring to the table, which I have not quoted in full, the State Department says:

These figures reveal substantial decreases in both exports and imports; from 1926 to 1934 our exports declined by half and our imports by two-thirds.

That statement is very significant. I call attention to the fact that from 1926 to 1934 we sold Belgium only 50 percent less, although we reduced our purchases from that country by two-thirds. From the standpoint of balance of trade we were better off in 1934 than in 1926. Yet the State Department is embarking this country upon a policy which will cause us to increase our present purchases in Belgium by nearly 300 percent in order to increase our sales to that country by 100 percent.

The Belgium agreement may benefit some of our domestic industries which do an export business, but in order to secure greater opportunities in the Belgian market for domestic exporters we must grant greater opportunities in the American market for Belgian exporters. Therefore, every time one American industry is benefited another is harmed. We may assume that in order to get Belgian concessions on American automobile parts the State Department reduced the duty on Belgian cement, thus threatening and perhaps destroying a large part of the domestic cement industry.

By throwing the men in the domestic cement industry out of employment through a reduction in the tariff, it is possible that the automobile-parts industry will be able to give additional employment to other men in order to take care of the increased foreign trade. But what is to happen to the men in the cement industry who are separated from their jobs? They are not skilled in making automotive parts and cannot be absorbed by that industry. Likewise, the domestic glass workers who will be thrown out of work by the reduction in the duty on Belgian glass cannot be put to work manufacturing radios for the Belgian market.

Every argument that is made in behalf of these trade treaties emphasizes and presupposes that by the extension of foreign trade we will increase our exports. My worry is the increase of imports, particularly at the present time when we have nearly 11,000,000 idle hands looking for work.

It is easy to argue, theoretically, that you will employ more people by increasing exports, but the practical results will be that there will be five thrown out of employment by the increase of importations for every additional worker employed on increased exports. We should not overlook the fact that the number of persons engaged in producing goods for export is only a small fraction of the total number of persons gainfully employed in this country.

Word just came to me this morning that the Colombian Legislature had adjourned without taking action on the reciprocal trade agreement recently negotiated by the President with that country. No doubt the reason was that Colombia would have received the short end of the bargain. Practically everything that Colombia ships to the United States is on the free list now, so it has nothing to worry about.

The gentleman from Ohio spent some time undertaking to show how attractive the Cuban trade agreement was to the farmers of Maine in opening a market for 3 months in the fall to Maine potatoes. Unfortunately for the argument of the gentleman the administration is now in process of negotiating a trade agreement with Canada and there hangs suspended over the heads of the Maine farmers the possibility of a reduction in the tariff on Canadian potatoes in accordance with the precedent established in the Cuban trade agreement.

Any lowering of that barrier in opening up American markets to Canadian farm products would be the surest way of guaranteeing a continuance of the present ruinous prices.

The gentleman paints a glowing picture of the Cuban market which has been opened to Maine potatoes and its beneficent effects. During the 6 months that the Cuban trade agreement has been in effect, Maine potatoes have gone from $1 a barrel to 35 cents a barrel, or 3 cents a peck which is the price that has prevailed for the past 3 months.

Does the gentleman wish to claim credit for this price which represents about one-quarter the cost of production and represents a loss to Maine farmers of $20,000,000?

But I want now to take up the gentleman's reference to Japanese bulbs. The gentleman from Ohio stated that as a result of the importation of Japanese electric-light bulbs the General Electric Co. had produced a 10-cent bulb of better quality without reducing wages.

This statement is as misleading as some others the gentleman has made. It conveys the idea that the price of the high-grade Mazda lamp for household use has been reduced to 10 cents. This is not the case.

In an effort to meet the Japanese competition, the General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Co. brought out a 10-cent bulb which has a life of about five or six hundred hours, the same as the Japanese lamp.

In buying either of these cheap lamps the housewife probably gets 10 cents' worth of merchandise and no more. In other words, if the tariff were sufficiently high to keep out the Japanese product, the American companies could devote their entire activities to producing a high-grade lamp which would, in fact, give the American housewife a better return for her money because of its relatively higher efficiency and quality.

There is another type of bulb, such as is used on toy automobiles, and in which there is a large volume of business, wherein the American producers are utterly unable to compete with the cheap Japanese bulb. The Jap bulb sells for half a cent and the domestic bulb for 2 cents, so that the effect on the American industry is quite obvious.

The following figures throw additional light on this particular subject. In spite of the efforts of domestic manufacturers to meet the competition of the inferior Japanese product, the value of such importations from Japan increased from $764,300 in 1933 to $838,000 in 1934. These figures include the miniature or toy lamps, Christmas-tree bulbs, and all other kinds of small lights.

In the larger or household type of lamp the importations increased from 19,343,000 lamps, with a value of $300,000, in 1933, to 25,595,000 lamps, with a value of $485,000, in 1934. These figures may furnish some degree of satisfaction to our low-tariff friends, but they can be of little comfort to the employees of the bulb plant in Buffalo which closed its doors 2 years ago because of Japanese competition.

Now, what has happened since the American factories brought out a 10-cent bulb? The Japanese have come in with a 5-cent bulb, which the General Electric Co. cannot meet. They put out that 5-cent bulb for 15, 30, and 60 watts. In 1932 there were 3,000,000 per month imported. For 5 months in 1934, 9,000,000 per month; three times as many 5-cent bulbs being imported today, on which the General Electric Co. cannot meet the price, as were imported 2 years ago. That information comes direct from General Electric Co. officials, and therefore I hope that the gentleman will find some pleasant way of answering it.

These figures are very illuminating as to what is going to happen to our industries when we grant this power to the President of the United States to write our tariff rates in conjunction with foreign representatives. I think the people are ready to rise in their might and object to that sort of procedure, opening the markets of this country to cheap foreign goods in competition with our type of living and the employment of our skilled mechanics. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Ohio has continually referred to trade agreements as "treaties", an admission of the contention I have made all along that there is to all intents and purposes no difference between the trade agreements now being negotiated and treaties. The gentleman proceeded to say that the treaty with Belgium was ratified by the representatives of that country. I have no interest in the manner in which treaties may be put into effect in Belgium. My interest is in the manner in which we carry out the provisions of our Constitution in enacting laws for the benefit of the people of this country.

I have asserted from time to time that the authority of the President under the Reciprocal Tariff Act is a violation of the Senate's treaty-making powers as well as an unconstitutional exercise of the taxing power of Congress. I recall that during the hearings on the measure I tried to obtain from Secretary Hull some information as to the distinction between a trade agreement and a treaty. He dodged the question by saying that the primary purpose of the proposal was to restore international trade.

When Secretary Hull's assistant, Dr. Sayre, was testifying, our former colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. Cochran, asked him to draw a distinction between the two. Mr. Sayre said:

A treaty, of course, must be ratified by the Senate. An Executive agreement, whether for the promotion of trade, such as provided for in this bill, or for some other purpose, does not require ratification by the Senate. The difference between agreements and treaties roughly is this. An Executive agreement, whether made in pursuance of legislative authority, or under the general power of the President to conduct international relations, must not contravene statutory law as enacted by Congress. A treaty, on the other hand, is not bound by previous enactments of Congress. A treaty is the supreme law of the land under our Constitution, just as legislation is.

Accepting Dr. Sayre's definition, I say that the Reciprocal Tariff Act does not provide for trade agreements which are within the definition laid down by him. The authority granted to the President is too broad to come within the limitations referred to. The trade agreements are not valid as Executive agreements, since they are not made in pursue.

ance of legislative authority validly delegated. Nor are they valid as treaties, since they are not required to be ratified by the Senate. Moreover, during the entire history of the country, when a treaty was negotiated with a foreign country which involved tariff duties, the House of Representatives has always insisted upon, and has been given, the concurrent right of ratification.

Referring to the Belgian agreement, I call attention to one provision which to my mind clearly demonstrates my contention that in effect the President is assuming treaty-making powers. The third from the last paragraph provides as follows:

As long as the present agreement shall remain in force it shall supersede any provisions of the treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States of America and His Majesty the King of the Belgians, concluded March 8, 1875, which may be inconsistent with the said agreement. However, upon the expiration of the present agreement, the provisions of the aforesaid treaty of 1875 which have been temporarily superseded shall automatically resume operation and shall continue in full force and effect, subject to termination as provided in that treaty.

In view of this language in the trade agreement, it is evident that it really has the force and effect of a treaty, since it suspends the operation of another treaty concluded some 60 years ago. The Senate has not advised and consented to this suspension.

Another provision of the Belgian agreement attracts my attention. I refer to the preamble, which states that the basis for the treaty is the desire to strengthen the "traditional bonds of friendship" with Belgium. I submit in all sincerity that the President has no power to reduce tariff duties for that purpose. The language of the Reciprocal Tariff Act states that before reducing duties the President must find as a fact that such duties are "unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States."

The language of the Reciprocal Tariff Act sets forth the whole purpose of the present program, namely, to expand the foreign markets for certain products of the United States. It occurs to me that a much more worthy purpose would be the expansion of the domestic market. Even in 1929 we consumed at home 90 percent of what we produced. Thus the relative importance of the domestic and foreign markets is at once apparent. The administration's present program gives first consideration to those producing for the foreign market. This policy nullifies the purpose of the 1930 tariff act, which is to "encourage the industries of the United States" and to "protect American labor."

By continuing to negotiate these trade treaties, the administration is undermining the entire tariff structure of the country. The policy of protection has been thrown into the discard.

The recently negotiated agreements with Cuba and Belgium, and the contemplated agreements with some 14 other countries, mean a change in the tariff policies of Congress. They involve an assumption of power by the President never heard of before in this country, and one which in due time will be resented by the voters at the polls.

Among the more important tariff concessions granted to Belgium were reductions of 25 percent in the duty on cement,  $33\frac{1}{3}$  percent on plate glass, and from 15 to 25 percent on structural iron and steel. These products are all used in construction work.

At the present time, the administration is engaged in a vast program of public construction, involving an expenditure of several billions of dollars, in order to give employment to men now out of work. Why, then, does it not pursue a consistent course and buy the materials to be used in this construction at home, and thereby give additional employment to our own workers? There might be some justification for squandering billions of the taxpayers' money on public works if the money were to find its way into the pockets of our unemployed, but there is no justification for spending any part of it on foreign building materials.

To those who say that the negotiation of these foreign trade agreements, with the consequent reduction in our tariff duties, is necessary in order that we may recapture our foreign trade, I would point out that our import and export trade is now on the increase and has been increasing since 1932. The latest figures I have are for the 9-month period ending September 30; 1934, which show a 41-percent increase in our exports over the same period in 1933 and an 18-percent increase in our imports. This increase took place before either the Belgian or Cuban trade agreements were negotiated.

In conclusion, I want to refer to a statement made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Harlan] in his remarks of last Friday, which I think brings to the fore the issue that is really presented by the reciprocal tariff law. He said:

The watch manufacturer and the cheese manufacturer are storming Congress for a tariff, but there is no one to speak for the exporter. The result is that unless a Congressman happens to be somewhat interested in the general welfare of the country there is no inducement for him to vote other than in favor of protection. It is this situation that has placed us in our present deplorable situation.

Before answering this statement I want to say that I do not agree that there is no one to speak for the exporter. The export industries are large and powerful, and can pretty well take care of themselves. In addition, they have the gentleman from Ohio to speak for them. He has several large export industries in his home city.

I do not agree that one who votes for protection does not have the general welfare at heart. I have voted protection for every part of the United States, not simply for my own district or State, and that is the principle upon which Republican protective tariffs are based. The general welfare means the greatest good for the greatest number, and I think the agricultural and manufacturing industries which produce for the home market far outnumber those who produce for the export market. Therefore, protection for the home market should be our first concern.

Now, to revert to the issue which I say is presented by the reciprocal tariff law: The gentleman from Ohio referred to the exporter, but he should also have included the importer who buys cheap foreign merchandise for a song and sells it to the American public for three or four times what it costs him. The question which must be decided is whether we are going to make it more profitable for the exporter and the importer to do business at the expense of those farmers, manufacturers, and workers who produce for the home market.

The administration has recently demonstrated that it is more concerned about the prosperity of the Cubans and the Belgians than it is about the prosperity of the great bulk of our own people. Perhaps if it gave more attention to improving conditions at home, rather than fattening the profits of foreign producers to the disadvantage of our own, our export industries could dispose of their entire production right here in the domestic market. After all, the only reason the automobile, typewriter, cash register, and other industries can compete so well in world markets is because of the great market they have in the United States, enabling them to produce their product at a lower unit cost.

There is some question whether the administration and our export industries are not somewhat in the position of the dog in Aesop's fables. It will be recalled that the dog had a succulent bone in its mouth, and in crossing a bridge over a small stream chanced to see his reflection in the water. In his greed to get the bone of the dog he saw in the water, he lost the one he already had. To my mind, there is a moral to that story which has direct application to the present policy of the administration regarding our foreign trade.

As an appendix to my remarks I shall insert in the Record a table showing the reductions in duty granted to Belgium under the recent trade agreement with that country. These reductions, I may say, will be extended to other nations by virtue of the so-called "most favored nation" clause in our treaties. This fact merely corroborates my previous statement that the administration's reciprocal tariff program is undermining our whole tariff structure.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Tariff reductions granted to Belgium under recent trade agreement

[The provisions of this schedule shall be construed and given the same effect, and the application of collateral provisions of the customs laws of the United States to the provisions of this schedule shall be determined insofar as may be practicable, as if each provision of this schedule appeared respectively in the paragraph of the Tariff Act of 1930 noted in the column at the left of the respective descriptions of articles. In the case of articles enumerated in this schedule, which are subject on the day of the signature of this agreement to ordinary customs duties imposed under provisions of law other than the paragraph of the Tariff Act of 1930 noted in the column at the left of the respective description of the article, or imposed under a proviso of the paragraph so noted, such separate or additional duties shall continue in force until terminated in accordance with law, but shall not be increased] riff Act f 1930, ragraph	Description of articles	Reduced rates of duty granted to Belgium	Rates specified by Congress in Tariff Act of 1930	Percent reduc- tion

6	Aluminum sulphate	0.2 cent per pound	0.375 cent per pound	46.
20	Chalk or whiting or paris white: Dry, ground, or bolted Ground in oil (putty)	do	0.4 cent per pound	50 331
24	Flavoring extracts, and natural or synthetic fruit flavors, fruit esters, oils, and essences, all the foregoing and their combinations, containing more than 20 percent and not more than 50 percent of alcohol.	30 cents per pound and 18 percent ad valorem.	40 cents per pound and 25 percent ad valorem.	25
27 29	Naphthalene which after the removal of all water present has a solidifying point of	3.5 cents per pound and 20 percent ad valorem. 5 cents per pound	7 cents per pound and 40 percent ad valorem. 10 cents per pound	50 50
72 81	Cobalt sulphate Lead pigments: White lead Sodium phosphate (except pyro phosphate): Containing by weight less than 45 percent of water	2.1 cents per pound	2.5 cents per pound	16
205 (b)	Containing by weight less than 45 percent of water  Not specially provided for  Roman, portland, and other hydraulic cement or cement clinker.	1 cent per pound 0.5 cent per pound 4.5 cents per 100 pounds, including weight of con- tainer.	1.5 cents per pound	333 333 25
207	Sand containing 95 percent or more of silica and not more than six-tenths of 1 percent of oxide of iron and suitable for use in the manufacture of glass.	$1 per ton	$2 per ton	50
220 222 (a)	Laminated glass composed of layers of glass and other material or materials, and manufactures wholly or in chief value of such glass.	45 percent ad valorem	60 percent ad valorem	25
222 (6)	Plate glass, by whatever process made: Not exceeding 384 square inches. Above that, and not exceeding 720 square inches. Above that, and not exceeding 1,008 square inches. All above that.	11.3 cents per square foot 11.7 cents per square foot 13.2 cents per square foot	12.5 cents per square foot 17 cents per square foot 17.5 cents per square foot 19.75 cents per square foot	33.
222 (b)	Provided, that none of the foregoing measuring ¼ inch or over in thickness shall be subject to a less rate of duty than.  Plate glass containing a wire netting within itself:  Not exceeding 384 square inches.	50 percent ad valorem	19.75 cents per square foot 50 percent ad valorem
	Above that, and not exceeding 720 square inches.	10 cents per square foot 13.2 cents per square foot 15.3 cents per square foot	15 eents per square foot 20 cents per square foot 23 cents per square foot	34 33.
222 (d)	Rolled, cylinder, crown, and sheet glass, not plate glass, if ground wholly or in part (whether or not polished), otherwise than for the purpose of ornamentation, or if enefourth of 1 inch or more in thickness and obscured by coloring prior to solidication. Provided that none of the foregoing measuring ½ inch or more in thickness and not containing a wire netting within itself shall be subject to less than the following rates	Subject to specific duties in 222 (a) or (b) above.	Subject to specific duties in 222 (a) or (b) above.	33.
Barrier	of duty:  If ground wholly or in part (whether or not polished) otherwise than for the purpose of ornamentation.	50 percent ad valorem	50 percent ad valorem
231	If not ground wholly or in part  Onal ename, or cylinder glass tiles and tiling	40 percent ad valorem 30 percent ad valorem	40 percent ad valorem	20 25
303	Muck bars, pieces thereof except crop ends, bar iron, and round iron in coils or rods, iron in slabs, blooms, loops, or other forms less finished than iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings; all the foregoing valued at not above 1½ cents per pound.	0.25 cent per pound	0.3 cent per pound	16.
304	Steel ingots, eogged ingots, blooms and slabs, by whatever process made; billets and bars, whether solid or hollow, weighing more than 30 pounds per linear foot:  Valued at not above 1½ cents per pound.  Valued above 1½ and not above 2½ cents per pound.	do	do 0.5 cent per pound	16.
304	Billets and bars, whether solid or hollow, weighing not more than 30 pounds per linear to ot, and concrete reinforcement bars:
304	Valued at not above 1½ cents per pound.  Valued above 1½ and not above 2½ cents per pound.  Die blocks or blanks; shafting; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded steel castings; sheets and plates and steel not specially	0.4 cent per pound 0.4 cent per pound	0.3 cent per pound 0.5 cent per pound	16. 20
307	provided for; all the foregoing:  Valued at not above 1½ cents per pound.  Value above 1½ and not above 2½ cents per pound.  Boiler or other plate iron or steel, except crucible plate steel and saw plate steel, not thinner, then one hundred and nine one-thousandths of 1 inch, cut or sheered to	0.4 cent per pound	0.3 cent per pound 0.5 cent per pounddo	16. 20 30
308	thinner than one hundred and nine one-thousandths of 1 inch, cut or sheared to shape or otherwise, or unsheared, and skelp iron or steel sheared or rolled in grooves, valued at not above 3 cents per pound.  Sheets of iron or steel, common or black, of whatever dimensions, and skelp iron or steel, valued at 3 cents per pound or less:  Thinner than one hundred and nine one-thousandths and not thinner than thirty- eight one-thousandths of 1 inch	do	0.45 cent per pound	22.
	Thinner than thirty-eight one-thousandths and not thinner than twenty-two one- thousandths of 1 inch.	0.45 cent per pound		18.
Name of	Thinner than twenty-two one-thousandths and not thinner than ten one-thousandths of 1 inch.	0.60 cent per pound	0.75 cent per pound	20
Min issu	Thinner than ten one-thousandths of 1 inch	0.70 cent per pound	0.85 cent per pound	17. 20
312	Beams, girders, joists, angles, channels, car-truck channels, tees, columns and posts, or parts or sections of columns and posts, and deck and bulb beams, together with all other structural shapes of iron or steel; any of the foregoing machined, drilled, punched, assembled, fitted, fabricated for use, or otherwise advanced beyond hammering, rolling, or casting.	15 percent ad valorem	20 percent ad valorem	25
314	Hoop or band iron, and hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation,	0.2 cent per pound	0.25 cent per pound	20
315	with or without buckles or fastenings, for baling cotton or any other commodity.  Wire rods: Rivet, screw, fence, and other iron or steel wire rods, whether round, oval, or square, or in any other shape, nail rods and flat rods up to 6 inches in width ready to be drawn or rolled into wire or strips, all the foregoing in coils or otherwise, valued at not over 2½ cents per pound.	0.25 cent per pound	0.3 cent per pound	16.
365	Shotguns: Valued at not more than $5 each	75 cents each and 221/2 per-	$1.50 each and 45 percent ad	50
	Valued at more than $5 and not more than $10 each	cent ad valorem.	valorem. $4 each and 45 percent ad	50
	Valued at more than $10 and not more than $25 each	valorem. $3 each and 2234 percent ad	valorem. $6 each and 45 percent ad	50
	Valued at more than $25 and not more than $50 each	valorem. $5 each and 22½ percent ad	valorem. $10 each and 45 percent ad	50
365	Valued at more than $50 each.  Barrels for shotguns, further advanced in manufacture than rough bored only	valorem. 32½ percent ad valorem $2 each and 25 percent ad	valorem. 65 percent ad valorem $4 each and 50 percent ad	50 50
909	Darrow let shoegans, turence acvanced in mandacente than rough bored only	valorem. $2.50 each and 25 percent ad	valorem.	50

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Tariff reduction granted to Belgium under recent trade agreement-Continued

Tariff Act of 1930, paragraph	Description of articles	Reduced rates of duty granted to Belgium	Rates specified by Congress in Tariff Act of 1930	Percent reduc- tion
365 365	Parts of shotguns and fittings for shotgun stocks or barrels, finished or unfinished	27½ percent ad valorem $5 each and 27½ percent ad valorem.	55 percent ad valorem $10 each and 55 percent ad valorem.	50 50
365 742	Shotgun barrels, in single tubes, forged, rough bored	5 percent ad valorem	10 percent ad valorem 25 cents per cubic foot of such bulk or the capacity of the packages according as	50
769	Peas, prepared or preserved in any manner, valued at 10 cents or more per pound	imported. 1.5 cents per pound on entire	imported. 2 cents per pound on entire	25
774 776 907	Endives in their natural state	contents of container. 35 percent ad valorem 1.5 cents per pound 30 percent ad valorem	contents of container. 50 percent ad valorem 2 cents per pound 40 percent ad valorem	30 25 25
921 1001 1005 (a) (2)	not in part of india rubber. Imitation oriental rugs, wholly or in chief value of cotton. Flax, not hackled, valued at $340 or more per ton. Cordage, including cables, tarred or untarred, composed of 3 or more strands, each strand composed of 2 or more yarns, wholly or in chief value of sunn, or other best	20 percent ad valorem 1 cent per pound 1.5 cents per pound	35 percent ad valorem 1.5 cents per pound 2 cents per pound	42.9 3334 25
1009 (b)	Moven fabrics, such as are commonly used for paddings or interlinings in clothing, wholly or in chief value of flax, or hemp, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, exceeding 30 and not exceeding 120 threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, and weighing not less than 4½ and	40 percent ad valorem	55 percent ad valorem	27.3
1009 (c)	not more than 12 ounces per square yard.  Woven fabrics, in the piece or otherwise, wholly or in chief value of vegetable fiber.	30 percent ad valorem	45 percent ad valorem	3314
1010	woven mories, in the piece or otherwise, whonly of in chief value of vegetable hoer, except cotton, filled, coated, or otherwise prepared for use as artists' canvas.  Woven fabrics, not including articles finished or unfinished, of flax, hemp, ramie, or other vegetable fiber, except cotton, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for.  Woven green billiard cloths, in the piece, weighing more than 11 ounces but not more	do	40 percent ad valorem	25
1109 (a) 1405	Woven green billiard cloths, in the piece, weighing more than 11 ounces but not more than 15 ounces per square yard, wholly of wool.  Vegetable parchment paper by whatever name known.	50 cents per pound and 40 percent ad valorem. 2 cents per pound and 10	50 cents per pound and 60 percent ad valorem. 3 cents per pound and 15	1 3314
1406	Sensitized paper, to be used in photography  Transparencies, printed lithographically or otherwise:  In not more than 5 printings (bronze printing to be counted as 2 printings)	percent ad valorem. 22½ percent ad valorem	percent ad valorem. 30 percent ad valorem. 40 percent ad valorem.	25
1410	In more than 5 printings (bronze printing to be counted as 2 printings)  Unbound prayer books, bound prayer books except those bound wholly or in part in leather, and sheets or printed pages of prayer books bound wholly or in part in leather, all the foregoing not specially provided for, if of bona fide foreign authorship.	37½ percent ad valorem	50 percent ad valorem	25 25 50
1404	All other prayer books, not specially provided for.  Provided, That none of the foregoing composed in chief value of India paper or bible paper shall be subjected by virtue of the first proviso of paragraph 1404 to a higher rate of duty than.	12½ percent ad valorem 3 cents per pound and 10 per- cent ad valorem.	25 percent ad valorem	50 50
1413 1501 (c)	Ribbon flycatchers or fly ribbons in chief value of paper.  Asbestos shingles and articles in part of asbestos, if containing hydraulic cement or hydraulic cement and other material:	2714 percent ad valorem	35 percent ad valorem	21.4
1520	If not coated, impregnated, decorated, or colored, in any manner.  If coated, impregnated, decorated, or colored, in any manner.  Hatters' furs, or furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, including fur skins car-	60 cents per pound	75 cents per pound	20 25 21, 4
1525 1529 (a)	roted.  Hair felt, made wholly or in chief value of animal hair, and manufactures of hair felt, all the foregoing not specially provided for.  Laces, lace fabrics, and lace articles, if exceeding 2 inches in width and made wholly by hand without the use of any machine-made material or article provided for in paragraph 1529 (a); articles made wholly of any of the foregoing; and articles, not wearing apparel, in part of any of the foregoing and containing no machine-made material or	20 percent ad valorem	25 percent ad valorem	20
	article provided for in paragraph 1529 (a); all the foregoing, finished or unfinished, however, described and provided for in paragraph 1529 (a);  Valued at more than $50 and less than $150 per pound	60 percent ad valorem	90 percent ad valorem	3314
1551 1551	Valued at $150 or more per pound.  Photographic dry plates, not specially provided for  Photographic films, sensitized but not exposed or developed, of every kind except motion-picture films having a width of 1 inch or more.	45 percent ad valorem 15 percent ad valorem 12½ percent ad valorem	20 percent ad valorem	3314 50 25 50
1551	Motion-picture films, sensitized but not exposed or developed, having a width of 1 inch or more.	0.2 cent per linear foot of the standard width of 13% inches, and all other widths of 1 inch or more shall be subject to duty in equal proportion thereto.	0.4 cent per linear foot of the standard width of 13% inches, and all other widths of 1 inch or more shall be subject to duty in equal proportion thereto.	50
1606 (a) (b) 1651	Horses	Free subject to the provisos of par. 1606 (a) and (b). Free	Free subject to the provisos of par. 1606 (a) and (b). Free
1685 1685	Basic slag  Precipitated bone of a grade used chiefly for fertilizers, or chiefly as an ingredient in the	do	do
1689	manufacture of fertilizers. Ossein	do	do	NEW YORK

1 On ad valorem rate.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEES

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 141

Resolved, That Leo Kocialkowski, of Illinois, be, and he is hereby, elected Chairman of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Insular Affairs.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further privileged resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 142

Resolved, That John J. Dempsey, of New Mexico, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Insular Affairs.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further privileged resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 143

Resolved, That Otha D. Wearin, of Iowa, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that the name of the committee has been changed to "Merchant Marine and Fisheries."

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to strike out the word "Radio."

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Samuel B. Hill: In the third line of the resolution, strike out the word "Radio."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

CLERK HIRE OF MEMBERS

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, under the unanimous-consent agreement heretofore entered into, I call up as a privileged bill from the Committee on Accounts H. R. 6028, to provide for additional clerk hire in the House of Representatives, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for pay to clerks to Members of Congress and Delegates", approved January 25, 1923 (U. S. C., title 2, sec. 92), is amended by striking out "to one or two persons" and inserting in lieu thereof "to one, two, or three persons."

SEC. 2. Section 2 of the Legislative Pay Act of 1929 (U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 2, sec. 606) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. The clerk hire of each Member, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner shall be at the rate of $6,000 per annum and shall be paid in accordance with the joint resolution of January 25, 1923, as amended. No person shall receive a salary from such be paid in accordance with the joint resolution of January 25, 1923, as amended. No person shall receive a salary from such clerk hire at a rate in excess of $3,900 per annum, and no two persons shall receive salaries from such clerk hire at a rate which, when combined, is in excess of $5,000 per annum."

Sec. 3. Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the provisions of law making applicable to clerk hire the reduction which is applicable to the compensation of officers and employees of the reduction and supplicable to the compensation of officers and employees of the Federal Government generally, and such reduction shall apply to the sum of $6,000 herein provided for, but in the case of a Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner whose clerk hire is distributed to but two persons, such reduction shall apply as if the amount of the annual clerk hire were $5,000.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 10, strike out the figures "606" and insert "60b." Strike out all of section 3 and insert a new section to read as follows:

"That this act shall become effective April 1, 1935."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran].

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, this resolution comes from the Committee on Accounts without a recommendation, as the report states, because it is so peculiarly personal to the Membership of the House. When the original bill was introduced by Mr. White, it was upon my motion in the committee that that bill was tabled. A second bill was introduced. I had made an investigation in the meantime, a thorough investigation as to the situation confronting Members of the House, and it was upon my motion that the committee voted to reconsider the entire question which resulted in the reporting of the resolution without recommendation so that each Member of the House would have the opportunity to vote upon the question.

I desire to tell the House why I changed my views upon this legislation. As I said a moment ago, I made an investigation of my own to determine just what the situation was confronting the Members, especially the Members who are not favored by being chairmen of committees. As you all know, the chairmen of the various committees have extraclerks, myself included. I have, however, but one clerk and a messenger. I do not have an assistant clerk as practically all the other committees have.

Some years ago I agreed with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], to whom I want to pay a tribute today not only for his ability but his fairness at all times, that I would join with him in preventing any extra position in the House of Representatives being created. I have never asked for an assistant clerk, to which my committee is entitled, and I do not propose to ask for one.

Since the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] has been the Chairman of the Accounts Committee we have not created one new position in the House of Representatives; and the gentleman from North Carolina and myself always joined with the Republican Members of the House when they were in control of the committee in preventing additional positions being created in the House of Repre-

Now, why do I take the position here this morning in favor of this resolution? I talked to Mr. Scott, the Postmaster, about 10 days ago. He told me then that there was not one Member of the House of Representatives whose mail had not increased 20 percent, and he thought a very fair average was 33 1/3 percent. On my way to the Chamber this morning I again talked to Mr. Scott, the Postmaster. He told me that I could change the figures. He said the minimum increase is 331/3 percent, and that the mail of many Members had increased 50 percent; and he added this-I am now quoting Mr. Scott—that there are Members of the House of Representatives who today receive 500 to 1,000 letters. Not all, but a number received this amount of mail. Mr. Scott further told me this morning that, much as he regretted it, he was going to be compelled to come to the Committee on Accounts and ask that committee for not less than three additional clerks, and if he did not get them, he could not see how he could separate and deliver the mail daily to the Members of the House. I am using Mr. Scott's language now. That is why I changed my views.

Mr. Speaker, the responsibility rests with the Members of the House.

I think if a public official wants to be retired to private life the best way to accomplish it is to fail to answer the mail he receives from his constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I have rounded out over 22 years of service in some capacity with the Congress of the United States first as a secretary to a Congressman, then to a Senator, also as secretary of a powerful Senate committee, and the last 9 years as a Member of the House. Except during the period of the war, I have never experienced such heavy mail as is coming to my office at the present time. Five stenographers are working overtime. Two of my clerks were at my office yesterday, Sunday. I did not ask them to report, but they were on hand. No matter what it costs me personally, I am going to answer the letters that come to me. That has been and will always be my policy.

Now, what does this resolution do? First, the most important, is that it allows Members to appoint three rather than two clerks; second, it is so worded that no one can secure an increase in salary. The fact is, when the Member appoints three clerks, many will receive a slight reduction in salary in order to give the third clerk a living wage.

I represent about 300,000 citizens. If this bill becomes a law, the citizens in my district will each be taxed one-third of a cent a year to meet the additional amount provided for our clerk hire-one-third of a cent per year. I think my constituents are willing to spend one-third of a cent a year when they know it means prompt service whenever they write their Representative in Congress.

Having made a thorough investigation, knowing the situation that confronts the Members of this House, I propose to vote for the resolution. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks, I add the following: Since I addressed the House an amendment was adopted, offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Ford]. That amendment provided that relatives of Members of the Congress cannot be placed on the pay roll. It is not limited to the $1,000 additional clerk hire, but to the entire amount allowed for that purpose.

Had I been against the resolution at the outset, I would have changed my vote and supported the resolution as amended because this amendment was added. I am the author of the married woman's clause in the economy bill, known as "section 213." I am in favor of applying that clause to the legislative branch of the Government as well as to the executive branch, and that is the reason that I would have supported the bill, even though I had been opposed to the original resolution. I voted for Mr. Ford's amendment and was pleased to see it added to the resolution. In my opinion, there is a job for every family in the United States, even today, if the work was properly spread by private industry as well as local State and Federal Governments.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McLEAN].

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill, which will increase the expenses of Congress more than $500,000 annually. It is not pleasant to differ with my colleagues, when the matter in controversy is one the nature of which makes it peculiarly personal. Strong friendships and high regard develop from the ability and industry manifested in our association here, particularly in committee work, and one regrets that these happy contacts should be disturbed. My hope is that I may suggest a few thoughts, which might be lost sight of in the stress of the moment.

The bill detracts from the dignity of the House; it will add an annual expenditure upward of $500,000 to the expenses of Congress, which ought not to be done in the light of the present and prospective condition of the Treasury; and the need for additional clerks is questionable.

When this proposal was first made, it contemplated the employment of extra clerks for the balance of the session only, which would have cost less than half the amount now involved. That proposition was rejected in the Committee on Accounts by unanimous vote. Now we are asked to go much further and enact a law which will provide additional clerk hire for the entire year and annually thereafter. This proposal was made without any study or businesslike consideration of the need for additional clerks—certainly not with the thoughtfulness which a man would give to increasing the overhead of his own business more than $1,000 a year.

Much has been said about service to one's constituents. I agree with the sentiment, but I would add to it another and larger service which I believe a Congressman owes to his people and to the country-that is the obligation of leadership and example. We are privileged to hold membership in a body which should command respect. Newspaper publicity that has been going out from Washington has detracted from and affected that dignity adversely. There have been reports of conferences and committees in an effort to supply the demands of Members of Congress for patronage. These activities have had wide publicity and have cheapened membership in this body and held its Members up to ridicule. The demands have indicated that their purpose is to provide jobs for deserving political friends and not to improve efficiency. The suggestion contained in this bill smacks of another move in the patronage direction. We are sent here for quite another purpose than to drain the Treasury. To serve one's people with reason, industry, dignity, and with some idea of economy may not seem to inspire the electorate and have as much vote-getting power as the distribution of jobs, but the observant citizen is inspired by it to greater respect for and support of his Government, and I believe it has the greater vote-getting

We are living in times when our first thought should be of economy in government, and who but Members of Congress should set the example. This proposal will mean an annual cost of upward of $500,000. The cost of clerk hire will be $470,000 annually, and there must be added to this the incidental expenses which each new employee necessitates. Each clerk, to be of any use, must be provided with a desk and typewriter, which will add another $75,000. The use of the telephone, which is paid for on a per call basis, will increase with the addition of each new employee, and each of these new clerks will be entitled to all the perquisites of an officer of the House, including funeral expenses and death gratuities, and an additional clerk will be required in the office of the disbursing clerk to attend to pay rolls and checks.

Did you ever stop to think, ladies and gentlemen, how much money is spent to carry on the affairs of Congress? The ordinary expenses are wasteful, and we have created special and select committees—of doubtful value—and have authorized the expenditure by them of large amounts for carrying on investigations into various matters, resulting in the employment of numberless special experts, clerks, and assistants.

Also, have we room for this army of new employees? The facilities provided for Members are now so taxed that frequently the restaurant and barbershop are so crowded as to drive Members out of the building for such service, and the elevators are always crowded. What will be the situation with 440 more?

I am as busy as any Congressman. My time is sorely taxed, my mail is heavy, my district is in close proximity to Washington, and I have as many visitors as any other Member. I do my share of committee work and I am faithful in my attendance at the sessions of the House. I do considerable research and study of questions before us. My staff is efficient, familiar with my district, and we manage to get along by attending to business. Of course, while Congress is in session our hours are long and our work exacting, but for the balance of the year our duties are not onerous. Just now we have very heavy mail and great demands, but it has been my experience that toward the end of the session this will not be. Committee work will have been completed and only routine matters will remain for attention.

Let us demonstrate to the country that Congress can be economical and industrious, that, after all, we are not job seekers or patronage mongers, and let us emphasize by our actions the hope for a balanced Budget. An additional expense of half a million dollars annually for congressional clerk hire may not seem large when our minds are tuned to think in billions, but it is a rather respectable amount in the habit of life and thought of the average taxpayer, and will amount to something when we get around to payment of the public debt.

To vote for this bill is to totally disregard the principle of budgeted expenditures and to put out of balance by a half million dollars the efforts of the Committee on Appropriations.

There have been times in the past when Congress overstepped the bounds of propriety in matters of this sort. There is danger that, unless the greed for patronage ceases, this may happen again, and Members may find it necessary to give up much that they now have to appease the wrath of their constituents.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan].

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, this is not a political question. This is a question of whether or not we want to give efficient service to the country. What would you do in your own private business if it increased to the extent that you needed an additional clerk? Would you not in the regular way hire that clerk? Of course, you would. Otherwise your business would not be properly and successfully carried on. The question before us is purely a business one; it concerns the efficiency of our clerical help. Are we going to get an adequate staff to carry on the ever-increasing demands made on us? We should render proper service to our constituents. They demand it. I claim we are not giving proper service if we are unable to promptly answer their letters. Only a few minutes ago you heard the request of our colleague, Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania, requesting permission to notify his people of his inability to answer their letters, the notice to be printed in the RECORD. I contend we are not giving efficient service if we are 2 or 3 weeks late in answering letters. or do not answer them at all. Only this morning at a hearing of the Appropriations Committee on the deficiency bill a request was made by one of the departments for additional funds for stationery because of the increased mail handled by their department.

If you hire a mechanic to do work, you want him properly equipped, you want him to have modern tools, otherwise he cannot do a good day's work or render efficient service. So we should have help enough to properly carry on.

It has been stated that the ordinary daily output of a stenographer, taking long and short letters, as an average, would be about 40 letters a day.

In addition to that, there is the answering of telephone calls and the reception of visitors, all of which takes additional time. So you can see the impossibility of two clerks attending to a daily mail of 200 or more letters. Surely we ought to have the courage to stand up here and demand proper clerical assistance, irrespective of what it costs, in order to be in position to adequately and properly care for the services which our constituents require. If we are indifferent about it, it appears to me we do not have a proper consideration of our responsibility to our constituents. Our people want prompt and efficient service; pass this bill and give it to them. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Mott.]

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I did not ask for time on this debate, and I did not know that any had been allotted to me. However, I am glad to give you my views on the bill.

I was quite interested in this subject when it was first brought up, and I immediately made a careful check-up of the volume of stenographic work in my office for the purpose of determining whether an additional clerk could be effectively employed; I mean by that, whether the services of a $1,000-per-year clerk would be worth the cost. I came to the conclusion that outside of the necessary replies to the propaganda letters, my present office force can take care of all of the correspondence. We have been obliged to answer a large part of the propaganda letters, those inspired by organized crusaders, and so forth, by resort to multigraph or mimeograph letters. Of course, that is not satisfactory to some of our constituents, but I have found that nearly all propaganda letters are themselves form letters, and that most of them can be properly and satisfactorily answered by a form letter.

It is my opinion that all of the legitimate correspondence which comes to our office now can be taken care of by our present force. And I may say further that every individual letter we receive gets an individual reply. For this reason I am not able at the present time to see the necessity for an extra clerk, whose principal work in my office would be to actually type the class of form letters which we are now obliged to turn out on the multigraph machine. I would, of course, rather send out this class of letters individually typed, but I doubt the necessity or propriety of doing this at an additional expense to the taxpayers.

I would have a great deal more use for an additional $3,000-a-year secretary than for a $1,000 clerk. Another secretary could relieve me of a considerable part of the office work which I now must do myself and thereby afford me more time for work on the floor of the House. But I do not see how an additional $1,000-per-year typist could help much in this respect.

Of course, the Republicans at this session of the Congress are not bothered with matters of patronage, and therefore I imagine that the Democratic Members have a little more of that class of correspondence than the Republicans.

Mr. WHITE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE. There is nothing mandatory in this law to put on an additional clerk if not needed?

Mr. MOTT. I understand that is a provision in the bill, and I think it is a very proper one.

Mr. WHITE. I may inform the gentleman that under the terms of this bill he is limited to $5,000 a year if he uses two clerks, the same as now, and if the extra clerk is not needed there is no necessity for putting him on.

Mr. MOTT. I said that was a good provision.

Mr. SHORT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. I think it is true that all of us are literally swamped with work, but if we would abolish the innumerable bureaus and alphabetical agencies which our opponents on the other side promised to abolish during the last campaign and have failed to do, we would not need the additional clerks.

Mr. MOTT. There may be something to what the gentleman says.

Mr. COLDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. COLDEN. Does not the gentleman believe if we would employ three or four clerks for the same money we now have, that we could carry on the duties of our office more efficiently? As a matter of fact, it is not limited to two.

Mr. MOTT. I am not so sure that would be so, I may say to the gentleman, because I think it would be rather difficult to hire more than two efficient clerks with the allowance we have at the present time.

Mr. COLDEN. We could do so for a short time only. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton].

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I regret very much to oppose anything that my colleagues in this House think necessary to the proper discharge of their public duties. However, I cannot convince myself that I would be justified in supporting this resolution.

When I entered Congress 24 years ago this date, the clerk hire was $1,500 per annum to each Member. Of course, it is true that our work has increased considerably since that time, but I doubt if the increase has been proportionate to the increase that has been made in allowance for clerk hire.

There has been some reference made to the fact that the chairmen of committees have some advantage, inasmuch as they can use their committee clerks in connection with their regular work as Representatives. May I say, as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, that the clerks of our committee since I have been a member, for a period of about 10 years, have had their hands entirely full in the work of the committee; nor has the number of clerks to that committee been increased.

These charges might apply to some of the minor committees, which have very few legislative problems to deal with or duties to discharge; but I am sure the chairmen of the major committees of the House get no relief from this source.

Of course, we are all inundated with a lot of worthless propaganda, which does not necessarily require an answer; and I believe the present allowance for clerk hire is adequate for the important or necessary work incident to our duties.

The clerk-hire allowance is now $5,000 per annum, less the 5-percent discount, which will be restored at an early date; and to increase this amount at the present time, when the Treasury is in the red and the tax burdens of the people are so heavy, I think is in every way indefensible.

I shall therefore vote against the pending resolution.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Romjue].

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, during my service in this House I have served with approximately 2,000 men. I have seen about that many men come and go. I want to say that I have never served or have never been in company with a finer set of men than those who composed the membership of this House from the time I started my service down to this present hour. I may say for the employees of the Members of Congress, regardless of what the public may say, that they have been just as highly efficient and just as loyal and just as considerate of the public interests as the Members of Congress have been.

May I leave a thought with you? We are now in the midst of President Roosevelt's first term, and I regret to hear nearly every night over the radio some Member of this House, for partisan reasons, as I believe, going out and trying to assassinate his character, slandering him, and all that.

Mr. Speaker, we are living in one of the three most important periods of this Government: The first, when the Government was founded; the second, the Civil War period; and the third, the present time. Let us rise to the occasion and not be Democrat or Republican. Let us make a sacrifice like the people back on the farm and in the factory, and as those without jobs are making sacrifices. Yes; I have answered a lot of mail. I never came to Washington until just time to get here before we convened. I am not saying that every Member of this House has not done just as much work in behalf of his constituency as I have done. I have kept a tabulation of the work, and I have answered over 20,000 letters in the last 12 months, and I have seen in my home, individually, over 6,500 people, during the part time that I was back in Missouri.

There never has been in my entire lifetime a period when recovery was as rapid as it has been under President Roosevelt's administration. Of course, if propaganda, misrepresentations, and false statements are to be broadcast and everybody is to believe everything they hear and read, then God pity their souls, because nobody has control of that except themselves and their own Creator, and I am sure He will not mistreat them.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. ROMJUE. I will be glad to do so.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Do you not think at a time like this, when millions are out of employment, that the Members and their secretaries should be willing to make sacrifices and do some extra work if necessary, arduous as it is, and that this should be done without further burden upon the taxpayers?

Mr. ROMJUE. Of course, the gentleman from Missouri is, like he always is, absolutely right. I appreciate what he has called my attention to in this regard. He knows as well as I do, and as is evidenced by his question, that the problem before this Congress, before the country, and before the people in general, whether they be in Congress or cut, is to reestablish prosperity, and, as I have in a way pointed out, that prosperity and recovery is on its way, and we ought not to add any additional burden to the people. It will only be stopped by one of two methods. I certainly hope the people will not criticize President Roosevelt and break down this recovery which is on its way, and God knows this Congress ought not to do so, when they promised the people they would stay with the President and aid him in every reasonable way.

No public official need delude himself with the idea that he will always be understood fully by his constituents. The only problem he has ahead of him is to use all the judgment and sense he has in determining what ought to be done under the given circumstances and do that which he thinks to be right, whether he is understood or not. It matters little whether he is praised or not. It is given to every man to live his own life, and, according to my philosophy, he is happiest who does the best he knows in behalf of his country and those he has been chosen to represent, and it means little whether it is interpreted correctly or not. This is the wrong time to increase salaries anywhere. I have served in Congress a good many years, and, as I have said before, I have seen a good many men come and go. No human being can hope to satisfy or please everybody and none will attempt to do that when the effort would deviate a man from the course that he honestly believes he should follow. Should he fall by the wayside in an effort to please without regard to his duty or service, he merely wastes his time.

I want to repeat that many men in this body have sacrificed their health and life in the service of the people whom they represent, perhaps condemned, but, after all, one should be a good soldier and serve the public interest in the best manner he knows without regard to consequences.

I do not believe—in fact, I feel sure—that since the foundation of the American Government there never have been as many ideas prevalent as there are today with as low a percentage of actual valuable thoughts.

We are now advancing into an era of renewed prosperity if those who are talking most will cease criticizing and get to thinking and devoting their time to their own immediate problems. The facts are these: Within 3 months before President Roosevelt came into office, corn in my section of Missouri was selling for 15 cents to 17 cents per bushel; today it is selling for more than $1 per bushel. Hogs were selling at that same time from $2.50 to $3 per hundred; today they are selling for over $9 per hundred. Mules are selling for nearly three times as high today as they were when Hoover went out of office and horses are selling from two and one-half to three times as high, and cattle are selling today from two and one-half to three times as high as they were when Hoover went out of office. Will the American people rise up and criticize that?

Let us not add any more burdens to the problems that President Roosevelt already has to carry.

Quite well do I realize that some, at the present time and during the past few years, have been willing to believe anything they hear and state things half of which are untrue, but those who have been placed in positions of trust and authority ought to give little weight to matters of this kind.

Their problem is to know what the facts and truths are and to do their duty. I believe this is the problem before us, whether we are praised or condemned. That is a matter of minor consequences. I believe the majority in this House will sustain me in this view.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I realize the embarrassment to Members of this proposal to add an additional clerk. I was here when Congress voted to increase its own salary and appreciate such embarrassments. Personally, I am not interested in the matter. I believe my committee, like most other committees, is well manned with clerks. There may be a few committees which do need more clerks, and that matter should be attended to. I do believe the average Member here who is not the chairman of a committee does not have sufficient help to answer his mail and serve his constituency. [Applause.] This bill will correct that.

As in the case of the increase in Members' salaries, a Member did not have to take it, nor does he have to put on this additional employee unless he sees fit to do so. I am sorry to see that this matter has become more or less of a partisan measure. I have been informed that the minority will vote for it almost as a unit. This, of course, is simply partisan politics—to try to put the Members of the majority side in the hole and to create a fear in their minds that they cannot face their people back home. I do not believe any Member should fear how he votes on this subject in reference to his people back home. [Applause.] I believe those people want representation and I believe that if the Members really and sincerely feel that an additional clerk is necessary to serve their constituents, they should, without hesitancy, vote for such additional clerk, and I am confident they can justify themselves before their people back home. [Applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Eaton].

Mr. EATON. Mr. Speaker, as I did not know I was to be given opportunity to speak on this bill, I feel like the gentleman who put on his tombstone, "I expected this, but not so soon." [Laughter.]

What I object to in this whole situation is an attempt to attribute a sinister and selfish motive to the Members of this House when they are simply trying to equip themselves to handle their business properly. No matter how urgent the need may be, I resent and object to associating myself with a vote of this House expressing an inferiority complex which our critics attribute to cowardice and hypocrisy.

This morning in my first mail were 103 letters, every one of which has to be answered. My mail runs now from a thousand to two thousand a week. The new deal has thrust the Government into every business and every home, and a Representative in Congress has become a special agent to deal with scores of new bureaus and authorities on matters never before handled by a Federal agency. Personally, I think it is necessary, in order properly and promptly to discharge our obligations to the people who sent us here. that we be properly equipped. But I refuse to be placed in the position of seeming to seek some selfish and unnecessary personal advantage in a matter purely of official and public interest. I do not believe it is expected of any Member of this House to vote for more help unless he needs it, and I would like to see this vote taken, not as an attempt to put this man or that man on the spot, but as a business proposition alone regardless of politics or personalities. [Applause.] We need help, and because we need it we ought to have the courage to get it. But the method of presenting this legislation lays us open to such unfair and undeserved attack that I am constrained to wash my hands of the whole proposition. [Applause.]

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. EATON. I am of a yielding disposition, but I am through. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Arizona [Mrs. Greenway.]

Mrs. GREENWAY. Mr. Speaker, I speak with a sense of timidity, because, even if I get an extra clerk, I will still be employing a great many more than the Government allows, and I hope you will not think it is inefficiency.

Something has not been said this morning, which I think has a place. The American people are in great distress, and the fact that they are thinking is the greatest blessing that we have today. [Applause.] Upon their understanding and their courage depends our ability to recover, because they are the ones who have got to make the sacrifice and make the fight. [Applause.] They are seeking the truth.

In our mail we can, all of us, throw aside a great deal that is propaganda, vicious and malicious, but the rest of that mail is mail that we should study. It is mail that we should answer thoughtfully, because our people back home are trying to help, and we here who are befogged on every side, are being turned to by them and asked to what extent they can hope and how, and I think we owe it to the American people today to give them of our best, and if we do not answer these letters honestly, I think we have failed them, and I do not think we can answer them if we are not given more help. [Applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Fulmer].

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, under the present law Members of Congress are allotted annually $5,000 each to take care of the employees in their offices and in their districts. However, under the present act Members are only permitted to place on the pay roll two employees.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan] stated a few minutes ago that if some business man needed an additional employee he would hire one. I agree with the gentleman. However, no business man would set aside $5,000 to be used for the purpose of hiring only two employees, knowing he could use same in hiring three well-paid employees. In the next place, a business man would be free to hire and fire, in line with the activity of his business. In other words, prior to coming to Congress I was engaged in a large general mercantile business, employing a number of clerks. In the fall I had my busy season, and in the summer my dull season in business. As a business man, we will say, with this $5,000 for clerk hire I would use more clerks in the fall than I would in the summer; but, taking the year as a yardstick, I could successfully run my business and serve my customers and stay within the $5,000 limit.

Certainly, we all know that the Congress is in session but 9 to 10 months only out of every 24 months during a 2-year term. I agree with you that during the session of Congress we need more than two employees, but what about the 14 months when we return home, where we have the privilege of visiting our constituents and where they have the privilege of calling on us? Certainly our volume of mail during this period is much smaller than when we are in session.

It is simply a common-sense business proposition of controlling this $5,000 so that it can be used when and where needed.

No doubt the present act is responsible for many Congressmen placing on their pay rolls some one of their own family, so as to control the distribution of the allotment under the act governing clerk hire.

During the past 2 years, prior to the last election, I continuously employed three in my office, two of them not being on the pay roll. In fact, during this period I was able to work in my office 15 stenographers, other than my main secretary, securing positions for them in the various Departments here in Washington, paying them while working for me.

I have three working full time at present in my office, and have the money out of the $5,000 allotment to pay these employees without calling upon the taxpayers of the country for an additional $1,000, as proposed under this bill. When I ran for reelection to Congress, I knew, and my constitutents knew, that the Congressmen were allotted $5,000 each to run their office. What my people are concerned about is service and not how many employees are in my office, or the policy of employing or distributing the employment. I have the reputation in my district of rendering prompt and efficient service through my office. It is common talk in the home and on the streets in my district that all you have to do is to write your Congressman, and you will hear from him and get results. However, as stated, I could not do this if I were compelled to split the allotment with two employees for continuous service in session and during the adjournment of Congress.

Senators receive $10,000 each per year for clerk hire, and, while it is true they have voted an additional $1,500 each for extra clerk hire, that should be no good reason why Members of Congress should do so. Senators have to give an account of their stewardship to their constituents, and that is clearly their affair. I am responsible for my individual record in Congress and service to the people of the Second Congressional District of South Carolina. My people have confidence in me, in my common-sense platform, and in my business ability, shown to them as a farmer and successful business man; and it is my firm belief that this confidence, my record, and my efficient, satisfactory service to my people and to my country is the reason for my reelection to Congress for the past 14 years.

Why are we receiving so much mail? It is my belief that it is largely because Congress is hesitating in carrying out the President's legislative program. Additional appropriation to enable the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to continue to save the homes of the people of this country was requested by the President. However, this bill is still pending with the Banking and Currency Committee. Naturally, these people who are losing their homes while Congress hesitates are writing us. The work-relief bill appropriating around $5,000,000,000,000, although it has passed the House, is still tied up in the Senate and apparently for no other reason than political.

Certainly, the millions of unemployed people who have been told that they would be put to work as soon as these funds are placed in the hands of the President, have cause for writing us.

In the President's first message to the Congress he strongly urged the passage of an old-age-pension bill and unemployment-insurance legislation, however, Congress has been in session 2 months and apparently we are right where we started in enacting such legislation. I am receiving many letters from old people residing in my district and the unemployed urging the passage of these bills, and they are to be commended in so doing. We boast of having the greatest republic and of being the richest nation on the face of the earth, yet we have thousands of old people living in poverty, not being able to buy the real necessities of life, and in most every instance it is no fault of theirs. If we will proceed and get results in Congress, certainly this overflow of mail will subside, hasten prosperity, increase revenue, and restore the confidence of the American people.

My people know, or should know, that I am not responsible for the administration of legislation after same has been passed by the Congress, but they know also that it is the proper function of Congress to constructively work out and pass legislation suggested by the President. No successful business man would dare to conduct his business, I care not what line he is engaged in, along the lines pursued by Congress, as well as the various departments of Government; if he did, it would not be long before he would be out of business. And I want to call to your attention the fact that many letters that I am now receiving are calling my attention to this.

The issuing of billions of bonds and the voting of additional taxes will have to cease sometime or we can prepare to face the real facts that either we will pass on to future generations a tax burden that will eventually bring about a standard of living and a citizenship that will destroy this great democratic Government or conditions similar to those of foreign countries which exist today.

I am still proposing to you to let us go forward on a common-sense basis, cut, if possible, red tape and lost motion, and do our best to serve our constituents and our country on the same business basis that we would in conducting our own business.

A great many Members have stated, "Let us pass this bill without a record vote", in that a yea-and-no vote would put Members on the spot. My reelection placed me on the spot, and our constituents have a right to know just how we stand on all matters passed upon by the Congress, and no real Congressman, for political reasons or otherwise, should desire to dodge the real issue. I personally have won the respect and confidence of my constituents by speaking frankly and courageously at all times and voting my convictions. I had rather go down in defeat at the hands of my people knowing that I was right than to play politics and eventually go down in defeat and be recorded as a politician and a failure.

While we have at this time over 10,000,000 of people unemployed, many of them in bread lines, anxious and ready to go to work, and farmers and business everywhere staggering under unbearable taxes, let us vote this bill down and save the taxpayers this additional sum of $500,000, which it will take to pay for this extra clerk hire.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think I have as much mail as any Member of this House. I have two efficient clerks; they work and I work, and my mail is up to date, and all answered. I do not believe my work has been in any way neglected. I do not believe that if Members of the House will get out and work and attend to their jobs they need any extra help. I believe they have enough now, and I cannot see any possible excuse for this bill. It is not merited, politically or otherwise, except we are asking for something we ought not to have—taking $500,000 out of the Treasury of the United States for the benefit of Members of Congress that we ought not to take.

Is it not time for us to have some sense of responsibility and meet our responsibilities and not go haywire? Just because everybody else is going haywire is no reason why the Members of the House of Representatives should go haywire. I have not the slightest doubt if we would reorganize our offices that are not getting out their work and put them on a business basis, we would be able to meet every obligation that we have without the slightest additional expense. I hope that the House of Representatives will stand up today and do what it ought to and vote this down. We have already increased our appropriations for other items for the House of Representatives nothwithstanding this has been supposed to be a day of retrenchment. Let us not go any further. Let us stop this proposition of imposing a continuous charge of $500,000 per year on the people. Do not go back home and say that you are so incompetent that you cannot run your offices on $5,000 a year clerk hire. Do you suppose the people back home are going to believe you if you go back there with that kind of a story? It is time for us to stand up and do what is right.

Mr. KELLER (and several Members). Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield. It is quite evident that a lot of Members are trying to get in on my speech. I only want them to vote right. I do not care about the speech. Let us meet our responsibility and not raid the Treasury. I know it is popular to raid the Treasury just now, but this time let the House of Representatives stand up and do right.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Powers].

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Speaker, I certainly dislike to disagree with my colleague, Mr. Taber, and I do not like to disagree with my colleague from New Jersey, Mr. McLean. I believe both those gentlemen and the other gentlemen who are speaking against this bill are perfectly sincere, and I want them and every other Member of the House to realize that I am perfectly sincere when I support it. A week ago I stood on this floor and supported and spoke for Mr. WHITE'S original resolution. I am now speaking for and supporting his present bill. I repeat in the few brief moments I have what I said the other day. My office is absolutely flooded with correspondence. My two clerks who are drawing the full allowance are working sometimes nights until 11 and 12 o'clock. We are talking about the N. R. A. and about shortening hours of work. We are talking about sweatshops. Go to my office and see those people work. If the mail continues as it is going now, by the end of the session I believe we shall be getting from 300 to 400 letters daily. I feel that my constituents are entitled to the service that they want, and I know they deserve the extra service they can get from this extra clerk. I sincerely hope the membership of this House will vote for this bill. [Applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Maverick].

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of this bill because the work we do necessitates it. Also because we should devote our time to research and study in respect to legislative matters and not be altogether messenger boys. Next, the people need that service, and we ought to give it to them. The cost to the American people of the legislative branch of the Government is infinitesimal and amounts to nothing in comparison with the other expenses of the Government. Somebody gets up and talks about the "brain trusters." I think there is jealousy there and the reason is that the "brain truster" has someone to work for him and help him get the information and facts on which to make an intelligent speech. We need the kind of help that will permit us to get away from our offices and go occasionally to the Congressional Library. I hate to admit it, but I had been there 50 times before I came to Congress, and since I came here as a Congressman I have not had an opportunity to get there. I have to send over for my books, and then I get so busy I cannot read them. I do not know whether I shall ever be much of a Congressman, but I came here to be one, to do something in a legislative way. We vote billions of dollars to be spent in various bureaus, and we are afraid to vote ourselves a thousand dollars so that we can be more efficient Congressmen. We ought to equip ourselves to give intelligent service to matters of legislation on all the subjects before us. My people are intelligent. They are not afraid of me and I am not afraid of them. They want me to serve them, and I shall if I can. We need this extra thousand dollars. It amounts to nothing in comparison to other expenses. Let us not be afraid to vote it; let us be more like the Senators, and then we will be the upper House and not the lower House. [Applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer].

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, in the last session of the Seventy-third Congress I introduced a similar resolution to this. However, there was a great deal of pressure upon me to withdraw the resolution for fear some Members would not be reelected. When I went back in the last election my Republican opponent said that there was only one thing that Kramer did in Congress, and that was to try to get more help. I received loud applause from my constituents because of the fact that all of the mail sent to my office has been answered, despite the small amount of compensation allowed by the Government to do it. I have put two extra girls on my pay roll. We are today making slaves out of the clerks that we have. They are faithful and putting in 12 to 16 hours a day, and sometimes work one-half day on Sunday. My help has never had a holiday or even a half holiday on Saturday.

The gentlemen on the Republican side of the House said we would need new typewriters and new desks, and that there would be another half million dollars required for that. That is a lot of money. I have had three typewriters and have had them ever since I have been in Congress. I believe almost every Member has additional typewriter desks.

I know some Republicans who have as many as three desks, | and some have more than that, and they are not even chairmen of committees. I believe we should not penalize each other because of the fact that this mail is coming in so heavy. It is not our fault. The people back home want to write and ask about legislation. The people want to know about various matters that are coming up in Congress; and unless we can give them the service which they demand, you will not come back. I hope you will all vote to support the resolution. I, for one, am for it.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. KRAMER. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. This morning I received 89 letters from Houston, Tex., which is 400 miles from my district. In the same mail this morning I received 16 letters from Terrell, Tex., which is 200 miles east of me. I also received letters from San Antonio, Karnes City, Amarillo, Fort Worth, and Dallas, all outside of my district. And on the Townsend pension plan I received letters this morning from all over the United States.

Altogether I have represented in Congress 72 counties in the State of Texas, and all of them call on me, although I now have only 12 in my district. I have been working 16 hours per day, and many times have left my office after 1:30 o'clock a. m. My mail is about double of what it was in the Seventy-third Congress.

Mr. KRAMER. I receive 181 letters in a regular day's mail. On Saturdays and Sundays my mail goes as high as 300 letters.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. KRAMER. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. I wonder why the committee would not give consideration to appointing an extra secretary simply for the balance of the session. I could use one for the balance of the session, but what is the extra secretary going to do in September and October?

Mr. KRAMER. The gentleman is not required to use the extra secretary, because the bill states plainly that you can divide the $5,000 between two; and, if you need a third one, you can divide the $6,000 between the three.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER] has expired.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Ford].

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, being a Member of the Committee on Accounts, I opposed this resolution when it came up for consideration in the committee. I did so because I believed that the Membership of this House had sufficient clerk hire already to answer all of their correspondence which they receive from their constituents as well as look after all other business which they are required to look after. I appreciate the fact that the people all over the country are writing to the Members of Congress asking for employment and asking for support of this piece of legislation and that piece of legislation; but, Mr. Speaker, I say this, and I say it respectfully, that if we as Members of Congress and the Members of the Senate would devote our attention to passing some constructive legislation that would give employment to the deserving people of this country who are hungry and begging for something to do, then the people could go to work and some of the mail which we are receiving and of which you hear so much about, would no longer come to our offices.

There is not a Member of this House, either on the Republican side or the Democratic side, who did not know just exactly how much clerk hire he would receive when he went out into his district and campaigned for Congress. We knew the amount allowed under the law to each Member was $5,000 per year. We also knew that we were allowed to designate two clerks to receive this allowance, and that we had a right to designate the amount each one would receive so long as we did not pay over $3,900 to any one clerk. We told our constituents when we made the campaign for office that we could handle the job; that if they would send us to Congress we would do the job for them. Since my arrival in Washington on December 27 I have worked every day and every night until 11 and 12 o'clock, and I am not willing to vote for an additional $1,000 as clerk hire for each Member of Congress, thus adding a burden of at least $500,000 every year to the already overburdened taxpayers of our country. It is my opinion that in a short time the situation that we are now facing will be over and that there will be no necessity whatever for additional clerks if the ones we have will stay on the job.

Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FORD of Mississippi. I am sorry; I must decline to yield at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the Membership of this House to the history of the allowance of clerk hire for Members of Congress.

Mr. SUTPHIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. I am sorry; I do not have time to vield.

The first allowance for clerk hire for Members of Congress began July 1, 1893, at $100 a month, during session of Congress. This prevailed until July 1, 1907, when clerk hire allowance was increased to $1,500 per annum. This prevailed until July 1, 1917, when the allowance was increased to $2,000 per annum. This prevailed until July 1, 1919, when the allowance was increased to $3,200 per annum, for one or two clerks, plus $240-so-called "war-time bonus"per annum each, to all clerks drawing less than $2,500. This prevailed until July 1, 1924, when the clerk hire allowance was increased to $4,000 for one or two clerks, but not more than $3,300 for one. This prevailed until July 1, 1929, when the allowance was increased to $5,000 per annum for one or two clerks, but not more than $3,900 could be paid to any one clerk

It might also be interesting to remind ourselves that Members of Congress had no offices until the old House Office Building was completed and occupied, at a cost of several millions of dollars, on January 10, 1908. Every Member of Congress had one office in the old House Building, but on April 20, 1933, the new House Office Building was completed and occupied, at a cost of several millions of dollars. so that each Member of Congress could have a suite of offices.

Mr. SUTPHIN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FORD of Mississippi. I decline to yield.

It is true that under the economy act 81/3 percent was deducted from the clerk hire effective July 1, 1932. On July 1, 1933, a deduction totaling 15 percent became effective. This deduction was cut to 10 percent effective February 1, 1934. The deduction was then reduced to 5 percent effective July 1, 1934, and on April 1, 1935, pursuant to Public Resolution No. 3, approved February 3, 1935, the full allowance of $5,000 will be restored. It, therefore, appears that Congress has already been pretty generous to its own membership in providing allowance for clerk hire as well as commodious offices.

It is argued by some of my colleagues that the Senate has authorized an additional allowance for additional clerks to all of the Members of the Senate. It may be that this is true, but this in no way changes my mind about the proposition, because I do not feel that I could say "yes" just because the Senate has authorized the additional allowance. It may be that they were justified in putting on an additional clerk during this session of Congress, because they receive mail from over the entire State, while we do not receive very much mail from people outside of our respective districts.

Mr. KRAMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. I am sorry, sir, I do not have the time to yield. One of my distinguished colleagues has suggested that we will vote for measures creating a lot of bureaus and departments to carry on the various activities of the Government, but we do not have the courage to vote ourselves an extra clerk. If my distinguished friend, together with the other Members of this body and the membership of the Senate, will join me, we will very quickly eliminate some of the bureaus, so that when we call some department we will not have to go through about 50 before we can ever get the person on the telephone that we desire to talk with or get the information desired for our constituents. That is one thing that causes our clerks to get behind with their work. Our secretaries will call some department for information and it will usually have to pass through the hands of about 50 people before they can ever find out who has the matter in charge.

It has also been suggested by my good friend from New York that we should apply business principles to this proposition; that is to say, we should apply the same business principles to this matter that we would apply to a private matter affecting our own business. I thoroughly agree with my good friend, and simply remind him that the main trouble with our Government today is the lack of proper application of business principles. I hope that I may impress upon the Membership of this body that if we, as Members of Congress, would apply business principles to the operation of our Government in the same way and manner that successful business men apply them to their private business, we would soon get out of the deficit that is now facing the Treasury.

We never stop to realize that the United States Government is similar to a big corporation, with its citizens numbering over 130,000,000 as stockholders and a board of directors composed of the President, members of the President's Cabinet, the Senate, and House of Representatives vested with power to spend the taxpayer's money. If we could fully realize and appreciate the fact that every dollar that the Government spends has to come back into the Treasury from the pockets of the stockholders and board of directors who are now losing their homes as a result of excessive taxation, we would think a long time before we voted for a measure that would cost an annual expenditure of $500,000 when by working just a little harder and a little later we could save the stockholders this sum of money. The sooner we wake up to the condition existing in our country and begin applying business principles in operating and administrating the affairs of our Government, the better off we will be, and the greatest benefit will then come to our constit-

I plan to offer an amendment in a few moments that will prohibit the Clerk of the House of Representatives from paying any part of the clerk hire to any person related by blood or marriage to any Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner within the third degree, computed according to the rule of civil law. Of course, I shall oppose the bill even with this amendment, but since we have heard so much about the necessity of the additional clerks, I am anxious to see if the membership of the House really wants an additional clerk or desires to create a place for some relative. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. White].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, as the author of the bill, I shall make a short explanation of the reason I consider inadequate the present clerical help allowed Congressmen. I come here to represent the people of my district. The legislation we have enacted to bring about recovery in this country has increased the activities of the executive branch of the Government to enormous proportions, and it has devolved upon the Congressman as the representative of the people of his district to contact and deal with these many new departments and with the old departments. I hold here in my hand a schedule from the Department of Public Works listing over 100 applications for public-works projects in my State. There is an enormous amount of detail work connected with looking after the interests of these applicants, the people of several communities who have applications pending in the departments in Washington. We are being requested from time to time to straighten out details for people 3,000 miles away. In addition to this work we have innumerable cases of veterans whose status has been changed and their pensions drastically reduced or cut off, which have been restored by subsequent legislation. Attending to these details adds an immense amount of work to the duties of the Congressmen and extra secretarial help is needed in straightening out their pension claims. And if a Representative did nothing but attend to the requests he receives, pertaining to departmental work, he could put in his entire time.

I have here a report from the State drought-relief committee listing some 50 drought-relief projects. The time and detail necessary to handle this would take a good part of a Congressman's time, to say nothing of the time necessary to take care of inquiries and details concerning the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the emergency conservation work, the C. C. C. work, and the many other bureaus and departments of the Government. It is impossible to do this satisfactorily with two clerks. For this reason I have introduced this measure; and I want to tell these gentlemen on the other side who want to cover themselves with glory before their constituents, that under the terms of this law they are not required to put on a single extra person or add a single extra dollar to their allowance for clerk hire. The law stands today as it stood before, $5,000 for two clerks, and if you do not need the third clerk do not put him on. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, this bill that we are now to vote upon is what its proponents desire, as the whole argument has been that an additional clerk is necessary in at least some of the offices.

This is the direct and open-door method of approach. The bill must go to the Senate if passed by the House, and then go to the President of the United States; and we have gone about it, in my opinion, in the only proper way. Now, I do not set myself up as a censor of the needs of the Members of this House. I neither question the vote nor impugn the motive of anyone. I admit that in some cases, such as that of a Member representing a State at large and those coming from districts where the population is abnormally large, that there may be some merit in the plea for an additional clerk; but I hope that it is not demagoguing for me to repeat what perhaps has already been brought out, that we all came here knowing what this clerk allowance was, and I have yet to hear of a single Member who turned back his commission to his constituents on the ground that the clerk allowance was not sufficient for him to maintain an office. Nor do I agree that the Senate situation is at all analogous. Personally, I think a Senator is entitled to more clerks than a Member of the House of Representatives, and I do not think that a Senator's present clerk allowance is at all out of line.

The charge has been made here that committee chairmen may not realize and appreciate this alleged need because they get additional clerks by reason of their chairmanships. Speaking for myself only—and I know that I have one of the most active and busiest offices in this Capitol—I can answer that assertion by saying that if I did not have the chairmanship my own clerk allowance and force would be sufficient.

Should this bill become a law, it is going to have the effect of penalizing loyal and faithful clerks already on the rolls, because just as soon as the additional one is put on at $1.000. there is going to be a leveling-down process amongst those who now receive the present allowance. I think it is most unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, that after a great record of economy established by the Committee on Accounts during the last 5 years that no one in this House can stand up and combat, that we come in here now and bring in a measure that during its first year will cost $511,000 and $440,000 annually thereafter. I think it is also unfortunate that with a great relief bill bogged down over there in the Senate, with public works practically suspended, with direct relief itself almost threatened we should rush in here with almost indecent haste and try first to relieve ourselves. That is the way it is going to be construed, and we are going to be asked if we, too, could not share some of the burden in these troublesome times. It is all so inopportune and there is no evidence except in a small group of cases where genuine need has been shown.

The history of this clerk-hire allowance has been pointed out to you by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Ford].

Allen

Arnold Ashbrook

Bacharach

Biermann

Binderup

Blackney

Bland

Bolton

Brewster Brooks

Buckbee

Burch

Burnham

Caldwell

Carlson

Cannon, Mo. Cannon, Wis.

Carmichael

Carpenter Carter

Cary Cavicchia

Church

Colmer

Culkin

Cummings Darrow

Connery

Cooper, Cooper, Tenn. Cravens

Crawford Crosby Cross, Tex. Crosser, Ohio Crowe Crowther

Hope Huddleston

Oliver

Owen

O'Neal

Chapman Christianson

Citron Clark, N. C. Colden Cole, N. Y.

Brown, Ga.

Buckler, Minn. Bulwinkle

Andrews, Mass. Andrews, N. Y. Arends

I call attention of the House to the fact that during the World War, a period just as strenuous as this one, the entire annual allowance to a Member of the House was only $2,000, and Members who were here at that time tell me that the work then was far greater than it is now.

Mr. Speaker, I have asked no one to oppose this bill. I am against it because I think it is both unwise and unnecessary. Out in the country they are going to consider this a patronage grab. whether it is or not. It could never have been given this privileged status unless there had been an understanding that there would be a record vote. I shall keep that faith, and if occasion demands I shall ask for a roll-call vote. In order to get that roll-call vote one-fifth of the Membership of the House present must rise from their seats. I hope it will be accorded, so that the American people will see just how we stand upon this question. [Applause.]

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from North Carolina yield for that purpose?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I am willing to have the amendment reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Ford of Mississippi: Amend section 2 by adding at the end of the section the following: "Provided, That no part of the clerk-hire allowance shall be paid by the Clerk of the House to any person placed on the roll who is related by blood or marriage to any Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner within the third degree, computed according to the rule of civil law."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments thereto to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the committee amendment on page 1 will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the second committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 2, strike out all of section 3 and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"SEC. 3. That this act shall become effective April 1, 1935."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Kvale) there were-ayes 214, noes 16.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the passage of the

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PARKS. There seems to be some confusion about the effect of this amendment and what it amounts to. I would like to make an inquiry of the Speaker as to whether or not the amendment forbids the employment in a Member's office of a person who has already been employed therein and who is related to the Member?

The SPEAKER. The amendment is rather complicated and the Chair would not undertake to construe it. Without objection, the Clerk will read the amendment.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLOOM. What difference does it make? The amendment has already been agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the Clerk again reading the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Ford].

Mr. ADAIR. Mr. Speaker, I object. The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to know what this amendment is about.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the amendment has already been passed by the House. and that the roll call cannot be stopped at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is correct. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 147, nays 240, not voting 44, as follows:

[Roll No. 211

YEAS-147

Adair Dorsey Drewry Driscoll Jenckes, Ind. Ayers Bacon Kee Keller Kelly Kennedy, N. Y. Beiter Duffy, N. Y. Bell Berlin Duncan Kenney Kramer Dunn, Pa. Blanton Eagle Edmiston Bloom Kvale Boileau Boland Ellenbogen Lamneck Lea, Calif. Evans Lewis, Md. Lucas Boylan Ferguson Brennan Fitzpatrick Brown, Mich. Flannagan Ford, Calif. Lundeen Brunner Buck McCormack McFarlane Gasque Gassaway Gavagan Burdick McGrath Cartwright Castellow McGroarty Gearhart Gildea Granfield McKeough Celler Chandler Claiborne McLaughlin Mason Gray, Pa. Maverick Greenway Mead Merritt, N. Y. Monaghan Cochran Coffee Cole, Md. Collins Greever Griswold Hancock, N. C. Moran Harlan Murdock O'Connell Hart Costello Harter O'Connor Cox O'Leary O'Malley Hartley Healey Deen Delaney Higgins, Mass. Hildebrandt Palmisano Patman Patterson Patton Dempsey Hill, Ala. Dies Hoeppel Dingell Hook Pittenger Disn Houston Disney Dobbins Powers Rabaut Igoe

NAYS-240

Dear DeRouen Dietrich Imhoff Jacobsen Jenkins, Ohio Dirksen Ditter Jones Dockweiler Dondero Kerr Kimball Doughton Doxey Kinzer Kleberg Driver Kloeb Duffey, Ohio Eaton Kniffin Knutson Eckert Kocialkowski Eicher Lambertson Ekwall Lambeth Engel Englebright Lanham Lehlbach Lewis, Colo. Luckey Faddis Farley Fenerty Fiesinger Fish Ludlow McAndrews McClellan McGehee Fletcher McLean Focht Ford, Miss. Fuller McLeod McMillan McReynolds Fulmer Gehrmann Gifford Maas Mahon Gilchrist Mansfield Mapes Marcantonio Gillette Gingery Goodwin Gray, Ind. Marshall Martin, Colo. Martin, Mass. Green Greenwood Gregory Massingale May Merritt, Conn. Guyer Gwynne Halleck Michener Millard Miller Mitchell, Ill. Mitchell, Tenn. Montague Hamlin Hancock, N. Y. Hess Higgins, Conn. Hill, Knute Hill, Samuel B. Montet Moritz Mott Hobbs Nelson Nichols O'Day Hoffman Hollister Holmes

Rogers, N. H. Rudd Russell Ryan Sabath Sadowski Schuetz Schulte Scrugham Sears Secrest Sirovich Smith, Va. Snyder Somers, N. Y. Stack Sullivan Sutphin Sweeney Taylor, Colo. Tonry Utterback Vinson, Ga. Wallgren Walter Werner West White Wilcox Withrow Wood Zioncheck

Ramsay Ramspeck

Parks Parsons Pearson Perkins Peterson, Fla. Peterson, Pettengill Pfeifer Pierce Plumley Polk Quinn Rankin Ransley Rayburn Reece Reed, Ill. Reed N. Y. Reilly Rich Richards Richardson Robertson Robinson, Utah Robsion, Ky. Rogers, Mass. Rogers, Okla. Romjue Sanders, La Sanders, Tex. Sandlin Sauthoff Seger Shanley Short Smith, Conn. Smith, Wash. Snell Spence Starnes Steagall Stefan Stewart Sumpers, Tex. Taber Tarver Taylor, S. C. Taylor, Tenn. Terry Thomas Thomason Thompson

Dickstein

Weaver Welch Turpin Thurston Umstead Underwood Wolcott Tinkham Wolfenden Woodruff Whelchel Whittington Tobey Tolan Vinson, Ky. Treadway Truax Wadsworth Warren Wigglesworth Williams Woodrum Wilson, La. Turner Wearin Zimmerman NOT VOTING-44 Amlie Bankhead Doutrich Dunn, Miss. Kennedy, Md. Norton Kopplemann Larrabee O'Brien Peyser Randolph Schaefer Beam Fernandez Frey Gambrill Lee, Okla. Lemke Buchanan Buckley, N. Y. Goldsborough Lesinski Schneider Haines Lloyd Shannon Casev Corning Smith, W. Va. Hennings Lord Cullen Johnson, Okla. Johnson, W. Va. McSwain Maloney South Darden Thom

So the bill was rejected.

Kahn

The Clerk announced the following pairs: On this vote:

Mr. Cullen (for) with Mr. Smith of West Virginia (against). Mr. Corning (for) with Mr. Carden (against). Mr. Randolph (for) with Mr. Lord (against). Mr. Lee of Oklahoma (for) with Mr. Darden (against). Mr. Gambrill (for) with Mr. Doutrich (against).

Meeks

Wolverton

Until further notice:

Until further notice:

Mr. Hennings with Mr. Wolverton.
Mr. Bankhead with Mrs. Kahn.
Mr. Buchanan with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. Goldsborough with Mr. Lemke.
Mr. Geam with Mr. South.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Meeks.
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Buckley of New York.
Mr. Schaefer with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Maloney with Mr. Casey.
Mr. Johnson of Oklahoma with Mr. Dunn of Mississippi.
Mr. O'Frien with Mr. Shannon.
Mr. Larrabee with Mr. Haines.
Mr. Johnson of West Virginia with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Lesinski with Mr. Thom.

Mr. DIETRICH, Mr. CRAVENS, and Mr. CALDWELL changed their votes from "aye" to "no."

Mr. SUTPHIN. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentlewoman from New Jersey, Mrs. Norton, is unavoidably absent. If present, she would vote "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. On motion of Mr. WARREN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that those who have spoken today on this measure may be given the right to revise their remarks, and that all other Members may have 3 legislative days within which to extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to criticize anyone who votes for this bill to give Members of the House an extra clerk at $1,000 a year, because I know that some Members are overworked and their secretaries and clerks are burdened by hard and grueling duties almost to the point of exhaustion. Every Member who falls within that category ought to have an additional clerk. I speak truthfully and, I hope, with proper modesty when I say that my own office is one that needs and deserves an extra employee. Holidays mean nothing to us and there is no limit to our working hours, and yet we are hardly able to keep abreast of the great volume of business that comes to us and which our constituents have a right to expect will be handled promptly and efficiently. My office is not alone in this regard. Others who represent large, busy, letter-writing constituencies are similarly situated.

While this is true, there are, I should say merely as a guess, fully half of the Members of this House, or considerably more than 200, who do not need an extra clerk at all. The business of their offices is not so large that it cannot be handled with ease and dispatch by the present force. In a certain proportion of the congressional offices the business is not sufficient to keep the existing force fully occupied, and I have known secretaries and stenographers to express wonder how they would put in all their time.

If it were possible to write a formula whereby those who need extra clerks and should have them would be able to get them, while those who do not need them would not get them, that is what I would like to see done, in order that this troublesome question might be settled on a basis of exact justice and proper regard for the economic needs of the Government. I have tried to think out such a formula, and others whom I know have tried, including the able Chairman of the Committee on Accounts, Hon. LINDSAY WAR-REN, but always we have been compelled to throw up our hands and say, "It cannot be done."

Apparently there is no way that ingenuity could devise to give extra clerks to some Members and not give them to others, measuring their needs by the yardstick of actual merit, and here we are faced by the proposition of giving extra clerks to all or giving them to none. If we give to all, we will fasten a needless charge of $200,000 or more per annum on the United States Treasury and will create 200 or more extra jobs which, when once created, will never be abandoned, for a political position, when once established by Congress, is like the running brook-it goes on forever. These extra places, when not needed, probably would be filled with henchmen who would spend their time looking after the Member's political fences and the public service would know them not.

In these days, with distress and poverty on every hand, with a national debt some eight billions more than it ever was before at its highest peak, I am not going to vote to create any needless jobs to add to the groans of the taxpayers. Instead of swelling the interminable salary list of those who live off of the Government, Congress ought to be devoting its thought to cutting down the personnel of half of the governmental establishments. We have reached the ridiculous situation in this country where it seems that literally millions of people are spending all their time trying to devise a way to get on Government pay rolls, in direct contradiction to the true philosophy which holds that it is the duty of the people to support the Government and not the function of the Government to support the citizens. That government is best which rests most lightly on the people, and the way to make our Government rest lightly on the people is to refrain from creating unnecessary jobs, dismiss about one-fourth of those now on the public pay rolls, and cease spending the money of the taxpayers in sums that stagger the imagination.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, when I was first elected to Congress the salaries of Members was $5,000 and the allowance for clerk hire was fixed at $1,200. We did not then have the House Office Building or our own offices. The chairmen of committees, however, did have offices in the Capitol, while all other Members did whatever correspondence they had in living rooms and, largely, in hotel rooms. The few letters reaching Members, if answered, were written in long-hand as very few of them possessed stenographers-I mean, typewriters.

In 1907 the House Office Building was completed, each Member obtaining a room. At that time Member's salaries were increased to $7,500 and the clerk hire to $1,500. I recollect clearly that most of the Members were obliged to live in second-class hotels or in rooming houses, with the exception of rich Republican Members representing specialinterest districts, who lived in ease and splendor. Among these I recall "Uncle Joe" Cannon, of Illinois; "Sunny Jim" Sherman and Sereno E. Payne, of New York; John Dalzell, representing the Pittsburgh steel district; Nick Longworth, of Ohio; Gillett, of Massachusetts; William B. McKinley and Ira Copley, of Illinois; John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts; Joseph W. Fordney, of Michigan; George F. Huff, of Pennsylvania; and others.

At that time, though more or less active, a Member's mail or requests were limited, but as lobbying, publicity, and propaganda for special legislation increased, so did the mail of the Members.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] states he talked with some Member, whose name he did not divulge, who informed him that the work or correspondence at this time is not greater than during the war. Personally, as one who was here during the war and who, by special vote of the House, was permitted to retain membership on two then important committees—the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization and the Committee on Foreign Affairs—I am satisfied that the statement of the Member mentioned by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] was in error, as I know that the work and correspondence of the average Member has doubled and trebled since the war. This was especially so in the last two sessions of Congress, and I ascribe it to these conditions:

First, Since the election and inauguration of President Roosevelt confidence has been rekindled in the hearts of the masses and they have brought their problems and appeals for various reliefs to the attention of their elected Representatives.

Second. In line with the President's early established policy of keeping the country informed from time to time as to his plans, aims, and proposed measures to bring us out of the slough of depression, the people have evinced a greater interest in pending legislation than ever in the history of our Government and have voiced their opinions in written words to their Senators and Representatives.

On the other hand, opposition to the Administration's program on the part of vested interests and by the Governmentfinance-saved industries who for years suffered terrific losses under the "do-nothing" Republican policy, now. seeing the reestablishment of better times and better business, seek in every way possible to retard the approaching betterments and to deprive the President of his record of accomplishments and to prevent the adoption of generally helpful and beneficial legislation in the interest of the suffering masses, all in their greedy and avaricious hope that their profits may be enhanced at the expense of the Government and the suffering peoples. With no merciful thought or concern for either, these Republican-controlled special interests have started a propaganda and mail lobby within the past 6 weeks which has tremendously increased Congressional correspondence, coming not only from a Member's district but from all parts of his State and the Nation at large. This, in addition to the hundreds of letters received by the Members, appealing for employment, aid, and advice from their suffering constituency. Therefore, notwithstanding the statement of the unnamed gentleman, I will state without fear of successful contradiction that nearly all of the Members that served during the war-time period will agree with me when I say that the demands upon Members have at least doubled since the war.

Of course, there are some Members in the rural sections of the South and West who are not subjected to these requests and who are not recipients of such tremendous mail as we older Members or those Members who come from the industrial centers of the country, especially those of us who feel that we owe a duty to the people who elect us and to many outside of our districts who communicate with us. Again, there are some Members who do not answer their correspondence and pay no attention to the requests made upon them but, as a rule, those Members do not remain long in the House, as nowadays people are keeping wellinformed and are seeking views and advice of Members on many subjects from day to day. It is to be observed that chairman of committees like the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] and others, who have from 3 to 7 clerks, may not need additional help, but I do know that most of the 400 Members who have not chairmanships are obliged to work their secretaries and stenographers 12 to 14 hours a day, and a large number are required to hire additional help from their own salaries.

I fully believe that after a Member has served here a few terms his work naturally increases and we ought to recognize these facts. During my service I have known instances where Members felt that salaries paid to Members were too high and, I presume, they judged others by their own worth, but I have never yet noted, except in one case, where such Members have refused to accept increased salaries or additional clerk hire.

As one who has not been criticized of practicing nepotism, I will say that I do not see any wrong when a Member employs his son or daughter and, perchance, even his wife. Naturally a Member would expect to receive greater loyalty and devotion from them in attending to matters from his district.

For the above reasons I voted for the resolution for an additional clerk or stenographer during the time Congress is in session, feeling satisfied it will meet with the approval of the people of my district. Furthermore, it would immediately provide work for 435 unemployed.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I voted for H. R. 6028, as amended, believing that in so doing I was best serving the Government and my constituents. During the debate on this measure the statement was frankly made and not denied that our mail has tremendously increased during this session of Congress, many Members receiving from 500 to 1,000 letters per day. In the interest of efficiency and proper service to our constituents it is necessary that their requests be promptly attended to, which includes not only properly answering their letters but in many instances making personal trips to the different departments to secure the desired information, which of necessity takes time and painstaking care. I do not believe our constituents will complain at our employing an additional clerk at $1,000 a year additional expense whenever it is found necessary and where the Member finds it necessary to the proper discharge of his duties that such additional expense be incurred.

NOT MANDATORY

This measure does not require all Members to employ an additional clerk, but leaves that to each Member's own determination as to whether or not such clerk is necessary. Certainly the Members of Congress can be trusted by their constituents in deciding whether or not a $1,000-a-year clerk should be added for the proper dispatch of their constituents' business. They are of necessity entrusted by their constituents as their Representatives in deciding whether or not billions of dollars should or should not be appropriated for different measures coming before Congress.

NEPOTISM

When I became a candidate for Congress I promised my constitutents that I would not pad the congressional pay roll by placing my kinfolk on same. In the past many Members have placed their kinsfolk on the pay roll, regardless of whether or not they were actually capable of and were doing the work for which they were being paid. My predecessor not only placed his wife on the pay roll as his secretary but two of his daughters as well were placed on the congressional pay roll, and in this way they drew more than $7,000 per year in addition to his salary as Congressman. In doing this he was doing no more nor less than many other Members of Congress were doing. It is frequently charged in the press, and not denied, that many Members of Congress yet place their kinsfolk on the pay roll, and in some instances are doing little, if any, work in return for the pay they are receiving.

On March 16, 1933, I introduced H. R. 3665, a bill to prohibit Members of Congress from placing their kinfolk on the congressional pay roll, and asked the Committee on Accounts for hearings on this bill and was never able to secure same. On January 16, 1935, I again offered the same piece of legislation and the vote today is the first opportunity I have had to vote on this important question. Mr. Ford of Mississippi, member of the Accounts Committee, offered the following amendment to this bill:

Amend section 2 by adding at the end of the section the following: "Provided, That no part of the clerk-hire allowance shall be paid by the Clerk of the House to any person placed on the roll who is related by blood or marriage to any Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner within the third degree, computed according to the rule of civil law."

For which amendment I was glad to vote and which amendment was adopted by a vote of 214 to 16. It was very evident that before this amendment was adopted this measure was favorably considered by a large majority of the House; however, after this amendment was adopted it was very evident that many members voted against the measure, because it would force some of their relatives off the Government pay roll. The Washington Daily News of March 4, 1935, give their account of some of the reasons why this measure was defeated:

PARLIAMENTARY TRICK DEFEATS CLERK BILL

One of the neatest parliamentary tricks of the present session today defeated in the House the White bill to provide an extra clerk for Congress. The bill would have created 440 new jobs on Capitol Hill. Cost to the Treasury was variously estimated from $440,000 to $511,000. During turbulent debate it was indicated that a substantial majority favored the measure.

Then came a carefully worded amendment from Representative that a substantial majority favored the measure.

Then came a carefully worded amendment from Representative A. L. Ford, Democrat, of Mississippi, new member of the Accounts Committee. It prohibited Congressmen from naming any member of their family as one of the new clerks—apparently. It was adopted with but 16 votes opposing it. The roll call started; it was nip and tuck for the first 75 votes.

Then the word got around that the Ford amendment included all employees now on the pay roll as well as those to be named under the bill. Few Congressmen realized the full scope of the amendment when they voted it into the bill. As soon as this became evident the noes grew in number, and the bill was beaten badly, 146 to 242. badly, 146 to 242.

REPUBLICAN POLITICS

It was very evident that practically all the Republicans played cheap politics and voted against the measure as a strict partisan issue. It was well known, however, that a majority of the Democrats favored the amendment before the adoption of the nepotism amendment above quoted. I believe for the best interests of the Members, the Government, and our constituents that we should prohibit Members of Congress from placing their relatives on the congressional

MARRIED WOMEN CLAUSE SHOULD APPLY

I believe further that it would be for the best interests of the Nation to follow the lead of many other Nations and enact legislation that will prohibit more than one member of any family from being on the Government pay roll. It is admitted that we now have more than 10,000,000 heads of families unemployed. It is known that a large number of heads of families and/or wife and/or husbands and/or sons and/or daughters living at home are employed on the Government pay roll. In the interest of relieving unemployment we should correct this situation.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I applied for time in which to register my opposition to this measure on the floor, but was unable to obtain it; and I am, therefore, reduced to the necessity of employing the privilege accorded all Members to revise and extend, if I am to record my views on this subject.

I am opposed to this bill providing an extra clerk for Members of the House, because, in my candid opinion, it would be a flagrant waste of public money. We already have ample clerk hire to adequately take care of the business of our offices, and the addition of clerk hire sought in this bill would contribute very little to material efficiency.

Mr. Speaker, I think I receive as much mail, or more, than the average Member of the House. My constituents do not hesitate to write me on the slightest provocation, and I am glad they do, because it shows their keen interest in the affairs of the Government. For 10 years, as Republican national committeeman from Tennessee, I was the recognized referee for all Federal appointments in 9 congressional districts in that State. In addition to this vast State patronage, I was besought for endorsements by thousands of Tennesseeans who desired positions in the District of Columbia and elsewhere. Naturally this entailed a great deal of office work and correspondence in addition to my duties as a Representative of my district. With the clerk hire allowed me at that time I was able to meet the demands of the situation in a satisfactory manner. I have always made it an invariable rule to answer every letter the same day it is received unless the answer required some special effort. I have been fully able to do this with the clerk hire heretofore provided.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this measure will simply mean the infliction of an additional tax burden of more than $500,000 on the already tax-prostrated taxpayers of this country. There must be a stop to this wild orgy of extravagance. Let Congress set a good example in economy today by voting down this unwarranted raid on the Public Treasury.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Mr. Speaker, the import of this bill (H. R. 6028), as amended, is twofold in its purpose. In the first place, it provides for the additional sum of $1,000 per annum as additional clerk hire for each Member of the House, making the amount which might be used for this purpose by each Member the sum of $6,000 per annum. In the next place the bill provides that no part of said allowance for clerk hire shall be paid to any person placed on the roll who is related by blood or marriage to any Member within the third degree.

I would be glad to support the last part of this bill, directed against Members placing their relatives on the pay roll, if I could do so without supporting the proposed increase which would ultimately cost the taxpayers of this country approximately a half million dollars per annum. In the State of Missouri public officials cannot place their relatives on the pay roll without forfeiting their right to hold office, and I should be glad to vote for this bill, which seeks to prohibit that practice here in the House, if not coupled with the objectionable provision providing for an annual increase for clerk hire.

Mr. Speaker, this is one of the most critical periods in our country's history. It is a time when all good citizens, even Representatives in Congress, should make some sacrifice to help in the great program of recovery now being successfully carried out by this administration. We were elected to Congress knowing that we would be granted the sum of $5,000 per annum for clerk hire, and we accepted our commissions with that understanding. It is true that each Representative is receiving a heavier mail than under ordinary times and conditions and that it requires more time and labor to handle the increased correspondence, but we cannot afford at this time to vote approximately an additional half million dollars to lighten our burden when the people back home are sacrificing and struggling to keep their heads above water and to make both ends meet.

Furthermore, there is great distress and dire want in many sections of the country which cry out for immediate help and relief at the hands of our Government. Our Government has and is taxing its resources to the utmost to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and provide work for the unemployed. For myself, I feel that it is my duty to make some personal sacrifice, work a little harder and longer to answer my correspondence, so that this proposed increase for additional clerk hire may be used by the Government to meet more urgent needs.

I further call your attention to the fact that people in different occupations, businesses, and professions throughout the country are working harder, longer, for less pay, and without complaint in order that they may maintain them-selves and provide for their families. Instead of voting this increase to lighten our work and burdens as public servants, we should be satisfied with the provision heretofore made for us, and to render that service to our districts and to the country at large for which we were elected.

For these reasons I shall vote against the bill in its present

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes upon Wednesday next, immediately after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not understand when the gentleman asked for such permission.

The SPEAKER. On Wednesday.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney] is recognized for 8 minutes

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, 2 years ago today, yonder on the steps of this Capitol a distinguished citizen of the United States raised his right hand to God and took a solemn obligation to defend the Constitution of the United States from all enemies, foreign and domestic. The occasion was the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. His memorable inaugural address followed—an address that is destined, in my humble mind, to take its place in history with Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and his second inaugural address because of its brevity, its clarity of language, and especially above all, because of its courage.

The new President came to power at a time when industry and agriculture were prostrate, when millions of our fellow citizens were literally standing in the bread line to get the bread and soup allotted to them to keep them alive, and at a time when the banking situation of the Nation had reached its climax, because of the illegal and immoral practices of those who held positions of trust and honor had brought about the absolute destruction of the life savings of millions of our people, who had trusted their funds to them primarily for security.

The courageous action of the President of the United States a few hours subsequent to his inauguration, in declaring the banking holiday, and in asserting his determination to decide which banks were in a state of liquidity sufficiently safe to open for business, was an act of courage unparalleled in the history of any nation.

The subsequent legislation that followed this action created the guarantee of bank deposits law and secured other remedial measures designed to drive the money changers from the temple. This action was in keeping with President Roosevelt's inaugural speech. Let me read to you a few excerpts from this memorable address:

Yet our distress comes from no failure of substance. We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Nature still offers her bounty, and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our doorstep, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply. Primarily this is because the rulers of the exchange of mankind's goods have failed, through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure, and abdicated. Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men. The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths. The measure of the restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than were monetary profits. Finally, in our progress toward a resumption of work, we require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order; there must be a strict supervision of all banking and credits and investments; there must be an end to speculation with other people's money, and there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency.

We are grateful for the banking reforms inaugurated to date under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt, but we must urge and we do urge that more reforms be enacted so that the Government of the United States shall have absolute control over its monetary system, that the power of the international banker and the manipulators in charge of the Federal Reserve System to manage the monetary system be destroyed, and that the control which belongs to all people of the United States be restored to them through their Representatives in Congress.

Mr. Speaker, over 6,000,000 of American citizens unite in the belief that this Congress should exercise the power given us by the fathers when they framed the fundamental law—the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof and of foreign coins.

Over 90 percent of the currency in this Nation is checkbook currency or credit money and not the product of the mint and the Treasury engraver.

Important as is currency—credit money—its adequacy and its availability are 10 times more important.

I send to the desk and ask unanimous consent to have read the preamble to the bill sponsored by the National Union for Social Justice. I ask reference to the proper committee, the Committee on Banking and Currency, and I further ask an attentive House to grasp its significance. At the conclusion of the reading of the preamble, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SWEENEY. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Is the legislation which the gentleman is introducing the program of Father Coughlin?

Mr. SWEENEY. I will say to the gentleman that this is the program of the National Union for Social Justice, organized by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman eulogized the administration very eloquently and very ably just now. In his broadcast of yesterday the Reverend Father Coughlin states that despite the promises of the administration to drive the money-changers out of the temple, the new deal was played with the old deck, and the cards were stacked for the special interests. Did the gentleman hear that broadcast?

Mr. SWEENEY. I am not discussing what Father Coughlin said yesterday. I am now proceeding to present to Congress a bill that has the backing of 6,000,000 members of the National Union for Social Justice, an organization that has an unlimited potential membership.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SWEENEY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. TRUAX. Does this bill propose to nationalize the banks of this country and take away from the national bankers the rackets they have in issuing currency and charging interest on ten dollars whereas they only have one?

Mr. SWEENEY. The gentleman is absolutely right—the bill purports to do just what the gentleman states.

Mr. TRUAX. Then, I am for the bill.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SWEENEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Culkin] propounded a query to the gentleman, and I think if the gentleman had the time he would state that it is absolutely impossible for President Roosevelt to get rid of all those Republicans that are still responsible for such conditions

Mr. SWEENEY. We will give him time to make corrections, no matter who is responsible. We can determine the responsibility for that, I am sure.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I request that the preamble to the bill which I sent to the Clerk's desk be read by the Clerk, and when he concludes the reading of the preamble, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record, including the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Taylor of Colorado). Without objection, the Clerk will read the preamble.

There was no objection.
The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to restore to Congress its constitutional power to issue money and regulate the value thereof, to provide for the orderly distribution of the abundance with which a beneficent Creator has blessed us, to establish and maintain the purchasing power of money at a fixed and equitable level, to restore the values of property to just and equitable levels, to increase the prices of agricultural products to a point where they will yield the cost of production plus a fair profit to the farmer, to provide a living and just annual wage which will enable every citizen willing to work and capable of working to maintain and educate his family on an increasing level or standard of living, to repay debts with dollars of equal value, to lift in part the burden of taxation, and for other purposes

Whereas the Constitution of the United States, in article I, section 8, clause 5, provides that Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof and of foreign coins; and

Whereas the present practice of issuing book credits by commercial banks and transferring the title of said credits by check provides a supplementary medium of exchange, abrogating the said constitutional provision and establishing a separate, private, and independent monetary system; and

Whereas the permanent welfare of the people and the protection

Whereas the permanent welfare of the people and the protection of the economic life of the Nation depend on a monetary system wholly subject to the control of Congress which will promote the interests of agriculture and labor, of industry, trade, commerce, and finance for the economic well-being of all citizens by the maintenance of price levels which will avoid excessive expansion or disastrous contraction, and which will protect the national credit and currency at home and in the world's markets—

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I renew my unanimous consent request to revise and extend my remarks to include the bill, the preamble of which the clerk has read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the request of the gentleman from Ohio to revise and extend his remarks and to include therein the bill referred to is granted.

There was no objection.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a central bank,

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a central bank, which shall be known as the Bank of the United States of America, which may be abbreviated as the Bank of the U. S. A.

SEC. 2. The Bank of the United States of America, so created, shall be the agency of the Congress of the United States to issue the money of the United States, to control the value thereof, and the value of foreign moneys, and it shall be the custodian of all monetary stocks and of all moneys and the guardian of the public credit of the United States. It shall be the central depository of all reserve funds of all banks, banking institutions, and banking firms under the jurisdiction of the United States. It shall be the sole fiscal agent of the United States Government. All acts of firms under the jurisdiction of the United States. It shall be the sole fiscal agent of the United States Government. All acts of Congress providing for the issuance of circulating notes by national banks are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3 (a). There is hereby created a governing board of the Bank of the United States of America which shall be known as the "board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America", which shall be the monetary authority and agent of Congress of the Government of the United States. The board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America shall be composed of one representative from each State, elected by the people thereof at the same time and by the same method as Representatives in Congress, for a period of 12 years. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided by lot equally into six classes; the seats of the directors of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; the seats of the second class at the expiration the directors of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; the seats of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year; the third class at the expiration of the sixth year; the fourth class at the expiration of the tenth year; and the sixth class at the expiration of the tenth year; and the sixth class at the expiration of the twelfth year; so that one-sixth may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise the executive of the State affected may make a temporary appointment until the next general election to fill the vacancy. The board of directors shall choose from among their own number an executive board consisting of seven members and including a governor and a vice governor selected by a ma-jority of the 48 directors. The salary of each director shall be the same as that of an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, paid out of the funds of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The directors shall not during their term of office hold any direct or indirect financial interest in their term of office hold any direct or indirect mancial interest in any bank, banking institution, banking firm, financial institution, or any firm or corporation as stockholder, director, or officer either in the United States or in any foreign country. The board of directors shall assemble on the first Monday in December and remain in session at least 9 months during each year. A majority shall constitute a quorum. The board may determine the rules for its proceedings. Congress may, by the process of impeachment, remove a director. No director shall, during the term for which he is elected be appointed to any civil office under the authority of is elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States or of the States, Territories, or possessions, nor the United States or of the States, Territories, or possessions, nor be a Member of either House of Congress. Any director shall be eligible for reelection. Upon attaining the age of 70 years, each director shall retire, with an annual pension for the rest of his natural life, equal to $1,000 per year for each year of service or major fraction thereof, provided that the maximum annual pension shall be $12,000, which shall be paid out of the funds of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency shall be ex-officio members of the executive board of the Bank of the United States of America.

(c) The members of the Federal Reserve Board at the time of the enactment of this act shall serve as members of the executive board of the Bank of the United States of America until executive board of the Bank of the United States of America until their successors are elected and qualify, as herein specified.

SEC. 4. (a) The board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of a president and vice president and such other executive officers, examiners, economists, and other experts as may be necessary to carry out its functions under this act, without regard to provisions of other laws applicable to the employment and compensation of officers and employees of the United States. persistion of officers and employees of the United States; and, in addition thereto, the Board may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such further officers and employees as in their judgment may be necessary, and fix their salaries in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

(b) The board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America shall have its principal office in Washington, D. C. It shall establish branch offices in each State of the United States and in its territories and possessions and may establish agencies to conduct a general business of banking and to provide banking facilities in any recognized trading center of the United States which is denied adequate banking facilities by private institutions. It shall formulate policies and regulations for the management of such branch offices and agencies. Branch offices shall be designated by States, as Maine Branch, Bank of the United States of America, California Branch, Bank of the United States of America, etc.

SEC. 5 (a). After the passage of this act, no currency shall be issued under the authority of the United States except the notes of the Bank of the United States of the same size as the present Federal Reserve notes and of such denominations as may be determined by the executive board of the Bank of the United States of America, which said bank notes shall be full legal tender at face value for all debts public and private within the United States or its territories or possessions.

(b) Within 1 year from the passage of this act all present Federal Reserve notes, Federal Reserve bank notes, national bank notes, gold certificates, silver certificates. Treasury notes of 1890, and United States notes issued and outstanding shall be recalled for redemption, and those turned in for redemption shall be retired and destroyed, and notes of the Bank of the United States of America herein provided shall be issued in exchange, it being the purpose of this act to substitute the notes of the Bank of the United States of America herein provided for all other forms of paper currency of the United States.

Sec. 6. In the exercise of its jurisdiction as agent of the Congres Sec. 6. In the exercise of its jurisdiction as agent of the Congress of the United States to issue money and to control the value thereof, the executive board of the Bank of the United States of America may from time to time order and direct the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to engrave or cause to be engraved, and to print or cause to be printed. United States bank notes as provided in this act, in such quantities and denominations as the said board may deem necessary, and to hold the said United States bank notes subject to further order of the said board.

board.

board.
SEC. 7. The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall, upon receipt of directions or instructions or orders from the executive board, duly authenticated in such manner as may be prescribed by the board of directors, execute the said directions, instructions, or orders, forthwith, by engraving, printing, and disposing of the said notes of the Bank of the United States of America as specified in said duly authenticated directions, instructions, or orders, and the said duly authenticated directions, instructions, or orders shall at all times be considered and construed to be the direct acts of the Congress of the United States, through its duly authorized agent, the Bank of the United States of America. America.

SEC. 8. (a) Immediately upon the passage of this act the Bank of the United States of America is hereby authorized and directed as soon as possible to purchase the capital stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and branches, and agencies thereof, and to pay to the owners thereof in the notes of the Bank of the United States of America the paid-in value of said stock, with 6 percent perannum interest from the last dividend date.

(b) That all members banks of the Federal Reserve System are

(b) That all member banks of the Federal Reserve System are hereby required and directed to deliver forthwith to the Bank of the United States of America all the stock of the said Federal Reserve banks owned or controlled by them, together with any and all claims of any kind or nature in and to the capital assets of the said Federal Reserve banks, it being the intention of this act to vest in the Government of the United States the absolute and unconditional ownership of the said Federal Reserve banks.

SEC. 9. Upon the purchase of the stock of any Federal Reserve bank by the Bank of the United States of America as herein provided, the said Federal Reserve bank shall immediately become a branch of the Bank of the United States of America and subject in every respect to the jurisdiction of the board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America, herein provided for, and the terms of the officers of the board of governors of the said Federal Reserve bank shall immediately cease and terminate: Provided, however, That the chairman of the board of governors of the said Federal Reserve bank and all the executive officers or employees thereof shall continue to perform their customary duties and obligations in the operation of said Federal Reserve bank until their successors shall be appointed by the elected board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America.

SEC. 10. (a) All individuals, firms, associations, or corporations, engaged in the business of banking as defined by law and among other things receiving deposits of money or credit from the citizens or firms, corporations, or associations of any State and transferring or transporting said money or credit or the title thereto to other banks or individuals, firms, associations, or corporations of any State or States, Territories, and possessions of the United States, are hereby declared to be engaged in interstate commerce, and as such are subject to Federal jurisdiction and to the jurisdiction of the Bank of the United States of America and all the provisions of this act.

(b) Within 1 year after the passage of this act, all banking institutions under the jurisdiction of the Bank of the United States of America shall be required to keep on deposit with the Bank of the United States of America, or in its vaults, United States Bank notes herein provided for a full 100 percent of its deposits which are subject to check and payable on demand; and, in addition thereto, it shall keep within its vaults the further sum equal to 5 percent upon all savings or investment deposits commonly known as "time" deposits.

(c) For the purpose of creating the lawful money reserve here-known as "time" deposits.

(c) For the purpose of creating the lawful money reserve hereinabove required, the Bank of the United States of America shall purchase from banks in the United States, bonds of the United States Government.

SEC. 11. The Bank of the United States is hereby authorized to purchase or sell gold, silver, and foreign exchange in the financial markets of the United States, at such times and in such quantities as in its discretion is necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, namely, to regulate the value of money of the United States and of foreign countries.

SEC. 12. (a) The Bank of the United States of America shall

Sec. 12. (a) The Bank of the United States of America shall have jurisdiction over and shall control and supervise all banking institutions whatsoever of the United States and territories and possessions thereof, subject to law, and shall have the power to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the law as it may deem desirable for the safe and proper conduct of the banks and banking institutions within its jurisdiction.

(b) The Comptroller of the Currency and all officers of the Government of the United States, exercising any supervisory powers or duties over the banks of the United States, or any of them, shall carry out and perform such rules and regulations for the conduct of banks and banking institutions in the United States or territories or possessions thereof as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Bank of the United States of America through its duly designated officers.

Sec. 13. Directly upon the passage of this act, the Bureau of

Sec. 13. Directly upon the passage of this act, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor shall be transferred to the Bank of the United States of America, and such Bureau to the Bank of the United States of America, and such Bureau shall thereafter be under the supervision of the board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America. The statistical department of the present Federal Reserve Board, together with the statistical departments of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Secretary of the Treasury, and of the Treasurer of the United States, together with the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, shall all be consolidated with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the name of the consolidated bureaus and departments shall be the Bureau of United States Statistics. The duties of said Bureau, in addition to all those now prescribed by law for the bureaus and departments consolidated therein, shall be to collect, assemble, and analyze authentic data, for the purpose of determining the true and correct relation of the total amount of money in actual circulation, including both currency and credit money, commonly called "demand deposits", to prices, wages, industry, and commerce, the standard of living, employment, and unemployment, to the end that the board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America and the executive board thereof may scientifically and of America and the executive board thereof may scientifically and accurately determine the rate at which progressive additions to the stock of circulating money, including coin, currency, and credit, must be made in order to maintain an even and stable purchasing power, and to promote a constantly rising standard of living for the people of this Nation, unlimited except by the extent of natural resources and the willingness of the people to

SEC. 14. It is hereby made mandatory upon the board of direc-SEC. 14. It is hereby made mandatory upon the board of directors of the Bank of the United States of America and the executive board thereof to provide such stable purchasing power of money and equitable price levels, first, by the progressive purchase of the bonds of the United States and the creation of the 100-percent reserves behind demand deposits, and, further, if necessary, by increasing the money in circulation by paying the extraordinesty and then the ordinery expenses of government by necessary, by increasing the money in circulation by paying the extraordinary and then the ordinary expenses of government by currency issue until the average commodity price level reaches the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for 1926. The board of directors of the Bank of the United States will determine a true and equitable commodity price level to succeed that of 1926, and it is made mandatory on the board of directors to provide issues of currency which will maintain this level.

SEC. 15. The board of directors of the Bank of the United States shall recommend to Congress the retirement through taxation of such excesses of currency as may be necessary to keep the price level from rising above the level prescribed by section 14 price level from rising above the level prescribed by section 14

of this act

Sec. 16. All laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 17. If any provision of this act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the remainder of this act or the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 18. This act shall take effect July 1, 1935, or sooner by proclamation of the President.

SEC. 19. This act may be cited as the "National Banking and Monetary Control Act of 1935."

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, let me present briefly the basic provisions of this bill.

First, it creates a central bank, the idea of which in America is as old as Alexander Hamilton's first bank of the United States, established in 1791 with a charter that extended through 20 years and which was renewed in 1816 for a second period of 20 years. Though 80 percent of the stock of both of those banks were privately owned, the idea of a central bank lasted for 40 years of our history.

The Federal Reserve System, established in 1913 and extending already for a period of over 20 years, is the third example of a central bank. The Federal Reserve System, however, is 100 percent privately owned. This bill places in the hands of the Federal Government the power of regulating the value of money, which power can be practically exercised only through the creation of a Government-owned central bank-a bank which will be a bank of issue, which will be the sole fiscal agent of the Government of the United States, which will be the central depository of the reserves of all the commercial banks of the United States.

The second great principle built into this bill is the principle of democracy in banking. We know to our sorrow what private banking—what banking under the control of private individuals-has done for this Nation. We fear, as Jackson feared, the results of a political control of banking. Between the two is the great principle of democracy in banking, and we have provided in this bill for a management by a board of 48, elected 1 from each State by the people thereof-a board modeled after the Senate of the United States, a board that will have as active managers an executive committee of 7, and a board that will establish a branch bank of this central bank in every State of the Union. The object, frankly, is to break the concentrated power over money and banking which centers in the control of a little group of men in Wall Street.

The third great principle of the bill is to establish a uniform system of paper currency in place of the seven types of paper money now in circulation in the United States.

A fourth section provides for the purchase of all the stock in the Federal reserve bank and the nationalizing of this institution.

A fifth section recognizes the fundamental fact of the money question, that money today consists not only of currency, but also of credit money in the form of checks, and money created or counterfeited by the banks themselves and constituting a currency used in over 90 percent of all commercial transactions. In the course of a century and a quarter there has grown up in this country a money not coined under the authority of Congress, whose value is not regulated by Congress, and yet which is the dominant medium of exchange throughout the Nation.

A sixth section is perhaps the most single revolutionary proposal in the history of banking legislation. This section provides that a bank shall be honest and that when a depositor steps into a bank and leaves $100 there, subject to withdrawal on demand, that the bank keep his $100 there subject to his demand. Today the law permits, through the Reserve System, the bank to lend $1,000 in credit money for every $100 placed on deposit in currency. In 1929, when we boasted that we had fifty-eight billion of deposits in the banks of this Nation, we realized that that $58,000,000,000 was not money in the sense of currency, for there was never a full billion dollars in actual currency in the vaults of the banks of this Nation. The $58,000,000,000 merely represented the right to withdraw fifty-eight billion, though the fifty-eight billion never existed.

Finally, and principal among all its provisions, is the requirement that our currency be so regulated through this central bank that a dollar of our money, whether currency or credit, will represent from year to year and from generation to generation an equitable and stable buying power, freeing us from those periods of expansion and contraction, of inflation and deflation, such as the present, with their economic and financial destruction.

Mr. Speaker, the Members of Congress and the President of the United States have taken a solemn obligation to defend this Nation and its Constitution from foreign and domestic enemies. We have no fear of foreign invasion; we are amply prepared through a national defense program to guard against such contingency. Our war is now against the domestic enemies of the Nation; the domestic enemies are not the "parlor pinks" nor the soap-box orators who frequent our public parks, but in all sincerity, Mr. Speaker, I submit that the most dangerous domestic enemies we have are the international bankers and those gentlemen we have placed in power to regulate and control our Federal Reserve System.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

THE CONSENT CALENBAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the Consent Calendar.

OMAHA AND WINNEBAGO INDIANS OF NEBRASKA

The first bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3810) for the benefit of the Omaha and Winnebago Indians

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STEFAN, Mr. BINDERUP, and Mr. LUCKEY objected.

TERMS OF OFFICE OF THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSIONERS

The next bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4751) to amend section 24 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to the terms of office of members of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 24 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, is amended by inserting immediately preceding the last sentence of such section a new sentence as follows: "Upon the expiration of his term of office a commissioner shall continue to serve until his successor has qualified; except that he shall not so continue to serve after the end of the next regular session of Congress, or, in the event that his successor is not nominated on or before the fifteenth day of such regular session, after such fifteenth day."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WAR MINERALS RELIEF STATUTES

The next bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H. P. 2077) to amend section 5 of the act of March 2, 1919, generally known as the "war minerals relief statutes."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. This bill has been already before the House, and it will come up again and require three objections the next time, and for that reason I object.

Mr. TRUAX. The distinguished floor leader on the Democratic side requested this to be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. In view of that fact I will withdraw my objection.

The bill was passed over without prejudice.

ADDITIONAL JUSTICE FOR THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The next bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill, H. R. 5227, providing for the appointment of an additional justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this a sinecure job, pure and simple. This extra judge is not needed. If the present judges would work 4 hours per day, 5 days each week, and 10 months each year they could easily do all of the work. This bill ought not to pass and I hope I may have two other colleagues to object and kill it. I object.

Mr. TRUAX and Mr. YOUNG also objected.

AMENDING SECTION 23 OF THE IMMIGRATION ACT OF FEBRUARY 5, 1917

The next bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill H. R. 3472, to amend section 23 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, I want to ask a question of the lady from New York. This is the Dickstein bill?

Mrs. O'DAY. One of them.

Mr. BLANTON. Under the present law the right is limited to 3 years? Those 3 years have expired. This bill proposes to remove all limitation. I cannot agree that such a proposal would be sound legislation. Instead of increasing the rights and privileges of aliens, I am in favor of stopping all of them from coming here for at least 10 years. It is true, is it not, that under the present law they are limited to 3 years?

Mrs. O'DAY. I think that is so.

Mr. BLANTON. Is not that so? I ask the chairman of the committee.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. It is limited to 3 years?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The way the bill was first introduced was to extend that time to 5 years.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. That was a year ago.

Mr. BLANTON. Then the committee struck out 5 years and left no limitation at all, and they could have been here for 40 or 50 years and still be sent back and have their way paid by the United States. Such a bill ought not to pass this House. It establishes a bad precedent. I objected to it before. It will take three objections now to stop it and I hope we will get the other two. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. CARTER. I object.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I object.

UNEMPLOYED FILIPINO RESIDENTS

The next business on the Consent Calendar was House Joint Resolution 71, to provide for the return to the Philippine Islands of unemployed Filipinos resident in the continental United States or the Territories thereof, and to authorize appropriations to accomplish that result, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I reserve the right to object. This is a bill that will force the United States, if it is passed, to pay the expenses back home of 30,000 Filipinos who have gotten homesick and want to spend the summer holidays in the Philippine Islands, and there will be 60,000 more of them come back here, and this bill sets a bad precedent and ought to be killed.

This bill will cost the United States Government a tremendous sum of money to start with, and it will set a precedent the end of which will not be seen for the next 50 or 60 years. It is a bad bill and ought not to pass. I objected to it before, and it will now take three objectors and I hope we will get them. Mr. Speaker, I object. Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

INVESTIGATION OF AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO.

The next business on the Consent Calendar was House Joint Resolution 135, authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holdingcompany structure, or otherwise.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, and I shall object, but I want to state my reason for the objection. This bill is of such importance that time should be given to it. I do not like the bill itself for several reasons. There might be a need for this investigation. I do not think we should pass a bill here under unanimous consent that carries with it an authorization of $750,000. For that reason I object.

BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AND THE STATE

The next business on the Consent Calendar was House Joint Resolution 134, to continue the Commission for Determining the Boundary Line Between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia for not to exceed 1 additional year, and to authorize not to exceed $10,000 additional funds for its expenses.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Is the sponsor of the bill, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith] present?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I am present.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. As I understand it, this is a Commission for the Determination of the Boundary Line Between the State of Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It was first approved by the Congress March 21, 1934, and this bill provides for an extension to December 1, 1935.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. I objected to this bill before because I did not think it was necessary. Since then I have talked with my colleague from Virginia [Mr. Smith]. He thinks it is highly necessary, and, in addition, I have a special report from Hon. Crandall H. Mackey, a very distinguished and reliable citizen, who used to be Commonwealth attorney for the State of Virginia, who states it is vitally necessary and that the money to be expended is a mere bagatelle to the good that it will accomplish.

With those two distinguished gentlemen from Virginia furnishing that kind of report, I do not care to longer object to the bill. So I withdraw my objection and hope that it will

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will this survey be completed by the 1st of December 1935?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I am quite sure that it will.

Mr. BLANTON. And the money that has been spent already will be wasted if it is not completed.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. With that understanding, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Why is this work vitally necessary and why must it be continued?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it will take quite some time to answer that question. [Cries of "Regular order! "]

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. BLANTON. It can be passed later today under sus-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

MEMORIAL MILITARY PARK, KENESAW MOUNTAIN, GA.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 59) to create a national memorial military park at and in the vicinity of Kenesaw Mountain in the State of Georgia, and for other

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, and I shall object for the same reason I objected to Calendar No. 18 and for the further reason that I cannot understand the attitude of the Director of the Budget with respect to this particular bill. Although it will cost about $100,000, he tells us that it is not in conflict with his estimates for this year.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. President, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. TARVER. Let me call attention to the committee's report. The Director of the Budget approved the bill if amended in accordance with suggestions made by the Secretary of the Interior. The committee in its report calls attention to the fact that it has inserted, although not suggested by the Secretary, an authorization for an appropriation of $100,000, because the work which is authorized under the bill could not possibly be accomplished without the expenditure of some funds. Let me direct the gentleman's attention to the fact that this bill proposes the commemoration of one of the most famous battlefields of the War between the States. In the battle which occurred there 150,000 men took part. There were 25,000 casualties in killed and wounded on both sides. No steps have ever been taken to commemorate this battlefield, although organizations from 14 States of the Union took part and the battlefield is visited annually by many thousands of people.

A small reservation is maintained nearby at what is known as "Cheatham's Hill", commemorating the engagement which took place there, but the main battlefield should certainly be improved and made more easily accessible. It is located alongside the Dixie Highway, traveled annually by many thousands of tourists from the Northern States as well | tional forests, and for other purposes.

as from Southern States whose ancestors participated in that battle. Surely the amount asked in this bill for such a purpose is not unreasonable. The purposes of the bill have the approval of the National Park Service and the Department of the Interior.

The adequate marking of the Johnston-Sherman line of march, which is also provided for in the bill, and the purchase of certain lands which it will be necessary to purchase by the Secretary of the Interior, could not be done unless some money is appropriated. I cannot conceive of any valid objection to the bill, and I trust the gentleman will withdraw the objection which he contemplates.

I may add that a commission appointed under legislation enacted during the Sixty-ninth Congress recommended an appropriation of $375,000 for this purpose. Thousands of soldiers from the gentleman's own State of Michigan took part in this battle.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I have read the report with a great deal of interest and I agree with the gentleman in some of the things he has stated. This is a bill, however, which I think should be considered by the House very carefully and with some time to discuss it in order that the Members may be informed as to its merits. Unless the Director of the Budget contemplated the expenditure of this $100,000, then I do not quite understand the last paragraph of the letter of the Secretary of the Interior to the committee, in which he says:

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget has advised that this proposed legislation, if amended as indicated above, would not be in conflict with the financial program of the President.

It would seem to me to throw the Budget out of balance at least to the amount of the expenditure, which is estimated to be $100,000.

Mr. TARVER. Let me point out to my colleague that at the time the Secretary of the Interior made the statement referred to, the bill as drawn, if amended as suggested by him, would not have included this authorization. Therefore there is no contradiction. The authorization was added by the committee because it is necessary to effectuate the purposes of the bill, and the committee thought it amply justified.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. TRUAX. This bill provides for an authorization of Mr. TARVER. That is correct.

Mr. TRUAX. For the building of a monument?

Mr. TARVER. No, no; not for the building of a monument, but for the creation of a national memorial park to commemorate the Battle of Kennesaw Mountain and for the marking of the line of march of the Johnston-Sherman armies in Georgia during the spring of 1864.

Mr. TRUAX. Does the gentleman from Georgia believe that would be good policy, in face of the $4,880,000,000 public-works program in the balance, and with this House going on record today as being opposed to the expenditure of $447,000 annually for extra clerk hire? Does the gentleman think we should authorize an appropriation of $100,000 when millions are looking for jobs, out of work, and many of them starving?

Mr. TARVER. If the gentleman has finished with his remarks

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

Mr. TARVER. I trust the gentleman will withdraw his request for the regular order. The remarks of my colleague have been made without reply, because under the rules of the House I have no opportunity to answer him if the regular order is demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONTRACTS FOR SALE OF TIMBER ON NATIONAL FORESTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2881, authorizing the adjustment of contracts for the sale of timber on the napresent consideration of the bill?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I have no particular objection to the bill except as to the date thereon. On line 8, page 1, the date is "June 30, 1934." The only justification for the termination of these contracts is that the contracts were entered into prior to the depression, and by reason of the depression they could not continue with the contracts, and lost money, and they want to terminate them. I will not object if the date on line 8 is changed to "March 4, 1933", the beginning of this administration. Is that satisfactory to the gentleman?

Mr. BUCK. As far as I am personally concerned, I have no objection at all to the date being changed. The Bureau of Forestry of the Department of Agriculture has asked that this date, which was "May 1, 1933," in the original bill, and which I think is rather more important than March 4, be changed to that in the present draft. I have no objection to substituting "May 1, 1933", except that the Department has asked that this date be changed to "June 30, 1934", in order to cover a specific case where a corporation holding some of these contracts was dissolved in some way without knowledge of the Bureau of Forestry.

It was a Delaware corporation, but it had some timber holdings in the West, and the United States Government will be put to a great deal of expense in order to cancel those particular contracts if this date is not changed, because after the dissolution was discovered, the Department was obliged to require the reexecution of the contracts. This brought these really old agreements past the May 1, 1933, date. The Department is asking for this. I am not asking for it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is that the case of the Crane Creek Lumber Co.?

Mr. BUCK. I do not remember the name of it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. My understanding is that there is a Crane Creek Lumber Co. that had entered into a contract sometime after May 1, 1933, but I do not think, as a matter of policy, we would be justified in making an exception or extending the date beyond this present administration, and I will have to insist upon my objection unless the date is changed. A special bill could be put in to cover that one

Mr. BUCK. I am willing to accept the amendment if the gentleman insists upon it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. With the understanding that the amendment as to the change of date is agreed to.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, upon application of the contracting parties involved, and after due notice publicly given, when such action is necessary in his judgment to prevent hardship or unemployment, and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to terminate any contract made prior to June 30, 1934, for the sale of timber on national forests, without requiring the payment of damages for failure to cut all of the timber involved, except as the value of the remaining timber may have been reduced by the cutting and remaining timber may have been reduced by the cutting and removal done by the purchaser: Provided, That all applications for action by the Secretary under the authority of this act shall be submitted within 1 year from the date of its approval.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. On page 1, line 8, strike out "June 30, 1934" and insert in lieu thereof "March 4, 1933."

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I wish the gentleman would make the date May 1, 1933, instead of March 4.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I will accept the gentleman's suggestion. I offer the following amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Zioncheck: Page 1, line 8, strike out "June 30, 1934" and insert "May 1, 1933."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the | Message from the president of the united states-merchant MARINE (H. DOC. NO. 118)

> The Speaker laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Congress of the United States:

I present to the Congress the question of whether or not the United States should have an adequate merchant ma-

To me there are three reasons for answering this question in the affirmative. The first is that in time of peace subsidies granted by other nations, shipping combines, and other restrictive, or rebating methods may well be used to the detriment of American shippers. The maintenance of fair competition alone calls for American flagships of sufficient tonnage to carry a reasonable portion of our foreign commerce.

Second, in the event of a major war in which the United States is not involved, our commerce, in the absence of an adequate American merchant marine, might find itself seriously crippled because of its inability to secure bottoms for neutral peaceful foreign trade.

Third, in the event of a war in which the United States itself might be engaged, American flagships are obviously needed not only for naval auxiliaries, but also for the maintenance of reasonable and necessary commercial intercourse with other nations. We should remember lessons learned in the last war.

In many instances in our history the Congress has provided for various kinds of disguised subsidies to American shipping. In recent years the Congress has provided this aid in the form of lending money at low rates of interest to American shipping companies for the purpose of building new ships for foreign trade. It has, in addition, appropriated large annual sums under the guise of payments for ocean mail contracts.

This lending of money for shipbuilding has in practice been a failure. Few ships have been built and many difficulties have arisen over the repayment of the loans. Similar difficulties have attended the granting of ocean mail contracts. The Government today is paying annually about $30,000,000 for the carrying of mails which would cost, under normal ocean rates, only $3,000,000. The difference, $27,-000,000, is a subsidy, and nothing but a subsidy. But given under this disguised form it is an unsatisfactory and not an honest way of providing the aid that Government ought to give to shipping.

I propose that we end this subterfuge. If the Congress decides that it will maintain a reasonably adequate American merchant marine, I believe that it can well afford honestly to call a subsidy by its right name.

Approached in this way a subsidy amounts to a comparatively simple thing. It must be based upon providing for American shipping, Government aid to make up the differential between American and foreign shipping costs. It should cover first the difference in the cost of building ships; second, the difference in the cost of operating ships; and finally, it should take into consideration the liberal subsidies that many foreign governments provide for their shipping. Only by meeting this threefold differential can we expect to maintain a reasonable place in ocean commerce for ships flying the American flag, and at the same time maintain American standards.

In setting up adequate provisions for subsidies for American shipping the Congress should provide for the termination of existing ocean mail contracts as rapidly as possible, and it should terminate the practice of lending Government money for shipbuilding. It should provide annual appropriations for subsidies sufficiently large to cover the differentials that I have described.

I am submitting to you herewith two reports dealing with American shipping: a report of an interdepartmental committee known as the "Committee on Shipping Policy", appointed June 18, 1934, by the Secretary of Commerce, and a report to me from the Postmaster General on ocean mail contracts prepared pursuant to an Executive order of July 11, 1934.

Reports which have been made to me by appropriate authorities in the executive branch of the Government have shown that some American shipping companies have engaged in practices and abuses which should and must be ended. Some of these have to do with the improper operating of subsidiary companies, the payment of excessive salaries, the engaging in businesses not directly a part of shipping and other abuses which have made for poor management, improper use of profits, and scattered efforts.

Legislation providing for adequate aid to the American merchant marine should include not only adequate appropriation for such purposes and appropriate safeguards for its expenditure, but a reorganization of the machinery for its administration. The quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative duties of the present Shipping Board Bureau of the Department of Commerce should be transferred for the present to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Purely administrative functions, however, such as information and planning, ship inspection, and the maintenance of aids to navigation should, of course, remain in the Department of Commerce.

An American merchant marine is one of our most firmly established traditions. It was, during the first half of our national existence, a great and growing asset. Since then it has declined in value and importance. The time has come to square this traditional ideal with effective performance.

Free competition among the nations in the building of modern shipping facilities is a manifestation of wholly desirable and wholesome national ambition. In such free competition the American people want us to be properly represented. The American people want to use American ships. Their Government owes it to them to make certain that such ships are in keeping with our national pride and national needs.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 4, 1935.

The SPEAKER. The message from the President will be referred to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and is ordered printed.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the next bill on the Consent Calendar.

MEXICAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill on the Consent Calendar, S. 1068, to establish a commission for the settlement of the special claims comprehended within the terms of the convention between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, concluded April 24, 1934.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection to permit an explanation.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I withhold my objection to permit the gentleman to make an explanation.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman give us some idea of the grounds of his objection?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The primary reason for my objection, Mr. Speaker, is that the Government of the United States has already spent $1,900,000 on commissions to try to investigate the claims against the Government of Mexico for damage to the property of Americans in Mexico. This bill proposes to expend another $90,000.

The record shows that of all the claims of foreign countries that have been acted upon by different commissions, only 2.65 percent have been collected; and these claims were represented as being bona fide. It seems to me to be a rather large sum to spend an additional $90,000 on top of the $1,900,000 that have already been spent, for the net result will be only to get money for some private oil companies, mining companies, and rubber companies.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an explanation?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The treaty entered into between Mexico and the United States in April 1934, provided for the settlement of these special claims arising out of the unsettled condition of Mexico between 1910 and 1920. There were at least six foreign nations who submitted claims for something like $380,000,000; but not all those claims were legitimate claims. Our country agreed to take the same percentage that was allowed them because from experience these claims are cut down. They have agreed to pay us something like $7,000,000 on the American claims.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Why do they not pay it without the

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Let me say that $500,000 has already been paid by Mexico in carrying out that agreement; and we are merely asking for an authorization of $90,000 to pay the expenses of three commissioners in deciding the claims of the American citizens who can participate in this amount. The expenses are to be taken out of the money collected from Mexico and prorated among the people when they are paid off.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The gentleman stated that the Government of Mexico was willing to pay some $7,000,000.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Does it require a commission for the Government of the United States to accept that $7,000,000?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The gentleman misunderstands the situation. The $7,000,000 is to be paid to the Government. There are some 3,000 claims of all kinds pending in the United States, and this commission is merely to decide what claims of the American citizens are just and right before they participate in this settlement. In 10 years, of all the claims filed in the Court of Claims only six-tenths of 1 percent were held just and legal. There are a great many of these claims to be sifted. A portion of them are just claims, and this commission is merely to determine the just claims and the amount due on each, so they can participate in this money which is being paid to the Government. Five hundred thousand dollars is already in the Treasury.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I would state to the gentleman from Tennessee that inasmuch as the larger portion of this money is to go to private oil companies, mining companies, and rubber companies, that in addition to the $90,000 carried in the bill it should include also a provision that the $1,900,000 already spent by the Government should be repaid to the Government before the money is distributed. With such a provision in the bill I would have no objection.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman confuses this special commission with an old commission that has been functioning for years and years. As to the claims the gentleman speaks of, those are the general claims and I know that those matters have not been settled. I am just as anxious as the gentleman from Washington that they be settled, but they are claims that go back to another period and do not include claims between 1910 and 1920, during the revolution. I cannot see why the gentleman should object to these citizens getting their money now when it is being paid into the Treasury of the United States.

Let me say further to the gentleman from Washington that the bill carries a special limitation limiting the life of the Commission to 2 years. This will cost the Government nothing and the Commission is created merely to determine the amount due each one of our citizens so they may participate in the money paid our Government for them, and they cannot get their money until that is done.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I am mindful of that provision.
Mr. McREYNOLDS. These are the claims of people of the United States who have gone over into Mexico. It was during the revolution. I may say there are some 3,000 claims involved. As to how many of them are legitimate, I do not know, but that is why we want to create this commission.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The gentleman could obtain the information as to the nature of these various claims from the State Department.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I presume I can; however, there are some 3,000. As I understand it they are generally for the loss of property and life. If the gentleman objects, he is standing in the way of the claims of private citizens and the opportunity to get their money.

Mr. BLOOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I yield to the gentleman from New

Mr. BLOOM. Is it not a fact that under no circumstances will this cost the Government of the United States one

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Absolutely not.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It will cost $90,000 in the first in-

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice until the next call of the calendar. At that time I would like to get a list of the type of claims from the State Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT OF SUPREME COURT JUSTICES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5161, to amend section 260 of the Judicial Code (U.S. C., title 28, sec. 375), as heretofore amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, under the present law two Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States could retire if they want to, but they would retire on pay fixed by law less than their salaries.

Mr. Speaker, as I view this bill, it is a little sop handed out to the present Justices, or the Justices in the future who may be in like circumstances, in order to kind of influence them to retire, knowing that if we pass this bill, instead of retiring on retired pay like all other retired Justices have, they would retire on the full pay of Judges of the United States Supreme Court. I do not believe the Congress of the United States should pass such legislation. I do not believe in handing out a milk sop to officials in so high a position as is occupied by a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Congress has just built a $10,000,000 Supreme Court Building over here, which is a magnificent building, to add prestige to the prestige that already exists. Passing this bill does not add prestige. It takes prestige from this high

Mr. Speaker, some of the most valuable service "Uncle Joe" Cannon rendered in this House to the United States was performed many years after he had reached the retirement age provided for in this bill.

There are numerous colleagues now serving in this House who are well beyond that age, whose knowledge, gathered through the years, and whose ripe experience and matured judgment make them the most valuable men in the Congress.

I could name many judges who have adorned the Supreme Court of the United States, whose most seasoned and well balanced opinions were rendered after they had passed this

While I intend to object to this bill, if my colleague from Texas [Mr. Sumners] desires to make a statement, I will reserve the objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, for the information of the committee, I should like to make a statement with regard to this bill.

It is well known, of course, that Justices of the Supreme Court hold their positions for life, subject to good behavior. Under the Constitution they do not have to retire and they do not have to resign. Some time ago we passed a law that permitted justices of the Circuit Court of Appeals who had reached the age of 70 and who had 10 years of service to retire instead of resign. This bill proposes to give the Supreme Court Justices a similar arrangement to that now provided by law for the justices of the Circuit Court of Appeals. The judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals when they retire instead of resign are subject to assignment by the presiding justice of the Circuit Court of Appeals. Under the provisions of this law the Justices of the Supreme Court who retire would be subject to assignment in order to take care of emergency business in the circuits.

I would like to address myself to the judgment of the gentleman from Texas by saying that we have a practical situation under which these Judges of the Supreme Court can, under the Constitution, draw full salary for life if they stay on the bench.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. BLANTON. Does the gentleman from Texas, who is Chairman of the great Judiciary Committee, feel toward the Justices of the Supreme Court that, when they realized they could not perform proper service to the Government, they would still hold on in order to hold their full salaries, or does not he think they are the kind of men who, when they realize they cannot perform the service, will voluntarily resign on retired pay fixed by law?

The gentleman may also answer this question at the same time: He knows that a very distinguished Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States continued to serve for almost a dozen years after he could have retired on the age specified in this bill. I refer to the distinguished jurist who is now on his death bed in Washington, Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. He will be 94 years of age next Friday.

Mr. Justice Holmes served with distinguished ability for many years after he reached an age at which he could have retired. Why not let well enough alone? Our forefathers did not see fit to provide this kind of measure when the Supreme Court was created and provision was made for their retirement on retired pay. Why not let well enough alone and not change this procedure? I would like to hear from the distinguished gentleman from Texas on the above points.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. When our forefathers arranged with regard to the Justices of the Supreme Court they arranged that they may hold office for life, subject to good behavior. The distinguished Justice to whom my colleague has referred is the only Justice of the Supreme Court since the organization of the Government whose salary has been cut after retirement. At the time Mr. Justice Holmes retired, it was understood, it was the custom since the beginning of the Government that salaries would not be disturbed, and I will say to my distinguished colleague, for some time Justice Holmes continued to draw the same salary as the active Justices on the Supreme Court bench. I do not remember when it was we modified the law, but we reduced the salary of the resigned Justices of the Supreme Court 3 or 4 years ago, but did not reduce the salary of retired justices of the Circuit Court of Appeals. This Justice to whom my colleague refers is the only Justice of the Supreme Court in the history of the United States whose salary was reduced after resignation. It is now known that their salary can be taken entirely away if they resign. Insofar as I know, the idea that the salary of a Federal judge might be reduced or stopped entirely during his life is of recent origin in this country.

I am going to be candid with my colleague. I do not know how many Members of Congress I would risk on this proposition submitted by my colleague if a Member of Congress was holding a job for life and he got where he was sort of slowing up a little bit and he knew that if he stayed on maybe this year or another 6 months, he would continue to get his salary, and if he resigned he might be cut off entirely, he probably would stay. We have to realize there is a human element in this. Even our distinguished friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], would probably hang on for at least 6 months thinking he would get better. He would rather stay on a little longer when he had a cinch on his salary.

Mr. BLANTON. I would never hang on to any position for the salary. My one and only thought while holding a position is to render service worth-while. Whenever I cannot render to the people service that is worth-while I will quit voluntarily.

If we pass this bill, the time could come when we might | have 9 active judges, and 9 retired judges of the Supreme Court, all drawing full Supreme Court salaries.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. If the gentleman will permit, does the gentleman take the position: If this bill is passed we may have a better Supreme Court, because when they come to the retirement age they could retire on their full salary? Mr. BLANTON. You might get a worse one.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. You could not get worse than some of them that are on there now.

Mr. BLANTON. I do not say that. I have a great deal of confidence in the Supreme Court of the United States and a great deal of respect for the Court, and I think we might get some material inferior to that we now have on that Court.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Does the gentleman maintain that our President would appoint an inferior judge?

Mr. BLANTON. No, I do not; but I think this is a bad bill, and I am going to object to its passage. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BLANTON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

ALIENS ENGAGING IN DISSEMINATION OF FOREIGN PROPAGANDA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5839, to authorize the shortening or termination of the stay in the United States of certain aliens not admitted for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLANTON, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. MAVERICK, and Mr.

MARCANTONIO reserved the right to object.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, in 1932 the gentleman from New York [Mr. DICKSTEIN], who was then, and is now, Chairman of the Committee on Immigration, brought in here a bill which he had passed, and it was approved May 25, 1932, and became 47 Statute 165.

I do not believe 20 Members of the House understood the measure at that time, because, if they had, I do not think they would have passed it. It seemed innocent and it seemed not at all important. It went to the Senate and they put seven amendments on it and brought it back, and it was pushed through the House and became law.

Under that bill there has been admitted to this country in the last 18 months several noted anarchists, for instance, anarchists like Emma Goldman, who, with Alexander Birkman, back in 1917, we deported after it had cost this Government thousands of dollars to deport them. She was brought back to the United States under that bill. If it had not been for that bill she would not have been brought back here. She was called "an inoffensive old woman who used to be an anarchist", and she began to spread her infamous doctrine in this country from the time she reached here until the time she left. If you permit this to go on you are going to have in this country what is going on in Greece today. You are going to have our own airplanes dropping deadly bombs on our own battleships. It ought to stop.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. BLANTON. I simply want to ask one question. So far as this bill is concerned it is inoffensive and it is unimportant, but will the gentleman assure us that if we let this bill go by he will not permit the Senate to put on some 6 or 8 or 10 amendments again?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. If the gentleman will permit me a moment—I think the gentleman and I owe some explanation to the House.

Mr. BLANTON. So far as this bill is concerned I would have no objection to it.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I have objection to it.

Mr. TRUAX. What good would this bill do?

Mr. MAVERICK. I have an objection to the bill, also.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I intend to object from an entirely different point of view from that of the gentleman from Texas. This bill would authorize the Secretary of Labor to institute deportation proceedings against any alien in the United States who engages in the promotion or dissemination of propoganda instigated from foreign sources. This bill is vicious. It would cause an avalanche of alien and seditious legislation and further persecution of aliens. Let us remember that we are living in 1935 and not in 1917. Let us legislate not by hysteria but with common sense. Therefore, I object to the bill.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIEN VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR

The next bill on the Consent Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2739) to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, I did not intend to object to this bill, but I would like to ask the gentleman from New York a question.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. This simply extends the time to all veterans of the World War who are aliens in giving them a short form of citizenship. The time expired in 1932. This extends the time for aliens who served in the World War, and at the same time gives the benefit to aliens in this country who served in the war with allied countries.

This is not my bill. It was introduced by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cannon], and reported by my colleague, Mr. Schuetz. It does not change the immigration law; it simply extends the time, which I think Congress ought to do.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. We have had various bills seeking to give the veteran aliens who served in the Army or Navy during the World War an opportunity to become American citizens, and we have extended it several times. I am in favor of that plan if it is necessary. Perhaps I would not be opposed to extending this time, but I would like to have the bill go over, as it strikes me there are some changes that ought to be made, in order that we may make no mistake, and I ask that the bill go over without prejudice.

Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I introduced this bill at the last session, and it was approved by the committee. I introduced the identical bill this session, and it was approved unanimously with a minor amendment. The American Legion is in favor of the bill. The Veterans of Foreign Wars is in favor of the bill, and the only thing the bill provides is an amendment adding to the act of 1932, which provided that the time be extended to May 25, 1934, and provides a short route to naturalization. We are asking in this bill that the time be extended to May 25, 1936, and in addition it applies not only to aliens who took part in the World War in favor of the United States Government, but it also applies to all aliens legally in this country who left the country and fought with allied nations during the World War.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. That is what I thought. It needs to be studied carefully, and therefore I object.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. It will do no good.

Mr. KENNEY. I would like to make a statement to the gentleman.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I object.

LOSS OF CITIZENSHIP OF A CITIZEN WHO VOTES IN FOREIGN POLITICAL ELECTION

The next business was the bill (H. R. 5799) to declare that a citizen of the United States who votes in a political election in a foreign state loses his citizenship.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. DIRKSEN. This bill came before this body once before. It was inspired by the plebescite held in the Saar on the 13th of January last. The legislation heretofore was retroactive and sought to cancel the citizenship of those who voted in that election. This bill, however, carries the word "hereafter", so as to cancel the citizenship of those who shall hereafter vote in a political election in a foreign country. I submit it is sought to cancel the citizenship of people naturalized by judicial process, doing it automatically and summarily. If you are going to confer citizenship by judicial process, then the proper thing to do is to divest them of that citizenship by a similar procedure. This bill makes no provision for proof, no provision for giving a man his day in court. While I sympathize with and have no quarrel with the object sought to be achieved by the bill, I believe it is faulty so far as procedure is concerned. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERMITTING SEWARD, ALASKA, TO UNDERTAKE CERTAIN PUBLIC WORKS

The next business was the bill (H. R. 3808) to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction of an electric generating station and electric and steam-heating distribution systems, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $118,000.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the incorporated town of Seward, Territory of Alaska, is hereby authorized and empowered to undertake the municipal works hereinafter specified, to wit: The construction of an electric generating station and electric distribution system, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any amount not exceeding in the aggregate the sum of $118,000.

SEC. 2. Before said bonds shall be issued a special election shall be ordered by the common council of the said town of Seward, Alaska, at which election the question of whether such bonds shall be issued in the amount above specified for any or all of the pur-be ordered by the common council of the said town of Seward, Alaska, at which election the question of whether such bonds shall be issued in the amount above specified for any or all of the purposes hereinbefore set forth shall be submitted to the qualified electors of said town of Seward, Alaska, whose names appear on the last assessment roll of said town for purposes of municipal taxation. The form of the ballot shall be such that the electors may vote for or against the issuance of bonds for the purposes herein specified in the maximum amount herein authorized or any lesser amount. Not less than 20 days' notice of such election shall be given to the public by posting notices of the same in three conspicuous places within the corporate limits of the town of Seward, Alaska, one of which shall be at the front door of the United States post office at Seward, Alaska. The election notice shall specifically state the amount of bonds proposed to be issued for the purposes herein specified. The registration of such election, the manner of conducting the same, and the canvass of the returns of said election shall be, as nearly as practicable, in accordance with the requirements of law in general or special elections in said municipality; and said bonds shall be issued for the purposes herein authorized only upon condition that not less than 65 percent of the votes cast at such election in said municipality shall be in favor of the issuance of said bonds for such purpose.

authorized only upon condition that not less than 65 percent of the votes cast at such election in said municipality shall be in favor of the issuance of said bonds for such purpose.

Sec. 3. The bonds herein authorized to be issued shall be coupon in form and shall mature in not to exceed 30 years from the date thereof. Such bonds may bear such date or dates, may be in such denomination or denominations, may mature in such amounts and at such time or times, not exceeding 30 years from the date thereof, may be payable in such medium of payment and at such place or places, may be sold at either public or private sale, and may be nonredeemable or redeemable (either with or without premium), may carry such registration privileges as to either principal and interest, principal only, or both, as shall be prescribed by the common council of said town of Seward. The bonds shall bear the signatures of the mayor and of the clerk of the town of Seward, and shall have impressed thereon the official seal of said municipality. The coupons to be annexed to such bonds shall bear the facsimile signature of the mayor and of the town clerk of said municipality. In case any of the officers whose signatures or countersignatures appear on the bonds shall cease to be such officers before delivery of such bonds, such signatures or countersignatures, whether manual or facsimile, shall nevertheless be valid and sufficient for all purposes, the same as if said officers had remained in office until such delivery. Said bonds shall bear interest at a rate to be fixed by the common council of the town of Seward, not to exceed, however, 6 percent per annum, payable semiannually, and said bonds shall be sold at not less than the principal amount not to exceed, however, 6 percent per annum, payable semiannually, and said bonds shall be sold at not less than the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest.

SEC. 4. The bonds herein authorized to be issued shall be general obligations of the town of Seward, Territory of Alaska, payable eral obligations of the town of Seward, Territory of Alaska, payable as to both interest and principal from ad valorem taxes which shall be levied upon all of the taxable property within the corporate limits of such municipality in an amount sufficient to pay the interest on and the principal of such bonds as and when the same become due and payable. Said bonds may, if so provided by the common council of said municipality, be additionally secured by a direct pledge of all or any part of the revenues of said electric generating station and electric distribution systems and any subsequent additions or extensions thereto remaining after provision for the payment of the reasonable costs of operation and maintenance of said system and the cost of such repairs, improvements, and betterments thereto, as shall be necessary to keep the same at all times in good repair and working order. all times in good repair and working order.

Sec. 5. No part of the funds arising from the sale of said bonds shall be used for any purpose or purposes other than those specified in this act. Said bonds shall be sold only when and in such amounts as the Common Council of the Town of Seward shall direct; and the proceeds thereof shall be disbursed only for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned and under the orders and directions of said common council from time to time as such proceeds may be required for said purposes.

may be required for said purposes.

Sec. 6. The incorporated town of Seward is hereby authorized to enter into contracts with the United States of America or any agency or instrumentality thereof under the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act and acts amendatory thereof and acts supplemental thereto, and revisions thereof, and the regulations made in pursuance thereof and under any further acts of the Congress of the United States to encourage public works, for the sale of bonds issued in accordance with the provisions of this act or for the acceptance of a grant of money to aid said municipality in financing any public works herein authorized; or to enter into contracts with any persons or corporations, public or private, for the sale of such bonds; and such contracts may contain such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by and between the common council of said town of Seward and the United States of America or any agency or instrumentality thereof or any such purchaser. or any such purchaser.

SEC. 7. This act shall take effect immediately.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "electric", strike out "and steam heating."

Page 4, line 18, after the word "electric", strike out "and steam heating."

The amendments were agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction of an electric generating station and electric distribution systems, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $118,000."

AUTHORIZING KETCHIKAN, ALASKA, TO ISSUE BONDS

The next business was the bill (H. R. 6084) to authorize the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the electric light and power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., and to finance and operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H. R. 6084

A bill to authorize the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the electric light and power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., and to finance and operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, is hereby authorized to issue and sell its bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring for the said city of Ketchikan, electric light, power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., Inc., and to finance and operate the same by the said city of Ketchikan. The bonds herein authorized to be issued and sold are the bonds referred to in the act entitled, "An act to authorize the incorporated town of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring public-utility properties, and for other purposes", approved July 3, 1930 (46 Stat. 1011), in which act the said city of Ketchikan, Alaska, was erroneously referred to as the "incorporated town of Ketchikan, Alaska." Such bonds when issued shall be legal and valid in all respects as general obligations of the said city of Ketchikan, Alaska, notwithstanding any defects or irregularities in the submission to a vote of the people of said city of the question with respect to the issuance or sale of said bonds, in the ordinance calling the election, in the notice of election, in the form of ballot, in taking the vote, or in any of the proceedings had or taken in connection with the issuance or sale of such bonds, and all such proceedings are hereby declared to be legal and valid, and the city is also authorized to levy any taxes which may be necessary for the payment of said bonds for which the full faith and credit of the city shall be pledged. The revenues derived from said electric light, power, water, and telephone properties, over and above the expense of maintenance, operation, and depreciation reserve thereof, shall be pledged to the payment of principal and interest of said bonds.

Sec. 2. The bonds herein referred to and authorized to be issued

SEC. 2. The bonds herein referred to and authorized to be issued and sold shall be issued in such form and detail and with such maturities as have been or hereafter shall be determined by resolution of the Common Council of the City of Ketchikan. Such bonds shall be issued in coupon form, registerable as to principal, or as to principal and interest. In case any of the officers whose signatures or countersignatures appear on the bonds or coupons shall cease to be such officers before the delivery of such bonds to the purchaser, such signatures or countersignatures shall, nevertheless, be valid and sufficient for all purposes, the same as if they had remained in office until delivery of the bonds. The proceeds of the sale of such bonds shall be disbursed only for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, and for which such bonds were authorized to be issued under the provisions of such act of July 3, 1930. Sec. 3. The bonds herein authorized, when issued, are hereby declared to be valid and legally binding obligations of said city of Ketchikan. Alaska.

of Ketchikan, Alaska.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the subsequent bills on the calendar, because they have not been on the calendar 3 days.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is well taken.

MONUMENT TO GROVER CLEVELAND, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that House Joint Resolution 147, authorizing the erection of a monument to Grover Cleveland, in Washington, D. C., not on the calendar 3 days, be taken up and considered at this

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 147, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I know of no particular objection to the resolution, but I do feel that it ought not to be taken up out of order in this way. Several Members who have bills here rely on us to stop the calling of the calendar when we reach those bills that have not been on the calendar 3 days. In fairness to that policy which we have always maintained, I object.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for half a minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, in the caucus room of the old House Office Building, the Tennessee Valley Authority will show some moving pictures of activities, developments, and projects of that Authority. Those pictures are being shown for the special benefit of the Committee on Military Affairs. That committee extends an invitation to the membership of the House, to the press, and to the public generally to come tomorrow morning and see those pictures.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BLANTON. Provided I may have 5 minutes to answer the gentleman, I will have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dickstein] that he may address the House for 5 minutes, and, coupled with that, the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] that he may address the House for 5 minutes?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what other business is pending?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that there are at least two bills to be taken up under suspension of the rules.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Well, I object, if there are two bills to be taken up under suspension. There will be ample time tomorrow or the next day for speeches.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I do not think I have occupied the time of this House. I think it is important that I have a few minutes to explain the statements that have been made on this floor. The RECORD ought to be correct. I assure the gentleman that I would not knowingly take up the time if I did not think it was important.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Can the gentleman not wait until we get through with the business of the day before we have speeches?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. DICKSTEIN]?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CRITICISMS OF THE CONGRESS

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and in connection therewith to insert a short editorial.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following editorial from the Rome News-Tribune, of Rome, Ga.:

[From the Rome (Ga.) News-Tribune, Feb. 28, 1935] CRITICISMS OF THE CONGRESS

Criticisms of Congress for the exercise of the rights vested under the Constitution are not properly directed. If it is wrong for the Congress to exercise its own discretion in the matter of legislation, the fault is with the fundamental law of the land, and it is against the Constitution that critics should fire their darts

Under the Constitution there are three distinct divisions of government; the administrative, the legislative, and the judicial, and each is endowed with special rights and privileges. The privilege of the Congress is to make appropriations, pass laws, and, in the Senate, to confirm or reject executive appointments of a certain nature.

Thus when the Congress, with its more than 500 Members, approaches matters of legislation its duty is to consider such matters and to pass or reject those proposed acts which appeal to congressional wisdom, or which appear to be of no advantage to the Nation. This is the law, and when Members of Congress observe the law and attempt to use their judgment respecting legislation they clearly are within their rights.

So, if there are persons who feel that recommendation of the executive department should be sufficient to cause the Members of Congress to side-step their own responsibilities and surrender their own constitutional rights, by acting as so many rubber stamps, they should move to have the Constitution so changed that the legislative authority is vested in the administrative branch of the Government instead of in the Congress.

So long as the Government is operated under the present Constitution it should be operated with due respect for that instrument.

instrument.

INVESTIGATION OF AMERICAN TELEGRAPH & TELEPHONE CO.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holding-company structure or otherwise.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That it is necessary, in aid of legislation by the Congress and for the use of governmental agencies, including State regulatory commissions, for the information of the general public, as an aid in providing more effective rate regulation, and for other purposes in the public interest, that accurate and comprehensive information be procured and compiled regarding the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and other telephone companies companies.

SEC. 2. The Federal Communications Commission is hereby authorized and directed to investigate and report to the Congress on the following matters with respect to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, in-cluding all of their subsidiary, affiliated, associated, and holding companies, and any other companies in which any of them have any direct or indirect financial interest, or which have any such interest in them, or in which any of their officers or directors hold any office or exert any control, or whose officers or directors hold any office or exert any control, or whose officers or directors hold any office or exert any control in them—

(a) The corporate and financial history, and the capital structure and the relationship of such company and of its subsidiary, affiliated, associated, and holding companies, including the determination of whether or not such structure may enable them to evade State or Federal regulation or taxation, or to conceal, pyramid, or absorb profits, or to do any other act contrary to the public interest.

public interest.

The extent and character of intercompany service contracts and all transactions between the telephone companies and their subsidiaries, affiliated, associated, or holding companies, and particularly between the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Western Electric Co. and other manufacturers of electrical communication equipment; the methods of publishing telephone directories and placing and charging for advertising therein; the cost of and sale prices of telephone equipment, material, or devices to telephone operating companies or users; the profits upon such sales and the effect of such sales upon the rates or upon the rate base of operating companies when used as a basis for telephone base of operating companies when used as a basis for telephone charges in the various States or in interstate commerce; and the charges in the various States or in interstate commerce; and the probable savings to telephone operating companies and the public by purchasing equipment under a system of competitive bidding.

(c) The reasons for the failure generally to reduce telephone rates and charges during the years of declining prices; and the extent, if any, to which local subscribers or the users of toll service have borne the cost of the research developments for telephone equipment and appliances, radio, motion picture, and other inventions, including the maintenance and support of Bell Telephone Laboratories. Inc.

Telephone Laboratories, Inc.

(d) The effect of monopolistic control upon the reasonableness

(d) The effect of monopolistic control upon the reasonableness of telephone rates and charges, upon the methods of competition with independent telephone companies, and upon the character of services rendered, and the alleged unfair or discriminatory practices with respect to such companies, and with respect to radio broadcasting or public speaker "hook-ups."
(e) The effect of mergers, consolidations, and acquisitions of control by telephone companies, including the determination of whether there has been any "write-up" in the purchase price of property, equipment, or intangibles, the fairness of the terms and conditions of any merger, consolidation, or acquisition, and the public interest therein, and the effect thereof upon rates or service.

service.

(f) The accounting methods of the companies, particularly with reference to depreciation accounting, apportionment of investment, revenues and expenses between State and interstate operations, employee pension funds, and valuation of properties for both rate and tax purposes

(g) The methods of competition with other companies or industries, including the determination of whether or not there has been any sale or refusal to buy from or sell to competing companies, or suppression of patents, and the expansion of the companies, panies, or suppression of patents, and the expansion of the companies into fields other than telephone communication, including teletype service, telephoto service, telegraph service, broadcasting, motion and sound picture production and distribution, and the manufacture of electrical equipment, so far as such expansion may relate to or affect communications.

(h) Whether or not the companies have sought through propaganda or the expenditure of money or the control of channels of publicity to influence or control public opinion, legislative or administrative action, or elections.

SEC. 3. As used in the resolution the term "company" shall include all subsidiary, affiliated, associated, and holding companies or corporations and all companies directly or indirectly associated or connected with telephone companies, either by direct or indirect stock ownership, interlocking directorates, voting trusts, holding or investment companies, or any other direct or indirect means.

SEC. 4. The inquiry into certain practices of telephone carriers subject to the Communications Act of 1934, recently instituted by the Federal Communications Commission pursuant to its Telephone Division Order No. 11 and Statement of November 14, 1934, may be consolidated with the investigation required by this joint resolution in the manner and to the extent deemed desirable by the Commission.

SEC. 5. For the purposes of this resolution the Federal Communications Commission is hereby authorized to hold hearings; to contract for stenographic reporting service; to utilize its regular personnel, facilities, jurisdiction, and powers insofar as practicable; and to employ for the purposes of this investigation such additional experts, including engineering, accounting, legal, and other assistants as may be found necessary, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment and compensation of officers and employees of the United States, and to make such other expenditures, including necessary travel expenses, and expenditures for printing and binding, as it deems necessary. The Commission is also hereby authorized to have access to, upon demand, for the purposes of examination, and the right to copy. SEC. 5. For the purposes of this resolution the Federal Com-The Commission is also hereby authorized to have access to, upon demand, for the purposes of examination, and the right to copy, any books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, and other records of any person, partnership, company, or other organization being investigated, whether such books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, or records are in the possession of the company under investigation or are in the possession of other persons, firms, or corporations; to require by subpena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, and other records which the Commission deems relevant or material to the inquiry at any designated place. spondence, memoranda, and other records which the Commission deems relevant or material to the inquiry, at any designated place of hearing within the United States; to administer oaths and affirmations, to require persons, partnerships, companies, or other organizations to submit to the Commission in writing reports and answers to specific questions, furnishing such information as the Commission may require relative to the inquiry. Such reports and answers shall be made under oath or otherwise as the Commission may prescribe and shall be filed with the Commission within such reasonable period as the Commission may prescribe, unless additional time be granted in any case by the Commission. In case of contumacy or the refusal to obey any subpena or other order issued hereunder, the Commission may invoke the aid of any court of the United States, within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on, or where such party guilty of contumacy or refusal to obey resides or has his place of business, in requiring obedience to such subpena or other order, and any such court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue its order enforcing such subpena or other order of the Commission in whole or in part; and any fallure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. All process in such cases may be served wherever the defendant may process in such cases may be served wherever the befound.

SEC. 6. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $750,000, to be made immediately available to the Federal Communications Commission for the purposes of the investigation and report herein authorized and directed, and the Commission shall make special reports to Congress on its progress and its findings in this investigation.

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I shall take only a few moments, because I made some remarks about this resolution 2 weeks ago today.

This resolution has already passed the Senate. It was reported out of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce unanimously, except that the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MERRITT] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth] filed some minority views criticizing some of the language of the resolution, but stating in their minority views that they had no objection to the passage of the resolution for the investigation of the telephone industry.

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, through counsel, for the last 3 years has been investigating all public utilities doing business in interstate commerce. The telephone companies comprised one of those industries. That only went to the financial set-up in some ways and with reference to holding companies, and so on. As far as going in and getting the information which the Communications Commission should have in order to perform its duty well in the regulation of telegraph and telephones, particularly in this instance the telephones, with which duty they are charged under the Communications Act of 1934, they think they must have the right to make this investigation.

Something was said by my colleague [Mr. Blanton] 2 weeks ago today with reference to salaries paid. I have been assured by those who are charged with this investigation that they are allowed to pay an accountant not more than $7,500 and an attorney not more than $9,000. I am assured that under no circumstances will anyone be paid more than that, and probably not more than one person will be paid that much, because the vast number of employees will be in the lower brackets.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a considerable sum, but the members of the committee and those who read the report of Dr. Splawn, who made the investigation for the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, will remember he said in his report that in order that the regulating authority might have the information to proceed safely and soundly and not go to the hazard of doing somebody an injustice, either the owners of the telephones or the public themselves, it would require from $500,000 to $1,000,000 to make the investigation. As I say, the Senate has already unanimously, I think, passed this resolution. In justice to the industry itself, in justice to the users of telephones throughout the country, I think the regulatory body should have all the information asked for in this resolution.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Do I understand this is a general investigation of all telephone companies in the United States?

Mr. RAYBURN. They can do it under this resolution, but as far as the independent telephone companies are concerned, I have asked about that, and I am assured that no independent company will be investigated in anywise, except and unless it has a contract with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. or the Bell Co. or one of the large systems. In that instance, and usually, that contract would be filed with the big company, and the little company would not be harassed by any additional expenditure. There are some of the so-called "independent companies", however, which are rather large companies and which do an interstate business, and in all probability they would be brought into this. But I am talking about the local telephone systems. I do not think they will have to spend an extra dollar of money or bring into their employ any extra employees on this account.

Mr. SNELL. Do I understand from the gentleman's statement that this is primarily an investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is correct.

Mr. SNELL. And that is the reason they are named in this resolution?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is the reason they are named. They are the big set-up. I think the statistics will show that the American Telephone & Telegraph in this connection does about 90 or 95 percent of the business and collects from 90 to 95 percent of the revenues.

Mr. SNELL. Are they not being investigated now by practically every State in the Union pretty nearly continually?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know, frankly. I know my State is not investigating them, and nothing was brought into the considerations of the committee that would indicate that.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is it not impossible for a State to investigate the business of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., it being an interstate business, and their holdings being so large that no State has the authority or facilities to properly investigate it?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes; and there are 30 major companies controlled by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. We have got to spend several months investigating each of these companies to dig out the facts wanted.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. TRUAX. The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is the largest company, is practically a telephone monopoly. They have never reduced rates, but on the other hand have doubled and tripled rates. The charges of the telegraph companies likewise have shown no diminution. The telephone company and the telegraph company have added to the communication charges of the country, and the users of these services have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the passage of this resolution.

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes; and the commission that has asked for this investigation requires this information.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield. Mr. BLANTON. There is one exception, that here in Washington we made them return about $10 or $12 to each telephone user in the city of Washington not long ago.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. HOOK. Will the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., or any company that is being investigated, be called upon to pay for any of this investigation?

Mr. RAYBURN. No; but, to be entirely frank, it will in all probability cost them more than this $750,000.

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman explain why just the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is being investigated?

Mr. RAYBURN. Those companies which have contracts with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., insofar as those contracts are concerned, will be brought into this; but, as I stated to the gentleman from New York, 90 to 95 percent of the telephone business of the United States is done by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. set-up.

Mr. HOOK. Then why not include the other 5 percent and investigate all of them?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not think it is necessary to include some of these little companies. I do not know why they should be brought into it, because they cannot add to the facts to be developed from the larger company.

Mr. HOOK. Is it not true that practically all the setups of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are organized into State set-ups?

Mr. RAYBURN. No.

Mr. HOOK. And that masters in chancery have held that most of these companies are engaged in intrastate commerce and not interstate commerce?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not think so. I am not sure, but I am under the impression that the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. Speaker, after reading the minority views of the gentleman from Connecticut and the gentleman from New York, I asked the chairman of the telephone division to write me a letter giving his views with reference to some specific paragraphs in the bill that were called into question in private conversation with me by the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Connecticut. I ask unanimous consent that the letter written me by this official be read by the Clerk in my time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to follows:

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, Washington, D. C., February 8, 1935.

Re: H. J. Res. 135 (74th Cong.). Telephone investigation. Hon. Sam Rayburn, Chairman, House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Charman Rayburn: In response to your inquiries, the Federal Communications Commission has forwarded you its reasons for favoring your House Joint Resolution No. 135. I understand you now wish our opinion specifically as to section 2 (c) of this resolution and as to why a resolution is necessary at all, in view of the law as it now stands.

Specifically appearing law as it now stands.

Specifically answering your inquiry for opinion as to section 2 (c), presumably a primary purpose of any public-utility investigation is to secure information which may assist in proper rate determinations. The State commissions and the local authorities vitally need the telephone information which can be secured only by the Federal Commission for their rate investigation. The Federal Commission does not have and has not asked for jurisdiction to determine local rates. But the facts developed in any worthwhile investigation must be available for any telephone rate determination. Hence, what has happened to telephone rates during the period of generally declining prices is pertinent in any worthwhile telephone investigation; and these facts, when developed, will be available for the Federal and the State commissions and other local authorities. authorities.

As to the second part of section 2 (c) of the resolution, it is certainly pertinent to inquire how far a telephone company may have gone in spending money its patrons paid as rates, in other businesses, and the effect thereof on the revenues of the company businesses, and the effect thereof on the revenues of the company and the rates to be paid in the future by the telephone subscriber. Your second inquiry as to the advantages of conducting the investigation under the joint resolution, notwithstanding the provisions of the Communications Act of 1934, in substance, asks why the resolution at all. That question we have tried to answer in the response sent you through Chairman Sykes. At the present moment the Commission has neither the funds nor the organization for such an investigation. It needs a specific authorization of Congress which is broad enough to meet technical and procedural objections which are always thrown in the way of any serious investigation of this kind. Both the Federal Communications Commission and the public would benefit through the specific backing which this resolution of Congress will give the investigation.

Very sincerely yours,

Very sincerely yours,

PAUL A. WALKER, Chairman Telephone Division.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, the minority who made a report on this bill, as the chairman said, do not object in general to the investigation; but we felt that the fever for investigation had run rather strong, and we felt that if any great corporation in the United States had commended itself to the citizenship generally it was the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

We asked in the course of the hearings before the committee a number of those gentlemen who appeared in favor of the bill if there was any nation in the world which had as good a system of telephone communication at such low rates as the United States; everyone said no.

The very nature of the telephone business is such that the needs of the country could not be served by a variety of telephone companies; from the very nature of the business it must be a monopoly; and I think it is agreed that for such a company there never has been one so well managed as this; open, no stock manipulation, no kiting, no water. To investigate this company at this time, when we are spending money so lavishly, is wasteful. For this investigation, which, in my personal opinion, cannot yield any good, we are taxing the United States $750,000, and we will tax the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. probably twice this amount. It is fair to say that the cost to the company and to the United States together will be very close to $2,000,000. This seems to me, as a business man, to be a waste. As I said a moment ago. I think the fever for investigating and the gathering of all sorts of useless information is appalling. I think every Member of Congress, when he sees the amount of printing alone that comes to his office containing useless facts, feels that it ought to be stopped at some time; and I cannot imagine any better time to stop it than now with a company like the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

This investigation was asked for by the Communications Commission, and we commented in our report on the character of the bill

Our bill is the same as the Senate bill. We pointed out that there were a lot of useless facts called for and in language which to me does not seem very wise.

I am not going to take the time to discuss the bill at length, but I want to call attention to page 3, subsection 3, which is a good example of what is suggested in the bill. This would require the furnishing of reasons for the failure generally to reduce telephone rates and charges during the years of declining prices, and the extent, if any, to which local subscribers, or the users of toll service have borne the cost of the research developments for telephone equipment and appliances, radio, motion picture, and other inventions, including the maintenance and support of Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc.

That sounds rather wise but, of course, it is foolish, because every business concern for its life and for its progress must have some sort of research. Any manufacturing concern must have research. To do that research work they have to spend some of their money. To get this money they have to sell their goods. The only product the Bell Telephone Co. has to sell is service, and the only possible way it can get money is through subscribers to telephone service. Any money they get for any purpose has to come from subscribers. So I say that paragraph makes it appear that it is very bad to use subscribers' money, but that is their only source for money. This idea runs through the whole bill. In other words, they are sure the company is committing crimes of some sort, and the Commission is being authorized to find this out, all starting with the idea that there is a wrong being committed, and they must find it.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I am inclined to agree with the gentleman that, so far as service is concerned, it is very satisfactory; but does not the gentleman believe that the rates charged by the telephone company, especially the longdistance rates, are unconscionable?

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. I think that is a matter for investigation. I do not think their charges high, however. Compared to charges in other countries, I believe they are very small.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I notice that over in England the long-distance telephone calls are 25 cents during the week-end.

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. Of course, they try to increase business in the lax hours by decreasing the price. That is good business.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Even during the depression the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has been able to pay a 9-percent dividend on their preferred stock.

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. I do not believe they have any preferred stock. They only have common stock. The 9-percent dividend they have been paying out of surplus.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. They must have a tremendous surplus.

Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut. Well, that is good business, too.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in all its reports has been perfectly open and frank. No one can find anything that is not contained in their published reports. I want to call these things to the attention of the House in the hope that this investigation will be stopped. I call attention of the House also to the existing craze for investigations. When we start the Communications Commission and all of these anomalous commissions they desire to increase their importance, and they do it by further investigation and the further collection and publication of useless facts. I think it is time to stop.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Merritt] has stated in adequate expression the sentiments of the two members of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce who signed the minority report. I should like to add another thought or two to those expressed by the gentleman.

As will be found by a reading of the minority report, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Merrit] and myself have no fundamental objections to an investigation, but the circumstances under which this particular piece of legislation comes before us and the character of this legislation, if one reads it carefully, are, I think, worthy of consideration. It is no violation of confidence to say that this resolution was not prepared in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, nor by any of its employees. It came to the committee after being drafted in the office of the Communications Commission.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.
Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I was unavoidably absent when the committee had this resolution before it, having been in Ohio to bring my family to Washington. Did any member of the Communications Commission appear before the committee and advocate the passage of this resolution?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No member of the Commission appeared while I was present.

Mr. RAYBURN. There were no hearings in either the House or Senate.

Mr. WADSWORTH. There were no hearings.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. The Communications Commission has been in existence less than a year?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Considerably less than a year.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I was wondering where all of this sentiment came from?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I cannot answer the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Does the gentleman believe that $750,000 will be enough to make this investigation, or does he expect that there will be a request made of Congress for additional money?

Mr. WADSWORTH. As an individual member of the committee, I have no information whatsoever on the subject, and none has been given to me.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I believe the Congress is going to extremes in appropriating money for these investigations.

Mr. WADSWORTH. A communication was received by the chairman of the committee, and he very properly read it to the committee, which contended that $750,000 was necessary. I do not recollect any official communication which detailed the manner in which this money should be expended. Indeed, I think I have been very ignorant in my time on very many subjects, but my ignorance heretofore has not been surpassed by the ignorance with which I approached the matter of the appropriation of $750,000 for this investigation.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I have heard from some of the smaller telephone companies and they are of the opinion that if they have to go to the expense of an investigation of this character, it may bring additional expense to the operation of their companies.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That may be so.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. And while I am not opposing an investigation, I wonder how much further we are going.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I have already called the attention of the Members of the House to the inception of this investigation, and having identified its origin. I ask in all fairness that the Members of the House analyze the resolution as to its spirit.

Here is the Communications Commission, supposedly a semijudicial body, about to embark upon an investigation of the immense telephone structure of the United States, the greatest thing, the largest thing of its kind in all the world, with more subscribers than all the rest of the telephone systems of the world put together, for indeed, our telephone development here in this country is the wonder of the world.

The gentleman from Connecticut and myself do not contend that nothing wrong has ever been done. We do not know. We do not contend that the entire financial structure or the combination of structures now in existence are absolutely sound. We do not know. We have no objection to the Commission endeavoring to find out and in the event of finding that something is wrong, correcting it; but it seems to me we ought to expect from a Commission recently put into office a spirit of fairness in going into this job of investigating, and I submit that a reading of this resolution which was drafted in the office of the Commission gives the very clear intimation to the American public that they are more in the nature of prosecutors than investigators.

The committee did not draft this resolution, neither did any Member of the Congress. This is what gives it its significance to me. This is why we protest in our minority report against its style and against its spirit, for it is filled with innuendoes and insinuations, and purposely so. There is no necessity whatsoever in the drafting of a resolution to bring about a thorough investigation to point the finger of suspicion at any person or company, and the mere fact that this Commission decides to point the finger of suspicion before it begins to investigate destroys, in my mind, any confidence I might otherwise have in its fairness. This is why we protest against the spirit in which this thing was drawn.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield for a question.

Mr. REECE. Does not the Federal Communications bill give the Commission authority to obtain any records or any information from the telephone company?

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is my own understanding, yes; but they contend, and I am not going to contradict them on that point, that they need even more authority to get all the facts. If this is true, I have no objection to their getting these facts, but I do not like to see the House of Representatives adopt a resolution of this kind which, of itself, if read analytically, is an indictment in advance of the investigation.

This is not our language. No one of us had anything to do with writing it. It was written in the office of the Commission. If it were our language we would then pass judgment upon it as legislators, but we are asked to make this the language of the House of Representatives and join the subordinate in the Commission who wrote this resolution in an indictment of at least one of the greatest business enterprises the world has ever known.

This is the reason for my protest. As to the extent and scope of this matter, it is perfectly true that the Commission, in a letter to the chairman, indicated that it did not desire or, perhaps, intend to investigate all the small telephone companies in the country; but, Mr. Speaker, they cannot help investigating them, because they are all linked up by contracts in order to secure their toll service with the great toll lines. Today you can go into the most remote corner of this huge continent and step into a telephone booth of a tiny little farmer line and call up New York or San Francisco and get prompt service. How is it done? Not through the instrustrumentality of the contract which the little farmer line has with the great toll line. It will be absolutely imperative upon the Commission to go into all those contracts, and, having gone into those contracts, it must go into the assets, the business, the rates, and the charges of all the companies involved.

So let us not underestimate the size of this undertaking, and let us not beguile ourselves into the belief that the farmer line is not going to be called upon to make reports, fill out blanks, answer questionnaires, file its rates, and give a general accounting of its business. But, as I said a moment ago, great as the undertaking is—and in many respects, in my humble judgment, unnecessary, for I have yet to encounter any widespread public demand for a general investigation of the telephone system of America; I have yet to encounter any widespread public protest against poor service; I think it is the most wonderful business achievement in modern times, this telephone system of ours-my principal protest is the spirit in which this resolution was drawn, and I would not make that protest did I not have the knowledge it was drawn in the office of the Commission which is going to make the investigation. [Applause.]

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan].

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I would not have asked for this time if it had not been for some erroneous statements innocently occurring no doubt in this discussion. First, that there was no hearing on this matter, and an intimation that an unfair attitude had therefore been taken on the part of the committee. However, I would say to the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Ohio that there was no request for a hearing on this resolution providing for investigation and regulation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., but that the hearings on the communications bill during the last session of Congress disclosed the need for a resolution of the character under discussion, looking eventually to the regulation of this type of public utility. No question is raised by this resolution, as I understand it, relative to the quality of the service of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; but I do not believe that any Member of Congress will disagree to the statement that their charges are excessive and extortionate in many instances and that some regulation should be placed upon them. If not properly regulated, public ownership and operation becomes necessary; aye, even imperative.

I further want to say to the gentleman from New York that I believe he used an unfortunate word when he said that the resolution was an indictment. Even though they may deserve indicting at times, I do not believe the pending resolution is an indictment, but a fair resolution designed to obtain information which the American people want to know and cannot obtain without such action as is proposed. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I always dislike for any disagreement to come up with my distinguished friend from Connecticut whom I love and revere, and my newer colleague from New York whom I admire.

It is true that this resolution was not written by me; it was sent to me by the chairman of the telephone division of the Communications Commission. There is no denial of that fact, but as far as this charge of indicting somebody I have watched investigations for many years, and I know that if you leave out any necessary thing in a resolution of investigation and then go to these companies to get information on something that cannot be found in the resolution of investigation you are likely to get tied up in the courts and instead of getting the information in 1 or 2 months it may be tied up for 48 months.

I do not feel that this is an indictment of anybody.

This resolution came up in the committee, and the Chair asked if there was any objection to reporting the resolution. He heard none, but the gentleman from New York came to the chairman of the committee and said that he objected to some things and said he wanted some time to file a minority report. In the meantime the Senate passed the resolution and the chairman telephoned the chairman of the telementality alone of the little farmer line but through the in- | phone division of the Communications Commission and he said that there were some things in the Senate resolution a little harsh, but it was absolutely necessary I informed the gentleman from Connecticut, and then we reported the bill with the minority report along with it.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I want this to be a thorough investigation and I say to my friend from Connecticut [Mr. MERRITT] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] that no one is more interested or admires more the telephone system of the country as being the greatest in the world than I. I believe they have done a great service, but the principal thing I am interested in is that I think an uninformed commission ought not to start out to regulate a fivebillion-dollar enterprise, and that we should have this investigation so that they may intelligently proceed to the regulation of this great industry.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. As I understand this resolution, it came from the telephone division of the Communications Com-

Mr. RAYBURN. That is correct.
Mr. CARTER. Was the amount that it is to expend included in it when the resolution was submitted to the gentleman?

Mr. RAYBURN. Oh, that has been discussed in our committee many times. It had been discussed in Dr. Splawn's report 2 years ago, when he stated it would take $500,000 to $1,000,000 to find out all the facts.

Mr. CARTER. Then the gentleman has something in the way of a budget to substantiate this request for $750,000?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know just what the gentleman

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman has estimates of the expenditure of $750,000.

Mr. RAYBURN. I have estimates made up by the Communications Commission as to what they intend to do with this money if they get it, and I shall be very glad to put them in the RECORD if it is thought necessary, although it would be a rather expensive thing to do and very hard to print.

Mr. CARTER. Those figures indicate that $750,000 is necessary to carry on this investigation?

Mr. RAYBURN. I think so, because, as I said a while ago, there are 30 of these major companies tied in with the American Telephone & Telegraph. Instead of making those companies come to Washington and bring their books with them, they expect to send competent men to their offices to get the facts

Mr. CARTER. I am wondering how the gentleman arrived at the $750,000. Has he some figures as a basis for

Mr. RAYBURN. We have them here as to what they will do with them.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. I am not one so squeamish about that word "indictment" in connection with the telephone octopus and monopoly, and that is what we call it in our State of Ohio. and that means J. P. Morgan and the Telephone Trust. The Telephone Trust and J. P. Morgan have been indicted in the minds of the citizens of Ohio. They remember that this trust defrauded them of $13,000,000, which they kept for the period of 10 long years. Then at a belated hour the public utilities commission awarded this money and said it must be refunded to the consumer. I admire and respect our great telephone system, but it has been accumulated and centralized upon the blood and toil of the users, and I object to the price that I have to pay Mr. Morgan and the Telephone Trust for the period of securing this splendid service which the gentleman from New York speaks about.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Can the gentleman tell the House who owns the telephone and telegraph company? Is it owned by a few people or by many people?

Mr. RAYBURN. There are many stockholders, somewhere between 600,000 and 700,000.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the rules were suspended was laid on the table.

A similar House resolution was ordered to lie on the table. BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AND STATE OF VIRGINIA

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 134, a joint resolution to continue the Commission for Determining the Boundary Line Between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia for not to exceed 1 additional year, and to authorize not to exceed $10,000 additional funds for its expenses.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas moves to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 134, as amended, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the commission to determine the boundary line between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia created under the act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a commission to establish the boundary line between the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Virginia", approved March 21, 1934 (48 Stat. 453), as constituted on the date of enactment of this resolution, shall continue to function under such act until the completion of its report, but not after December 1, 1925 ber 1, 1935.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of such act and the payment of salaries and compensation under such act, the sum of $10,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated in addition to any sums authorized prior to the date of enactment of this resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I suggest to the gentleman from Arkansas that he can probably pass it by unanimous consent if he would renew his request.

Mr. MILLER. If no second is demanded the same object will be accomplished.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered. The gentleman from New York is entitled to 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Arkansas to 20 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes. Mr. SNELL. How much money has already been expended by this Commission?

Mr. MILLER. There has been $14,000 expended.

Mr. SNELL. And the gentleman maintains it will take $10,000 more?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Someone has said that the bill in the other body provides for $25,000 more. What is going to be the situation in regard to that?

Mr. MILLER. That is exactly why I should like to see this bill passed, and cut off further consideration of the Senate bill, because I do not think the Senate bill is necessary at all. The hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary disclosed that this Commission could finish its work with $10,000 additional money.

Mr. SNELL. How many men are employed on this now?

Mr. MILLER. Just the 3 commissioners and probably 1 stenographer and 2 or 3 reporters.

Mr. SNELL. What are the salaries of those people?
Mr. MILLER. Fifteen dollars a day for the commissioners. I do not know what the others get.

Mr. SNELL. It is really an honest matter and ought to be attended to?

Mr. MILLER. I think so. Here is the situation: We have spent $14,000, whether rightly or wrongly, wisely or unwisely. We have spent that money and it will go for naught unless we do complete the work.

Mr. SNELL. What is going to be accomplished when they | when the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill will come up?

Mr. MILLER. The only thing will be the settlement of the boundary line, if Congress adopts the report of the Commission.

Mr. SNELL. What is the discussion now about? What is at stake?

Mr. MILLER. The question as to where the boundary line extends, between the District of Columbia and Virginia, dating back to the old conflict between Virginia and Maryland. It involves a strip of territory from 200 feet wide at Chain Bridge down for about 7 or 8 miles, varying in width from 200 feet to 4 or 5 miles. It is a question of jurisdiction and a question of whether the State owns that or the District of Columbia.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is the land worth as much as it will cost to lay out the boundary?

Mr. MILLER. I think so. There are factories and improvements there worth millions of dollars.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it proposed to increase the salaries of the commissioners?

Mr. MILLER. Not under this resolution. Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman assure us they will not accept the other bill making it $25,000?

Mr. MILLER. I can only speak for myself. I will not.

Mr. MILLARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. MILLARD. How many times has this boundary line been determined?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know.

Mr. MILLARD. The gentleman is sure it has not been done before?

Mr. MILLER. Not as far as I know. I know that Maryland and Virginia spent many years on the matter sometime ago.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] to suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, after the Journal is read and the Speaker's desk is cleared, I be permitted 15 minutes to make comment and reply to the speech made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, can the Speaker or the majority leader tell us what will be the program for tomorrow and Wednesday, and then we can tell whether or not we want to have too many speeches.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. There will be a rule brought up for consideration, but the main part of the business on tomorrow will be the making of speeches. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton] has 30 minutes to discuss, I understand, some matters pending before the Ways and Means Committee, and several other gentlemen will probably speak.

Mr. SNELL. Then the only business tomorrow is speeches? The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that there is a rule to be taken up tomorrow with respect to employees of Members.

Mr. SNELL. After the experience we had today, I did not know whether they would bring that rule up tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. That remains to be seen. The Chair is not in charge.

Mr. SNELL. If there is no other business tomorrow, I am willing that the gentleman have time to speak.

Mr. McCORMACK. Reserving the right to object, may I ask the floor leader if he can give us any information as to ments did not affect the bill in question.

I know everyone is interested in that.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. We expect to take that up Thursday and Friday.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is fine. I had an idea that it would be taken up then, but I thought it would be well to let everybody know it was coming up Thursday.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Yes. We expect it to be taken up Thursday and concluded Friday.

Mr. MILLARD. Reserving the right to object, could not the gentleman from Connecticut make his speech tomorrow? What has become of Calendar Wednesday?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman made his request for Wednesday.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. I cannot get my data together in time to speak tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the majority leader if we are ever going to have Calendar Wednesday?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Oh, yes; we will have a Calendar Wednesday in due time. My understanding is that whatever business may be ready for consideration next Wednesday will not be sufficient to interfere with the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. KOPPLEMANN] making a 15minute speech.

Mr. SNELL. The President has not given any orders for any bills to go through, has he?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to inquire when we will consider the repeal of the pink-slip clause? Can the gentleman from Colorado inform us?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I cannot state; it is not reported yet.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I might assist the gentleman by stating that the Committee on Ways and Means has not acted on that yet.

Mr. TRUAX. The newspapers stated that it had acted, and that it would probably come up on Thursday.

Mr. McCORMACK. I can assure the gentleman there has been no official action with relation to it. I knew that the majority leader would not have in his possession this information and I merely wanted to supply it to the gentleman from Ohio through him. The committee has not officially

Mr. TRUAX. I thank the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I appreciated the eloquent remarks of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney] on this the second anniversary of the inauguration of President Roosevelt, and my mind goes back to the 4th day of March 1909, 26 years ago today, when President Taft was inaugurated. On that day the Sixty-first Congress came into being with 86 new Members, and the Speaker and I were two of them. So this is our twenty-sixth birthday in Congress. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to revise and extend my remarks; and I make a similar request on behalf of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McReynolds].

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this concern the Mexican situation?

Mr. KLEBERG. Yes; and it has to do with my statements, which were not pertinent, inasmuch as my stateMr. ZIONCHECK. As far as that is concerned, could not the gentleman take his remarks out, if they have no pertinency to the bill in question?

Mr. KLEBERG. That would be perfectly all right, but the usual manner of doing it is by asking the Chair to permit it to be done. For this reason I have submitted the request.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LARRABEE, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. Lee of Oklahoma (at the request of Mr. Daly), indefinitely, on account of death in family.

To Mr. Schneider, for 3 days, on account of important business.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 3464. An act to amend certain sections of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, as amended, relating to descent and distribution.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 39 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, March 5, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

SUBCOMMITTEE ON FISCAL AFFAIRS OF THE COMMITTEE ON DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Tuesday, March 5, and Thursday, March 7, at 9:30 a.m., room 326, Old House Office Building, to consider H. R. 5534, to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia; make appropriation, and for other purposes.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

Continuation of hearing on bill (H. R. 3019) providing for certain amendments to the Public Domain Grazing Act, room 330, House Office Building, at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, March 5.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

241. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the legislative establishment, House of Representatives, for the fiscal years 1935 and 1936, in the sum of $3,000 (H. Doc. No. 116); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

242. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting an approved report, dated January 31, 1935, of a board of officers appointed to conduct a survey of Governors Island, N. Y., to determine its usefulness and adaptability as an airport and the cost of accomplishing all work incidental to effecting the change, together with its 30 enclosures; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

243. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, for the War Department, for Army transportation, amounting to $577,124 (H. Doc. No. 119); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. CELLER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6323. A bill to provide for the custody of Federal proclamations, orders, regulations, notices, and other documents, and for the prompt and uniform printing and distribution thereof; without amendment (Rept. No. 280). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HEALEY: Committee on the Judiciary. House Joint Resolution 146. Joint resolution to authorize the several States to negotiate compacts or agreements to promote greater uniformity in the laws of such States affecting labor and industries; without amendment (Rept. No. 281). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. KNIFFIN: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 4767. A bill to amend section 1383 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 282). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WEAVER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 5456. A bill relating to the powers and duties of United States marshals; with amendment (Rept. No. 283). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 4376. A bill for the relief of the Pawnee Tribe of Indians of Oklahoma; without amendment (Rept. No. 286). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. KELLER: Committee on the Library. H. R. 6292. A bill to provide for the reappointment of Frederic A. Delano as a member of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution; without amendment (Rept. No. 287). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. SEARS: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 5564. A bill for the relief of Capt. Russell Willson, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 284). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5630) granting a pension to Grace V. Foster, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DISNEY: A bill (H. R. 6358) authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Osage Tribe of Indians, on account of their lands sold by the United States; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. DOUGHTON: A bill (H. R. 6359) to repeal certain provisions relating to publicity of certain statements of income; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LUNDEEN: A bill (H. R. 6360) to provide aid for the operation and maintenance of adequate public-school facilities throughout the country; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. POLK: A bill (H. R. 6361) to amend the Filled Milk Act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6362) for the purpose of protecting American youth from the teaching of communism and other radical doctrines; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H. R. 6363) to amend section 4471 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. RANKIN: A bill (H. R. 6364) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request): A bill (H. R. 6365) extending the time for repayment of the revolving fund for the benefit of the Crow Indians; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SCRUGHAM: A bill (H. R. 6366) to terminate certain foreign-trade agreements and to terminate the authority to enter into them; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 6367) to authorize the prompt deportation of criminals and certain other aliens, to guard against the separation from their families of certain law-abiding aliens, to further restrict immigration into the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BOEHNE: A bill (H. R. 6368) to amend subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 400 of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, relating to taxes on cigars and cigarettes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROOKS: A bill (H. R. 6369) to amend title VIII of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FORD of Mississippi: A bill (H. R. 6370) to establish a permanent policy of financial cooperation by the Federal Government with the several States and Territories in promotion of the benefits of public education, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. KELLER: A bill (H. R. 6371) to authorize an increase in the annual appropriation for books for the adult blind: to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. THOMASON: A bill (H. R. 6372) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in connection with the Cabeza de Vaca Expedition and the opening of the Old Spanish Trail; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6373) to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. WHELCHEL: A bill (H. R. 6374) providing compensation for the Post Office Department for the extra work involved in the return of valuable packages from the deadletter office to the writers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. BRUNNER: A bill (H. R. 6375) granting annual and sick leave to postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 6376) to amend section 118 of the Judicial Code to provide for the appointment of law clerks to United States district court judges; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MAAS: A bill (H. R. 6377) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 6378) regulating the procedure for the award of Government contracts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DIMOND: A bill (ff. R. 6379) to amend the Mining Act of May 10, 1872, as amended; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H. R. 6380) to levy a tax of 1 percent each half year on national-bank circulating notes, Federal Reserve notes, and Federal Reserve bank notes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WHELCHEL: A bill (H. R. 6381) increasing the monthly benefits paid under the act providing compensation for employees of the Federal Civil Works Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps who are permanently or temporarily totally disabled while in the performance of their duties without disturbing the maximum limit of $3,500 in each case; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SWEENEY: A bill (H. R. 6382) to restore to Congress its constitutional power to issue money and regulate the value thereof; to provide for the orderly distribution of the abundance with which a beneficent Creator has blessed us; to establish and maintain the purchasing power of money at a fixed and equitable level; to restore the values of property to just and equitable levels; to increase the prices of agricultural products to a point where they will yield the cost of production plus a fair profit to the farmer; to provide a living and just annual wage which will enable every citizen willing to work and capable of working to maintain and educate his family on an increasing level or standard of living; to repay debts with dollars of equal value; to lift in part the burden of taxation; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin: Resolution (H. Res. 144) barring the public from the galleries of both Houses of Congress; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. CARTER: Resolution (H. Res. 145) to investigate the naval facilities in the San Francisco Bay area; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HESS: Resolution (H. Res. 146) to pay to Phyllis Heim, daughter of the late Eugene Heim, 6 months' compensation and not to exceed $250 funeral expenses; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. McGRATH: Resolution (H. Res. 147) to authorize and empower the Secretary of the Navy to appoint a commission to investigate naval establishments on San Francisco Bay, Calif., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. COCHRAN: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 13) to print and bind additional copies of Senate Document No. 139, Seventy-third Congress, entitled "Interstate Commerce Act Annotated"; to the Committee on Printing.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, regarding the work of the Federal Bureau of Mines; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, supporting the policies of the President; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of the rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CALDWELL: A bill (H. R. 6383) granting a pension to Walter L. Rosasco; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Idaho: A bill (H. R. 6384) for the relief of Lynn Brother's Benevolent Hospital; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CROWTHER: A bill (H. R. 6385) granting an increase of pension to Julia Woods; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EDMISTON: A bill (H. R. 6386) granting a pension to Sarah M. Waugh; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6387) granting a pension to Frank C. Nelson; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6388) for the relief of Harry C. Anderson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6389) granting a pension to Columbus

R. Fulks; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GASSAWAY: A bill (H. R. 6390) to amend Private Act No. 548, Seventieth Congress, approved March 2, 1929; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6391) for the relief of Beryl M. McHam;

Also, a bill (H. R. 6391) for the relief of Beryl M. McHam to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6392) granting a pension to Clara M. Curtis; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6393) for the relief of William F. Bourland; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mrs. GREENWAY: A bill (H. R. 6394) for the relief of William K. Caley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GRISWOLD: A bill (H. R. 6395) providing for the advancement on the retired list of the Marine Corps of Hiram L. Bearss; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HANCOCK of New York: A bill (H. R. 6396) granting a pension to Mary McKeeby Reed; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARTLEY: A bill (H. R. 6397) for the relief of John N. Caffrey; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6398) for the relief of the Barber-Hoppen Corporation; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KVALE: A bill (H. R. 6399) for the relief of Carl August Engelhardt; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LAMBERTSON: A bill (H. R. 6400) granting a pension to Sarah Ukele; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LUCKEY: A bill (H. R. 6401) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Perky; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCORMACK: A bill (H. R. 6402) for the relief of Julia M. Crowell; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MAPES: A bill (H. R. 6403) granting a pension to Martha Buffington; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONTAGUE: A bill (H. R. 6404) for the relief of D. B. Carter; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MONTET: A bill (H. R. 6405) to provide for a preliminary examination and survey for the enlargement of a ship channel in Louisiana; to the Committee of Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6406) to provide for a preliminary examination and survey for the enlargement of the Boston Canal, La.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6407) for the relief of Thomas J. Guilbeau; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6408) to provide for a preliminary examination and survey for the enlargement of Bayou DuLarge, La.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida: A bill (H. R. 6409) for the relief of Peter C. Hains, Jr.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. POLK: A bill (H. R. 6410) granting a pension to Mollie Brooks; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. QUINN: A bill (H. R. 6411) for the relief of James Bollis; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. REED of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 6412) granting a pension to Lena Keating Wagner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBERTSON: A bill (H. R. 6413) to provide for the appointment of William J. Farrell as a warrant officer, United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6414) to reimburse Edmund Pendleton Tompkins for the loss and/or destruction of Liberty bonds; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHORT: A bill (H. R. 6415) granting an increase of pension to Lydia E. Laton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 6416) granting a pension to Horace V. White; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6417) granting a pension to Vada Cross; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. THOMASON: A bill (H. R. 6418) granting a pension to William Burcham; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. UNDERWOOD: A bill (H. R. 6419) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Curry; to the Committee on Pensions

Also, a bill (H. R. 6420) granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Hoops; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WELCH: A bill (H. R. 6421) for the relief of Nicholas Aloysius Lopina; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WHELCHEL: A bill (H. R. 6422) granting an increase of pension to John R. Robertson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ALLEN: A bill (H. R. 6423) granting an increase of pension to Mary Allen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2399. By Mr. ANDREWS of New York: Twenty-seven petitions containing approximately 300 names of residents of the Fortieth Congressional District of New York State, protesting against enactment of House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2400. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of Group No. 105 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, of Depew, N. Y., memorializing Congress to enact House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2401. By Mr. BELL: Resolution of Charles S. Edwards Post, No. 2590, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Carthage, Mo., favoring the Patman bonus bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2402. Also, resolution of Claude B. Champion Post, No. 1829, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Kansas City, Mo., favoring passage of House bill 1, known as the "Patman bonus bill"; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2403. By Mr. BOYLAN: Resolution unanimously adopted by the board of directors of the Utilities Employees Security Co., of Utica, N. Y., opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2404. Also, resolution adopted by the National Women's Party of New York City, regarding equal rights amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2405. Also, letter from the Mailers' Union, No. 6, New York City, N. Y., favoring the McCarran amendment to the public-works relief bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2406. By Mr. BRUNNER: Resolution of the Holy Name Society of St. Teresa's Roman Catholic Church, Richmond Hill, N. Y., calling upon Members of Congress to exert every effort at their command to the end that the tyranny and persecution of members of the Catholic Church be halted; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2407. Also, resolution of the Long Island Chamber of Commerce, regarding the opposition to St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty with Canada; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2408. Also, resolution of the Holy Name Society of St. Bartholomew's Roman Catholic Church, Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y., protesting the persecution of their Catholic brethren in Mexico; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2409. By Mr. BUCKBEE: Petition of Group No. 433 of the Polish National Alliance of America, Streator, Ill., asking Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2410. By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: Petition of Cyrus A. Field, chairman of the committee on national legislation of the Civic and Commercial Association of Fergus Falls, urging the prevention and opposition to passage of the 30-hour-week bill; to the Committee on Labor.

2411. By Mr. CROSS of Texas: Petition signed by Babe Williams and numerous others of Falls County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2412. Also, petition signed by James P. Pogue and numerous others of Milam County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2413. Also, petition signed by Jessie Rhea Gray and numerous others of Milam County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2414. Also, petition signed by J. D. Peeples, Sr., and numerous others of Milam County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2415. Also, petition signed by Luetta Brown and numerous others of McLennan County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2416. Also, petition signed by Sam N. Williams and numerous others of Milam County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2417. Also, petition signed by Rachel Davenport and numerous others of Milam County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2418. Also, petition signed by George S. Draper and numerous others of Coryell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2419. Also, petition signed by J. Spurlin and numerous others of Coryell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2420. Also, petition signed by Arthur Browning and numerous others of Coryell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2421. Also, petition signed by Magnolia J. Armstrong and numerous others of McLennan County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2422. Also, petition signed by William W. Farrar and numerous others of Coryell County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2423. Also, petition signed by W. H. Tatum and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-agepension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2424. Also, petition signed by Mrs. J. H. Reeder and numerous others of Bosque County, Tex., advocating the Dr. Pope old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2425. Also, petition signed by Mrs. R. D. Wiseman and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means 2426. Also, petition signed by A. L. Wunsch and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2427. Also, petition signed by M. M. Friarson and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2428. Also, petition signed by Q. T. Jenkins and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2429. Also, petition signed by Clarence Cook and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means, 2430. Also, petition signed by L. B. Jeter and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2431. Also, petition signed by D. W. Tomlinson and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2432. Also, petition signed by Annie Miller and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2433. Also, petition signed by J. W. Maples and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2434. Also, petition signed by J. M. Slick and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2435. Also, petition signed by Mrs. J. A. Mabry and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2436. Also, petition signed by Mrs. R. W. Ernest and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2437. Also, petition signed by Mrs. I. L. Martin and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2438. Also, petition signed by Mrs. B. M. Donald and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2439. Also, petition signed by E. A. Murphy and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2440. Also, petition signed by Mrs. W. O. Davis and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2441. Also, petition signed by H. O. Taylor and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2442. Also, petition signed by T. M. Gerald and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2443. Also, petition signed by Charles A. Wiggins and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2444. Also, petition signed by Floyd Garrett and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means. Means.

2445. Also, petition signed by Nina Smith and numerous others of Bell County, Tex., advocating the Townsend old-age-pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2446. By Mr. CROWE: Editorial from the Vevay Reveille-Enterprise, Vevay, Ind., by James K. Danglade, editor, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2447. Also, a letter from the Madison Gun Club, Madison, Ind., by Clarence D. Scheetz, president, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2448. Also, a letter from the Lawrenceburg Conservation Club, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., by Robert F. Cook, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2449. Also, letter from the Southern Indian Sportsmens Association, Madison, Ind., by J. S. Matthews, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2450. Also, letter from John R. Woods, Rising Sun, Ind., urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2451. Also, a letter from the Springs Valley Conservation Club, French Lick, Ind., by C. C. Qualkinbush, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2452. Also, petition from the Scott County Fish and Game Association, Scottsburg, Ind., by J. Max Montgomery, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privleges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2453. Also, petition of Stewartsville Gun Club, Stewartsville, Ind., urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157), to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary 2454. By Mr. CROWTHER: Petition of Group 113 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, Amsterdam, N. Y., requesting enactment of House Joint Resolution 81; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2455. Also, petition of citizens of Schenectady, N. Y., opposing passage of House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2456. By Mr. CULKIN: Petition of 313 residents of the Thirty-second Congressional District of New York State, urging passage of the Townsend plan of old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2457. Also, petition of 13 residents of Watertown, N. Y., to block the passage of the public-utility holding-company bill: to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2458. Also, petition of 23 residents of New York State, opposing House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2459. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of Oswego, N. Y., favoring the passage of the General Pulaski's Memorial Day resolution; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2460. Also, petition of Ray Choate, of Morrisville, and 12 residents of Eaton and Morrisville, State of New York, protesting against the passage of Senate bill 1725 and House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2461. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of North Tonawanda, N. Y., favoring the passage of the General Pulaski Memorial Day resolution; to the Committee on the Judiciory 2462. By Mr. DARROW: Resolution of the Keystone Automobile Club Casualty Co., protesting against the passage of public-utility bills (S. 1725 and H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2463. By Mr. DIETRICH: Fifty-three petitions signed by many residents of the Fifteenth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, urging the defeat of Senate bill 1725 and House bill 5423, known as the "Public Utility Act of 1935"; to the Commmittee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2464. By Mr. DRIVER: Petitions of certain citizens resident of the State of Arkansas in the counties of Craighead, Mississippi, Poinsett, Crittenden, St. Francis, Cross, Clay, Phillips, Lee, Greene, all numerously signed, urging enactment of House bill 2856, by Representative Will Rogers, of Oklahoma, embracing the Pope plan of direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 per month to persons over 55, independent of State participation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2465. By Mr. GOODWIN: Petition of Parent-Teachers Association, Public School No. 7, Kingston, N. Y., urging the Department of Interior, through their office of education, to encourage the use of the motion picture for visual education; to the Committee on Education.

2466. Also, petition of residents of Hartwood, Callicoon, and Hortonville, Sullivan County, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of public-utility bills (S. 1725 and H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2467. Also, petition of residents of Windham, Ashland, East Jewett, and Maplecrest, Greene County, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of public-utility bills (S. 1725 and H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2468. By Mr. HALLECK: Resolution adopted by Tippe-canoe Post, No. 1154, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of La Fayette, Ind., urging early enactment of House bill 1, for the payment of the adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2469. Also, petition of veterans and friends of veterans of Rochester, Ind., and vicinity, favoring the legislative program of the National American Legion; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2470. By Mr. HAINES: Petitions signed by 385 of his constituents (Twenty-second District of Pennsylvania), protesting against House bill 5423, public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2471. By Mr. HIGGINS of Connecticut: Resolutions of the Common Council of the City of New Britain, favoring the establishment of October 11 of a General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2472. Also, resolution of the board of directors of the Second National Bank of New Haven, Conn., protesting against the passage of the so-called "holding company bill" (H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2473. By Mr. HOEPPEL: Resolution of the City Council of the City of South Pasadena, Calif., requesting the Congress of the United States to give fair and impartial consideration to the Townsend old-age revolving pension bill; to the Committee on Labor.

2474. By Mr. KENNEY: Petition of Bus Drivers, Conductors, and Mechanics Union of New York, Local No. 31, 225 Lafayette Street, New York City, endorsing the national-lottery bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2475. Also, petition of the Federation of the Italian-American Democratic Organizations of the State of New York, Inc., 225 Lafayette Street, New York City, endorsing the national-lottery bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2476. By Mr. KVALE: Petition of 371 residents of Belview, Minn., urging adoption of the Townsend plan for oldage pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2477. By Mr. LAMNECK: Petition of Teresa Newman, of 2675 Deming Avenue, and other citizens of Columbus, Ohio, urging for the continuation of the Nye munitions investigation: to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2478. By Mr. LUCKEY: Senate joint memorial of the State of Nebraska, memorializing Congress, the Department of the Interior, and the National Park Service to create a national-park area in the North Platte Valley extending from Bridgeport, Nebr., to and including Guernsey Lake, Wyo., and to acquire such historic landmarks, sites, and structures as are pertinent to the history of the Oregon, Mormon, and California trails, with particular reference to the acquisition, preservation, and restoration of Old Fort Laramie and its maintenance as a historical museum; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2479. By Mr. McLAUGHLIN: Memorial memorializing Congress, the Department of the Interior, and the National Park Service to create a national-park area in the North Platte Valley extending from Bridgeport, Nebr., to and including Guernsey Lake, Wyo., and to acquire such historic landmarks, sites, and structures as are pertinent to the history of the Oregon, Mormon, and California trails, with particular reference to the acquisition, preservation, and restoration of Old Fort Laramie and its maintenance as a historical museum; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2480. Also, resolution providing for the proclaiming by the President of the United States for October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2481. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of citizens of Buffalo, N. Y., requesting the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2482. By Mr. MERRITT of New York: Petition of Joseph A. Quility, of 2340 University Avenue, New York City, N. Y., and various other residents of New York City and surrounding towns, urging Congress to defeat the Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2483. Also, petition of the Holy Name Society of St. Bartholomew's Roman Catholic Church, Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y., protesting against the persecution of coreligionists in Mexico, urging the daily press to publish the true facts of present conditions, and calling upon Congress for assistance in bringing about a termination of such persecutions, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2484. Also, petition of William I. Thibault, of 71 Broadway, and other residents of New York City and vicinity, protesting against the passage of the Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility bills, and urging upon Congress to defeat same; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2485. Also, petition of Arthur J. O'Leary, of 1849 East Thirty-seventh Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and other residents of Brooklyn and vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2486. By Mr. MILLARD: Petition signed by residents of Westchester County, N. Y., opposing the passage of House bill 3971; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Com-

2487. Also, petition signed by residents of New York State, opposing the enactment of the holding company bill: to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2488. By Mr. PEARSON: Petition of citizens of Hardeman County, Tenn., regarding old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2489. Also, petition of citizens of Hardin County, Tenn. regarding old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and 2490. Also, petition of citizens of McNairy County, Tenn., regarding old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and 2491. Also, petition of citizens of Henry County, Tenn., regarding old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and 2492. Also, petition of citizens of Henderson County, Tenn., regarding old-age pension; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2493. Also, petition of citizens of Bethel Springs, McNairy County, Tenn., supporting House bill 3994; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2494. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Bacon Coal Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Black-Connery 30-hourweek bills; to the Committee on Labor.

2495. Also, petition of David Rosenberg, Woodmere, Long Island, and 22 other citizens of the greater city of New York, concerning the Rayburn-Wheeler bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2496. Also, petition of Richey, Browne & Donald, Maspeth, N. Y., concerning the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bills; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2497. Also, petition of Lillian C. Calnan, Jackson Heights, Long Island, N. Y., favoring increased compensation for families of men killed on the U.S.S. Akron; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

2498. Also, petition of Roovers Bros., Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bills; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2499. Also, petition of Towns & James, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning publicity of income-tax returns; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2500. Also, petition of the Long Island Chamber of Commerce, Inc., New York City, regarding section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means. other citizens of Dixon, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, 2501. Also, petition of Rose Weiss, attorney, Brooklyn, N. Y., regarding the Wagner national labor relations bill: to the Committee on Labor.

2502. Also, petition of H. B. Plumb of Eagle Lock Co., New York City, concerning the Rayburn public-utility holding company bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2503. Also, petition of John G. Marshall, Inc., Brooklyn. N. Y., concerning the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bills; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2504. Also, petition of the Brooklyn Local, New York State branch of the Catholic Central-Verein of America, Dr. August G. Maron, president, protesting against the adoption of Senate bills 600 and 1375, amending sections 211, 245, and 312 of the Criminal Code, and endorsing bill no. 1541; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2505. Also, petition of Edward Fries and 10 other citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Rayburn public-utility bill (H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign 2506. Also, petition of the Architectural Sculptors and Carvers Association, New York City, concerning the McCarran amendment in the work-relief bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2507. By Mr. REED of Illinois: Petition signed by H. C. Atthoff, of Aurora, Ill., and 97 others, requesting passage of the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2508. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition of Neal Conner and numerous other citizens of Chalybeate, Ripley, and Walnut, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age-pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2509. Also, petition of J. L. Marshall and numerous other citizens of Indianola, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2510. Also, petition of W. Reed and numerous other citizens of Greenville, Stoneville, and Metcalfe, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2511. Also, petition of Juan Martinez and numerous other citizens of Weston, Valdez, and Trinidad, Colo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2512. Also, petition of Frank Little and numerous other citizens of Smithfield, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2513. Also, petition of Henry Ritchie and numerous other citizens of Tipler, Wis., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2514. Also, petition of James T. Farmer and numerous other citizens of Seneca, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2515. Also, petition of John B. Morris and numerous other citizens of Charleroi, Pa., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2516. Also, petition of Eddie Y. Harris and numerous other citizens of Louisburg and Spring Hope, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2517. Also, petition of Manuel Romero and numerous by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2518. Also, petition of G. L. Jones and numerous other citizens of Bixby, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2519. Also, petition of Frank Blains and numerous other citizens of Allen, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2520. Also, petition of Z. J. Dangerfield and numerous other citizens of Pawhuska, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2521. Also, petition of Frank Tillman and numerous other citizens of Coffeeville, Spearman, and Water Valley, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2522. Also, petition of Charlie Hall and numerous other citizens of Coffeeville, Bruce, and Water Valley, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2523. Also, petition of Ed Skipworth and numerous other citizens of Dunmore and Greenville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2524. Also, petition of Clarence Burges and numerous other citizens of Clarendon, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2525. Also, petition of Arthur C. Jones and numerous other citizens of Huntsville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2526. Also, petition of F. B. Calhoun and numerous other citizens of Tarrytown, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2527. Also, petition of Albert Cobbs and numerous other citizens of Pine Bluff, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2528. Also, petition of Chester Wize and numerous other citizens of Woodward and Havana, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2529. Also, petition of Sam Hardy and numerous other citizens of Sharpsburg and Senoia, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2530. Also, petition of Willie Wilson and numerous other citizens of Milledgeville, Haddock, and James, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2531. Also, petition of Silmon Portor and numerous other citizens of Hulbert, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2532. Also, petition of James L. Clemons and numerous other citizens of Cave Ridge, Edmonton, and Knob Lick, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2533. Also, petition of James C. Bowles and numerous other citizens of Keiser, Marie, and Blytheville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2534. Also, petition of John A. Kristianson and numerous other citizens of Glencoe, East Gadsden, and Wellington, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2535. Also, petition of David Brown and numerous other citizens of West Helena, Elaine, and Marvel, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2536. Also, petition of W. R. Chandler and numerous other citizens of Center, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2537. Also, petition of John F. Bruin and numerous other citizens of Pine Bluff, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2538. Also, petition of L. R. Wilson and numerous other citizens of Summerdale and Foley, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2539. Also, petition of E. W. Henny and numerous other citizens of Hartselle, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2540. Also, petition of Rev. F. K. Armstrong and numerous other citizens of Louisville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2541. Also, petition of J. B. Sturgis and numerous other citizens of Memphis and Hollywood, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2542. Also, petition of W. W. Kelley and numerous other citizens of Neubert, Knoxville, Boyds Creek, and Seymour, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2543. Also, petition of A. Brandon and numerous other citizens of Paris, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2544. Also, petition of Rupert Y. Doyle and numerous other citizens of Atoka, Brighton, and Kerrville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2545. Also, petition of H. S. Charles and numerous other citizens of Tracy City, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2546. Also, petition of Z. Johnson and numerous other citizens of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2547. Also, petition of J. H. Buhl and numerous other citizens of Clinton, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2548. Also, petition of C. R. Bartman and numerous other citizens of Sherman, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2549. Also, petition of R. F. Collins and numerous other citizens of Hickman, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2550. Also, petition of Martin Preimer and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2551. Also, petition of Fred Crockett and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2552. Also, petition of Clarence McCollum and numerous other citizens of Bondurant and Hickman, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2553. Also, petition of W. E. Craft and numerous other citizens of Auburn and Winder, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2554. Also, petition of Geasnail Lathum and numerous other citizens of Townley, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2555. Also, petition of Oren E. Chadwick and numerous citizens of Hoopeston, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2556. Also, petition of George Brown and numerous other citizens of Plum, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2557. Also, petition of John Cyphers and numerous other citizens of Chevrolet and Baxter, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2558. Also, petition of John H. Griffin and numerous other citizens of Pushmataha and Cuba, Ala., favoring House bill 2856 by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2559. Also, petition of William H. Kenner and numerous other citizens of Whitfield, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2560. Also, petition of John Cardin and numerous other citizens of Fredonia, Morganfield, and Marion, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2561. Also, petition of G. W. Cooper and numerous other citizens of Richards, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2562. Also, petition of Pink Holly and numerous other citizens of Denison, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2563. Also, petition of Eddie L. Williamson and numerous other citizens of Covington, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2564. Also, petition of Jack Watson and numerous other citizens of Troy, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2565. Also, petition of Walter Jones and numerous other citizens of Whiteville and Clarkton, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2566. Also, petition of W. H. Vincent and numerous other citizens of Cartersville, McCurtain, and Bokoshe, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2567. Also, petition of Willie A. James and numerous other citizens of Atoka, Lane, and Caney, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2568. Also, petition of Simon Blacksher and numerous other citizens of Fulton and McNab, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2569. Also, petition of Peter Jasper and numerous other citizens of Dumas, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2570. Also, petition of Benson Wright and numerous other citizens of Water Valley, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2571. Also, petition of Will A. Fields and numerous other citizens of Counce and Covington, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2572. Also, petition of Eddie D. Henry and numerous other citizens of Lisbon and Arizona, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2573. Also, petition of W. L. Comer and numerous other citizens of Keithville, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2574. Also, petition of Moses Rogers and numerous other citizens of Alexandria and Compti, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2575. Also, petition of Joseph Johnson and numerous other citizens of Columbia, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2576. Also, petition of R. C. Carter and numerous other citizens of Plaquemine, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2577. Also, petition of P. C. Tomlin and numerous other citizens of Wardell, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on | McCarran amendment to the public-works bill; to the Com-Ways and Means.

2578. Also, petition of Mack Roderick and numerous other citizens of Cadet, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month, to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2579. Also, petition of William Harfield and numerous other citizens of McLain, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2580. Also, petition of Frank Husband and numerous other citizens of Richton, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2581. Also, petition of M. G. Stevens and numerous other citizens of Clarksdale, Mattson, and Dublin, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2582. Also, petition of B. D. Kendrick and numerous other citizens of Sumrall and Baxterville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2583. Also, petition of Claude Gibbs and numerous other citizens of Tiplersville and Walnut, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2584. Also, petition of Jim Moore and numerous other citizens of Drew and Tutwiler, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2585. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Gerald J. Coughlin, 368 Palmetto Street, and 19 other citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., regarding the Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2586. Also, petition of John Munchinger, 10-608 Liberty Avenue, Ozone Park, Long Island, N. Y., and nine other citizens of Ozone Park, concerning the Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2587. Also, petition of Virginia Frick, 133-14 One Hundred and Seventh Avenue, and 10 other citizens of Richmond Hill, Long Island, N. Y., concerning the Rayburn-Wheeler bills (H. R. 5423 and S. 1725) public-utility legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2588. Also, petition of Davis Rosenberg, 326 Westwood Road, Woodhaven, Long Island, and 22 other citizens of New York City, N. Y., with reference to Rayburn-Wheeler public-utility legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2589. Also, petition of Peter Lancaster, 3148 Fulton Street, and 10 other citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., regarding the Rayburn-Wheeler bills (H. R. 5423 and S. 1725); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2590. Also, petition of St. Teresa's Holy Name Society, 129-04 One Hundred and Ninth Avenue, Richmond Hill, Long Island, N. Y., concerning the Mexican Government's policy against all religions; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2591. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, city of New York, concerning the publicity feature of the income-tax law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2592. Also, petition of the National Woman's Party, New York City committee, concerning the equal-rights amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2593. Also, petition of the Mailers' Union No. 6, International Typographical Union, New York City, regarding the mittee on Ways and Means.

2594. Also, petition of F. Weidner Printing & Publishing . Co., 1109-1111 Dekalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bills; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2595. Also, petition of the Long Island Chamber of Commerce, Inc., Long Island, N. Y., regarding section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2596. Also, petition of the American Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning House bills 20 and 14; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2597. By Mr. SCOTT: Petition of Myrtle Bucknell, of Compton, Calif., and 27 others, requesting the Government to call in some billions of dollars of Government bonds which are now callable and pay them with new currency; they have likewise expressed the opinion that they favor the Goldsborough bill in order to correct the evils of our financial system; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2598. By Mr. SHANLEY: Petition of the Lions Club of Ridgefield, Conn.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2599. Also, petition of Utilities Employees Securities Co.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2600. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of New Britain; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2601. By Mr. SNYDER: Petition signed by John Camp and 19 residents of Salisbury, Pa., urging the passage of an old-age pension law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2602. By Mr. SNELL: Petition of citizens of northern New York, protesting against House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2603. By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Petition of Charles Harris, Jr., and numerous other citizens of Chromo, Pagosa Springs, and Lumberton, Colo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2604. By Mr. TERRY: Petitions regarding old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2605. Also, petitions with reference to the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2606. By Mr. WERNER: Resolution adopted by the City Council of the City of Mitchell, State of South Dakota, urging enactment of House Joint Resolution 81 to direct the President to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the 2607. By Mr. WOLCOTT: Petition of Carl F. Eisen, of St. Clair, Mich., and 41 other members of the Farmers Union, urging the prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2608. Also, petition of Joseph Loughlin, of Caseville, Mich., and 32 other members of the Farmers Union, urging the prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2609. Also, petition of Roman Messing, of Ruth, Mich., and 49 other members of the Farmers Union, urging the prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke bill: to the Committee on Agriculture.

2610. By Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Petition signed by Fred W. Robinson and 299 other residents of Haverhill, Mass., and vicinity, urging the passage of the Townsend plan for old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and 2611. Also, petition signed by Edward R. Millen, of Boxford, and 10 citizens of Topsfield, Mass., protesting against the passage of House bill 5423, the public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2612. Also, petition signed by Raymond F. Smith and 10 other citizens of Haverhill, Mass., protesting against House bill 5423, the public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2613. By Mr. DOBBINS: Resolutions adopted at a nonsectarian mass meeting in the city of Springfield, Ill., deploring religious persecution in the Republic of Mexico, and petitioning for relief therefrom through action of the Congress; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2614. By Mr. CRAWFORD: Petition of 152 residents of Ionia County, Mich., asking prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2615. Also, petition of 211 residents of Shiawassee, Mich., asking prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill: to the Committee on Agriculture.

2616. Also, petition of a number of residents of Saginaw County, Mich., asking prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2617. Also, petition of a number of residents of Montcalm County, Mich., asking prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2618. Also, petition of certain residents of the Eighth District of Michigan, asking for the passage of the McGroarty old-age pension bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2619. By Mr. MOTT: Senate Joint Memorial No. 10 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to provide funds to clear dead timber, debris, etc., from Crane Prairie Reservoir site in Deschutes County, Oreg.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2620. Also, House Joint Memorial No. 5 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to pass appropriate legislation to provide military defense for the State of Oregon and the Pacific northwest; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2621. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 16 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly, State of Oregon, petitioning the President of the United States and the Secretary of State of the United States to refrain from declaring any reduction of the present tariff rates on filberts, shelled or unshelled, to the end that this industry of the Pacific northwest may be protected fully and amply against destructive foreign competition; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2622. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 8 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to refrain from reduction of present tariff on cherries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2623. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 8 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to make appropriation for the eradication of Bang's disease among cattle; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2624. Also, House Joint Memorial No. 2 of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, providing for segregating the costs of navigation and electrical energy on the Bonneville project, Oregon; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2625. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Pittsburg Division, No. 93, of the Order of Benefit Association of Railway Employees; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

TUESDAY, MARCH 5, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4, 1935)

The Senate met, in executive session, at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Robinson, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Monday, March 4, 1935, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holding-company structure, or otherwise.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 3808. An act to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction of an electric generating station and electric distribution systems, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $118,000;

H. R. 4751. An act to amend section 24 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to the terms of office of members of the Interstate Commerce Commission;

H.R. 6084. An act to authorize the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the electric light and power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., and to finance and operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 134. Joint resolution to continue the Commission for Determining the Boundary Line Between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia for not to exceed 1 additional year, and to authorize not to exceed $10,000 additional funds for its expenses.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holding-company structure or otherwise, and it was signed by the Vice President.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BLACK obtained the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum, The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Keyes	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Costigan	King	Reynolds
Austin	Couzens	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Cutting	Logan	Russell
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schall
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bilbo	Duffy	McCarran	Shipstead
Black	Fletcher	McGill	Smith
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Stelwer
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Burke	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Byrd	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Harrison	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Carey	Hastings	Norris	Wagner
Clark	Hatch	Nye	Walsh
Connally	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Coolidge	Johnson	Pope *	White

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman] are necessarily detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Metcalf] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads I report favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters. Among these nominations are postmasters in Minnesota-from January 17 to February 6. Senator Shipstead has approved the reports. We notified Senator Schall about them on February 19 and March 1, and put a time limit in which he was to report to the committee, as of Monday March 4. We have heard nothing from Senator Schall in reply to our two letters. I, therefore, report the nominations favorably.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

NOMINATION OF GEN. RICHARD P. WILLIAMS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general in the Marine Corps?

GEN. JOHN H. RUSSELL

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, it is my desire at this time to address myself to the question of the confirmation of the nomination of Gen. John H. Russell and to the method of selection adopted by General Russell, with a view, at a later step in the proceedings, to move to recommit the nomination of General Russell and to have a vote upon it, and with the additional intention of moving to recommit to the Committee on Naval Affairs certain nominations involving promotions that have been recommended by boards, with the request that the Naval Affairs Committee be granted a sufficient appropriation to summon witnesses to appear before that committee to determine whether injustices have been done by reason of the method of selection. I do not mean by that to state that I desire to have the Naval Affairs Committee or the Senate act as a board of review on these nominations. I believe, however, that the facts will show that the nominations should be rejected at this time or sent back to the executive department, with instructions that a fair and impartial board be appointed, on which General Russell shall not sit, to determine whether the officers so selected have been selected after a fair and just appraisal of the records they have made in the Marine Corps.

I can give to the Senate at this time a short quotation from one of the numerous communications which I have received which prompts me to believe that any other course would be unfair and unjust both to the officers of the Marine Corps and to the people of this Nation who desire to have this branch of the military service operate with the highest possible morale, in order that they may be ready to defend the country, if they should be called upon to do so. I do not believe it is possible to reach the conclusion that more than 50 percent of the higher officers of the Marine Corps are disqualified to continue to serve in that capacity unless we reach the conclusion at the same time that something has been seriously and fundamentally wrong with the administration of that branch of our military service.

I desire to read to the Senate at this time a portion of a letter. I shall not read all of it. It will give some idea of the sentiment of the officers of the Marine Corps with reference to this particular selection board. May I invite attention at this time to the fact that this is the second board headed by General Russell which has passed upon selections.

General Russell is now sponsoring legislation which will automatically retire from the Marine Corps practically every one of the officers who has been passed over by the two boards; so that if the entire program and plan shall go through it will mean that these officers will not only be prevented from having a promotion, many of whom have served through the basic schools, have gone through the Army War College, and upon whom the Government has spent thousands and thousands of dollars, but they will be automatically ejected from the Marine Corps after action by a board which they believe, and which many officers who have not been passed over believe, have not had a fair representation of those who should have been utilized to pass upon these officers.

Let me read a part of this letter:

Too old to begin a new profession-

May I state that I do not know this man. I do not know where he is from. I have never seen him.

Too old to begin a new profession and with a family to support, I am thrown out in disgrace and for no cause which is apparent to me. Once a soldier, always a soldier, is especially applicable to the Marine Corps; and if America does not stand by us who have stood by her, we will be in the position of men without a country.

I have lived through 10 years of amoebic dysentery, dengue, and malaria fevers, frequent separations from my family, earthquakes in Nicaragua, and carry as souvenirs a bullet in my steel helmet in China and one in my coat sleeve in Nicaragua when my horse was shot from under me.

His horse was shot, it seems. It was shot at 20 times and

These things are all part of the job. I ask no special consideration from the American people because of them, but it is far fairer to them to allow me to continue to work at a job for which I have been trained at their expense and in which I am capable of being useful, indeed valuable, than to pay me some $60 per month for the rest of my life with no return to them.

It does not solve my difficulties nor is it just to the people. It is the birthright of every American to work. If the President takes away from us the job for which we are specially fitted, simply because of the personal antagonism of a little group of willful men who wish to control the Marine Corps, then we are indeed lost, and God only knows where it all will end. I cannot believe the President, with his eminently sane outlook, will allow this state of affairs to continue.

That there has been no judgment used in the selection, let me cite the case of another officer in my class.

He cites several officers. I shall be very careful in reading this letter in order to make sure, as I conceive it, that nothing goes in the RECORD from which the individual may be identified. If any Senator desires to see the entire letter, I shall be delighted to let him read it and any of the numerous other letters which I have in my files of the same tenor.

I feel that I need not point out, my dear Senator, that it is absolutely vital to me that this letter be considered entirely confidential, since it is evident that I dare not further incur the enmity of these officers. To do so would be certain to place my head on the official chopping block and have it neatly sliced off.

It is because of a situation of that kind, affecting men whom I do not know, whom I have not seen, but who have served their country both here and abroad, that I am presenting to the Senate these facts, in the belief that if the Senate will hear them and if the Senate will act upon them free from any influence except the desire to see that these men who served their country shall be given a fair and square deal, the Senate will require that these nominations be sent back to the committee and that a full and complete investigation be had.

It may be said that the Committee on Naval Affairs have investigated. I make no criticism of the investigation by the Naval Affairs Committee; but I do state that unless the committee shall be given an appropriation and shall be authorized to summon Marine Corps officers, requiring them to come and thereby giving them the protection of a summons and the coercive measures of this body, that committee will not be able to arrive at the truth. I gave them, for instance, the name of a very efficient and capable officer, according to all the information I had received, who is now stationed in New Orleans. He was requested to come. He declined to do so. I had direct and positive information that that officer could give very valuable facts in connection with the controversies which have arisen on the floor here and in connection with the controversy concerning promotions.

Mr. President, before proceeding further with reference to the promotion question, in order that we may dispose of it and since it has come up with reference to General Russell in connection with the confirmation of his nomination, perhaps it would be wise for me first to discuss very briefly the so-called "battle of Russell's run." The statement has been made in some instances that that should not have been brought up in this connection. It was brought up by a witness under oath. It was testified to by a witness who was under oath and who was present on the occasion. The fact that he was present can be confirmed by anyone who desires to read the personal reminiscences of Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, published by Doran & Co., and copyrighted in 1930. General Lejeune referred there to this so-called "battle of El Tejar."

The evidence as to that incident is conflicting. Gen. Smedley Butler testified that he was present; that he rushed up there one Sunday morning; that he was met by General Lejeune; that after his troops had run a part of the distance they boarded a train and then went to the waterworks; that they made a reconnaissance in order to determine where the enemy which had been reported was to be found; and that they could find no enemy.

General Russell testified that there were 500 or 600-and if I do not correctly quote him I shall appreciate it if my friend the chairman of the committee [Mr. TRAMMELL] will correct me. General Russell testified, as I recall, that there had been 500 or 600 Mexicans there; that he had been riding on his horse down the line; that he had been shot at about 20 times. I had always thought the Mexicans had very good aim. I find no reference to that fact in General Lejeune's reminiscences. I do find in his reminiscences at pages 213 and 214 a report of this occurrence. I do find that he states that he and Major Butler climbed a hill and carefully searched the countryside with their binoculars but failed to discover any sign of a force of any description.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GERRY in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator is going to deny an officer promotion because he got fooled, what would have happened in the War between the States if the United States Government had followed that plan and demoted or refused to promote every officer of the Union Army who was deceived by Stonewall Jackson, J. E. B. Stuart, John Morgan, General Forrest, and many other distinguished Confederate officers who consistently, for almost 3 long years, fooled the Union Armies and the Union officers nearly all the time?

Mr. BLACK. So far as I recall-I may be wrong, and the Senator may correct me-I do not recall that any of those officers who were fooled testified later under oath that instead of being fooled they were riding down the line and were shot at by the enemy. I do not recall that. Perhaps they did; but I do not think Stonewall Jackson ever did that, if he was fooled. I have not heard that any of the Union officers did that, if they were deceived.

Mr. LOGAN. I think there was one who claimed that his clothes were nearly all shot off him and that he was entirely surrounded when J. E. B. Stuart had a little handful of cavalry and routed the whole Union Army of twenty-five or thirty thousand men.

Mr. BLACK. That being true, I should say, from my experience and observation of general military affairs, that he certainly would not have ranked as a military leader with Robert E. Lee, or with Stonewall Jackson, or even with some of the other officers the Senator may have in mind.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator will yield for one more question I shall not interrupt him further, because I am very much interested in his argument.

Mr. BLACK. I shall be delighted to yield.

Mr. LOGAN. Is not the chief complaint of Gen. Smedley Butler that he had to get up on Sunday morning, and before he could get dressed he had to run down there in response to a message that there was a Mexican Army present? He is not complaining that the army was not there when he got there; is he?

Mr. BLACK. Yes. Mr. LOGAN. I thought he was complaining because he had to go before he got his clothes on.

Mr. BLACK. There was no army there. The Senator is mistaken. The officer he mentions, Gen. Smedley Butlerwho has had Congressional Medals of Honor and who has had various other medals for distinguished courage and distinguished bravery, going all the way back to the time he was a lieutenant in China-was not complaining because he had to go; but he was complaining because, soldier that he was, he did object to having a battalion go racing off at doubletime on the theory that there was an enemy present, when, according to the evidence, there was no enemy there.

I was reading from the statement of General Lejeune:

Patrols were sent out in various directions, but with the same futile result.

We learned, after conferring with Maj. J. H. Russell and the other officers of the garrison, that the broadcast message was sent because of the fact that a Mexican soldier, bearing a flag of truce, had come to an outpost position with a note from his commanding officer which demanded the surrender of the waterworks, and which further stated that unless his demand was complied with he would attack with his force of about 1,000 men at the end of 10 minutes. The demand had been refused and dispositions made to meet the attack, but it had not been forthcoming.

The threatened attack, but it had not been fortneoming.

The threatened attack on El Tejar remained one of the insoluble mysteries, as no definite information concerning it could be obtained, but it is my belief that it was a piece of bravado on the part of an officer in command of a small mounted detachment which had approached to the vicinity of El Tejar through a nearby woods which screened his detachment from view, not only during its withdrawal as well. its approach but during its withdrawal as well.

Mr. President, something has been said about that occurrence having been referred to as the "Battle of Russell's Run" in connection with the idea that it was considered a joke. Is it believed that if the man in command of those troops had been fired at 20 times by a Mexican or by a troop of Mexicans on that occasion, this great soldier, General Lejeune, in writing up his memoirs, would ever have referred to it as "one of the insoluble mysteries", and failed to remark upon the miraculous escape of the officer who was going down the line on his horse?

It was referred to as a joke. It has been referred to as a joke. I state that on the authority of no less a person than Gen. John A. Lejeune in a letter written to me, dated March 1. It took a long time for me to get an answer from General Lejeune. That is perfectly all right. He is a great soldier and a good man. He did not refer to this incident in Mexico in his reply to the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL]. When he did not, I wrote him a letter and asked him about that and several other incidents. He did not reply to the inquiry about that incident in his reply to my first letter. I then sent him a telegram last week, asking that he reply. On Friday I received a message that his letter was being prepared and would be sent. It was received yesterday about 12 o'clock, as I recall.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The telegram which I sent to General Lejeune made no reference at all to particular incidents.

Mr. BLACK. I did not mean to leave that impression. Mr. TRAMMELL. We hoped to have him come before the committee in person-

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. TRAMMELL. But on account of his illness he could not come. The telegram, however, made no reference at all to any particular matter. It merely made inquiry about General Russell in a general way, and also about the promotion system.

Mr. BLACK. This great soldier in this letter has done everything in the world he could to protect the Marine Corps. For that I ascribe no improper motives to him. I think it is absolutely proper that a man who has served in that corps over a long number of years, and who has a pride in it, should adopt exactly the course he has adopted. He was reluctant to write about this incident; and when he finally did so he did it in a very artistic manner, but not in such a way as to conceal the real facts as he had published them in his book. I will read from the letter:

In the second place, as to the El Tejar, Mexico, incident, my memory of its main features is clear in spite of the exciting events of the World War, which commenced a short time after the El Tejar occurrence. I had been superseded as brigadier commander in Veracruz, Mexico, by my senior, Colonel Mahoney, when a chartered steamer brought another regiment of marines, Colonel Mahoney, and some other officers from the States to Veracruz.

Upon his request I remained on duty at brigade headquarters for 2 days as Chief of Staff.

The morning of the El Tejar incident I had requested and received my orders to resume command of the Second Regiment and was garbing myself with the usual military paraphernalia—haver-sack, dispatch case, pistol, field glasses, and ammunition—preparatory to going to Second Regiment headquarters when I heard the conversation over the telephone referring to a wireless message from El Tejar, the telephone wire to that place having been cut that morning. Located about 9 miles from Veracruz, El Tejar and the waterworks were guarded by three companies of marines under command of Major Russell. To be brief, I was told that the above-mentioned wireless message reported a probable attack on the waterworks by a large force of Mexican soldiers, and that three battalions of marines were being dispatched as reenforcements. I asked and received permission to go in command of the marines, mounted my horse, and rode toward Second Regiment headquarters. I joined Major Butler as his battalion took the road to El Tejar. When we were well out of town a train of freight cars loaded with an Army regiment stopped, and the marines climbed aboard.

When we arrived at El Tejar quiet reigned, and Major Butler and I reconnoitered on foot the surrounding terrain as best we could from a hilltop, where we could get a good view of the open country, but everything was quiet and no hostile troops were in sight. It but everything was quiet and no hostile troops were in sight. It seems that that morning a note was brought in to the officer in charge of a small detachment on outpost duty. The note was to the effect that a Mexican force of over 1,000 men in that vicinity would surround-and attack and capture El Tejar if the marines did not surrender within 10 minutes' time. There was a large clump of woods located near El Tejar which was supposed to conceal the Mexican force. Major Butler and I spent the night at Major Russell's headquarters, and Major Russell and I made a thorough reconnaissance on horse-back that afternoon of the surrounding country, when we selected locations for the day and night posts of the outpost detachments, and defensive positions to occupy if the waterworks were attacked. So much for the El Tejar incident.

Would surround-

According to my recollection of the El Tejar incident, we considered it a joke, and we were fond of "joshing" the officers who were there at the time about the famous battle of El Tejar!

After this statement by this eminent soldier, who has won his spurs on the battlefield, who will assert again that there was anything serious in the so-called "Battle of El Tejar"? When a man is up for confirmation for next to the highest military position which this Government can give, will anyone state to me that there is anything improper in bringing before this body the facts with reference to an incidentfacts which speak so strongly that no one needs an interpreter to determine the reason for the existence of those facts?

I have here a letter from a private who was there at the time. He has not been passed over by any board, nor has he been selected by any board. A reference was made to a trumpeter or bugler who went up to find the Mexicans. This letter, dated March 2, 1935, is from that gentleman. It is addressed to Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler:

MY DEAR GENERAL: Reading an editorial by the Associated Press, I cannot but help writing to you to congratulate you on your courage to disclose the incident that occurred at the waterworks at courage to disclose the incident that occurred at the waterworks at El Tejar, 9 miles from Veracruz, in 1914. I was the bugler that sounded the call to arms and the first to go to the front where the said called "rebels" were. I take an oath in saying that we did not find a single rebel that was supposed to attack us.

Once a marine, always a marine! My hat goes off again for your courage in defense of the good old corps.

I am, very sincerely yours,

JAMES M. VOTTA.

There is on the way to me at the present time through the mail another letter from another private, who was present at the time and who read of this occurrence and immediately communicated his views of what happened.

Mr. President, I desire to call attention to the fact that it has been wholly and completely impossible up to date to get from the Marine Corps a single report of who was in command at El Tejar. I have not been able to obtain the diaries of the officers who were there. There has been sent to us a part of the diary of General Funston, who was not there, who was away from there; but we all know that there must appear somewhere a record of whether or not General Russell was actually relieved from duty, and whether or not Captain Long was put in his place. That record has not come to us.

All Senators who served in the Army know that there were kept not only regimental records and brigade records, but there were battalion records, there were company records, there were certainly command records, as to what was happening at El Tejar; and from no source, other than the sworn statement of General Russell given before the Committee on Naval Affairs in connection with his nomination, from no source under the sun, has there been a single ' vestige of evidence that 20 shots were fired at General Russell at that time, as he went down the road on horseback.

A letter was read to me this morning over the telephone, a letter which came from the private I have just mentioned and which is on its way, and he states in that letter that General Russell stayed in his house from the previous afternoon, when it was first mentioned that there might be rebels, and never left that house until after the occurrence about which testimony has been given.

Mr. President, I do not know what the facts are. I do know that the testimony given by General Butler is substantiated by the book of General Lejeune. I do know that what has been said about what is referred to as the "Battle of Russells Run" is certainly substantiated by the statement of General Lejeune written 3 days ago-that it had always been considered a joke and they had been joshing the officers about the famous Battle of El Tejar.

Do Senators think they would have been joshing an officer about a battle-I just ask: I do not know-do Senators think it would have gone down in history as one of the "insoluble" mysteries, and that it would have gone down as a standing joke in the Marine Corps, if the man in charge had been fired at 20 times as he rode boldly to the top of the hill in the face of the enemy?

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield. Mr. DUFFY. I take it that the Senator's chief complaint is not so much that the general was fooled by the Mexicans making him believe there was a big force out in the woods, but that he appeared before the committee and swore falsely as to the matter, in the opinion of the Senator.

Mr. BLACK. I shall not make a statement that any witness swears falsely. I will state that I intend to call attention in a few moments to testimony given by General Russell before the Committee on Naval Affairs under oath, where he first said that he did not know anything about a bulletin, and later gave all the reasons why he issued the bulletin, and, after he left the committee, sent a letter here and said he had nothing to do with it. I shall read that from the record.

I call attention to the fact that when General Russell gave part of his testimony to the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh], the Senator from Massachusetts suggested that it was necessary that he be frank with the committee and not attempt to evade the issues or the questions.

Since we have come to that point, let me refer to the testimony. I would not think that any Senator who simply read the evidence, without being familiar with it, would have caught what happened; but if Senators have the report of the evidence before them, I ask them to take their record and turn to pages 42, 43, 44, and 45, and first to page 42.

In order to give the background, before Senators read the testimony, I call attention to the fact that many officers of the Marine Corps are exceedingly disturbed because they find themselves in the power of a group which they believe is hostile to them. They find they can be taken out and have their military heads cut off at any minute-just as General MacArthur testified before the Committee on Military Affairs a few weeks ago could be done-under that system, the evidence as to which I shall read to the Senate presently. Therefore, some of the officers, after this happened, were busy attempting to defeat the legislation which would permit them to be kicked bodily out of the Marine Corps.

A bulletin was sent out on February 9, and a copy of the bulletin was sent to me from a number of different officers. It was issued on February 9, 1935, after the hearings on the Russell nomination began, only a few days before General Russell appeared before the committee. Let us see what he said when I first showed him the bulletin, as appears on page 42, in the first questions I asked him:

General Russell, may I ask you if you wrote that [indicating], or General Russell. This bulletin?

Senator Black. To the officers of the Naval and Marine Corps?

General Russell. When was this, in 1935? I do not know whether I did or not. I probably did.

Note that:

I do not know whether I did or not. I probably did.

Then I asked him if he was familiar with the fact that there had been an effort made on the part of certain officers in connection with this selection legislation. Then the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] and some of the other members of the committee asked that the bulletin be read. The date was given as February 9, 1935. Listen to this. I read from page 43:

Senator Walsh. Have you any doubt as to whether you wrote that?

General Russell. I stand for it absolutely. Senator Walsh. As recent as that? General Russell. I stand for it.

Note that he stood for it at that time. At first he said, "I do not know whether I did or not." The second time he said, "I stand for it." Note, on page 43, the same page, at the bottom, the following:

Senator BLACK. General Russell, the question I want to find out is what prompted you to send out that particular bulletin at this particular time?

General Russell. What prompted me to send it out?

Senator Black. Yes, sir. General Russell. I understood—

This is the same gentleman who did not know whether he wrote it or not-

I understood that officers were organizing to prevent the passage of the repeal of section 16-

It was printed "18" but it is "16"- which the Navy Department, the Secretary of the Navy, has approved and sent to the Speaker of the House and to the Vice President, and it has been referred to the Naval Committees.

Let us go a little further, down near the middle of the General Russell. Yes, sir. It was sent out from the Quantico post.

Senator Walsh. Under the name of the officer there?

General Russell. Yes, sir.
Senator Walsh. But you sent it out to begin with?
General Russell. Yes, sir.
Senator Walsh. I would like to have the stenographer turn back to the first question Senator Black asked the general, and get the general's answer. Will you read that to us, please?

The reporter turned back and read this:

Senator Black. May I ask if you wrote that [indicating] or prepared that bulletin, or know anything about it?

General Russell. This bulletin?

Senator Black. To the officers of the Naval and Marine Corps. General Russell. When was this, in 1935? I do not know whether I did or not. I probably did.

Note that he had just answered Senator Walsh that he sent it out to begin with, and the Senator from Massachusetts had the reporter read back to see what he had previously said.

I read further now from the recent hearings before the committee, following what I have just read:

General Russell. I suppose I did now.
Senator Walsh. General, that is not the way to treat a committee. You did or you did not.
General Russell. I will tell you why I was misled, Senator.
When I looked down and saw it here it looked like a post order at first

In other words, he is saying now that he was misled at first about who did it, and he is explaining why he said at first he did not know.

Senator Black. You read it all, didn't you, General, before you answered that question?

General Russell. No; I did not. It looked like a post order signed by the adjutant.

Senator Walsh. We are not unfriendly. We want frankness here, General.

Let me ask Senators to turn now to the second little volume of evidence, page 1, remembering that he first said he did not know, when asked who wrote the bulletin of February 9, his appearance before the committee, I believe, being on February 12. Am I correct in that, that his appearance before the committee was on February 12?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. The bulletin had been sent out on February 9, 3 days previously. First he said he did not know. Later he said he sent it out. Now, let us see what he said on Februarv 14:

MY DEAR SENATOR TRAMMELL: Referring to my testimony before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on February 12, 1935, the record shows that Senator Black handed me a mimeographed copy of a Quantico post order and asked me if I was responsible for it.

I did not ask him that.

Mr. GERRY. On what page is that?
Mr. BLACK. Beginning at the bottom of page 1 and going on to page 2. I resume reading the letter:

I assumed all responsibility, as I knew full well the Navy regula-tions on the subject and had discussed with officers the advisability of issuing such an order.

However, I found on looking into the matter on my return to the Navy Department that the order was not issued by me, but by the Secretary of the Navy as an entirely independent action without suggestion from me or anyone connected with headquarters or the Marine Corps.

At the same time he testified that he was in favor of and backing the bill which these officers were trying to defeat. And even in this last letter, where he retreats from the position he took before the committee under oath, he says he knew that he had been discussing the advisability of this order with other people. Why is it necessary to try to get out from the responsibility of issuing this order? I will tell the Senate one of the reasons. Some Senators may know it from those who have come to see them about this case.

Immediately after asking about that bulletin, when the officers were told they should keep their mouths shut and not come before this committee, I asked General Russell whether any efforts had been made to influence Senators in regard to his confirmation. It so happened that a few days before, the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] had been present in the committee and had asked some questions which indicated that he wanted to get at the truth of this situation, and was not willing simply to accept a statement because it came from a department. Senator Smith's questions had clearly so indicated. If Senators will look at the hearings they will find that first General Russell said that some officers had discussed it to his knowledge. I asked him, as appears on page 46, in the middle of the page:

Do you know of any such thing that has been done?

That is, asking that telegrams and messages be sent to Senators.

General Russell. I have had officers come to me and say they have done that.

Senator BLACK. What officers?

Plural.

General Russell. Officers; I think that one of them is Major Arthur, right over there [indicating].
Senator Black. Major Arthur?

General Russell. Sitting over there in the corner; yes. Senator Black. What position does he hold? General Russell. He is in the adjutant inspector's office.

That is the position to which the Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally] referred yesterday—the adjutant inspector's office.

Senator Black. He is in the adjutant inspector's office. Who is his superior?

General Russell. General Porter.
Senator Black. Was he on the board?
General Russell. General Porter was on the board.
Senator Black. What other officers—

Remember that he said "officers"-

What other officers have you had tell you they have either written or requested, directly or indirectly, their people in the various States to write or appeal to their Senators with reference to your confirmation?

General Russell. He is the only one that I recall.

And later on Major Arthur testified he was there and heard Senator Smith testify, and that they called up South Carolina and attempted to get the man who had been the head of the American Legion of that State to contact Senator SMITH in regard to this matter. But, remember, the bulletin that had been published and gone out had sealed the lips of the officers. It prevented their attempting to defeat | the legislation which will cut off their military careers and send them out of the service, even though they wear decorations of American service in the form of bullets and the ravages of disease.

Mr. President, I now want to call attention to the fact that that was not all. Senators will find here a statement by General Russell that he discussed some matters with General Holcomb either the day before or 2 or 3 days before he came before the committee, which was after his first appearance. That was after the testimony had been given that General Lejeune was present at El Tejar. My good friend from Florida [Mr. Trammell] stated that General Lejeune gave a voluntary statement to the committee which the Senator believed to be true. As a matter of fact, if they will summon General Holcomb and Colonel Keyser before the committee, two men who served in France with General Leieune, they will find that General Holcomb, the man who was in conference with General Russell, and Colonel Keyser, were in conference with General Lejeune with reference to his letter. They will find that before General Lejeune ever sent that letter to the committee he had a direct, positive statement from General Holcomb by telegram explaining to him that he believed the action of the board was all right, and they were calling on him to come to the rescue of the Marine Corps in connection with his evidence and his letter, as he had been called upon during the trying period of the World War.

If there is any question about that, Senators can either summon General Holcomb, who was the head of the junior board and who was promoted to be general, or they can summon Colonel Keyser, or I can show them the copy of the telegram which I have on my desk.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Without taking issue with what the Senator from Alabama has said as to the facts, may I say that my own estimate of General Lejeune is that he would not write any article he did not believe was honest and true.

Mr. BLACK. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. TYDINGS. And if General Lejeune wrote it he would have written it anyway, whether or not there had been any conference such as the Senator stated.

Mr. BLACK. I may state to the Senator that I make the point that General Lejeune was down in Lexington; he was not familiar with the promotions; he had not kept up with them. He had recently suffered an accident. Before they could get any O. K. from him they had to give him a statement from a man whom he trusted. General Holcomb had served with him in France; Colonel Keyser had served with Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. GERRY. Is it not true that the general endorsed the provision for a board, and he was in favor of the selection board, so as to get away from the "hump", according to the testimony that was presented yesterday?

Mr. BLACK. There is no question that he was in favor of a selection board. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. At the time General Lejeune was Commandant of the Marine Corps I became very active in connection with a bill which General Lejeune brought here to take the "hump" out of the Marine Corps, and I made some remarks in the Senate on the occasion. The set-up now in effect is substantially the set-up which General Lejeune advocated at that time. It may have been changed in some particulars, but General Lejeune favored it in the way it was then presented.

Further than that, in General Lejeune's letter, which embraced, I think, three pages, and which I have read, he goes out of his way to show that in this kind of a set-up any officer who is on the selection board must have opprobrium heaped upon him by those who fail of promotion because the number to be promoted, particularly when it was first applied, was far in excess of those to be hereafter promoted. due to the "hump", and, therefore, hereafter any officer who will be displaced will feel he has been dealt with unfairly, and it will likewise bring on criticism at this time in an unusual degree.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield. Mr. GERRY. I will say in connection with what the Senator from Maryland has said that I was on the House Naval Committee in 1913, at which time criticism was being indulged of the "plucking" board, which afterward became the selection board, and from my experience I know that every time we try to remove a "hump" Members of Congress, both in the House and the Senate, will be importuned because some injustice has been done; and I do not see very well how anything else can be done than to leave the matter to the Navy Department if the officers who are authorized to speak are in favor of the legislation, as General Lejeune is. course, there is opposition when men are not promoted.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator further vield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I must apologize because yesterday I was not able to hear the remarks of the Senator, and this morning I have been in the Appropriations Committee ever since it began its meeting and have just now come on the floor. Is it the Senator's contention that the board lately convened to select officers for promotion in the Marine Corps did not act fairly?

Mr. BLACK. Absolutely.

Mr. TYDINGS. Has the Senator explained in what regard they have not acted fairly?

Mr. BLACK. I am proceeding now to do so.

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator has done so, I will read it in the RECORD. If he has not, I should like to hear it.

Mr. BLACK. I have not completed it as yet. The statement was made about the removal of the "hump", and that it could not be done without causing trouble. It can be done. The first bill that came up in the Military Affairs Committee when I came to the United States Senate was a bill to remove the "hump" by "plucking" World War officers. It was recommended by the War Department. After some months I succeeded in defeating that bill in the committee and reporting a substitute measure to the Senate, which provided a just method for removal of the "hump." The War Department opposed it. It was defeated. The "hump" continued, but at the present time there is pending on the calendar a bill which I hope will be passed the next time the Senate calendar shall be called—a bill proposed by General MacArthur to remove the "hump" in the Army without the iniquitous system of a "plucking" board to be administered unfairly and unjustly to men who served in the World War. I recommend the study of that bill to those who are interested in the proper method of determining how to remove the "hump."

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Alabama that, as I recall the system as it existed in the Marine Corps, the "hump" was more aggravated than that which existed in the Army or the Navy. It was shown by General Lejeune that men who became second lieutenants at an early age under the system then in vogue would retire as captains, and, therefore, in order to permit men to reach some degree of rank before they were retired it was necessary to apply a more drastic remedy to the Marine Corps than that which had to be applied to the Army and Navy. Therefore, the percentage of officers affected is much larger in the Marine Corps than in the Army or Navy.

Mr. BLACK. I may state to the Senator that I do not propose at this time to enter upon a complete discussion of that feature, but there are men who served in the World War who went in as second lieutenants and who, without some kind of a measure to relieve the "hump", would retire as first lieutenants.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.
Mr. GERRY. As I read the testimony, General Butler brought up that question in the hearings; but the answer is that, while a man might have a brillant record as a second lieutenant, and be a man of great bravery, it would not necessarily follow that he was qualified to become one of the high-ranking officers in the Marine Corps, where other qualities such as judgment, and so forth, are necessary.

Mr. BLACK. I agree with that statement fully, but I further agree that a board in Washington, practically all the members of which are serving in capacities connected with a revolving chair—and I will show in a few minutes how some of them are serving—cannot pass on a man and tell whether he can meet an emergency when he gets on the battlefield. I agree thoroughly with General MacArthur, whose statement was made on February 9 before the Military Affairs Committee, when he said:

Moreover, in time of peace the measure of capacity of an officer, the yardstick by which you measure his capacity is not of such scope as to really define the officer's combatability. Some of the most astonishing reverses have been found under actual field conditions. Officers who everybody thought were of extraordinary merit, under the tremendous pressure of nervous strain, of the physical contacts—the blood, the disaster of the battlefield—have collapsed; whereas those men who in time of peace would apparently have a much lower general efficiency rating have exhibited traits of character which have brought them to the front at once. They were able to register all their ability under an emergency, whereas the former—the predicted brilliant officer—

I m'ght say one who would be "predicted" down in the marine headquarters in days of "piping peace"; but, as General Butler suggested, he did not think they ought to have a knitting party and that often "the predicted brilliant officer" was not able to register more than a fraction of his ability.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. GERRY. According to the Senator's argument, then, he is not willing to trust the opinion of General Lejeune, who recommended this board and who is one of the greatest fighting officers the Marine Corps has ever had? I am going on his opinion and the opinion of other officers such as he.

Mr. BLACK. I am not going on the opinion of General Lejeune with reference to the board which sat in Washington, which was headed by a man who had formerly sat at the head of another board and had demoted some of the same officers who had won their spurs on the battlefields of France. It became necessary to enact legislation in order to undo the action of General Russell's board.

In 1919 General Russell was the head of a board, the only other board of which he was ever at the head, and the question arose as to what would be done with certain men who had served in the Army. He says in his evidence, it will be found, that the question was what would be done with the noncommissioned officers who had served brilliantly and who had received commissions. His board acted, and such a clamor went up from all over this Nation by people who knew the injustices that had been done to the men who had served on the battlefront of France that Congress itself, by an amendment proposed in this very body, authorized a new board, and General Lejeune set up that board. That new board was created upon the recommendation of the same General Lejeune, and when it met it proceeded to overturn the action of the Russell board.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. As I understand, General Lejeune set up a board to undo what Russell had done?

Mr. BLACK. That is correct. It was done upon his recommendation to Congress with reference to the establishment of a new board. What happened? Some of these men were saved then; and if one will look at General Russell's evidence he will find that he still says the original mistake was made in this new board which was set up to undo the plain, palpable injustice which had been perpetrated upon men who served at the battle front. They changed it then, and things went along peacefully and quietly in the Marine Corps. Until General Russell again became Commandant no effort had been made to take away the places that had been won by men in actual service before the enemy.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, is it not true, if the Senator will yield to me, that there is a "hump" at the present time because there has been no selection board in the Marine Corns?

Mr. BLACK. If there is a "hump", I want the situation growing out of that "hump" handled in a humane way and not unjustly by a man who attempted to do it unjustly before the Congress corrected the abuses.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to point out to the Senator that human nature is so strong that any method devised to relieve that "hump" which eventuates in eliminating men will cause much dissatisfaction, and that there is no perfect system which can be set up to eliminate officers from the Army, the Navy, or the Marine Corps.

Mr. BLACK. I call the Senator's attention again to the fact that they had the "hump" in the Army, and they tried to put over the same kind of an iniquitous system, but some of us on the Military Affairs Committee defeated it.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I will yield when I finish. We defeated it then, and the Army never proposed it again. The men who proposed that system are not in control; and now General MacArthur comes before the Senate and offers a bill which will relieve the "hump" in a humane and fair way. I heard that this was to be done, and I assumed that probably the War Department might be again going to try to follow the old method which had been proposed. So I wrote General MacArthur and told him I wanted to see just what they were going to do. He brought me the bill. I went over it: the Senate committee went over it and unanimously reported it. It is believed that it will afford a fair, just, and humane method of relieving the "hump" in the Army. It will not work to the detriment of men who served in France, and perhaps will not cause the Senate to keep on talking about a "hump." A "hump"! Which is the more important—a "hump" or justice to men who fought the war at the time when, as it was stated, we fought "to make the world safe for democracy?"

I claim that an investigation of this matter will show that a rank, outrageous injustice has been done to men who served on the battle front; and it will not be done so long as I can prevent it and so long as I am able to raise my voice against it.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. At the time the Marine Corps promotion bill was pending, General Lejeune, who was then Commandant of the Marine Corps, came to the Senate and appeared before the Naval Affairs Committee. He compared the size of the "hump" in the Army and the Navy with that in the Marine Corps. As I have said, I interested myself in the proposal when it came up; and while I have not the exact figures, I am well within the bounds of caution in making the observation that the "hump" in the Marine Corps was more than twice as aggravated as in either the Army or the Navy.

Mr. BLACK. I have no mathematical calculations of the height of the "hump"; but, in my judgment, a rank, outrageous injustice is about to be perpetrated upon men who fought on the battle front. Let men say what they will about General Butler, no one can deny that his record shows a splendid series of brave and courageous acts on the battle front. No one can deny that his record shows that when the effort was made to do an injustice to the men who he knew had served valiantly and well on the battle front his voice was then raised. Then it was that General Lejeune joined him and a new board was created to do justice to the men who had been improperly treated by General Russell's board. They did it then.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BLACK. I yield to the Senator. Mr. GERRY. Is it not true, though, that the Marine Corps has not had a selection board, such as the Navy has had, with a result that has been detrimental to the Marine Corps, because, as in the Navy before the creation of selection boards, they were unable to eliminate officers who should not rise to the higher grades? There can be no question that no one wants to do any injustice to any officer. The main point is to promote efficiency in the corps so that they may best perform their duties. It may well be doubted whether Congress can really have the knowledge that officers of the Marine Corps, such as General Lejeune, possess as to the fitness of these officers. Of course, as soon as any officer is "plucked" it is always an injustice to that officer in his own estimation.

Mr. BLACK. I would be very much pleased if a new board could be created and General Lejeune put on it. I will guarantee if they had men of the type of General Lejeune and Gen. Harry Lee that we would never have any such thing as occurred with reference to the selection board. I am not sure that that can be done; I am not sure but that General MacArthur was right in this further statement:

General MacArthur. The retirement of competent officers creates a psychology of fear, of intimidation, throughout the whole officer personnel. Every year they would have to go through the purging process, if I can use so drastic a term, and it would make even the most excellent officers timid.

Of course it would; it always creates a reign of terror; it always creates a boot-licking class, a group who find that the only way in the world to get anything is to clean the boots of somebody who has political prestige or power. That is what General MacArthur is talking about.

Senator Carry. They fear that they will be the next? General MacArrice. They would be fearful. There are no human agencies that are infallible in methods of selection. This makes the man not only timid but it tends to make him cater to the views and wishes of senior officers-even if he does not honestly believe in those views.

Boot licking-

We believe, from every standpoint, that it is not desirable and we would not advocate such a process in the American Army.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DIETERICH in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Marvland?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator realizes that there are very few promotions in the Marine Corps, because it is a very small organization?

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator suggests doing away with the selection board and that seniority should apply. The Senator will be fair enough to concede that under that system quite often the few high offices which direct the whole corps might be manned not by the best officers but by the senior officers. Will the Senator concede that to be so?

Mr. BLACK. I will concede it is possible that the senior officers might not always be the men who had all the best possible qualities. Let me add to that statement. I will also concede that it might be possible that in the case of a board made up of General Russell and those whom he appoints here in Washington, who are serving under him and most of whom have been recommended for promotion by him, there might be a slight possibility of error creeping in.

Mr. TYDINGS. I rose to point out that even under the system which the Senator inferentially advocates, he admits the plan would not work efficiently; that officers would only have to be in the Marine Corps the greatest length of time in order eventually to command it. General MacArthur, the advocate whom the Senator uses to prove his point, is an example of the system against which the Senator inveighs. General MacArthur is a junior in the Army. He was appointed over the heads of many major generals, yet the Senator uses the exponent of the system which he decries to prove the opposite case.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator is not going to get me away from the real issue before us.

Mr. TYDINGS. But the Senator did get away from it.

Mr. BLACK. The real issue is that a board has been created manifestly for the purpose of undoing what the board did in 1920. It is the first time General Russell had the opportunity, and he availed himself of the opportunity. He admits in his evidence that it was wrong, and he said it needed correction.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield further to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not desire to interrupt the Senator constantly

Mr. BLACK. Is the Senator from Maryland a member of the Naval Affairs Committee?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; the Senator from Maryland is a member of that committee. May I say to the Senator from Alabama that we have to have one or the other of the two systems? We have either to have a seniority system on the one hand, or a selection board on the other hand. the Senator's proposed system, at least the one he advocates inferentially, it would not be possible to get such experienced and able men at the head of the Army as General MacArthur. We could not get a man like that under the Senator's system. I do not care what system we set up, it is not going to please every officer in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps. My observation is that we get better officers under the selective system than under the seniority system.

Mr. GERRY. That is why General Lejeune is advocating this system.

Mr. BLACK. Is is not an issue before the Senate at this time as to whether we favor the selective system or the seniority system.

Mr. TYDINGS. I appreciate that is so. If the Senator will permit me to interrupt further, if we are not going to debate that point, then General Russell simply carried out the system which is now in effect. The Senator's criticism is not of the system, but of the way it was carried out. The Senator has been arguing for half an hour that under the system men who served on the battle front were relegated to the rear, and that was the basis of my interruption.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator is in error in his assumption. I believe a fair implication of the selective system would not have brought about the results which have been brought shout here

I recognize the apparent impossibility of doing anything against a proposal made by the Navy or the Army. I have been a member of the Committee on Military Affairs ever since I came to the Senate. I realize that sometimes good friends who sit on those committees finally reach a point where if one dares to question the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t" as suggested by the military or naval authorities, he is simply committing a sacrilege.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I want to say, so far as my knowledge of General Russell goes, it is personal. I happened to be in Haiti when they were head-hunting down there and a good many bandits were holding up everybody who used the roads outside of the town. I saw the work that had been done there. My comment, and it is made as an American citizen, is that General Russell did a splendid job and nobody would say that with more enthusiasm than the people of Haiti themselves, who with a great deal of reluctance saw the marines leave, although they did not want them in the country because of national pride, yet at the same time were frank enough to express themselves in that way.

Mr. BLACK. It may be proper to express a personal opinion about a visit to Haiti. I have not done so although I formed an opinion, and my opinion was somewhat in line with the opinion expressed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

I may state to the Senator from Maryland that an American citizen desired to talk to me about the situation in Haiti and he did not dare to discuss it with me in the city of Port au Prince. He did not dare to open his mouth there. There was an absolute reign of terror which prevented it, and so, at his request, I talked to him about 4 miles outside of the city of Port au Prince in order that he might tell me the situation which actually existed in that beautiful city which the Senator portrays. I admit the Americans may have built some roads, but what do the Haitians need with all those roads? They were poor people who had had a law for 100 years that no foreigner should own any land in that country, and then had their constitution amended at the point of the bayonet and an election supervised by the marines, with drawn swords, in order to determine that they should have a constitution which would enable them to sell their lands to foreigners.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. BLACK. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I point out to the Senator that at the time the marines were landed in Port au Prince the President of the country had been cornered in his house, had been brought out, had his legs cut off, had his head cut off, had his arms cut off, and was being dragged through the streets by a mob; that warships of foreign countries, principally countries of Europe, came into the harbor and were about to land troops, and if it had not been for the landing of American troops we would have had European occupation in the Western Hemisphere. That was the situation which the marines found when they were landed. Because they were landed European soldiers were not landed, as we do not want them landed in the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. BLACK. I do not care to go into the merits of that question, but to those who are interested I suggest they read a book called "Occupied Haiti." I understand the great philanthropic motives which always operate when a conquering nation wants to seize a conquered country. Alexander the Great during his career never conquered a country except to take them a great civilization. He wanted to have roads built. He wanted to improve their condition. When we have sent our marines to Nicaragua and to South America our action has always been accompanied by the great philanthropic motive of carrying civilization to them; but when we finished we found usually, as was the case in Haiti, that the money had been issued by the City National Bank of New York and the customs were collected in order to pay the interest in New York on the money the Haitians had borrowed.

However, I am not going to enter now upon a discussion of that matter. We are discussing now the question of the promotion system. It is very natural, it is exceedingly natural, that we should attempt to confuse the issue, which is whether or not we are going to stand for the action of promotion boards which have rendered absolute injustice to marine officers in this country.

Now let us see who served on the boards.

The senior board in 1934 selected 69 and passed over 78. I am wondering if it is true that the marine personnel in this country has gotten down to such a point that there are 78 of them who ought to be kicked out of the service. If so, one of two things is wrong: Something is wrong with the selection board, or something has been wrong in the past which has permitted them to stay on the roll.

Let us see who served on the boards. Let us take the second one:

General Russell, the Commandant of the Marine Corps, with the power of life and death over the other officers by reason of his place. He can move them where he pleases. He can send them wherever he desires. He can remove them from a favored spot and send them to an undesirable spot.

Who is the next one? General McDougal. Who is General McDougal? His Assistant Commandant, sitting here in Washington. Promoted? Yes. Any other obligations?

Yes. If Senators desire to know what the other obligations were, read the record.

General Porter—where was General Porter? Adjutant and inspector, I believe, here in Washington.

General Little, working at headquarters.

General Berkeley was not working at headquarters.

General Williams—where was he? Here in Washington. What happened to him? He was promoted. By whose board? General Russell's board. General Russell was the head of the Marine Corps.

How many of them served in France? General McDougal arrived in September and stayed until November 14. General Williams went over there in September and stayed until November.

Let us see about the other board. The board I have mentioned was the second board. The first board was composed of General Russell; General Lee-a man with distinguished service-there is no question about that. It would be very interesting, in my judgment, if the committee would summon General Lee and find out what he thinks about this matter. I have not seen him. I have not talked with him. I have never talked with him, but I had hoped he would be summoned. The other members were General Breckenridge, with no war service; General Lyman, with no war service; General Lane, with no war service; General McDougal, again, with service from September to November, serving directly under General Russell here in Washington. One officer came all the way from California, but he did not serve. They said it was found that he would have to stay here too long. He is an officer who is serving now in California.

So, Mr. President, we find the board made up, with the Commandant of the Marine Corps at the head of it. It is true that he states he did not know how the other members were going to vote. He also swore that he never discussed with them the promotion of a single individual. Think of that! A board that is going to meet, and they take the records and go over them for a week or 10 days or 2 weeks, and the evidence is that the head of the board never discussed a single one with a single member of the board!

Of course, that may be correct. Ordinarily, we would not anticipate that things were done in that way. What is the evidence? What do we have? We have the Commandant of the Marine Corps, with the life of every officer under him in his control, sitting at the head of the board, and we find a situation where he admits that he thought what had been done in 1920 ought to be undone. We find him sitting there; and then, when we look over the record, and General Smedley Butler looks it over—the man who had served on the first board that corrected the injustices of General Russell—he comes down and swears before the committee that they did exactly what they said they wanted to do.

There is the record, and there is what has been done to these officers.

I do not know what the Senate will do about this nomination. Ordinarily confirmation is a matter of form. Officers are recommended by the Navy Department. Certainly we would not vote against the Navy Department. They are recommended by the War Department. We could not vote against the War Department. Yet we are voting now upon the promotion of the man whose evidence Senators have heard read here, and who contradicted himself in such a way that a member of the committee had read back to him the very evidence which this man had given when it first fell from his lips when he went on the stand.

Mr. President, I shall not go into the details of what has happened to the officers. The evidence shows that over 50 percent of those in certain classes have been passed over. That means, if this whole plan and scheme shall succeed—and I call it a scheme advisedly—and if the Senate and House shall swallow the means by which it is proposed that these men shall be kicked out, they will be removed from the Marine Corps. Their chance to earn their daily bread will be taken away from them. Men who have served as long as 30 years, with not a single blot on their records, will be removed from the corps, and the Senate will approve the promotion of others who have general courts martial sprinkled through the years. That is what we will do. We | can very easily ascertain, by a proper investigation, what has happened.

Why should we object to having this matter go back to the committee in order to determine whether or not this is a blow aimed straight at the heart of the Marine Corps of this Nation? How can we expect to get loyal service from men who have the sword hanging over their heads every minute when they know that the Commandant of the Marine Corps selects his own assistants? That is the evidence. Of course, theoretically, they are appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, but that is only theory. General Russell admitted that they were all recommended by him for appointment, including himself. So we find serving under him the men upon whom we expect to call, perhaps-I hope not-to go and make some other country in South America safe for democracy and the National City Bank, to suffer from amoebic dysentery and fever, as did the officer from whose letter I quoted.

Mr. President, I desire to say about General Williams, who is the one whose name is up now, that I was not the one who originally objected to his confirmation. I stated yesterday afternoon that I did not want the nomination of General Williams passed on at that time because the Senator who objected was not here. While it is my belief that there are other men who, from what I have seen, were over General Williams on the roster, who are capable of serving well if promoted, it is not my intention to wage any fight against General Williams; but I do insist that we should either refuse to confirm General Russell or we should send his nomination back to the committee.

I have not mentioned the incident which happened with reference to the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] because, as is shown by the record, I stated that at his request I was not asking any investigation of that incident by the committee. I was familiar with the fight that had been made by the Senator from Utah—a magnificent fight—for the people who lived in Haiti, in order to try to preserve and protect their rights. He had not succeeded in winning a victory, but on their behalf he waged a fight which, in my judgment, did result in good when the new administration came into power. I stated yesterday that while I had said I should not ask that that incident be taken up, the treatment accorded the Senator from Utah alone would be sufficient for me to base my vote on, if it were necessary.

What I am now asking, however, is that proper consideration be given to the officers who have served their country well, and who can serve it well in the future unless we permit them to be made the targets of a group sitting on the inside in Washington, and to have them disgraced, as well as thrown out of the service, by the methods that have been adopted.

THE WRECKING CREW

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, last night, while I was about to undertake to throw myself into the arms of Morpheus, I thought I heard my name being mentioned over the radio in the next room. I listened for a little while, and, lo and behold, I became convinced that perhaps I was being mentioned in some unimportant connection; so I pricked up my ears and turned on the radio in my own room and listened to the speech which was coming over the ether, and I heard my friend Gen. Hugh Johnson making a speech-General Johnson, the man who ran the N. R. A. down here for some

So I pricked up my ears a second time to listen to the general. Among other things he said was that the time had arrived when somebody should inform the American people of the great menace of the two pied pipers of the present day and time; and as one of those pied pipers he named Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Michigan, and as the other he named myself.

The general, who retired from the Army first and from the N. R. A. next, comes out of the house of Bernard M. Baruch. He is one of the employees—a private employee, a hired hand, so to speak—used by the firm of Bernard M. Baruch, Inc., the motto of which is, "Presidents: You make 'em; we break 'em." [Laughter.] According to the Wall Street magazine of J. P. Morgan & Co.—the American Magazine, which I hold in my hand-according to the House of Morgan and its publication Mr. Baruch has been the confidant and the adviser and the overlord of several Presidents.

He has taken his employee, Mr. Hugh Johnson, and at various times has placed him in certain pivotal positions of Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. I should like to suggest the absence of a quorum, if the Senator does not object.

Mr. LONG. I do not object, because I think the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] ought to be here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Keyes	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Costigan	King	Reynolds
Austin	Couzens	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Cutting	Logan	Russell
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schall
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bilbo	Duffy	McCarran	Shipstead
Black	Fletcher	McGill	Smith
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Steiwer
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Burke	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Byrd	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	- Harrison	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Carey	Hastings	Norris	Wagner
Clark	Hatch	Nye	Walsh
Connally	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Coolidge	Johnson	Pope	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-eight Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, before the quorum was called I was undertaking to make some answer to Mr. Johnson's speech over the radio last evening, which I now propose to

Mr. Johnson undertakes to warn the American people of a great menace, a double-barreled menace, in the persons of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and myself. Mr. Johnson undertakes to tell the people exactly what may be expected. He says that there are 80,000,000 very, very badly abused babies in America, referring to all people, the young and the old, as in the class of babies; and that, with 80,000,000 abused babies being extant, the field is rather promising for Rev. Father Coughlin, of Detroit, and myself; and he warns against us as the two dangerous pied pipers.

This Baruch loaned this Johnson to the United States twice before. He has always ventured to lend his handyandy tools to whoever is in power, provided he has been allowed to sit on the inside and know what is going on a little bit before anybody else knows when it is going to happen, and in that manner to gather and to garner to himself, as a market rigger and as a market manipulator, what seems to be profitable.

He plays no favorites, does Baruch, with his high lights; he plays no favorites in parties; he plays no favorites in individuals. All that is necessary is for one to be in authority to control important functions of the Government, whereupon Baruch usually volunteers himself, and eventually sees that his proffered services are accepted to manipulate the affairs of the United States.

Right at this time, with the market being rigged and manipulated as has never been done since the World War, he is generally known as the "greatest exporter and importer of metals, of gold and silver." He is generally known as the greatest buyer and seller of commodities that never touch his hands." He is generally publicized by the journals of the country and by the newspapers of the country as the man who makes big money because he is wise on what the market is going to do.

He knows when the dollar is going to be depreciated or when the dollar is going up, if the high lights know what the rumors speak. He knows when the pound is going to be one thing or when it is going to be another. He guesses on everything except the weather. He does not guess on those things which are controlled by the hands of nature, only on those things which are controlled by the hands of man, provided he is close to the throne, to the hand of the man who is in charge of those particular manipulations.

He sallies forth with this man Hugh Johnson. He sent Hugh Johnson down here to organize the N. R. A. I made the charge on the floor of the Senate that Mr. Johnson was appointed as an employee of Baruch, and that he would not have been here if Baruch had not sent him here; that Baruch had loaned his man again to the United States.

My statement was challenged. A few moments later I met the general out in the lobby of the Capitol, and he assured me that he took no offense; that he was a Baruch man and an employee of Mr. Baruch, and came here in that capacity, and would go back as soon as he got through filling his itinerant job down here in Washington, D. C. And he did.

He came from Baruch to Wilson, and went from Wilson back to Baruch. He came from Baruch to Hoover, and he went from Hoover back to Baruch. He came from Baruch to Roosevelt, and he went from Roosevelt back to Baruch.

Now, what do we hear? The Roosevelt administration found out that they had to get rid of the general. They found out that the general had messed things up, and that the Roosevelt administration had gotten itself into such a mess—for which it was just as much responsible as Johnson was—that something had to be done about the N. R. A. So the general was in the limelight and on the hot spot, and they had to get rid of General Johnson.

General Johnson, at the time he was going to resign, I know for a fact, called in a newspaper reporter and told him that he was going to give out a statement about "that 'bird' over in the White House", and he was going to make it singe; but he was convinced that probably the best thing to do was to present his resignation and say nothing about it, and get out as quickly as he could. So he got out.

Now, what have they cooked up? The general is a prospective candidate, I hear. They have convinced General Johnson that he can be of service to the administration. He was doing a great disservice to them last night, as I shall demonstrate. But they convinced him that he could be of great service, and they have actually gotten him to believe that he can be elected to the United States Senate from the State of Oklahoma. I understand that the Farley crowd have it now in their minds, and that Mr. Johnson has it in his mind, that he is going to be a candidate for the United States Senate from the State of Oklahoma.

I knew something down here was going crazy, but I never thought they were that crazy until this morning, until I traced down that matter to sources which are absolutely reliable, and found out that it has come to the mind of Farley's adherents that they are in need of the capabilities of General Johnson and that they had opened up the matter, on the eve of some journal giving out a statement to the Redbook Magazine called his memoirs, the beginning of the publication of his memoirs, as the event upon which to justify a loud blast that General Johnson was going to issue throughout the length and breadth of the United States. So General Johnson, on the eve of the publication of his obituary, or his memoirs, as the case may be [laughter]—on the eve of this particular publication, throws wide open the wires of the United States in a manner that I have not been able to get them. I have worked for years and years and years trying to get one of those favorable hours on the radio, and now and then they will drop me back to 11:30, 11 o'clock and 12 o'clock and let me talk to the people who stay up that late; but I never have, in all my efforts which I have been making to get time over the radio, been able to get one of these favorable hours and periods to speak like the general had last night, in which he deluges the country with an attack on me and the priest over in Detroit, and to defend Farleyism and anything with which he ever had to do, including the Roosevelt administration.

So therefore, Mr. President, it becomes a little necessary that we find out, that we explore for the time, if it may please the Senate, what is the source of this particular effort at this time, and why the reason. First, let us go back to Baruch. Why, here is the man who was running the country—Bernard M. Baruch. We thought we were swapping from Hoover to Roosevelt, and we were swapping from Baruch to Baruch. Now do not doubt me, Mr. President. There are a great many of us here who like proof. I am going to read from the official magazine of J. P. Morgan & Co. This magazine is owned by the House of J. P. Morgan, the American Magazine, owned by the Crowell Publishing Co., and J. P. Morgan owns the Crowell Publishing Co., as was testified by Mr. Morgan's partner, Thomas W. Lamont, before the Banking and Currency Committee last year in reply to questions which I was allowed to propound by reason of the generous attitude of the Senator from Florida [Mr. Fletcher], presiding at the time.

This magazine has an article on Mr. Baruch. I now read to the Senate from an article in 1929 by Barney Baruch, published as an interview given to the special scribe, Mr. Bruce Barton, from the lips of Mr. Baruch. I shall not read all this article, because manifestly it might be too long and burdensome on the Senate, but I want to show the Senate that this Bernard M. Baruch and Hugh Johnson, inside and second-story combination of wreckers of Presidents, have been doing this thing so long, and rigging the market for their own individual profits, that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and let there be no dispute about it.

Let me read this article from Brother Baruch to the Senate. I read this excerpt from the American Magazine of June 1929, beginning at page 26. This is Baruch talking now:

Let us trace the business influence of the war a little farther.

That is Baruch speaking. Then he starts again:

The Liberty loan campaigns taught the people to save and invest, first in Liberty bonds, then in municipal and railroad bonds, and then in securities of the corporations which represent the work and genius of the American people.

I am getting to the point gradually here. Here is a propaganda article issued for what was going on in 1929, 4 months before the crash came. Here he says, to begin with, as I have just read, that the war taught the American people to invest—in what? First in Liberty bonds. Next in municipal and railroad bonds. He puts them on a par, municipal and railroad bonds. We will not say anything about the railroad water—just leave that where it is for the present.

Then he says they were taught to invest their money in other corporations of the country. In other words, the market rigging and wild speculation going on on the New York Stock Exchange at the time was particularly being rigged there under the nose and with the consent of and by the spokesman of Hoover, who has later been the spokesman of Roosevelt, who sent down here the men that he had to furnish to run all the important departments of government. Not only did he send Hugh Johnson, but he sent a man named Brown. I forget what the other men's names were, a half a dozen of them or so; but at the same time, 2 years before, in the year 1929, he had built up this rigger with this Johnson and the balance of them that he later put in the department for the United States under Roosevelt. He framed the scheme and loaded the market and befuddled the American people; he used J. P. Morgan's magazine as one of the bellweathers to bring on the wreckage that occurred in September 1929 with Hoover as President of the United

Let us now go a little further. What else does he say? I am going to prove this case by his own words. I am going to prove this case so there will not be any denial this time, so there will not be any necessity of ringing over to the White House to find out if this or that is so or not so. I want to leave the matter so there will be no dispute this time. Now, says Baruch:

Instead of fighting the big corporations, the people now own them and enjoy the fruits of their growth.

Oh, they do, do they? Now, is not that fine! [Laughter.] Why, said Baruch unto Hoover, "Don't undertake to regulate these market manipulators known as 'the public utilities ' or the ' Power Trust.'" "Oh, no", he said, "Oh, no", said this Baruch, this wise counselor, this sagacious supplier of his underlings to the departments of the Government, "Don't fight the corporations; don't bother the Power Trust as it gobbles up everything in sight and then doubles and redoubles up on rates. Oh, no", he says, "the people own these corporations, and they gather the fruits of their

How true that was, or rather how untrue that was, came to the sad knowledge of the people later. But let us read further from Baruch. Said he:

The War Industries Board established a new cooperative relationship between Government and business which Mr. Hoover-

Now we are getting down to where Baruch is telling you that Hoover is the man to do this and the man who is doing it, and he recommends him for it. This man who came over here and took charge of the Democratic Party, do not forget that, after we won-this man who came over here and took charge of the Democratic Party after we practically ran him out of the party, after our candidate sent a telegram to Chicago intended for him and those of his stripe, that they did not even have any part to be considered or recognized in the Democratic Party—this man says in 1929, in the month of June, and he must have written this about the month of April or a few months before:

The War Industries Board established a new cooperative relationship between government and business which Mr. Hoover, as Secretary of Commerce, continued in peace times with results that are beyond measure.

In other words, he said Mr. Hoover has gone on with a form that is getting results beyond measure. What are

During the war we established committees of various industries.

Now, here is the N. R. A. They started to pull this N. R. A. under Hoover, and they could not pull it under Hoover, because the Democrats at that time were still fighting along the line of Jefferson to some extent. Not always, but on occasion. They started to pull this N. R. A. under Hoover, and Baruch, who is given credit with Hugh Johnson for putting the bright men behind the N. R. A., had started to pull this shenanigan under Hoover. Wait a minute while I show the Senate. Mr. Baruch said that Mr. Hoover, the Secretary of Commerce, continued the practice.

During the war we established committees of the various industries, and when prices were fixed-

Rules were also fixed for distribution, and these rules influenced the scale of wages and working conditions.

I just call the Senate's attention to the saying that Mr. Hoover was then on the way, said his spokesman, Baruch, to the fixing of prices and the making of regulations under which businesses would be operated, and he contended that that had in fact had a precedent during the World War and that it should be improved upon and aggravated and accentuated during peace times. Said Mr. Baruch:

Quantity production had its real birth in the war, not only because things had to be made quickly but also because of the necessity for eliminating all useless styles—and the duplication of effort. We learned to standardize and to make a few styles do the work of many.

In other words, to get rid of competition in America.

I am going to show that that is just what he meant by those words; in just a minute I am going to show that that is what he meant when he put Hugh Johnson down here to run the N. R. A.; and I am going to show that this was not the voice of Esau and the hand of Jacob, or vice versa, but that it was the voice of Baruch and the hand of Baruch under Hoover and the voice of Baruch and the hand of Baruch under Roosevelt; and that today we have nothing under God's eternal sun but a continuation and a perfection and an accentuation and an aggravation of "Baruchism" under Hoover continuing under Roosevelt up to this date.

Secretary Hoover-

Said Mr. Baruch-

in his Department, continued this important work, and every manufacturer now knows how much more profitable it is to keep the machines running constantly on a few kinds and styles, eliminating the value of big inventories and of constantly stopping and starting the plant.

The war compelled us to keep a lot of data and statistics.

Continues Mr. Baruch:

The Secretary of Commerce-

That is Mr. Hoover-wisely continued to do this, and so exposed the public every day to a far wider fund of statistical knowledge than business men had ever had before.

Now, listen to this from Mr. Baruch:

Hoover understood statistics and he endeavored to place them before the people so that they, too, would understand.

Hoover understood statistics and he undertook to place them before the American people so that they, too, would understand-what? Understand what was going on in the way of financial flotations at that day and time. Now wait. Do not depend just on that conclusion. Turn over to page 133, where the article is continued. Here we have it; here we have why they continued these foreign flotations in America. Here we have it all. Says Mr. Baruch:

Through higher wages we gave people the opportunity to indulge their desire for better things and more of them; and then, by development of more flexible credits through installment buying, we enlarged that opportunity.

In other words, enlarged by installment buying which was carried on domestically.

Months ago-

Quoting from Baruch-

I drew up a plan on the lines of which I believed the repara-tions problem and the debt problem would ultimately be settled. The plan proposed a meeting of representatives of the Germans, the allied nations, and the United States, at which the whole question would be faced afresh. Ten years have passed * * *. We are in a much better position now to know what Germany can be allied found to prove and what is both possible and profitchly fam. really afford to pay and what is both possible and profitable, from the long point of view, in the matter of debt settlements. * * *

Early in 1929, when this was being written, the United States had already agreed to the selection of Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan as unofficial representatives to attend an international commission on the reparations problem. The best financial minds of Europe and of the United States have high hopes of some such solution as Mr. Baruch suggested.

That is thrown in by Mr. Barton. Then he continues with Mr. Baruch

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Did he say they were "the best financial minds "?

Mr. LONG. Oh, yes; they were the men to run the thing. Oh, yes; and he has kept that going.

I want to tell the Senate where I first saw Father Coughlin. He had been highly recommended to me by Mr. Roosevelt, by Mr. McIntyre, his secretary, and by Mr. Moley, as being the greatest influence in America. I had never seen Father Coughlin in my life, and had only heard him occasionally for a minute or so over the radio. One night, in my room, just a night or two before they were going to inaugurate Mr. Roosevelt President, a gentleman walked into my room and told me that his name was Coughlin. He said to me, "Have you heard that Mr. Parker Gilbert is here to advise the President, Mr. Roosevelt?" I said, "I do not know Parker Gilbert and never heard of him." "Well", he said, "Parker Gilbert is a member of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & I said, "You do not mean to tell me that they are Co." putting it out that J. P. Morgan's man has been sent over there again, do you?" He said, "That is what I hear." That was the first time I met Father Coughlin; and he walked up and down the floor a few times and said, "Go and find out." I came down here and I went into the office of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah]. I went there with some people, and in the course of the conversation I asked the Senator from Idaho if he knew a man by the name of Parker Gilbert. I think he told me he either did know him or that he had heard of him. I asked him about him, and he confirmed that he understood he was here. He did not seem to know what I was asking about particularly. went out, and I found that Mr. Gilbert was here.

I later found out there there was no misunderstanding about that matter. Baruch had recommended to Hoover both Morgan and Young-it does not make any difference which one of them you take; Young is a Democrat and Morgan is either a Republican or a Democrat; tweedledum and tweedledee; there never will be any pure politics until we wipe them both out. I do not care under what banner you put them; one is as bad as the other for the people of America. They cannot run the Democratic Party in my section of the country-not with me down there. [Laughter.]

But it was generally understood, said Mr. Baruch, according to this magazine article, that the financial minds to whom the country should be turned over lock, stock, and barrel were Baruch and his underlings and Morgan and Young. Now I continue reading from this article about Baruch:

His plan or suggestion was that the sum that Germany would pay should be definitely fixed. * * Mr. Baruch proposed that, of the amount fixed for Germany to pay, part should be represented by an issue of bonds to be secured by German railroads and industrials and to be a first charge against these properties. About $2,000,000,000 of these bonds should be marketed, and the balance of the bonds, six or eight billions, held in escrow by the Allies, to be sold as and when the international markets

If you want to know where Hoover got the German mark craze from, Mr. President, he got it from the same man Roosevelt got the N. R. A. from. If you want to know who sent Hoover to hell, it is the same man who is sending Roosevelt to hell. That is from whom he got it-Bernard M. Baruch and the lieutenants of his, like Hugh Johnson and Brown and that gang of political second-story workers and financial manipulators who were sent down here. What was the use of going out over the country and talking about Hoover's administration, if we were going to duplicate it? What was the use of making speeches that we were going to chase the money-changers out of the temple, if we were going to let the same man fill it up that had filled up Hoover's temple? I again quote from the article:

If the $2,000,000,000 or any proportion of them were sold, France, under the so-called "Spa agreement", would get so much and somebody else would get so much.

Mr. Baruch's suggestion was drawn up with the idea that, if it were carried out, trade and commerce would so increase in the world that tax burdens could be lessened everywhere.

Does this mean that everybody will be prosperous; that there will be no more bad times?

This is Mr. Barton asking Mr. Baruch the question-

Not at all. * * * You can go into any State today and find some farmers making money and other farmers, only a few miles away, having a hard struggle. You find the same situation in the retail stores on any Main Street * * *.

Think for a moment what a cheering spectacle the past century presents. In that period we have practically removed the scourge of famine from the world. * * Food rotted on the ground in one country while people were starving only a few hundred miles away. China and India, where population is dense and modern methods have made little progress, still suffer periodically from famines, but the rest of the world has abolished this specter. Agricultural machinery has made it possible to farm many acres instead of a few. * * We are within sight of the day when everybody in the world will have enough food all the time.

When we got to that day when there was enough food, then what happened?

I will not read much further from this article, but will ask to have it printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. LONG. I will, however, skip over and read the next thing that shows the idea of Baruch at that time and now. It will show why the N. R. A. did just what it has done. It will show that Baruch intended it when he started it:

Nobody can advise the "average" man on investments-

This is Baruch talking-and it is furthest from my thought to discuss the temperamental spirit of the stock markets. * * * A friend of mine was talking with an Englishman who had recently come from Canada. As they rode along in an automobile the Englishman pointed to an A. & P

Listen to this if you want to know why the N. R. A. put the little store out of business and dotted this country with A. & P. stores. I will show that you were given fair warning in June 1929 when Bernard M. Baruch was advocating it under Hoover and later on carried it out under Roosevelt:

"What's that?" he asked. "Why, it's a chain grocery store", my tend responded. "What kind of chain stores do you have in friend responded. "What kind of chain stores do you have in Canada?" "We do not have any", the Englishman replied. "That is the first one I ever saw."

My friend thought it incredible, but that night he wrote letters to three men in Canada asking them about chain stores, and from each he received the same reply.

I want Senators to remember that I am coming back in a moment to the specific promise made by Franklin Delano Roosevelt when he was a candidate for the Presidency that the hand of the clock had to be turned back the other way, that the chain store must be curbed, and that the running race, that was a losing race, for the corner grocery store had to be reversed and made more simple for the little man.

But here was Baruch in 1929:

My friend thought it incredible, but that night he wrote letters to three men in Canada asking them about chain stores and from each he received the same reply. A few months later he opened the first store in a chain which has now spread all over the

In other words, they have spread them over Canada as they have in the United States.

He has made a large fortune, but he might conceivably have made almost as much as if he had merely stayed at home and invested in the chain-store systems of this country.

In other words, he said this man went to Canada and made a fortune with chain stores in Canada, but that he might have stayed here and invested in chain stores in the United States and done about as well.

Any man who watched the early success of these great systemsmust have seen that this was the beginning of a new era of Any man who has watched the concentration of these stores into the hands of the few, any man who has watched the blight on the corner grocery stores and the blight on the neighborhood retail stores, any man who has seen his countrymen go out of the little general merchandise stores they had been running, any man must have known that that wake of pestilence, that wake of financial destruction, was the intended policy and growth of the great systems under the policy of Hoover that Baruch was inculcating into him at the time, according to Baruch.

Any man who watched the early success of these great systems must have seen that this was the beginning of a new era of distribution, and that every soundly managed enterprise in this field would be profitable.

Mr. President, I am not going to read further, but he goes on to show, in effect, that the steel mills should come in and be one, that the cotton mills should come in and be one, that all the industry should be patterned along the lines of concentrated monopoly, and that the country should be flooded with German marks and German bonds, and whatever interest the people had in any business should immediately be discontinued and their interests amalgamated in whatever big interests they might be prompted to purchase before the grand crash came in September.

Mr. President, I send to the desk this article of the learned breaker of Presidents and ask that in its entirety it may be inserted in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. LONG. Now, Mr. Johnson comes up. We go ahead and get rid of Mr. Hoover. We are supposed to get rid of Mr. Baruch. I remember when we nominated Roosevelt at Chicago word came in that Mr. Baruch had taken an airplane and left Chicago; that he and his brother had taken an airplane and left. I thought to myself, that is a wonderful sign. Mr. Baruch has quit. He has given up the ghost at last. The Democratic Party has been restored into hands different from those in which the Republican Party has been during the past 4 years.

But Mr. Baruch came down here and suggested the national economy bill, and they hung the club over the head of Congress that it had to be enacted to save the country, and Congress dutifully bowed its head and enacted the national economy bill. We have been trying to get from under the results of that act ever since. Then Mr. Johnson came down here with Mr. Baruch and opened up headquarters and he put Johnson in them before Congress ever passed the law. They had the N. R. A. organized and set up, the desks polished off, telephones put in, and numbers assigned to them on the switchboard before they ever passed the bill through Congress. Baruch knew his business. He had been running this Government before. He knew how to run one. They came down and established the N. R. A. headquarters. It has been given many names-" National Recovery Administration", "National Racketeering Association", "National Ruin Administration", and various other names, depending on how one felt about the administration of the law. None the less it was established and set up and then the law was enacted. Someone has talked about laws being passed in Louisiana. Somebody talking about it? Oh, yes! There has never been a law passed in my native State until it was passed on by the people and then passed on by the legislature, and yet they call that something that goes counter to the wishes of the people. But here was a case where the N. R. A. was established, when Mr. Johnson came down here with Mr. Baruch, or rather Mr. Baruch brought Hugh Johnson down here and said, "Now, boy, this is your part of the Government. I am putting you in here to run it until you are called out."

He ran it.

Bless your soul, yes, he ran it! How he did run the N. R. A.!

Under that N. R. A. Act they did everything Mr. Baruch said they were going to do before they did it. They performed as nobody had ever seen anyone perform before. They made rules and regulations. They prescribed rules that filled 900 books.

How many men have ever tried to play baseball or football and tried to read the rule book? In all baseball and football games we have to have half a dozen professionals sitting along the sidelines to tell us what the rules are while the game goes on. We have to send all over the country to get them because we do not have enough of them in any one State to keep the game running.

Well, Baruch and Johnson came down here and prescribed 900 sets of rules. Some of those rule books were half the thickness of the unabridged dictionary, I am told. There was rule 1, rule 2, rule 3, subsection (a), subsection (b), subdivision 1 of subsection (a), subdivision 2 of subsection (b), and so on. They provided for investigators to whom the business men had to send their reports during the morning, and for inspectors to whom they had to send their reports at dinner time, and for clerks to whom they had to send their reports at nighttime. They appointed supervisors of inspectors to check them, who could command their reports and file them. Investigators were appointed, secretaries of investigators, inspectors, secretaries of inspectors, supervisors of the secretaries of the supervisors of the inspectors, until they got the poor devils in the country all messed up in a set of 900 books of rules.

They were probably going to the penitentiary if they looked at the rule book, and probably would go to the "pen"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so | if they did not look at the rule book. They got to the point where they had to call up inspectors and investigators and clerks, where they had to employ lawyers to write letters to get a ruling on whether or not a man could open a can of salmon or sell a can of condensed milk without having this or that or something else done. Then the N. R. A. went into the field to determine how big a ham should be, how it should be packed, how it should be opened-if it ever should be opened-and how it should be trimmed after it was opened; how a can of lard had to be fixed up, and so on, until finally they woke up here, and there was not anything in the United States but these chain stores, and they had put out of business everybody who had managed to swim up to that time. And as we went through looking for the merchants who had been in existence, the factories that had been in existence, and the balance of the things that had been in existence year after year and day after day and night after night, lo and behold! there was the imprint; there was the proof.

> Mr. President, we are told that because the Egyptians would not consent to the release of the children of Israel. scourge after scourge was inflicted upon them, and, finally, the Lord said to Pharaoh, "Turn loose the children of Israel, and if you refuse I will take the first-born from every family."

> Pharaoh refused, and the Lord commanded of the Israelites that on the night designated everyone should have the blood of the lamb upon his door, that that house might not be stricken by the hand of the avenger. Lo and behold, Mr. President, when the avenging angel arrived, only those places that had the blood of the lamb on the door were excepted from having the first-born stricken by the hand of death.

> As we waded through the United States after Bernard M. Baruch had sent Hugh S. Johnson down to Washington and inaugurated the N. R. A., and laid down the rules and the regulations, and appointed the multiplied officials to guide the business men of the country, as we went through the country in the wake of the destruction and disaster and bankruptcies that were found on every hand, only the door that had the blood of Bernard M. Baruch's lamb had been spared in that scourge. Only the door that had been salvaged, only the door that contained the blessing of Bernard M. Baruch, publicly published under Hoover in June 1929, survived the scourge of Bernard M. Baruch and Hugh S. Johnson under Franklin Delano Roosevelt in 1933 and 1934 and 1935; and now they put Hugh on the radio to talk to us!

> Why, Mr. President, this remnant of Farleyism reminds me of the story of the poor nigger woman at the burial, where they were lowering her husband into the grave. She appeared for identification, and she was asked who she was, and she said, "I am the wife of these remains." [Laughter.1 Have these remains of Farleyism, has this case of bankrupted politics, of discredited management, of political suicide dropped to the incoherent state where they must call even upon one, rebuked in its own order, for a defense? Is there no one left to speak well of what now stands, other than those branded by itself as incompetent and incapable? Must it ransack and scour the whole region with a finetoothed comb and bring only the articles publicly rebuked and repudiated by it to throw the glamor of respectability on what now stands?

> Is that the sad plight of this administration? Is that the present predicament of this maligned order, at the head of which I paraded with a band and tom-tom on the day of enlightenment, when I thought the savior of humanity had at last arrived? Is that what we have driven our ducks to see? Is that the end of the perfect day?

> Sad day, Mr. President. It pains my heart, it pains my conscience, it goes back and does dishonor to every cause I ever espoused to see the malefactors themselves called upon as the only persons available to defame those who have undertaken to call back to sanity this administration.

> I am going now to do a service to my colleagues. I do not need any help to reelect me to the United States Senate. I can be elected without it. I have only one method by which I can give advice and counsel to my colleagues. It is not supposed to be exactly parliamentary to expect Senators to pay any attention to advice we give; but, none the less, that is the excuse under which one is permitted to speak here. In other words, we are supposed to be speaking in the order of advising our colleagues. I am going to give party advice. I am going to give advice to men I have met here, men I have admired, men I have loved, men for whom I have a personal affection, men for whom I have a political affection.

Only yesterday the news came to me that one of my colleagues in a neighboring State had complained bitterly, feeling that things I had said might have reacted upon the minds of some people in such a way as to have taken away some of his political support. Such was not my intention then, and it is not my intention now. I do not want them to make the mistakes that I do not make. I do not want them to fall into error and then feel that they have not been warned. There is always a word of warning. There is always, somehow, something set up, somebody interposed to give warning to any and all persons to some extent as to the dangerous grounds upon which they are about to tread.

I am told by the divine element of this country, the ministers of the gospel, that there is a word of warning somewhere sounded to every young man before he takes even his first drink. I am told that before the thief begins his first act of larceny there is some kind of a warning given to him. No man will go out of the United States Senate after this day without having had this warning sounded to him from me, however little attention is paid to it, Mr. President; none the less, with all sincerity.

There is proposed now an investigation to ransack and explore into the depths of this mismanagement and into all of these fracases that now have spelled scourge and curse to this country. Some men here believe that the spirit of fear will hold Senators back from voting for that investigation. Maybe, but I hope not. I hope there is not anyone here who even feels fear—political fear, fear that he may do something distasteful to the people, or to someone else. Some there are who, because of the spirit of fear, and some there are who, for blind partisanship, may be led to believe—I hope not—that nothing should be done about Farleyism and Baruchism and Johnsonism at this time, because Johnson was an agent serving under the order.

There was an entwined situation with Johnson and Baruch and Farley, whereby one was for all, and all were for one

I warn them now, let us not put behind us what we promised the people in 1932. Let us strike this cancer with death. Let us investigate Farleyism. Farley contends that he is an innocent lamb. Mr. President, I never have read Mark Twain's works. I am told that he wrote a book that he called "Innocents Abroad." I do not know just what he meant to imply by "Innocents Abroad"; but I see, from reading a copy of the letter which Farley sent to the United States Senate committee, that he says that in the collection of all this money from Government employees and criminals indicted by men he rewarded, with his own name at the top of the letterhead, and in his sight—with all that done, and with prosecutions he is urging against others, he was entirely innocent as to the source from which he was receiving the money.

Mr. President, I have never read Innocents Abroad, but this is a case of "innocents aboard." [Laughter.] I cannot understand how a reasonable man can think that that gentleman can sit here, within a few steps of the dome of the Capitol, with letter after letter bearing his own name at the masthead, and in many cases his own signature, carried to the employees, carried to the criminals indicted, and then plead that there is an innocent sitting there, receiving the money, and expending it as he does.

So I give warning to the party, I give warning to the Senate, I sound warning to the country: We have gone 2 years. Where do we find ourselves at the end of 2 years? We are now in the third year. We are no longer in the second year; we are in the third year. As a matter of fact, if we compute it from the date of the election, we are well into the third year. How many unemployed have we? Eleven and a half million, according to the industrial statistics, or thereabouts. How many agriculturally unemployed have we? According to the statistics of 1933, compared with the statistics of 1929, there was 54 percent less income of the agricultural people in 1933 than in 1929.

It is said that the agricultural income rose in 1934. Maybe it did; but if it did rise the billion dollars that is estimated, the income of the farming population in 1934 would still be away down below, perhaps as far as 40 to 50 percent below, the income of the same farming class in 1929.

With that kind of a showing, where is the end of the dole? Where is the end of poverty? Where is the gleam of the light that was to strike from all that stalking form of want and misery? Mr. President, nineteen and a half million people rely upon the dole today. The professional man, the doctor, the lawyer, the candlestick maker, who is not listed in the unemployed class because he never was on anybody's pay roll, stalks the streets today practically as idle as though he had been a man dismissed from the service of an industrial or agricultural employer.

Where is this to end? What better is there to come? What is held out to people to lead them to believe that relief is to be offered them?

Oh, there is one relief they were giving to the universities of the United States—as much as $15 per student—so that young men might go to the State and other universities. Those young men were subsisting on $15 a month. The universities were meeting some of the expense, so that a young man granted $15 from the Government could attend a university and educate himself.

They have announced that they are going to discontinue that, that they are going to improve the C. C. C. camps, that they are going to expand the C. C. C. camps, which cost from $35 to $50 a month per young man who will go out there in the woods and learn the magnificent work of planting saplings and fighting the mosquitoes, the red bugs, and the ticks, and nothing else. They will pay $35 to $50 a month to send a young man into a C. C. C. camp, whence he will come with experience in fighting red bugs, instead of spending $15 less per person and send more young men to the universities and give them an education.

I sound a warning. I heard my friend the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], when my friend who has departed from this body, the former Senator from Ohio, Mr. Fess, was making a speech about what would happen the next year, remark to the Senator from Arkansas: "Why should the Senator from Arkansas be concerned about what the Senator from Ohio is prophesying will occur next year? Why," he said to the Senator from Arkansas, "does not the Senator from Arkansas know that the Senator from Ohio will not be here next year?"

Mr. President, that was a true prophecy if one was ever uttered.

Now, I would sound another warning to the Senator from Arkansas, as my friend the Senator from Mississippi sounded one to him then: Beware! Beware! If things go on as they have been going on, you will not be here next year. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Demonstrations in the galleries are against the rules of the Senate; and, if persisted in, the rule will be invoked and the galleries will be cleared.

EXHIBIT A

[From the American Magazine for June 1929]
BERNARD M. BARUCH DISCUSSES THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN BUSINESS
By Bruce Barton

You have seen on the stage the office of a big Wall Street financier. The scene rocks with the clatter of tickers, the ringing of telephones, the crush and cries of brokers and telephone boys. Well, Bernard Baruch has been as active as any dramatist could wish and still undertakes major financial and industrial operations, but his office resembles this stage version in just about tions, but his office resembles this stage version in just about the same way that a pastor's study resembles a railroad station.

A sunny private room. No ticker. A telephone, but it seldom rings. Thick rugs on the floor; a few fine paintings on the walls. A mahogany desk unencumbered by papers. Behind the desk a tall man, distinguished by supple grace and good looks, with pleasant eyes and a mouth that breaks easily into a smile; silvergray hair and a strong nose—the sort of nose that Napoleon used to look for in his generals. The man, who is 58, looks as if he has the blood pressure of a boy of 25, and he seems to have nothing whatever to do. This is Baruch.

ing whatever to do. This is Baruch.

We went out to luncheon one day. The first part of our conversation related to the war. It is a painful confession, but true, that I am always behind with my wars. The Civil War still absorbed me when the World War came along, and only now, after 10 years of peace, when the real inside stories are beginning to come out, have I begun to transfer my interest to this latest and biggest conflict. Baruch knows as many of these inside stories as any man in America. As chairman of the War Industries Board, he sat at Woodrow Wilson's right hand and marshaled the industries of the Nation. The presidents of companies who had been violent competitors met around his table. Sometimes they entered cheerfully into his plan for pooling their output; sometimes they protested. Eventually, guided by Baruch's patience and tact and good humor, they learned a lesson in cooperation which has repaid them many times over for any sacrifice the war demanded. That cooperation within the ranks of industries is one of the present factors in our prosperity.

I asked Baruch to mention some of the other factors, and he began by remarking that when men try to judge the present, or began by remarking that when men try to judge the present, or to forecast the future, by using the yardsticks of the past, they show no comprehension of the tremendous changes which were beginning even before the war broke out and which were accelerated by it.

"Let us look back for a minute before we try to look forward", he said. "The first important change was the Federal Reserve Act, which gave us coordinated control of our financial resources and he said. "The first important change was the Federal Reserve Act, which gave us coordinated control of our financial resources and made credit the servant of business instead of its master. The second was the Adamson Act, which made the 8-hour day permanent in the railroads. It was resisted by many leaders, who believed that it meant higher prices for everything and consequent hardship to the consuming public, but its influence has been altogether different. The shorter day and the increased wage, which were enacted as a matter of social justice, have come now to be recognized by almost everybody as essential elements in prosperous business. In the old days it was assumed that you must keep wages low and hours long in order to operate effectively. We know now that low wages mean low purchasing power, and that only in proportion as men and women have money to spend and hours in which to enjoy the fruits of their expenditure can our productive capacity be kept fully employed.

"Let us trace the business influence of the war a little further", he continued. "The Liberty Loan campaigns taught the people to save and invest, first in Liberty bonds, then in municipal and railroad bonds, and then in securities of the corporations which represent the work and genius of the American people. Instead of fighting the big corporations, the people now own them and enjoy the fruits of their growth. The War Industries Board established a new cooperative relationship between government and business which Mr. Hoover, as Secretary of Commerce, continued in peace times with results that are beyond measure. During the war we established committees of the various industries, and when prices were fixed, rules were also fixed for distribution, and these rules influenced the scale of wages and working conditions. This helped to lift the standard of all wages, which the manufacturer later found was a fine thing, though he fought it strenuously at first.

"Another thing the American business man found during the

was a fine thing, though he fought it strenuously at first.

"Another thing the American business man found during the war—that he could do things he never thought he could do, and war—that he could do things he never thought he could do, and make things that he used to think only the Englishman or the German or the Frenchman could make for him. He made dyes, for example. He made all sorts of articles that had previously been made abroad, and found substitutes for many others. These activities continued after the peace, because we had the money to continue them with and the equipment, as well as labor of unusual intelligence.

intelligence.

intelligence.

"Quantity production had its real birth in the war, not only because things had to be made quickly, but also because of the necessity for eliminating all useless styles and the duplication of efforts. We learned to standardize and to make a few styles do the work of many. Secretary Hoover, in his Department, continued this important work, and every manufacturer now knows how much more profitable it is to keep the machines running constantly on a few kinds and styles, eliminating the waste of big inventories and of constantly stopping and starting the plant.

"The war compelled us to keep a lot of data and statistics. The Secretary of Commerce wisely continued to do this, and so exposed the public every day to a far wider fund of statistical knowledge than business men had ever had before. Hoover understood statistics and he endeavored to place them before the people so that they, too, would understand.

stood statistics and he endeavored to place them before the people so that they, too, would understand.

"So we came out of the war having vastly expanded our productive capacity and self-confidence. We came out a creditor Nation, which might possibly have happened in 25 years of peace, but was actually accomplished in 3 or 4 years of war. As such a creditor Nation we were in a position to lend money all over the world and get foreign trade in return. We came out with a unified banking system, the best security against those alternating periods of inflation and stringency which had made our business history a series of feasts and famines. Finally, we came out with business men who knew a great deal more than they ever did before about how to get the facts and interpret them, and who were believers in a popular high standard of living and of wages."

"You mentioned that before." I suggested.

"I know that, but it looms larger in my mind than anything else. For the first time, every banker and manufacturer realized LXXIX——186 that the more money people have, the more things they can buy; that the desire for more things and better things is the mainspring of production. Through higher wages, we gave people the opportunity to indulge their desire for better things and more of them, and then, by development of more flexible credits through installment buying, we enlarged that opportunity. The basis of our prosperity is our own domestic market, which we have vastly enlarged by this simple process of increasing the power to consume. And don't think for a minute that this new spirit of wanting more things and being willing to work for them is confined to the United States. Individuals all over the world are potential consumers to the physical capacity of individuals here. All they lack is equal financial capacity, and that is not beyond their possibilities."

I pressed Baruch on this point.

"Months ago," he said, "I drew up a plan on the lines of which I believed the reparations problem and the debt problem would ultimately be settled. The plan proposed a meeting of representatives of the Germans, the allied nations, and the United States, at which the whole question would be faced afresh. Ten years have passed since the peace conference and 4 years since the Dawes plan went into effect. We are in a much better position now to know what Germany can really afford to pay and what is both possible and profitable, from the long point of view, in the matter of debt settlements.

"The settlement of the debt and reparations problems would bring such a revival of industry in the whole world, and the demand for things would be so great, that it would result in what, for want of a better term, we might call 'an industrial renaissance.' These two questions have been like dragging anchors to the great ship of international commerce, which has been slowly gaining headway and is only approaching moderate speed in this country. If the reparations question is settled by fixing Germany's indebtedness definitely at a sum that she can pay and is willing to

At this point it is only fair to Mr. Baruch to point out that he outlined his plan for settlement of the reparations question 3 years ago. I had talked to him about it early in the spring of 1928. Early in 1929, when this was being written, the United States has already agreed to the selection of Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan as unofficial representatives to attend an international commission on the reparations problem. The best financial minds of Europe and of the United States have high hopes of some such solution as Mr. Baruch suggested.

His plan or suggested.

His plan, or suggestion, was that the sum that Germany would His plan, or suggestion, was that the sum that Germany would pay should be definitely fixed in amount and should be a sum that Germany can pay and would try to pay. Under the Dawes plan the railroads were obligated, and certain first charges were made against the industries of Germany. Mr. Baruch proposed that of the amount fixed for Germany to pay, part should be represented by an issue of bonds to be secured by German railroads and industrials and to be a first charge against these properties. About $2,000,000,000 of these bonds should be marketed, and the balance of the bonds, six or eight billions, held in escrow by the Allies to be sold as and when the international markets would absorb them.

sold as and when the international markets would absorb them. If the two billions, or any proportion of them, were sold, France, under the so-called "Spa agreement", would get 52 percent and the other countries their proportionate share, as determined by the same agreement. If France were thus to get 52 percent of the two billion, she would have $1,000,000,000 in cash for any purpose for which she determined to use it. Mr. Baruch's main idea was that with such an amount France could negotiate a cash settlement for her debt to America, and when further bonds were sold she and England could make further cash settlements with us and still have a credit to their accounts in the balance of the bonds.

The bonds would be a first charge on all Germany as they

The bonds would be a first charge on all Germany, as they would be secured by her railroads and industrials, as outlined above, and be issued in all the gold currencies of the world—dollars, francs, pounds, lire, and marks. The citizens of the world would buy them, because they would be the best bonds ever issued intermediately.

Mr. Baruch's suggestion was drawn up with the idea that if it Mr. Baruch's suggestion was drawn up with the idea that if it were carried out, trade and commerce would so increase in the world that tax burdens could be lessened everywhere. If the United States were paid in cash, she could retire Liberty bonds, reducing the yearly interest on her obligations, and give an opportunity for the reduction of taxes or the use of that money for some other purpose. When I asked him to discuss this plan in detail, he declined to do so because, he said, the matter was now definitely in the hands of the Reparations Commission. But he added, "I am not in the least averse to forecasting the results of such a settlement. I believe that trade and commerce all over the world would be immensely benefited and interest rates would lessen, because the demand for gold by the great central banks, which no longer would be dominated by fear, would lessen materially.

"Something of that sort," he added, "I am confident is going to be worked out. And when it has been worked out, I believe we shall enter upon a new period of world-wide production and distribution, which future historians may call the 'industrial renaissance.'"

I asked him what he meant by the term "industrial renaissance."
"That's a new phrase to me," I said.
"Maybe it isn't properly descriptive, but I'll tell you what it means to me.

"Maybe it isn't properly descriptive, but I'll tell you what it means to me.

"I have already said that the desire for more and better things—for a higher standard of living—is the real beginning of increased business. Until people are conscious of the want for an article there can be no real market for that article. People saw the automobile and wanted it immediately. About the same time increased wages and credit facilities made it possible for them to have it. That began the fabulous development of the automobile industry. People see airplanes, and when enough of them really want airplanes—are 'air conscious' as they say—then the airplane industry will be a prodigious industry.

"Now, this process of wanting is already spreading all over the world. The spirit of tearing down the old and building something new and better which you see on every hand in this country has spilled over into every other country. Everywhere in our own land are new roads, new bridges, new subways, new terminals. Everywhere the burden of toil is being lifted off the shoulders of men by machinery and lightened in the home by electricity. The movie and the radio and the airplane are carrying the picture of our new standard of living into every corner of the globe, and wherever the picture is carried there is created desire.

"Before the war there were hundreds of millions of people who wherever the picture is carried there is created desire.

"Before the war there were hundreds of millions of people who had too little hope and too much fear to desire anything. They were born to live and die within the same narrow limits as their fathers before them. If the father had been a peasant, the son must be a peasant; if the father had been a peasant, the son must be a peasant; if the father had been a porter, the son could expect nothing better. Everything was fixed, curbed, static. Then came the war, tumbling over thrones, destroying feudal privileges, and wiping out feudal fortunes. The process went too far, of course, as in Russia, where the people experienced a rush of liberty to the head and attempted to beat economic laws that are as fixed and unbeatable as the law of gravitation. But the great effect of the war, aside from its suffering and destruction of wealth, was in jarring dead brain cells into life, throwing people out of ruts, striking down barriers and chains, and giving hundreds of millions of people the right to look forward, to hope and to have.

dreds of millions of people the right to look forward, to hope and to have.

"When all that wanting and hoping begins to find expression through increased productivity, millions of families will begin to apply in some degree the American formula of 'work and have more.' There will follow, in my judgment, such an expansion of production, such a work of rebuilding, such an interchange of goods through foreign trade as we have never experienced before. For the first time in history we have sound reason to hope for a long period of peace. For the first time the business men of all nations are supplied with statistical information, together with some understanding of the laws of economics. For the first time we have sound centralized banking systems in all the countries and close cooperation between these systems internationally. Because all these factors are favorable, and because of the universal stirring of desire and ambition, to which I have already referred, I believe in the 'industrial renaissance.' We are already seeing something of it in the United States."

in the 'industrial renaissance.' We are already seeing something of it in the United States."

"Does this mean that everybody will be prosperous, that there will be no more 'bad times'?" I asked.

"Not at all. There will always be inequalities in human intelligence and industry. You can go into any State today and find some farmers making money and other farmers, only a few miles away, having a hard struggle. You can find the same situation in retail stores on any Main Street. You can look into any big business and see two men who started as boys together and are now far apart. We shall never have any social set-up that can insure equal prosperity for everybody. But we are beginning to conquer some of the obstacles which have unfairly handicapped humanity in general in the past.

"Think for a moment what a cheering spectacle the past cengeneral in the past.

"Think for a moment what a cheering spectacle the past century presents. In that period we have practically removed the scourge of famine from the world. Only a century ago it was considered inevitable that some portion of the race should be afflicted with famine almost every year. Food rotted on the ground in one country while people were starving only a few hundred miles away. China and India, where population is dense and modern methods have made little progress, still suffer periodically from famines, but the rest of the world has abolished this specter. Agricultural machinery has made it possible to farm many acres instead of a few; transportation, cold storage, and other scientific devices enable one section of the world to exchange its produce with other sections that are thousands of miles away. We are within sight of the day when everybody in the world will have enough food all the time.

"Similarly, we are making great progress in the conquest of disease. Smallpox, typhoid, diphtheria, yellow fever, and diabetes have been, if not conquered, at least greatly diminished through the magnificent work and sacrifice of scientists.

"Today, with the motor, the radio, and improved sea, land, and air travel, and with television almost upon us, who shall be alone, what place isolated, who be separated from the comforts and solace of his fellow man?

"Our generation has seen the first halting steps toward the abolition of war, and more good influences are at work in this direction than ever before.

"One foe we have made little progress against until very re-cently, namely, the panics and depressions in business which from time to time have shut down industries and brought fear and dis-time to time have shut down industries and brought fear and distress to millions of homes.

"The point to be emphasized is that we now have certain safe-guards which never existed before: The Federal Reserve bank; the better understanding and use of statistics by the nations, by banks and industries, and by individuals; the coordination of the financial systems of all the leading nations; and the great increase of human wants and ambitions throughout the world which, with occasional and temporary set-backs, ought to provide a huge volume of business for many years to come."

and temporary set-backs, ought to provide a huge volume of business for many years to come."

"Assuming that all this is true", I asked, "how should the average man proceed in forecasting his own life for the next few years? What plans can he make for his individual investments?"

"Nobody can advise the 'average' man on investments, and it is furthest from my thought to discuss the temperamental spirit of the stock markets. There are certain principles, but the application of these principles rests with the individual in the infinite variety of his circumstance. The average man keeps his eyes not more than half open. He does not train himself to see what is going on around him. He hopes that some day somebody will happen along and give him an inside tip or some advance information that will make his fortune overnight. As a matter of fact, the best tips of all are written so large and plain that anybody with imagination can read and profit by them.

"You asked me as we sat down how I happened to be interested in radio. Who could fail to be interested in it? Who, with any imagination at all, could experience the miracle of a concert in his own home and not realize that this is a new force which is bound to give rise to great industries?

own nome and not realize that this is a new force which is bound to give rise to great industries?

"A friend of mine was talking with an Englishman who had recently come from Canada. As they rode along in an automobile, the Englishman pointed to an A. & P. store. 'What's that?' he

"'Why, it's a chain grocery store,' my friend responded. 'What kind of chain stores do you have in Canada?'
"'We do not have any,' the Englishman replied. 'That is the first one I ever saw.

"My friend thought it incredible, but that night he wrote letters to three men in Canada asking them about chain stores, and from each he received the same reply. A few months later he opened the first store in a chain which has now spread all over the Dominion. He has made a large fortune, but he might conceivably have made almost as much if he had merely stayed at home and invested in the chain-store systems of this country. Any man who watched the early success of these great systems must have seen that this was the beginning of a new era of distribution, and that every soundly managed enterprise in this field would be profitable.

"When Alexander Graham Bell at one end of a wire called into his crude instrument, 'Watson, come here; I want you', and Watson came, it was the beginning of fortunes for all who had the vision to look ahead. When Lindbergh fiew the Atlantic, it opened a new day look ahead. When Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, it opened a new day of interest and progress for the aviation companies. When the first crude motion pictures flickered across the screen, it signaled opportunity to another group of people. The great chances do not come

"Quite as important as inventions or industries are men to manage and be responsible for them. It is better to back a strong, able man than take a chance on the most alluring prospect where the management is untried.

"One of my associates in the War Industries Board was a big-One of my associates in the war industries Board was a big-boned, two-fisted man from Chicago named Alex Legge. Somebody rightly called him 'the Abraham Lincoln of industry.' He was at that time general manager of the International Harvester Co. The way he handled things gave his associates great respect for his ability, and when the war was over many of them said to them-selves, 'Let's just follow Alex.' So they bought International Har-vester stock, to their great gain. So anyone could have done in a score of similar instances.

vester stock, to their great gain. So anyone could have done in a score of similar instances.

"The records of business leaders are no secret. Every man, even in the smallest town, is in a position to know something of the life stories and achievements of the men who are directing the important industries. If he does not know, his local banker does. Charles M. Schwab once remarked that he made it a rule to do business only with lucky men, by which he meant with men who had demonstrated their capacity in a series of situations. It is a good rule. If you follow, in your investments, the men who have succeeded, you are likely also to succeed, assuming always, of course, that the industries with which they are engaged satisfy fundamental human needs.

of course, that the industries with which they are engaged satisfy fundamental human needs.

"I do not mean to say that a man can make his investment in any enterprise, however good and ably managed, and then go to sleep. Business is never static; it is forever moving, forever subject to the fluctuating influences of scientific discovery and consumer demand. These changes, which seem sometimes to come very suddenly, are not usually so sudden. They cast their shadows before them, and he who keeps his eyes open may see and be warned in time.

"If you pick the 10 leading industries in the United States, excluding for the moment the railroads, which operate only at home, you will find that every one of them is set up to do business all over the world and that their foreign business has extended rapidly in the past few years. You will find that every one of them maintains scientific research on a broad scale, which is insurance that it will not be left behind by scientific progress, and them maintains scientific research on a broad scale, which is insurance that it will not be left behind by scientific progress, and will have the benefit of whatever new processes and products such research may develop. You will find that every one of them is headed by men of demonstrated success, who have surrounded themselves with capable assistants, trained to carry on.

"There is no mystery in these criteria of probable industrial progress. Economic and industrial news is available to everybody everywhere. The conclusions to be derived from it are simply applications of common sense. In broad and general terms progress is on the march. The economic condition of the world seems on the verge of a great forward movement. As to particular companies, and even as to particular industries, some are in phases of ascendancy, some few are retrograding. The wise investor will seek the former and avoid the latter. Having satisfied himself that he is in a fruitful field, he will seek to learn something about the companies he favors—the field of their particular endeavor, the men who are responsible for them, the policy of their operations. In the long run he cannot go far wrong if he relies on progress—not already too far anticipated—if he relies on what I have called 'the industrial renaissance.' As an old friend used to say to me as a youngster. 'How many bears do you know with residences on Fifth Avenue?' I can recall none.

"Of course, there is no royal road. Bob Fitzsimmons used to say that to be a champion a man must learn to take as well as give.

that to be a champion a man must learn to take as well as give. This has always been in my thoughts when I have seen men under the punishment of life, and I may add that I know no champions anywhere who have not had their experience in taking it.

"There will, of course, be temporary set-backs due to causes perhaps more or less avoidable. Finance will be a limiting factor until that subject is better understood and worked out, but I am not speaking in terms of weeks or months when I say I think the great economic surge is forward.

"Also, in a large politico-economic unit such as the United States, the powers of government are so vast that if they be unwisely applied, they can hamper or even destroy a natural period of prosperity wisely applied, they can hamper or even destroy a natural period of prosperity.

"Mr. Hoover clearly pointed out in his campaign speeches that we have pushed efficiency in machine production to a point where, in order to keep our people gainfully employed, we must continue to produce in ever-increasing amount an industrial surplus beyond the capacity of our domestic market to absorb. In other words, our industrial prosperity depends on a rapidly expanding export trade. Industry is fast approaching the dependence on export markets that has given agriculture such distress. I cannot avoid some apprehension over the recent demands in Washington for tariffs amounting to embargoes on the importation of everything. Tariff protection is a complicated and highly technical subject. This much is clear. A prohibitive tariff would inevitably force our best customers into defensive tariff agreements. For example, I cannot conceive of the Argentine and Canada taking no steps to retaliate on any attempt to exclude their exports to us. They would raise walls against us, and the hands of our progress in would raise walls against us, and the hands of our progress in those fields could be set back years in a week. Similarly for all American Republics and France, England, and Germany. They American Republics and France, England, and Germany. They would create mutual relations among themselves to the restriction of our export market, and we could not fail to suffer loss.

"Such a result I do not fear because I know Mr. Hoover to be too sound in his economics and too keenly aware of our necessity in this regard to permit such a thing, despite the clamoring with which he is already assailed. He will use the protective principles to preserve the markets which are rightly ours and, I trust, to relieve agriculture in that very limited field where protection will be of benefit."

be of benefit."

"Yes," I said, "you have just said that the ability to take punishment is one of the essentials."

"The really essential attributes may sound trite", Mr. Baruch replied, "but, to my way of thinking, they are courage, integrity, and application. When a man has made up his mind to believe in the country and its industries, and to go forward with them, he must be willing to take the temporary set-backs along with the progress. He must keep his faith firm and not let any little thing unsettle his decision. As for integrity, what can any man add to what has already been said?"

Baruch was thoughtfully regarding a picture of his father Dr.

what has already been said?"

Baruch was thoughtfully regarding a picture of his father, Dr. Simon Baruch, the distinguished surgeon and scientist, whose services and research have left a permanent impress on medical knowledge and practice. The photograph was inscribed to his son, with the words, "Let unswerving integrity always be your guide."

I looked at the picture and put it back on the desk.

It has been said that there is no sentiment in business. Some day I shall write a piece about fathers and mothers—the fathers and mothers of these well-known men in Wall Street. But, as Mr. Kinling would say, that will be another story.

Kipling would say, that will be another story

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, in view of the extensive references by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] to the speech delivered last night in New York by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, I ask unanimous consent that, as a matter of common fairness, the text of General Johnson's speech be inserted in the RECORD at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> [From the New York Times, Mar. 5, 1935] TEXT OF GENERAL JOHNSON'S SPEECH

This is March 4. Two years ago this morning, in a national gloom surely as deep as that of the days when Washington stood in the snow at Valley Forge or Lee marched over the mountain wall toward Gettysburg, Franklin Roosevelt knelt at an altar and prayed. Then he went to the Capitol and registered the vow in heaven that placed upon his back as heavy a freight of human hopes as ever was borne by any man. Our trust was in him so completely that the general prayer was: "Provide him with all power that he may save us." Today, shadows have fallen thwart that faith—and it is my purpose here—with what force God has given me—to smash at two of them.

The chaos of that hour has been too often fold. Banks, holding

The chaos of that hour has been too often told. Banks, holding the savings of the entire country, tottered. The head of the United States Chamber of Commerce was urging that the Presiconted States Chamber of Commerce was urging that the President be made industrial dictator, and the very captains of big business were asking Washington to save them.

Agriculture—bled white by years of disaster—was praying for a miracle. Force, as the only means of escape, was being used to resist foreclosure of tens of thousands of farms and homes. Labor was helpless—its organization prostrate and vanishing—its wages drying up and its hours extended.

No one will ever know the full spread of unemployment at that moment. Nor will anyone ever know how close were we to collapse and revolution. We could have had a dictator a lot easier than Germany got Hitler and we would have had one but for the President himself, to whom the whole idea was hateful.

HOLDS DEMOCRACY FAILS IN ANY GREAT CRISIS

A democracy is the best government in the world for peace and prosperity, but it is the worst government in the world for a great war or a great crisis—that is the reason for six dictators in Europe. But there is one single exception—the phenomenal habit of the American people, at any sacrifice, to give a constitutional President extraordinary powers and to stick together with him at the hours of extreme peril. In the worst armed crisis in the world, Woodrow Wilson proved that, acting together under the Constitution, our people could wage modern war better than the most absolute military autocracy in Europe.

In the worst business crisis in the world, Franklin Roosevelt proved that they could thus fight depression better than any dictator under the sun. Wilson expressed the rule, "The highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous cooperation of a dictator under the sun. Wilson expressed the rule, "The highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous cooperation of a free people." In 1933 we had that cooperation, just as in 1917 and 1918 we had it. In 1935 we have it not. The lack of it, in the dark threat that still hangs over this country, is the greatest menace of our immediate future. The men who have sought with some success to break it up may have more to answer to the country for than they at this moment dream.

Sustained and supported by a united people, the President moved to his terrible task with greater speed than has ever been shown by any government. He cleared up the banking ruin. He took steps that have raised agriculture to within a few percent of its relative pre-war position—almost a miracle. He brushed the cloud of foreclosure and loss from tens of thousands of threatened farms and homes. He took the first effective steps to abolish child peonage and to run sweat shops out of existence.

Tells Of AID TO LABOR AND SMALL BUSINESSES

TELLS OF AID TO LABOR AND SMALL BUSINESSES

Tells of all to labor and small businesses

He raised all wages, shortened all weekly hours from an average 52 to an average 40—think of it! He established the principle of collective bargaining on a national front, and he did more for labor in this country in 1 year than all the strife and strikes and all the laws and political parties from the very adoption of the Constitution to this day. He took comfortable care of millions of the destitute and warded off the danger to our country of the continued presence of vast unemployment. He opened the way for industry to freedom from old abuses, cut-throat competition, and monopolistic price-slashing. He actually saved tens of thousands of little fellows in business from the economic slaughter by chains and monopoly that had been going on for 10 years past.

He lifted the country at least a third of the way out of a depression caused by many years of economic and political folly. It was so great a performance of leadership and courage done in so short time that you cannot find a parallel in history by which to gage and measure it. It was part of a general long-pull plan, and these astonishing results were a sufficient proof of that plan to justify the faith of any man that, given even a reasonable time to work it out and to correct errors, there was no reason to expect failure. Any fool knows that you cannot clear the wreckage of 12 years' madness in 2 years' time. But the push is gone. The drive is stopped. Many of these benefits have faded. The plan seems to be in the gravest danger of frustration.

APPEALS FOR RESTORATION OF SPIRIT OF COOPERATION

The reason for this is not hard to find. The "spontaneous co-operation of a free people"—without which any democracy at a time like this is in danger of either a licking or a dictator—is gone. It has been broken up into selfish warring groups by the deliberate design of business and political guerillas. If we can't restore some-thing of the solidarity and enthusiasm of 1933 among our whole people, and do it quickly, we are in for trouble of the most serious sort, for if a choas of inflation and worse follows a frustration of these plans nothing we can hope to do will keep a dictator out of Washington and that chaos is imminently threatened.

Let me give you an example. In July 1933 the President appealed to industry for the Blue Eagle. Within 3 months 96 percent of affected industry had hoisted that bird and, as revealed by an actual census in October 1933, they had created 2,785,000 jobs. I have heard that questioned, but you can't question that actual count. Think of it! Three months—96 percent of industry—nearly 3,000,000 jobs! Why, the thing was a marvel! It restored hope; it proved for the first time in 4 years of unrelieved disappointment and failure that depression is not unbeatable, that something can be done about it. It changed the outlook of a nation.

nation.

That is more than double the number of jobs that have been made by all the billions we have spent and all the agencies of government, industry, and commerce put together from that day to this, and it never took a cent in taxes or put any freckle-necked American on a dole. My greatest glory is the recent taunt about the man that made 3,000,000 jobs and lost his own. It was possible only because it was done on a plan for everybody to act together, at the same time, in one concerted pull in which every person in this country had some part—and there was hardly a single slacker in this first big effort.

this country had some part—and there was hardly a single slacker in this first big effort.

Why, this country can do anything if it has the will. Like Andy Jackson, it can go to heaven—if it wants to. It was the greatest demonstration of the spontaneous cooperation of a free people that we have ever had. It could not have happened in any other country at any other time or under any other leader than the President.

country at any other time or under any other leader than the President.

I think most of that good had been undone—many of those jobs lost—and my point in mentioning it at all at this time is this: It could not be done today! It could not even be started. Nothing could be more eloquent of the almost complete destruction of the solidarity in which our people started to pull itself out of this hole. It has been said that these extraordinary measures were not authorized by the people in the 1932 elections. What utter rot! Why, after they were all clearly shown, the people at the 1934 elections gave the President and what he had done one of the most overwhelming approvals they have ever uttered. Men of both parties who otherwise had not a Chinaman's chance went into this Congress because they pledged to support those plans. They rode in on the horizontal coat tails of a speeding Chief.

Some of these very men are already recorded in opposition. The country gave the President the ball on this play, but we already see a lot of halfoacks on his own side trying to take it and run the other way with it. We cannot get out of our trouble that way. When they do that successfully they will take the full responsibility for certain failure, not only because they will have spoiled one unified plan that was working but because they will have substituted a mess of contradictory and confusing nightmares of their own.

"FCONOMIC WIRLEYERS" SURPLING AT PRESURENT.

"ECONOMIC KIBITZERS" SNIPING AT PRESIDENT

In our representative government changes like that do not occur without some ferment back home. Something has happened since the last election. Some of our economic kihitzers and political pansies, who have been sniping at the President's plans since the beginning, say that things have been getting so much better, that our free people do not feel the need of any more spontaneous cooperation, and yearn for their rugged individualism back again. That is a bunch of bunk! A very few big corporations, who ought to know better at a time like this, have been making large profits, but the unemployment and relief rolls remain at the same hopeless levels left after the great upward surge making large profits, but the unemployment and relief rolls remain at the same hopeless levels left after the great upward surge of 1933. But that is the very thing which made the old ruggedness so hateful to our people. The ferment back home is not the leaven of a rising loaf—it is the bubbling of a sour mash. Party labels don't mean very much in this country any more. We used to talk about two parties and a lunatic fringe. Just now I think there are three groups—rather than parties—and that now two of them are lunatic fringes.

The first fringe is the Old Guard itself and its hereditary follow-The first fringe is the Old Guard itself and its hereditary following. They are what they are because yesterday they were—and their fathers before them—and for no better reason. They learn nothing and they forget nothing. They believe that property and profits come first, and that if you take care of them the humanities will take care of themselves. They think that the way to do that is to keep the Government in a cast-iron mold—and finally that the benefits of this country cannot be entrusted to popular control but must all trickle down to the grass roots through a sieve made up of small groupings of the wise, the good, and the beneficent—old stuff, very old stuff, the mere recital of which, in this troubled modern day, is a challenge to revolt.

The second fringe is the residue. They have a motions rether

The second fringe is the residue. They have emotions rather an beliefs. They are like a harp-of-the-winds upon which any than beliefs. They are like a harp-of-the-winds upon which any breeze can play a tune, and they do not care a hoot about the essence or form of any government that blocks their desires or restricts their impulses. Here is smoking flax which any wind can fan to flame if it is strong enough and blows from the right direction. "Liberty", said Lenin, "is a capitalistic dream." Mussolini adds, "Fascism has no idois. It has trodden over the putrescent corpse of the goddess of liberty and it will do it again." And my good friend Henry Wallace says, "Liberty must go into eclipse in times of depression."

Between these fringes, there is the group that grew out of this

Between these fringes, there is the group that grew out of this depression, of which Franklin Roosevelt is the leader. It believes that this Government is good, but that, in a crisis, it ought to mold itself to changing conditions—that property and the profit system must be preserved but that the humanities come first and should be taken care of by direct action—and finally, that this country and the fullness thereof belongs in fee simple to the people of the United States and not merely in trust for them through some political or business group or steering committee.

In a gusty world where old political systems fall like autumn leaves, I think the compromise and flexibility of this middle group is our only safety. I think the Old Guard has become a lunatic fringe because, having so plainly dosed the country into this misery, the stark crass stupidity, of standing and offering nothing more than the same old poison to millions—still destitute from the first dose—is an actual incitation to revolution if there arose the slightest danger of their return to power—and I think there is the first dose—is an actual incitation to revolution if there arose the slightest danger of their return to power—and I think there is the slightest danger. I have a letter recting a recent gleeful dinner of six such Senators who were happy over their own assertion: "The next election is in the bag—all we have to do is to sit still and laugh—Husy Long and Father Coughlin are going to give it to us." From their standpoint that is good horse sense. It pits both ends against the middle, but it is no laughing matter. For, if there is such a thing as playing volley ball with dynamite bombs—this is the prize example. the prize example.

80,000,000 IN NATION IN ABUSED BABY CLASS

HUEY LONG and Father Coughlin are rapidly appearing as leaders of the second—the emotional—fringe. The danger from that group is that any desperate person is a potential candidate to join it. If you box your boy's ears he will pout and, if occasion offers, run away from home with any enticing bum who comes along. He is an abused baby. Counting busted business men, the unemployed, large segments of farmers not yet helped, and the dependents of all these, there are about 80,000,000 abused babies in this country—their ears still tingling from the worst economic boxing in history. They are ready to strike back at disaster in any way that is shown to them. The new deal offered them something to support and trust. Neither in 1932 or 1934 was there anybody else in the field with any opposition or anything like a concrete plan, and they had the comfort of believing that the whole country and most of the Congress was behind this plan.

They have not that comfort now. After 2 years of timid

They have not that comfort now. After 2 years of timid silence, the Old Guard has at last screwed up its courage to raise a voice from the tomb to send the shivers down their spines by beckoning to opposition and frustration of all that has been done for them. In Congress the despairing legions of reaction unfurl the old banners and, on the side lines, the savage orchestra of columnist and editorial kibitzers pound the tom-toms, burn the red fire, and shriek with demoniacal glee at every defection.

defection.

Now the thing that makes this possible is not a popular demand for a return to reaction. It is the exact reverse of that, and it has happened since last November. Two pied pipers have come to Hamelin Town—and you will recall what the pied piper was—a magician who, by tooting on a penny whistle, could step into the leadership of rats—or charm innocent children from the safety of their homes. But our two pipers are not concerned about rats. They are piping out of the city gates with more and more abused babies at their heels.

You can laugh at Father Coughlin, you can snort at Huey Long, but this country was never under a greater menace than from but this country was never under a greater menace than from but this country was never under a greater menace than from the break-up of spontaneous popular cooperation being engineered by the combination of this dangerous demagogy with the direct assault of the old social Neanderthalers—the architects of the 1929 boom or bust—and of our 5 black years of bitter bondage to despair. Peaceful recovery is being threatened with a grinding between the upper and the nether millstones of extreme group selfishness

At this point I want to make it very clear that I am speaking for myself alone—a gratuitous volunteer. Nobody in the administration has been consulted about this speech, although I have advised on the project of making it with my best and wisest friends outside of government—"new dealers", "old dealers", and Coughlinites. It may interest you to know that, without one single exception, they advised against it. "If you want to hang yourself, go to it." Nothing did more to convince me that this speech had to be made. If demogogy has reached the point where a man may risk his public standing by attacking it, it is time for somebody to get up on his hind legs and howl. At this point I want to make it very clear that I am speaking get up on his hind legs and howl.

It does less than no good at all for an "old dealer" to howl. It is the greatest aid and comfort that could be given to the pied pipers. They can, and do, reply with perfect justice: "Nothing we could counsel this distressed people could do half the harm to them that your advice and leadership has already done."

No echo out of Wall Street, no radio program subsidized by big business, no slinging of the old stuff, is anything more than an affront to the people who suffer in this country. That stuff is like the cheese with which a little boy tried to feed a mouse imprisoned in a cheese-baited trap; that mouse didn't want any more cheese. That kind of answer to the pied pipers does as much to drive public opinion in their direction as their own piping does to persuade it. does to persuade it.

I am well aware of what the pipers will say about me—that I am either drunk or crazy; that I once worked in New York myself and am a tool of the interests. Nerts to that! I never made a more deliberate speech. That I have rich friends is a fact. I also have poor friends. I am poor myself. But it just happens that I don't owe anybody anything; that I never got anything from anybody without paying for it; that I am on my own; and that I can rest on my record for saying just what I think whenever I feel that it ought to be said and for taking all that's coming to me for Saying it. And this time it will be plenty.

You don't see much in the newspapers about the pied pipers.

The greatest force of this ilk is the radio, through which they can The greatest force of this lik is the radio, through which they can pollute our great popular pool of justified resentment. For want of work it sits idly before its receiving sets while there is pumped into it daily two ingredients—red pepper for its raw emotions and, for its hope, enticing promises of a money miracle, manna in this wilderness of despair—like the coriander seed, white, and the taste of it like wafers made with honey, of which he that gathereth much shall have nothing over, and he that gathereth little shall have no lack. That was said by Moses of a miracle performed in the desert of Sinai thousands of years ago; but it is the shortest, clearest statement of the money magic proffered by the pipers—he that gathereth much shall have nothing over, and he that gathereth little shall have no lack.

PLANS FOR ENDING POVERTY CALLED CRUEL DELUSIONS

PLANS FOR ENDING POVERTY CALLED CRUEL DELUSIONS

Promise and performance possible only to the Lord God Almighty! To abolish poverty—oh, where have we heard that before? Easy magic offered by men who have no other wizardry than the charm of words and the awe of people for the robes they wear. They speak with nothing of learning, knowledge, nor experience to lead us through a labyrinth that has perplexed the minds of men since the beginning of time with no satisfactory solution and with no more authoritative comment than that of the Master—"the poor ye have with you always."

They ask us to go with them gayly down pathways by them called new, but that in truth have been trodden time and again in the world's history—but never to the rainbow's end they promise.

new, but that in truth have been trodden time and again in the world's history—but never to the rainbow's end they promise. In the many, many times that those paths have been taken since the world began, never once did they fail to lead to chaos and destruction beging always first and most hearing always destruction, bearing always—first and most heavily—on the very class to which they now appeal.

Why, if these men know what they are talking about, their attempt to delude helpless, trusting sufferers to such a doom is unspeakable. If they do not know, then theirs is an act as rash and murderous as that of the tinker who tried a surgical operation on the human heart because he said that it was only a pump anyway and so entirely in his line of work.

and so entirely in his line of work.

It is not what these men say that is dangerous. It is the devilish ingenuity of their way of saying it. Put down on paper it doesn't make sense. "Every man a king" and "$5,000 a year for every-body" would draw the proper "oh, yeah! "from 9 people out of 10, but it is no less ridiculous than "two cars in every garage" or "two chickens in every pot", which turned out to be two chickens in every garage—or the bunk with which Hitler took the hard-boiled Germans—and Hitler couldn't hold a candle to Huey in the art of the old Barnum ballyhoo—a new sucker every second!

"Ah'm not expiret de Constitution. Ah'm fo' de Constitution.

"Ah'm not against de Constitution. Ah'm fo' de Constitution. Ah'm not against p'ivate p'op'ty. Ah'm fo' p'ivate p'op'ety. All mah plan says is 'tax 'em down', till nobody has mo' dan six million dollahs capital and one million dollahs income. Six million dollahs capital an' one million dollahs income is enough fo' any man!"

Can you beat it? There's language anybody can understand, and the tortured talk and $4 words with which economists answer him is too much for about 99 percent of people, including myself. Who is going to dispute that six millions of capital and one million income is enough for any man? But try and get it!

income is enough for any man? But try and get it!

Who is going to attempt to tell any man why he ought not to have $5,000 a year, if Huey can get it for him—or even why he shouldn't be a king? The fact is that nobody is answering Huey in language anybody can understand. He's getting away with it without a contest. Added to that there comes burring over the air the dripping brogue of the Irish-Canadian priest—pounding home points of pure political propaganda by calling on the lives and sayings of all the saints and the very precepts of the Master in accents mellow with human sympathy—musical, blatant bunk from the very rostrum of religion—it goes straight home to simple souls weary in distress and defrauded in delay. And neither is anybody challenging him in language that means anything more to these people than a Gregorian chant intoned in Latin.

He wants to turn our banking system over to 48 petty politicians

He wants to turn our banking system over to 48 petty politicians and authorize them to make money out of wind to pay the public debt and all expense of Government.

Why, to give every family $5,000 a year income, the total income of the United States would have to be one hundred and fifty billions; and if some had a million and so on down to $5,000 in the usual grades, as Huey proposes, it would have to be five hundred billions, which is more than 12 times as much as it is and more than 6 times as much as it has ever been. Huey says, "Divide our wealth", and he tells how to take it by taxes, but he never yet has told how to distribute it. yet has told how to distribute it.

yet has told how to distribute it.

If you seized all property tomorrow by taxes and sold it at an auction tax sale, nobody would have enough to bid a tenth of its value. You would cut the price of America 90 percent, and nobody but a foreigner could buy it. When values bounced back, the few buyers would be fabulously rich and the rest of us unbelievably poor. Do you own anything? Huey is going to take it away from you and put it in a pool for division.

It is like the old darkey whom the Communist paraders persuaded to carry their banner by telling him that they were going to take everybody's money and divide it up equally. After marching a few blocks in ecstasy, he began to think and scratch his head. "How much do ev'ybody git?" he finally asked and was told: "Seventeen dollars and twenty-seven cents." Said he: "Hyah—take yo' ol' red rag—ah got $19.47 cents in mah britches right naow."

Nobody works or trades or manufactures except for profit or income. If you took that away by taxes you would stop activity, destroy employment, and pauperize this country. Huey could not distribute wealth that way, but he could distribute such poverty as the world has never seen and he knows that as well as anybody.

as the world has never seen and he knows that as well as anybody. Father Coughlin's plan to make money out of nothing would make it worth nothing—and that would confiscate the wages of every worker, the savings of every family, and the life insurance of every widow. It would close up every endowed college, hospital, or other charitable institution in the country. It would cut off imports, forgive all foreign debts, and enable foreign nations with real money to buy our resources for a song. It would deliver every worker's work and every farmer's product to politics and, at one stroke, destroy the economic and political system of this country.

and, at one stroke, destroy the economic and political system of this country.

Stripped to the facts—and whether consciously or not—these two men are raging up and down this land preaching not construction but destruction—not reform but revolution—not peace but a sword. I think we are dealing with a couple of Catilines and that it is high time for somebody to say so.

This brings me to a part of this speech that I do not relish making. I like Hurr Long. He is one of the most plausible punchinellos in this or any other country. He is an able little devil and I can't help but gleefully admire his cast-iron cheek and his rough-and-tumble readiness to take on all comers, including the august Senate of the United States in session assembled.

For Father Coughlin I have even a closer sentiment. I agree with much that he says. I think he has done more to interest the average man in politics than anybody. At a very poignant moment in my life—my farewell to N. R. A.—just before it went under the ether and had its intestines removed and wrapped up in a warm wet towel, he sent me a message that touched my heart: under the ether and had its intestines removed and wrapped up in a warm wet towel, he sent me a message that touched my heart: "My dear General, I joyed with you and wept with you during your discourse this afternoon. You have served your country and its citizens more courageously than we dare express at the present moment. That man who attempts to do a public service as wholeheartedly and as honestly as you have done is a fool if he hopes to escape the vinegar or calumny and the thorns of grief. God bless you."

I have my full share of the common failing, and that warm message makes it very hard for me to say what I know must be said. I am sure that Father Coughlin is sincere, but I know he is misguided.

SINCERE REVOLUTIONARY TERMED MOST DANGEROUS

The most dangerous revolutionary in the world is the sincere the more sincere the more dangerous. Also, in this country, at least, it is the opinion and not the garb or station of the man who holds it that counts. White or black—butcher, baker, or candlestick maker—every man has a right to his say regardless. But I think there is an exception to the rule when it applies to revolutionary propaganda in the mouth of a priest of the Roman Catholic Church

Catholic Church.

The Founder of Christianity likened the church to a net holding good and bad fish. From recent Popes have come documents on social justice unsurpassed by the mind of man. But the church has also included in its net some of the greatest social despots in history—the very bad fish. A principal architect of the French Revolution and the Red Terror was Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord, Roman Catholic bishop of Autun—a crook and a grafter who served all masters of every stripe from the old Bourbons through the revolution to Napoleon and back again to Bourbons. Nothing in the priestly fellowship prevented him from bons. Nothing in the priestly fellowship prevented him from carrying out the red doctrines of anti-Christ and sending his old friends and consecrated men of his own cloth to the guillotine by the score.

While I do not for a moment compare Father Coughlin with While I do not for a moment compare Father Coughlin with Talleyrand, it is no exaggeration to say that, through the doorway of his priestly office, covered in his designs by the sanctity of the robe he wears, Father Coughlin, by the cheap strategy of appealing to the envy of those who have nothing for those who have something, has become active political head of an active political party. That party might better be known as the "national revolutionary party", although it has the more tripping title of the National Union for Social Justice, and I think that makes him another bad fish in the net of the Holy Church.

Of recent months there has been an open alliance between the great Louisiana demagogue and this political padre, who does not arraign our President and our institutions in the American language without a Canadian accent, and who may or may not now be arraign our President and our institutions in the American language without a Canadian accent, and who may or may not now be an American citizen, but certainly once was not. On a recent Sunday Father Coughlin announced at the conclusion of a sermon on money and politics, which contained a direct attack on the President of the United States, that his topic would be taken up later in the evening by a distinguished Senator; and, sure enough, across the evening air, replacing the good father's melodious burring, came the canebrake drawl of Huey Long, expounding that priestly and saintly discourse; and the first voice that Huey heard when he gave up the microphone was that of Father Coughlin's congratulating him.

These two patriots may have been reading last summer's lurid story about an American Hitler riding into Washington at the head of troops. That would be definite to Huey because he knows what part of the horse he can be, but we have a right to object most vigorously to the sanctification of such a centaur by having the head wear the collar of Rome and come intoning the stately measures of the church in pious benediction on such an unholy monstrosity.

TELLS OF CATHOLICS' AID IN BEGINNING OF N. R. A.

I respect all denominations and all true worshipers. I have the deepest regard for the Catholic Church and the Catholic priesthood. I know something of both their valor and their unvarying patriotism during the war. In the trying beginnings of N. R. A. I had no more enthusiastic cooperation and devoted support than I got from bishops, priests, and professors of Catholic institutions. To insure that the wisdom of this age-old church be brought to the solution of our problems, I secured the appointment on the Little Review Board of Monsignor John Ryan, our foremost Catholic economist. The good Fathers of Georgetown University helped me work out the mechanics of the draft in 1917. Father Haas has served devotedly on the Labor Advisory Board of N. R. A. from the beginning—a kindly man whose very companionship is a benediction. Throughout my life I have had warm friends in that priesthood who will bear with me, I am sure, when I say that I think we have here a prostitution of their holy office, a violation of vows, and a degradation of the teachings of Jesus Christ.

Why, I have heard the very sayings of the Lord brought forward to bring a religious odor to a proposition for fiat money, and the holy mercy of St. Veronica, who wiped the blood and sweat from the suffering Savior's face, invoked in an emotional appeal to all women to support a silly and unfair attack on the President and a bill in Congress for a political banking system.

Jesus said, "Bring me a penny, that I may see it." And they brought it. And He sayeth unto them, "Whose is this image and superscription?" And then they said unto Him, "Caesar's." And Jesus answered, saying, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." I respect all denominations and all true worshipers. I have the

ASSAILS INVESTMENT OF COUGHLIN LEAGUE

But Father Coughlin has no such indifference to pennies. I was for him at the beginning, heart and soul, and I had been told that, as a Canadian citizen, he was a member of the Basilian Order and vowed to poverty. When I heard about a year ago that his private corporation, the Radio League of the Little Flower, was interested in the silver of which he was preaching monetization, I gave the lie to that statement. When the official list was published by the Treasury Department, I saw that I had been wrong.

was published by the Treasury Department, I saw that I had been wrong.

From the day of the publication of that list the good Father has become the bitter enemy of President Roosevelt's administration. Now I don't question the right of any man to invest money as he will, but when a priest vowed to poverty and preaching to the poor flays the faith of a people to advance a monetary interest—his own or another—you can about conclude that Judas Iscarlot was just a poor piker. He sold out the Hope of the World for 30 pieces of silver, when today he might have bartered 50,000 ounces on so small a thing as abuse of the trust of a national congregation.

congregation.

In 1928 Al Smith, whom I revere as a truly great American, went from coast to coast proudly declaring that the Catholic Church and priesthood kept out of politics. He was sincere and he was right. I was in that fight and I marveled at the restraint of Catholic priests. Reviled and dishonored by political mudslingers, they kept the silent tenor of their way. Al could not make that proud boast today, and that is a very great shame. I spoke my mind at Waterloo, Iowa, last year on Hitler's sadistic persecution of the Jews, and I feel just as strongly against the persecution of Catholics in Mexico, which is excused by their tormentors on the charge that priests play politics with a people's faith. faith.

But if this thing spreads in this country there may well be a persecution here—not on the faith of a denomination but on the abuse of the clerical office by schemers using the cloak of religion to seek political power, and especially when they bend religious faith to the uses of sedition. If religion means nothing more than the remonetization of silver and the promotion of a revolutionary political group, then we can get along without it. We can't get along without it. Here, as at few times in our history, are wounded hearts seeking the solace of the mercy seat. Nothing is more needed among us than a spiritual return to the faith of our fathers. The Catholic Church was born of a great depression and had its first spread among the distressed and down-trodden people of the Mediterranean. God knows there is distress enough today. There is work aplenty for a priest and—it may be—in driving the money changers from the temple, but certainly not in usurping their abandoned tables with another sanctified shell game and a new flock of doves. But if this thing spreads in this country there may well be a per

We can respect as a political agitator Mr. Coughlin voicing any opinion that he may hold. Or we can revere as a most eloquent preacher of a great church Father Coughlin urging any tenet of his faith. But we can neither respect nor revere what appears to be a priest in holy orders entering our homes with the open sesame of his high calling and there, in the name of Jesus Christ, demanding that we ditch the President for HUEY LONG, bastardize our American system, and destroy the Government of our country.

The ridiculous rumor is rife that Father Coughlin is the agent of the Pope in trying to upset this Protestant country in the interests of the church of Rome. Nothing could be more absurd; and yet it is perfectly plain that either the church or Father Coughlin should promptly sever his revolutionary political activities from his priestly office. We expect politics to make strange bedfellows, but if Father Coughlin wants to engage in political bundling with

HUEY LONG or any other demagogue, it is only a fair first move to Huev Long or any other demagogue, it is only a rain may have take off his Roman cassock.

At least there is no such running with the hare and hunting with the hounds about his little playmate, Huev Long. You know just where he stands and how, given power, he will act; because you know how he has acted in the State of Louisiana. There Huev is a dictator by force of arms, and Adolph Hitler has nothing on him any way you care to look at them both. In fact, Huey is the Hitler of one of our sovereign States—not in the forcible seizure of absolute and arbitrary powers alone, but in the curious mixture of incredible mumbo-jumbo, the surface plausibility and undoubted personal magnetism that cause people to put their emotions before personal magnetism that cause people to put their emotions before their reason and go stampeding off to nothing like a frightened flock of sheep.

Between the team of Huey and the priest we have the whole bag Between the team of Huey and the priest we have the whole bag of crazy or crafty tricks possessed by any Mad Mullah or dancing dervish who ever incited a tribe or people through illusion to its doom—Peter the Hermit, Napoleon Bonaparte, Sitting Bull, William Hohenzollern, the Mahdi of the Soudan, Hitler, Lenin, Trotzky, and the Leatherwood God—here they are, all boiled down to two, with the radio and the news reels to make them effective; and if you don't believe they are dangerous you just haven't thought much about it or you don't know the temper of this country in this continued moment of distress.

What are we going to do about it? There is just one thing to do and that is to finish what we started and give Democratic leadership adjusted to crisis a fair chance.

ship adjusted to crisis a fair chance.

That goes for everybody. It goes for industry, which just 2 years ago was wrecked and seeking salvage in a dictator and which at last feels the thrill of life along its keel. It should be in Washington again, not obstructing but asking what it can do to help. It goes for labor, which, however disappointed by some it trusted, ought not to grouse at an administration which has gone with it nine times out of ten because it has not received the uttermost farthing. It goes for agriculture, which has been lifted further out of the hole than anybody thought possible 2 years ago and which owes every inch of gain directly to administration measures. measures.

It goes for finance which, instead of sitting back and saying that nothing is possible under new laws, ought to come forward with some practical suggestion for amendment that would effectively abolish abuses (which this country will never again permit) and yet relieve the present paralysis of trading. It goes for the unemployed and those burdened with debt and losses who have been taken care of more effectively than ever before in the history of this many other country and who cought to carry on patiently for just taken care of more effectively than ever before in the history of this or any other country and who ought to carry on patiently for just a little longer and tell the Father Longs and Huey Coughlins—or whatever it is—that they are taking their religion from their church and their political leadership from their statesmen and that they are not in the market for any shoes made by a milliner or hats by a cobbler or magic financial hair tonic put up by partnership of a priest and punchinello guaranteed to grow economic whiskers on a billiard ball overnight.

Let us take our hepefits with our hundars—the hitter with the

Let us take our benefits with our burdens-the bitter with the sweet—and, keeping our feet on the middle path between those two mad extremes, let us try to restore to this country something of the faith and spontaneous cooperation of a free people that led the whole world in the Great War from the darkness of disaster and defeat to the sudden glory of complete victory and that started us so hopefully on our path to prosperity in 1933.

No two of us agree about everything, and I by no means concur in all that the President has done. But I think our sole hope lies in him; I believe that we are still in deadly danger. I regard as traitors to our common cause all those who are unable or unwilling to accept each situation as we find it, whether created by a success or a failure—a bullseye or a complete miss—and, after urging their opinion as vehemently and as vigorously as they will, fail to accept the verdict of the polls, but jog or try to break the elbow of our pilot in this sea of shoals.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Senate and the galleries have just witnessed a demonstration. Egotism, arrogance, and ignorance are seldom displayed in the Senate of the United States. They require a measure of talent possessed only by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long]. His concluding remark was a warning to me lest I be not much

Ladies and gentlemen in the galleries, to whom the Senator from Louisiana always addresses his remarks, it is perhaps a matter of very little concern to the country, to its future, to its welfare, whether either the Senator from Louisiana or the Senator from Arkansas much longer remains here.

I wonder how the Senator from Louisiana thinks he acquires the right to tell Senators, representatives of sovereign States, that they can serve here only by his leave. I wish to say now with all the emphasis at my command, and with all the amusement which the subject justifies, that whenever I have to serve in the United States Senate or anywhere else with the leave or approval of the Senator from Louisiana I will be glad to go back to the shades of oblivion from which he and I both have come.

Mr. President, it ill becomes a Member of this body to attempt to bulldoze his fellow Senators. Our debates here ought to proceed on reason and argument; but I am speaking now to those who have witnessed the performances in this body, repeated time and time again, of the Senator from Louisiana, who assumes to tell Senators when they can serve in this body. I am speaking to those who are familiar with his performances and know that his tactics are to take the floor, where his remarks are privileged, and assail persons who do not belong to the Senate and who have no opportunity of replying to him.

I am perfectly content that General Johnson and the Senator from Louisiana may have their fight out in any form they choose. I think it would be rather in good taste, in view of the opinions of each other which they have expressed, if they should use the good old-fashioned way of settling personal controversies, rather than bringing them into the Senate of the United States, and imposing on this body and on our guests the task, the difficult and disagreeable task, of listening to things which might just as well not be said anywhere, much less in a body like the Senate of the United States.

Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana undertook to reply to General Johnson. I heard General Johnson's speech last night, and probably other Senators did, and I am prepared to say that, in my opinion, the Senator from Louisiana thundered in the index; he failed to reply to General Johnson.

The Senator from Louisiana chose to make an attack on Mr. Bernard M. Baruch; and what was the point of the attack? If I can correctly summarize it, it was to the effect that in some mysterious way Mr. Baruch has been controlling the last three Presidential administrations, and that in the control he has demonstrated a sinister purpose.

The Senator from Louisiana quoted statements from Mr. Baruch, most of which, in my humble judgment, are based on sound principles of economics, not "Long" economics, not economics of the character promulgated by the Senator from Louisiana, but economics as we know it in the textbooks and as we know it in our own thoughts. For instance, he seemingly, by implication, denounced Mr. Baruch for the statement that German reparations should be fixed in a definite amount. I recall that during the peace conference at Paris one of the great problems there was the settlement of reparations.

It is true that Mr. Baruch did insist upon the definite fixing of reparations, and now I undertake to say, in view of all that has happened since, in view of all the disagreements which have arisen respecting this subject, that if the peace conference had pursued that course, and had stated definitely the amount which Germany must pay, the consequences of the failure to fix the amount would have been escaped, and not only Germany but every other nation in the world would have been in a better economic condition today than that in which it now finds itself, by reason of pursuing the course which Mr. Baruch recommended, and which the Senator from Louisiana condemns as being absurd and unsound. The other course was taken. An unlimited amount was required to be paid. The more that was paid the more that would have to be paid, so that with the passing of years the problem of reparations gathered volume and gathered force, and it resulted in ruptures, and in the perpetuation of animosities that might very well have been terminated if the sound and sensible policy of fixing the amount had been agreed on in the Versailles conference.

Other statements were made. We all know that the declaration that Mr. Baruch has been running the last three administrations and is running the present administration is another evidence of the inaccuracy of thought and speech on the part of the Senator from Louisiana. It is my information that Mr. Baruch has never sought to impose his views on any President; that when he has acted he has acted at the solicitation and request of the head of the Government, and when his services to this Government and our people are compared with the services of the Senator from Louisiana to the people of his State and the people of this Nation the Senator from Louisiana will have some reason to diminish the arrogance and the insolence of his assertions here.

During the World War, when every resource was being mobilized and every power was being exerted for the successful conduct of the conflict, Mr. Baruch served as the head of the War Industries Board. It is the consensus of opinion on the part of those who know the subject and who are willing to be fair about it that he rendered a service without compensation and at great sacrifice which entitled him to the respect and confidence of the people of this Nation and of the world.

But the Senator from Louisiana could not answer General Johnson. He found superiority in the use of irony and sarcasm and in the employment of queer appellations by the former head of the National Industrial Recovery Administration, and so instead of making a reply, he rants and rages and attacks somebody else. I appeal to this audience: What thought did he leave in your mind except that there was something mysteriously sinister in the character and conduct of General Johnson?

It is regrettable that this should be the forum for the display of such disposition as the Senator from Louisiana has exemplified in this body today. I do not know what his end will be. I do not give him warning. It would do no good. I do not tell him that if he attempts to promote his own personal ambition by the denunciation in his addresses of those to whom he owes allegiance by the attempt, often repeated, to discredit men far greater and much better than he has ever been or ever can be, he may come to the end which he prophesies for others.

What right has the Senator from Louisiana to denounce his former friend, the President of the United States, in language like that which he employed today? Does he not know that Franklin De-la-no Roosevelt, as he said, is bearing a burden sufficient in its weight and magnitude to crush the greatest soul? Does he not know that in his position as President of the United States Mr. Roosevelt has attracted to himself the confidence of the people of this Nation—not that they all believe that his plans are all the wisest that could be formed, but that they all recognize the fact that in his great heart the President is anxious to do everything possible to promote the ends and aims of national recovery.

Yes; the Senator from Louisiana ridicules what has been done by the administration; in fact, he ridicules everything that is proposed by anybody but himself. He scoffs and scorns the Civilian Conservation Corps, ridicules the plan under which young men who are out of employment are given the opportunity to perform useful toil for limited compensation. Yet, Mr. President, I doubt if there is another Senator here who would say that tomorrow, if he had the power, he would turn the young men now in the civilian conservation camps out to find their way alone through a benighted world.

I meet without apology the issue raised by the Senator from Louisiana. What would have been the fate of this valuable asset in our population—the hundreds of thousands of young men who have been engaged in the conservation camps? Should they have been left as dependents upon parents who were unable to provide for themselves? Should they have been encouraged to become tramps? Should they have been invited into the seductive but dangerous paths of vice which were open to them?

When the Senator from Louisiana ridicules the President's efforts to redeem and save this asset of incalculable value—and what can be more valuable than the young, the enlightened manhood of the United States?—I ask him: Has he no sense of responsibility when he speaks? Has he no power to look into the future, except with the hope of arousing hatred, animosity, and wants that he knows cannot be supplied?

Month after month the Senator from Louisiana has disgusted this body with repeated attacks upon men who are superior to him, with repeated efforts to discredit the President and humiliate him; and now it is about time that the manhood in the Senate should assert itself. [Manifestations of applause.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER rapped with his gavel.

Mr. ROBINSON. It is about time that he should be made to know and take his proper place in a body composed for the most part of gentlemen.

Innuendoes, insinuations, and threats cannot prevail in the Senate of the United States, unless we have descended to the level of mediocre degenerates!

I have spoken earnestly, and I realize that there are those who are listening to me who will say, "Why pay attention to the ravings of one who anywhere else than in the Senate would be called a madman?"

I thank the Senate for the patience and the attention with which it has heard me.

GEN. RICHARD P. WILLIAMS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general, Marine Corps.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general in the Marine Corps?

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, as I observe the Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs is not present, I suggest the presence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Keyes	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Costigan	King	Reynolds
Austin	Couzens	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Cutting	Logan	Russell
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schall
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bilbo	Duffy	McCarran	Shipstead
Black	Fletcher	McGill	Smith
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Steiwer
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Burke	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Byrd	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Harrison	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Carey	Hastings	Norris	Wagner
Clark	Hatch	Nye	Walsh
Connally	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Coolidge	Johnson	Pope	White

Mr. DIETERICH. I wish to announce that my colleague, the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that my colleague, the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], are absent because of illness; and that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-eight Senators having answered to the roll call, a quorum is present. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general in the Marine Corps? [Putting the question.] The "ayes" have it, and the nomination is confirmed.

GEN. JOHN H. RUSSELL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of John H. Russell to be major general in the Marine Corps?

Mr. BLACK. I move that the nomination be recommitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs for further and more complete investigation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have to oppose the motion in view of the fact that for some 3 or 4 weeks at different hearings the criticisms which have been made in the Senate were investigated as best they could be investigated by the committee and there was practically no evidence whatever to substantiate the criticisms and allegations which have been made here and which in large degree were made also before the committee. I do not see any use in continuing to hold up a question of this character merely upon hearsay and upon prejudiced statements emanating, at least, from persons who have been disappointed because of not securing promotions. That has been almost entirely the source of the contention and the criticism of General Russell.

I will not weary the Senate by going into all the details; but it has been said that the selection board was a one-man board. Regardless of what kind of a board it was, the fact remains that it was the character of board which had been authorized and created by Congress. General Russell was not responsible for the board; but, as a matter of fact, the board in its set-up under the law is a great improvement over the old system. The old system provided for promotion by seniority within a class. If there were 10 officers of the senior class of equal length of service the Commandant himself would recommend to the Secretary of the Navy the one who should be selected, and then the Secretary of the Navy, and on to the President. In consequence, under the old system the Commandant himself had every opportunity possible, as one man, to control who should be the officer selected within the senior class, subject, of course, to the President's approval.

The present system was inaugurated, first being recommended by General Lejeune and adopted by Congress. The law sets up the board. What is called the senior board has 6 members while the junior board has 9 members. General Russell favored this method. If General Russell had wanted to carry on a one-man promotion board, why would he have recommended the law which created a board of 6 and a board of 9, respectively? However, he did recommend it and supported the law. If the law is wrong, we should like to have something better. I have not heard of any suggestions of any better plan than that which is now in operation.

I will repeat in this connection that every Senator will realize it does not make any difference what character of board may be created or what character of plan may be instituted for selecting officers for promotion, some of those at least who are not promoted will be dissatisfied and some of them will criticize. We meet with that situation in every avenue of life—the disappointed criticize. So criticism has been directed more against the board than against any individual.

So far as the question of the board being dominated by General Russell is concerned, there is not one particle of evidence which has come before the committee or anybody else to indicate that he directed and dominated the board. There were six members of the board. There were only 11 eligible for membership upon the board. The first board which he recommended took 6 of those who were eligible, and in the second instance, when another board was appointed 6 months later, 4 out of the 6 men were not on the previous board, resulting in the course of 6 months in the case of the two boards of 10 out of the 11 eligibles serving on the board. There is nothing about that to indicate or even suggest to a fair mind that General Russell was trying to pack the board, and there is no evidence to that effect. It is just merely a question of the tactics adopted by those who were dissatisfied and who would criticize. I do not mean all the officers are inclined that way, for I have not heard of any general dissatisfaction among the officers; I have not heard of any reign of terror. I have heard, however, of a tempest in a teapot, and that is about what we have been having here because boards have then going ahead and doing their duty as they should, and there is no evidence to show discrimination or unfairness, but a few are dissatisfied and criticize. Of course, I wish means could be devised to prevent people from criticizing if they do not like everything we do, but I have not heard of that kind of a prescription that could be availed of. It would not work in regard to promotion boards in the Marine Corps.

General Russell stated, and it has not been contradicted, that all he did was to vote as a member of the board. He did not try to dominate the board, and no one has intimated states that some officers for whom he voted for promotion were not promoted. If he had dominated the board it would seem he could have had them all promoted.

I am taking the position I do and the committee took the position it did because there is no evidence to show there has been anything of an unfair nature or any discrimination in the action of the board. I have heard it stated that General Russell was a member of the board which promoted himself. That is untrue. There is nothing to it whatever. Most of the criticism has been baseless and absolutely without foundation or support.

Senators talk about doing justice, but we cannot promote 18 officers when there are only 2 promotions to be made. If anyone has a recipe whereby that can be done, I should like to have it, because occasionally I have a public position or two to fill—I do not get many—and a thousand people want three positions. If there is any way to give the three positions and still keep the remaining 997 applicants from being dissatisfied, I should like to know about it. The officers who were members of this board were in that situation.

We have not gone into the question of the Haitian situation again because it was taken up some 15 months ago when President Roosevelt nominated General Russell to be Commandant of the Marines. It was more or less of an issue at that time. Before the President submitted the nomination, objection to General Russell was made before the committee on account of the Haitian incident. We went into it quite thoroughly at that time and concluded there was nothing to indicate in any way that we should not recommend his confirmation. We did so, and the Senate confirmed his nomination to be Commandant of the Marine

The issue seems to be whether or not General Russell was dominating and controlling and in command of the situation. A question has arisen in regard to the record. I stated yesterday, and General Russell himself has stated, that he was not the one who issued the order, that he was not responsible for it, but that it was handled through the State Department. We did not have the records before us then, but we have the records now. These records are considered always as confidential, but any Senator may see them.

The records do not disclose that General Russell was dominating the situation, but, to the contrary, that both the State Department and General Russell endeavored to get the President of Haiti not to issue the order. When the issue came as to who had authority, the State Department advised the Minister of Haiti that while they preferred that the action to exclude the Senator be not taken, yet Haiti was a sovereign state and had control over its internal affairs, and the United States should not interfere with its control of the situation.

President Borno issued an order. The record would indicate that prior to that time General Russell had tried to persuade him not to do it. Of course, it is said by some that General Russell controlled and dominated President Borno and that he was responsible for the issuance of the order, but there is no evidence to that effect, and the records from the State Department indicate that he tried to persuade President Borno not to issue the order.

After the order was issued the Chief of the Army, as he might be called, issued orders in regard to the presidential order which had been made by President Borno, and General Russell was asked what should be done. General Russell replied—and that is the only way he came to be in any way connected with the order, which was not his order at all—that they should be governed by article XI of the treaty. Article XI of the treaty provided in substance, as the State Department had advised General Russell and the Haitian Government, that matters of that character were under the control of the Haitian President, and that the Haitian Army was under control of the Haitian President. That is all General Russell did. He did not issue any order. He had nothing to do with issuing any order, but when asked about it he gave the information which had been that he did. The board had practically a secret ballot. He | given to him by the State Department, and the substance of that was that the matter was under the control of the Haitian Government, and not under the control of the United States. That is about all there is to the Haitian incident.

> I feel, in justice to the committee, that this statement with reference to the Haitian incident should be made. We have all the State Department records, which they want returned, and I am sure I have given a fair statement of the contents of those records. They have been exhibited to some Senators and will be exhibited to any other Senator who desires to see them.

> The question of how many Mexican soldiers were at the water works is a matter worthy of no further discussion. If General Russell made a mistake about that, he is not to be criticized for it. He had been strictly warned and ordered not to take any aggressive action. General Fun-ston, who was in charge, had so warned him, and the records so disclose. He was complimented upon his service there by those in authority.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. May I ask where is the record that shows he was complimented?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think we have extracts from General Funston's orders.

Mr. BLACK. I should like to hear read anything from General Funston congratulating General Russell. I have never seen it. I have the report from General Funston which was sent to me. I have never seen any statement anywhere that commended General Russell for his action except that he himself testified that General Funston complimented him personally. If it is there, I am asking to have it read.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not know that it contains a specific commendation, but there is no criticism of General Russell. The record makes reference to the incident and reports the best information they could get in regard to it. Of course. there is a difference in the statement made by one person on hearsay evidence and the statement made by General Taylor, but whether or not there were 100 men or 150 or 500 men or 1 man bearing a flag of truce, those in charge of the administration in no wise criticized General Russell. He was acting under the strictest orders to take no aggressive steps. If he had gone out and carried on anything like an offensive campaign, had gotten into an engagement, there is a probability he would have been court-martialed for violating orders and instructions not to take any aggressive action.

Of course, there might have been a thousand men there. but I would rather believe the statement of the outpost who actually had observation of the situation and knew what was going on than I would the statement of somebody who has set himself up as a general critic of General Russell. He stated there was a company of men there and that he saw at least 120 to 150, and that he thought there were more around the bend of the road, hidden by the brush there.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further? Mr. TRAMMELL. Certainly.

Mr. BLACK. I have a letter written with a pen by the outpost, dated March 2, which states there were no troops there except one man.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Who is he?

Mr. BLACK. James M. Votta. He was the bugler who went out searching for the rebels.

Mr. TRAMMELL. It depends upon when he went to search.

Mr. BLACK. He is the one they sent out. He is the one who went out in the beginning. He is the one that Colonel Clarke said he had with him as a bugler.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I would rather take the statement of Colonel Clarke in regard to that. Is this man a critic?

Mr. BLACK. Is he a critic?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. He just read an editorial about the statement | men. Of course, it is very difficult for us to get out, with 45 and wrote this letter to say that he was there, and that there were no Mexicans there.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Colonel Clarke says he was there, and he is the one who sent the bugler out, and that he did see the Mexican soldiers, 120 or 130 at least, from his own observation, and he thought there were more; that the courier from the Mexicans did come forward, and that when General Russell refused their demands-as, of course, he didthe courier returned, and that they fired a few shots, and he saw no more of them.

I am not going to set myself up as a military critic or a military expert on questions of tactics or policies and try to condemn an officer on account of an incident of that character, which, even if established by competent evidence, does not disclose that General Russell did wrong by taking an aggressive stand and rushing out there and carrying on a battle against the instructions of his superior, General Funston, and also the State Department, the administration. We were trying to be very cautious in Haiti. We can recall that as a matter of common information, and through the proper channels, instructions to that effect had been issued.

Mr. President, I am going to take only a few moments longer. We have investigated the different criticisms in regard to General Russell. We have not found facts supporting any of the criticisms. I have never been in favor of condemning a person, or withholding from a person something to which he was entitled and which he had merited by a high class of service, merely upon unsupported criticism and hearsay evidence. I do not take seriously, in the first instance, criticism based upon dissatisfaction on the part of somebody who did not happen to be successful when it was impossible for everybody to be successful in the particular transaction, and when those who have been dissatisfied have disclosed no evidence. No evidence has been developed that General Russell has not served in his command well, and that he has not been fair and just.

I cannot quite understand how a man, for instance, could have the commendation of three different Secretaries of State-Secretary Hughes, now the esteemed Chief Justice of the United States; Mr. Kellogg; and Mr. Stimson-and also the President of the United States at that time, and the strong commendation of General Lejeune, who was then the Commandant of the Marine Corps, upon his service in Haiti, and how he could have gotten promotions from time to time if he had not rendered a faithful and capable character of service as an officer of the Marine Corps. I am not willing to take away from him the standing which he has won, the position which he has occupied, the promotion which he has received, merely upon hearsay evidence and upon

Of course, there are a good many officers who did not get promotions. My friend the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK | talked about officers who did not get promotions, about fighting men who did not get promotions. If Congress thinks we should have a Marine Corps or an Army composed of 20,000 officers and about 2,000 men-that is putting it in an exaggerated way, but it emphasizes the situation-of course, we can promote all the officers. There are, however, only a certain number of officers for a certain number of privates. Congress authorizes so many enlisted men, and they cannot have 40 colonels and 35 generals when the Congress itself has restricted the number of enlisted men.

If we should do that sort of thing, instead of having an Army of enlisted men, we would have an Army of colonels and generals and majors and captains. It would be about like the condition a young fellow told me of following the war. He was very anxious to get out of the service. He and others were anxious to get in while the fighting was going on, and after the armistice they wanted to get out. He was stationed at one of the camps-I do not remember where-and he importuned me to help him get out of the service. He had been fighting, and had done all he could for his country, and after the fighting was over he wanted to go home; and he said, "The trouble is, they have about 45 officers down there and they have only about 60 or 70 officers and only about 60 or 70 privates."

He was right about that, so far as I know. I do not know anything about the facts; but certainly Congress does not want to take the attitude that every officer should be promoted and that the Marine Corps should be topheavy with officers, and that our Army should be topheavy with officers, and that our Navy should be topheavy with officers. So it is just a question of not being able to promote them all.

I have heard General Russell say that there were a number of splendid officers whom he would have been glad to see promoted, but he could not promote them all. The law allowed only so many officers, so they could not promote 18 officers who were eligible when the law allowed only 2 to be promoted. That is the situation. That is the system. Congress wants to change that system so that every time an officer wants a promotion he shall have a promotion, it will be necessary to take in more and more officers in the lower rank until we have a Marine Corps composed more of officers than of enlisted men.

Of course, Congress can do that if it desires. Congress heretofore has taken the other attitude, and that is the law at the present time. General Russell has nothing to do with the law. General Russell has nothing to do with the formation of the board so far as the law is concerned. That is prescribed by an act of Congress; and it certainly is a great improvement over the old system, under which the Commandant and the Secretary of the Navy practically absolutely controlled who should be promoted within the senior class.

Mr. President, I could go into a great many other details, but I feel that that is not essential. The committee was firmly convinced that General Russell should not be denied this promotion, which has been recommended to the Senate by the President; and I hope the motion to recommit the nomination will not be adopted. The committee has been considering the nomination for 3 or 4 or 5 weeks; and, as I have already stated, we have not found one scintilla of evidence that supports these criticisms and these rumors, and "they said", and "I heard." That is about as much evidence as we ever had about any of these charges-" I heard". or "they said."

I hope the Senate will confirm the nomination.

MY VOICE WILL NOT BE CHANGED WHILE PEOPLE SUFFER

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask to have the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] sent for.

I could not stay in the Chamber during his remarks. I would have continued my remarks for some further minutes. except that I was not able to continue at the time. I was forced to leave the Chamber. Therefore I could not be here when the Senator from Arkansas made his remarks.

I have not heard the Senator, nor have I read his remarks; but my secretary, who sat in the gallery, took down some of his remarks and read them over to me rather hastily, so I thought I would return to the Chamber. I have sent for the Senator from Arkansas. He left the Chamber some minutes ago. I presume he will be back, and I prefer not to go too heavily into remarks that might touch him before he returns.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I suggest the absence of a

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Burke	Duffy	Johnson
Ashurst	Byrd	Fletcher	Keyes
Austin	Byrnes	Frazier	King
Bachman	Capper	George	La Follette
Bailey	Carey	Gerry	Logan
Bankhead	Clark	Gibson	Lonergan
Barbour	Connally	Glass	Long
Bilbo	Coolidge	Gore	McAdoo
Black	Copeland	Guffey	McCarran
Bone	Couzens	Hale	McGill
Borah	Cutting	Harrison	McKellar
Brown	Dickinson	Hastings	McNary
Bulkley	Dieterich	Hatch	Maloney
Bulow	Donahey	Hayden	Minton

Moore Pope
Murphy Radcliffe
Murray Reynolds
Nerly Robinson
Norbeck Russell
Norris Schall
Nye Schwellen
O'Mahoney Shepnard

Pope Shipstead
Radcliffe Smith
Reynolds Steiwer
Robinson Thomas, Okla.
Russell Thomas, Utah
Schwellenbach Trammell
Sheppard Truman

Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wagner Walsh Wheeler White

Mr. DIETERICH. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] and the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] are detained by illness.

I wish also to announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan] are necessarily detained.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I repeat, I was not able to remain in the Chamber long enough to complete as much of my speech as I wished to deliver, nor was I able to stay here while the Senator from Arkansas spoke. But I was furnished by my secretary, who has the good fortune also to be a stenographer, some of the notes, which he translated to me orally, of some of the remarks made by the Senator from Arkansas in my absence.

Mr. President, I have never made any personal reflections on the Senator from Arkansas on this floor. I have read things the Senator published himself; I do not know that that would be taken as a reflection on him. I recall no time when I have breached the rules of the Senate as the Senator from Arkansas has, according to what has been supplied to me by my secretary, in his reflections this afternoon.

I do not take any offense at that, however. I am a politician, and I have heard of these things said so many times on the hustings by political opponents that I never take offense. I just want the Senate to note, however, that I do not violate the rules of the Senate, but the Senator from Arkansas takes unto himself that privilege.

He quite often interferes in the debates in which I have been engaged, never addressing the Chair, but rising and making his points without asking anyone whether or not he cares to yield. The Record is full of that. I have never objected to it. I only return now in order that I may clear up whatever may have been said by the Senator.

I now have the official transcript of the remarks the Senator made. It seems that the Senator from Arkansas took offense because I sounded a friendly word of warning. I was careful to stay within the rules and precedents. I merely sounded a word of warning uttered by a colleague here last year. I undertook to do that in a gentlemanly way. What I said about Mr. Baruch was written by Mr. Baruch, and only commented upon within the confines of fair and regular conclusions.

Of course, I know the Senator from Arkansas is an admirer of Mr. Baruch. He has said so from this floor, I think, many times, and the Senator from Arkansas has a right to be an admirer of Mr. Baruch. The Senator from Arkansas was championing things here which Baruch was championing for Hoover, or which Hoover was championing for Baruch, when I was opposed to them. That is his right; that is only natural.

The Senator has always been kind to Presidents. That is a good way to be. Presidents have always been kind to the Senator, and that is a good way to be. I only regret that I have not had convictions which enabled me to be so kind to Presidents that Presidents would have been kind to me. It all goes in the course of a lifetime.

Naturally, I regret that the Senator sees fit to refer to me as being ignorant, egotistical, and arrogant, which expressions I understand he used. I understand he also criticized what Huey Long stands for.

Mr. President, the Senator and I live neighbors. The Senator has been criticizing Louisiana ever since I have been back. I wish to compare Louisiana and Arkansas.

It is awfully bad to have a Long adherent running Louisiana, but it is not very bad to have a Robinson adherent running Arkansas. I have a friend in the Governor's office in Louisiana for whom I voted and whom I supported, and the Senator from Arkansas has a friend in the Governor's office in Arkansas for whom he voted and whom he supported.

These two States are submitting statements of what they need from the Federal Government in order to carry on their schools. Here is Arkansas, which says it needs $2,-241.924 to keep its schools going.

Mr. President, how much does Louisiana say it needs? How much would it like to have from the Federal Government? The request of Arkansas is for $2,241,000; that of Louisiana is for $107,000, and whether they give us $107,000 or not, it will not make any difference; we will run the schools 9 months in the year, and every child will have free school books just the same.

Why that difference? It is for the same reason which makes the Senator and me differ here. The Senator's philosophy has been followed in Arkansas; mine has been followed in Louisiana. They do not tax the Power Trust up in Arkansas as we do in Louisiana, so there is not money to furnish the children schooling. That is one reason, just one little reason. They do not tax the oil companies up in Arkansas as we do in Louisiana, so there is no money with which to buy books for the children, and they have not money with which to run the schools.

There are two States with the same resources, the same kind of people, one of them bogged in the mud, calling for two and a half million dollars, and the other State calling for practically nothing, the distinction being because of the theories of government followed by the friends of the Senator from Arkansas in Arkansas as contradistinguished to the theories of government followed by my friends in the State of Louisiana.

I have tried to advise my friend the Senator from Arkansas as a friend. I will never refer to him as being ignorant, or as being arrogant, or as egotistical. I will never undertake to humiliate him, or to impose an overpowering knowledge on him, which, of course, I do not possess, but were I to possess it I would not seek to impose it on him in such manner as he assumes toward me. But, humble as I am, I will yet give him advice. Judged by these remarks, I know the Senator nurses in his heart a grudge on account of advice which I undertook to give him here last year.

I am a friend of the people who run the Power Trust; I am really a friend to them, and most of them will say so. I am really a friend of the oil people, and even some of them will say so; most of them will now, since we made our compromise the other day. But all the time the Senator from Arkansas has continued to refer to me as having made insinuations against Members of the Senate, when the only thing he can base it on is the fact that I submitted to the clerk here one day an advertisement in Martindale's Law Directory, published by the Senator's law firm themselves; that is all.

I was not responsible for the Martindale Law Directory. I have not made any statement, except what was published by the Senator. But I gave advice to the party, and I gave advice to the Senator, and I will give it now. Wherever your treasure is, there is your heart.

Mr. President, the Senator says that I have made a very, very grave attack on him. He continues to say that on the outside. I never repeat a private conversation until it has been repeated by others on this floor, or part of it has been repeated. Mr. Roosevelt was nominated for the Presidency. It was my duty to see that certain States did not have favorite-son candidates. One of those States was Arkansas, and I helped to see to that, had a little part in it; not a large part, but some.

We did not want favorite sons as candidates, and I helped keep down favorite sons in Arkansas, and I helped keep my friend the Governor of Mississippi from being a favorite-son candidate in his own State. He was a friend of mine and the Senator from Arkansas was a friend of mine, but I unknew what it would mean.

There has also been a lot of publicity given to the Caraway campaign. It has been published by the Saturday Evening Post that my campaign for Mrs. Caraway was a reflection against the senior Senator from Arkansas.

I did not publish it that way. The Senator ought to wreak his revenge on the newspapers and the magazines that did this, and not wreak it upon me. True it was that the other Senator from Arkansas had not voted with the other Senator very often here. If she had, she would not have been elected. But that was her record, the record that I defended. The Senator from Arkansas, none the less, from that day had apparently continued as though there were a serious breach between us.

Mr. President, I had a conversation with the present President of the United States, and when I tell you I had any conversation with him you can rely that I am going to be very careful not to overstate it. I asked him what he was going to do about the leadership in the United States Senate, and he gave me his ideas. They were not favorable to the Senator from Arkansas.

But a friend of mine was out in the Southwest, and he returned and said, "I saw Senator So-and-so." He is no longer a Member of this body. I do not have this Senator's permission to tell this, and I am not going to disclose names, but he is sitting here now and he knows I am telling the truth. This friend of mine said, "I saw Senator So-and-so, and he told me that Mr. Farley had told him to keep HUEY Long in trouble in that Overton investigation as long as he could; they wanted to keep him where they could handle him '

Well, those are the same words as the President had told me about the Senator from Arkansas. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Those in the galleries will kindly refrain from audible laughter.

Mr. LONG. So I went back to my room after I got that message and I put two and two together. Here I was on the bandwagon to start with, and a member of that committee had been told to keep me on the spot. Notwithstanding all the money I put up, notwithstanding everything I had done, he had been given the order to keep something going against HUEY Long in the Senate, keep him on the spot, put ants on him, and let him scratch a while. And the language sounded exactly like the message that had come to me from the President, and I told the Senator from Arkansas about it, too, did I not?

Mr. ROBINSON. No. Mr. LONG. Did I not?

Mr. ROBINSON. No.

Mr. LONG. I did not tell you, did I? The Senator's memory and mine differ. At any rate we met, the Senator and I did; we met over here in the Senator's office. I do not mind telling the Senate who met with us-Mr. Harvey Couch-Power Trust man. He is a personal friend of mine and a personal and political friend of the Senator from Arkansas. The Senator's law firm, or a member of it, Mr. Moses, I believe it was, had been Mr. Couch's lawyer for a long time. So we met over here, and we concluded that we would be pretty good friends, and just drop matters as they stood; let it go. I had my message that I was to be kept with ants on me, and I had another message that ants were to be kept on him. So I compared the notes. I had been leading the fight up to that time, or shortly before that time, that the Senator from Arkansas was not the man to be leader of the Democratic side of the Senate. And if Senators will go back and read the newspapers, any number of publications were out that he was not going to be the leader of the Senate any longer for this side.

All right. So we did not bury the hatchet, but we just kind of smoothed the thing over, and it went on. We had a conversation, the Senator from Arkansas and I did, and I am afraid the Senator is not going to remember this conversation, and I will not reflect on him if he does not.

I said then and there, "I may have trouble, because I am going to go as I please in this business, and I look for this dertook to keep down favorite-son candidates, because I | man to try to name men through the United States Senate who are enemies of mine down in Louisiana. Now, how are you going to stand on it?"

The Senator from Arkansas, as best I can remember, said to me: "When William F. McCoombs was up in New Jersey, or somewhere up here, he had a brother in Arkansas that he wanted a job for. I was in Arkansas, and I either got a telegram or a letter or some other kind of a message from Woodrow Wilson telling me that he would like to give Mr. McCoombs a job. I sent back to him," said the Senator from Arkansas, "this message: 'Mine is the right of selection. Yours is the right of rejection.'" And the Senator gave me to understand that was still his position.

Now, he may not remember that. I will not reflect on him if he does not remember. I never have, and I never will.

However, I do not know of a thing that was said in that conversation concerning which I did not keep my word. I do not know of a thing that I said from that day that authorized any breach of it. But the Senator's mind is not my mind. Either he forgets or I forget, or perhaps I imagine. The fault will have to be discovered by others. But none the less there came in appointments to the Senate-D. D. Moore, collector of internal revenue, and Réné Viosca for United States attorney.

The record is here. However, I want to say for the Senator from Arkansas, I believe he wanted to discharge that obligation the best he thought he dared do. I did not hold him down to the point of saying, "You take the chance, you stay by our agreement." I did not do that, Mr. President. I was generous. I fought the battle without making that demand. I did not ask it of him. I knew that he was at the time the leader here under what we thought was a very popular President. But I had made some promises. I had to live up to my promises. I had to be mashed out keeping them. I had to be flattened out keeping several of them. I had made some promises I could not go back on. And I want to say to the credit of the Senator from Arkansas that I thought I observed in his conduct a desire, if the opportunity came his way, not to have the matter forced any farther than possible for confirmation over my objection. He did not vote that way exactly, you understand, Mr. President, and he did not speak exactly that way, Mr. President, but I thought I saw hidden back there somewhere that he would like to keep that understanding, and so I have always felt kindly on that score.

I did sound a word of warning to the Senator from Arkansas. His people need him more than my people need me. My people in Louisiana need my vote very bad, and they need the vote of my colleague very bad, but they do not need my vote in Louisiana nearly so bad as the poor people of Arkansas—good people that they are, lovely people, and my friends, a large majority of them. They need the vote of their Senator, and he can do more to help them than I can do. So I have undertaken to advise the Senator from Arkansas. Why? I know he is on the wrong path. I know he is going wrong. I know, Mr. President, for his own sake that he is treading a bad course politically; but I know for the sake of the people of the State of Arkansas and even of other States that there is in the wake of his votes disaster, consequences not to be felt alone by the Senator, but consequences to be borne by 125,000,000 people to a large extent.

The Democratic Party is in the ascendancy. It did not come into the ascendancy on the doctrines of the Senator from Arkansas. On the contrary, when we went back to Arkansas to wage the campaign for Hattie Caraway for the United States Senate one of the first things that we drew the line on was that a power tax had been voted, and that on a reconsideration the vote had been to put the power tax on the consumer still rather than to put it on the power company, and that the Senator whom I was undertaking to help to reelect had voted that it should not be put on the consumer but should be put on the power companies. That had been the position, as I understood, of the Democratic House, and it was reversed here by the Republican Senate largely through the help and leadership of the Democratic

When we nominated Roosevelt it was against all the Senator from Arkansas stood for. I say that knowing what the words are. It was against the philosophy of the Senator from Arkansas. Why, Mr. President, the leadership on the Republican side in many instances was more liberal toward the Roosevelt policy than the stand of the Senator from Arkansas. I can go down the line and show that former Senator Smoot, of Utah, was more liberal in many respects than the Senator from Arkansas himself. We were running on a liberal ticket.

The Senator from Arkansas has seen fit, because of the fact that I have undertaken to continue to advocate exactly what was promised by this party, to condemn me personally in every way he sees fit. There is a time for that. The Senator suggested that General Johnson and I should have a fist fight; that the way for me to settle my battles in the Senate is to have a fist fight.

That is bad advice from the Senator. He settled a claim like that at the Chevy Chase Country Club. I do not want to settle one that way, because I am liable to have the same disaster visit me as a Member of the Senate that he had visited on him as a member of the Chevy Chase Country Club. He is giving me bad advice. That is why I shall not take his advice. That is one reason. Another reason is that I am not much of a fighting man until I have to fight. I am not in the fighting business. That is not my occupation. I have made a living in many ways, but the worst one I have ever had recommended was the fighting way. Sometimes all of us may have that to do, and all of us will when we have to, but I am not recommending that.

I think the Senator from Arkansas is beneath what he is recommending to others; that is, when he is recommending decorum in the Senate he is beneath his own recommendation.

There has been offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARKI, to be printed in the RECORD today, the speech of General Hugh Johnson. I know the Senator from Missouri never read the speech or he would not have offered it.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I am frank to say I did not hear the speech and did not read it, but when the Senator from Louisiana, answering that speech, consumed a very large amount of important time which should have been devoted to public business, it seemed to me in common justice to all concerned the speech should be inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. LONG. I knew the Senator had not read the speech because the speech contains matter that is not only abusive, but is indecent. It went over the radio, and that will stand all right. As long as the one speaks for the powers, as long as one speaks for the man that has the power in his hands, he can abuse his privileges as he may desire. There is no greater act showing our character than to take advantage of power momentarily in our hands and using that as a means of abuse of anyone.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further? Mr. LONG. I yield. Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think it is an equal abuse to take advantage of privileges such as belong to a Senator, and make a one-sided statement without having the other side presented? In other words, does not the Senator think it is an abuse of his privilege as a Senator to get up and make an abusive speech about General Johnson without putting in the RECORD the speech which he is answering?

Mr. LONG. The Senator knows I am not going to make any remarks to hurt him. I hope the Senator will not ask me to yield again. I will answer that question, but I hope the Senator will not ask me any more questions.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President— Mr. LONG. I am going to answer the Senator, if he will be patient just a moment.

My belief is that there would be nothing improper in putting General Johnson's speech in the RECORD except insofar as that speech violates the code of decency or the rules of the Senate. I challenge anybody to take the speech I have made here-I have not read it yet-and find one word in the world that is a violation of the rules of the Senate in any respect. If it does contain anything of that kind, I shall strike it out and apologize to the Senate for it. I have been very careful in that respect.

I want to say further that I have been the leader of a majority bloc, too-not in the United States Senate, but in a small capacity. I am only a small fish in only a small area, even if I am sometimes called, as the Senator suggested, "The Kingfish", but I have wielded the authority of the majority for many, many, many years. I desire to state, Mr. President, that never has there been an act by which I have violated the code of fair fighting because temporarily I had the majority and could have used that privilege on our side.

Not only do I look on it that way, but I have never jumped on a fallen foe. I have never jumped on one that was falling. I despise the man who hits the dead lion. I have never done it. I am not in keeping with the policy of a government that jumps on the dead lions and leaves the other monsters alive and ferocious. I do not even appreciate all the hunting they did of Mitchell when be went broke nor of Insull when he went broke, but which leaves Baruch and Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan killing rats at the same stand. I did not feel that was the way to run the Govern-

I want to tell the Senate how mankind is found out. When you have trouble on your hands and you have made a bargain with a man and you are keeping your side of that bargain, the way to find out that man is when your stock begins to get low and he jumps on you when your blood is getting down to the ebbing stage. I have had those experiences. I have had them here in the city of Washington.

I am not going to take advantage of any authority I have in Louisiana. If I have any, it is no more than the Senator from Arkansas has in Arkansas. There is only one difference between us. In Louisiana the people want what Hury Long wants. I have no more control over those in power in Louisiana, and am no better friend to them than the Senator from Arkansas is to those in Arkansas. But in Louisiana the people want what Huey Long wants and in Arkansas the people do not want what the Senator from Arkansas wants. That is the only difference between us. I would be called a dictator in Arkansas if I would be called a dictator in Louisiana, according to the words of the Senator from Arkansas. Why not call me one in Arkansas? Everything I have asked the people of Arkansas to do they have done—they will do it again, too, next year—and I will never have to utter a word of reflection upon anyone, or violate the code of the Senate to get them to do so.

Now, let me see:

The Senator from Arkansas said:

For instance, by implication, he seemingly denounced Mr. Baruch for the statement that German reparations should be fixed in a definite amount.

That is not what I did at all. What I said was that in that statement Mr. Baruch recommended that $8,000,000,000 of German bonds should be financed in this and other countries, and that they ought to be floated on the market as fast as they could be. German bonds and German marks were sold in this country; and what has happened to the purchasers of the German bonds and German marks, and how are the purchasers ever going to get back a dime of their money?

Now, let us see how fair the Senator has been in other respects, if I may just take out a line or two:

It is my information that Mr. Baruch has never sought to impose his views on any President;

Did I say that he had sought to impose his views on any President? What difference does it make? No one is going to deny how influential he has been, according to the magazine of J. P. Morgan.

that when he has acted, he has acted at the solicitation or request of the head of the Government.

In other words, Mr. Baruch is such a towering genius that all he has done has been done at the request of the Presidents of the United States, as many of them as have sent for Baruch, and Baruch never coming down here of his own volition. That is what we tried to get rid of. What business has Baruch here? Does anybody know an industry of which he is the head? No one knows any business of which he is the head, so far as I know. I do not know of anybody who does. He does not run any enterprise that I know of. I may be wrong. He is a cracker-jack manipulator of markets and bonds and stock. Well, should he be?

Why, Mr. President, if you put me down here where I have one of my men running the N. R. A., and another one of them over here, and then set me over in the White House where I know what is going on over there, and I know whether the dollar is going to be $1.59 or $1.69, and I know whether this thing or that thing is going to come out, as dumb as I am, I can tell you the effect it is going to have on the market.

I never played the market in my life. I never bet a nickel on the cotton exchange in my life. I never bet a dime on a horse race in my life. I never bet a dime on a market stock in my life. As dumb as I am—and I am the dumbest of them all—right today, as dumb as I am, if you will give me the same men that Baruch had, and put me where Baruch was, if I do not clean up ten or fifteen million dollars by rigging the market I am willing to step out and go back and try to farm—which I never was able to do—for the balance of my life.

You just put me where Baruch was! Call him a smart man! He is not in any business. Some of you Senators may think politics is a game with me, and with others-maybe not with yourselves. It may be a game with me. There is nobody in this body who has paid as much for his convictions as I have paid in politics. Nobody in this body has paid as much for his own convictions as I have paid. I was properly interpreted, away in advance, when they concluded that they had better do something to put the "jinx" on HUEY LONG, because he might not go along. They knew their man. would not go along. I would not vote for the economy bill to cut the soldiers' compensation when we had said we were not going to do it. I would not vote for various and sundry other things of that kind that we said we were not going to do. Certainly I would not; and all the patronage and all the contests they might bring here were not going to affect my vote or my position, and they did not close my mouth in the Senate or outside the Senate.

I want Senators to be witnesses to one thing. You have seen me in this body with that kind of a matter being pushed. You have seen them send their horde of income-tax sleuths, investigators, and spies by the hundreds to Louisiana. You have seen them take them off the Lindbergh case; you have seen them take them off the oil cases; you have seen the chase of the hounds; and you have seen the elections.

I had to stand a defeat in one of them; but you have never seen them close the mouth of HUEY P. Long in the Senate, or change the position of HUEY P. Long in the United States Senate. I have been very happy it has been me they have been trying it on, too, because I knew what effect it would have on me. A seat in the Senate is not that dear to me. It does not mean that much.

We are going to have this matter out next year in Louisiana and Arkansas. We are going to have it out, and I am going to be nice, and I am going to be respectful to the Senator from Arkansas. I do not know whether or not he is going to run. I do not know. Perhaps I will not run. I think I will, if there is anybody to run against me. They say the administration will get me up an opponent and put out all the money necessary. The newspapers say that. It will take a whole lot. It will take lots of it, and we will get most of it, Mr. President. When they begin to shell out the money, we will get plenty of it. I will be paying for circuits with their money before they get through with it. [Laughter.]

We have had this thing to fight before. We know what we are up against. When they send down there into that little old State of Louisiana, and they begin to shell out the coin, they are going to find that our boys are going to be right there legally taking the money. We are going to give them leaders. Why, bless your soul, the people in charge of the national administration's ticket last time, Mr. Farley's ticket, went over to a parish to one of my main leaders, and they said, "Here, we want this organization to fight Fernandez for Congress."

Now, Fernandez is a Representative, and he has voted for everything Roosevelt has had up over there; but because he is a friend of Hury Long he had to be beaten. So they went over to one of my leaders in the parish of Jefferson. I will tell you where it is. You can go there and try to hire another, and I will give you one. We will still own your leader. It does not make any difference whom you hire; I will still be writing your articles the next morning, and we will be spending your money the next day, because those people down there are loyal to principle, and you cannot buy them. It does not make any difference how much they give them, they are not going to be bought. It cannot be done. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will suspend until the Chair admonishes the occupants of the galleries.

The Senate has been very liberal with its guests. Unless we can have order in the galleries, however, unless overruled by the Senate itself, the Chair will order the galleries cleared. If the occupants of the galleries desire to remain as the guests of the Senate, they will kindly comply with its rules.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, they wanted a leader. They wanted an organization. Well, I had an organization. I had two organizations; so I just sat down and wrote them out one and kept one for myself. On the day of election both of them went to the polls, and about 6 o'clock in the evening our gang just tore off the badges, and everybody put on Long badges, and said, "Now, by golly, we are going to give you a fair deal! Let's open the boxes and count up the ballots"; and out of about 10,000 votes they had about 800, I think, that they got out of the whole list; and they are not going to get that many next time.

We were trying to elect a judge of the supreme court. They had one of their leaders whom they had distributing their patronage over there under Mr. Farley go out to a little old ballot box outside of Villa Platte, La., about 7 or 8 miles out there, maybe a little farther, and they stood there, I think it was, for 113 men, and 113 men took the $10. Then we opened the ballot box and they had 4 votes out of 113. Now, you go back down there with it. We are going to tell those people to take the money legally—take the money.

They have published it in their papers down there always, and I know what I will have to fight. You have the advantage. I fight on the heavy side. I know I have not the advantage. I have not the money, I have not the corporate influences, I have not the newspapers, I have not the money that is being taxed out of these poor devils, to be paid to them in part, and later on they are going to have to pay it all back. I have not the money to fight that kind of thing. I have not an even fight, I have not an even break. I am willing to take the chances on how the Senator from Arkansas and I come out, both in Louisiana and in Arkansas, in the fall of next year.

There will be no more compromise, Mr. President. There will be no more shaking of hands, either. That is the last time.

The Senator said:

What right has the Senator from Louisiana to denounce his former friend, the President of the United States, in language like that which he employed today?

What language? What language have I used that is not simply criticizing and deploring the methods being followed today by the President of the United States?

Oh, I know the Senator from Arkansas sits close to the President, and it is right that he should. I sat closer than he did once. That was when they needed me. They do not need me now, perhaps. That is all right. He sits differently now. But I do not know whether some of the publicity on the outside is exactly fair. After I thought the Senator was going to uphold my hand in Louisiana, I pick up my home paper, the Times-Picayune, and I see that the rice administrator for Louisiana is one recommended by the Senator from Arkansas. They publish that as a great victory scored by the Senator from Arkansas over the Senator from Louisiana, that the rice administrator for Louisiana is recommended by the Senator from Arkansas. A good gentleman—I hope he is—comes from Arkansas. A good gentleman—I hope he is—comes from Arkansas. His brotherin-law of the Senator from Arkansas. His brotherin-law has come to Louisiana. I am going to keep my brothers-in-law in Louisiana, but I am going to Arkansas next year, and I am going to ask for some of that pie in Arkansas after next September or November. I may not get it, but I will ask for it just the same.

The Senator on the floor here, the other day, referred to martial law in Louisiana as being a terrible thing. They have had martial law in all the States every now and then. It is not the first time they have had it in Louisiana.

Why not martial law? Here is the legislature which votes a tax. They do not take it to the courts, they do not take it to the people, because it had been an issue in a political campaign, and the people had voted our way. Men assembled, armed with guns, told to reassemble and rearm with guns, to kill and murder. Who were the men? Nearly all of them were employees of one corporation.

What were we to do? Were we to sit there and have the laws of the country run with men armed with shotguns, nearly all employees of a corporation, because they do not want something done, or are we to have things done according to law and order? And in that situation not one man has lost his life.

The Senator did not talk about martial law being so bad in Minnesota, and several men lost their lives there. They have had martial law in Arkansas where men have lost their lives. Louisiana has had no loss of life. Louisiana has had law and order, and ought to have been supported rather than condemned.

I want to show the Senate how they have handled these matters. There was a man down there by the name of Parker, a deputy sheriff. Three witnesses swore under oath that he was party to a conspiracy, the leader in the conspiracy to murder me in that State. Three witnesses, one a State senator, one a deputy sheriff, one a former employee of the United States Internal Revenue Department, swore lip to lip, eye to eye, corroborated by other people, one a stenographer who even took down a conversation coming over the telephone, that this man Parker arranged for the exact time, place, and date to murder me on the road from Baton Rouge.

What happened? Parker was called to the witness stand and asked to answer, and before the court declined to answer, on the ground that it would incriminate him if he answered the question.

What happened to Parker? Farley's crowd brought him here to Washington and made him a policeman at the other end of this Capitol, and published the fact in the newspapers.

Law and order, is it? Oh, that is all right. I would not have thought of doing a thing like that and countenancing it toward the Senator from Arkansas. A man who threatened to murder me, whose conversation was taken down by a stenographer, with a State senator a witness, a deputy sheriff a witness, and a United States officer, just retired, a witness, all of them of splendid reputation, was brought here by the Farley regime to the city of Washington and a gun put on him, and his picture published in every newspaper in this city, with the statement that he, this would-be murderer, was here in easy range of the Senator from Louisiana. I knew I was in no danger in the day-time from that man.

That is government for you! That is what we are led to believe that one who cries out against that kind of a travesty must stand, under the ponderous weight of the Senator from Arkansas, who regards no rule, who regards no precedent, who none the less asserts his right, whether there is any right or not, to say and do as he pleases.

Mr. President, I am not undertaking to answer the charge that I am ignorant. It is true. I am an ignorant man. I have had no college education. I have not even had a high-school education. But the thing that takes me far in politics is that I do not have to color what comes into my mind and into my heart. I say it unvarnished. I say it without veneer. I have not the learning to do otherwise, and therefore my ignorance is often not detected.

I know the hearts of people, because I have not colored my own. I know when I am right in my own conscience. I do not talk one way in this cloakroom and another way out here. I do not talk one way back there in the hills of Louisiana and another way here in the Senate. I have one language. Ignorant as it is, it is a universal language within the sphere in which I operate. Its simplicity gains pardon for my lack of letters and education.

The Senator says I am quite egotistical. Perhaps so; I do not know; that may be true also. It probably is true. If it gives me any satisfaction, hounded as I have been, I hope the Senator will not begrudge my being egotistical. Perhaps it might give him a little satisfaction. I have been accused of almost everything from stealing a cord of wood up to murder. Every time I have written a law to put a schoolbook in the hands of children, every time I have fought through the courts for the upholding of a law that took innocent people out of the jail cells, I have been attacked in the press. I have been defamed every time I have managed to sustain a principle that meant education and life, that gave a chance to the boys of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi and other States. They all come to Louisiana—they all come there because they do not have in Arkansas or in Mississippi a medical school which is the pride of the world. where it does not cost you $400 and $500 a year for tuition to study medicine, but where you can study it free; no other State in the Union has that except Louisiana: none have anything like it.

I have had to stand the persecutions in this body, and I have had to stand the persecutions before the courts and the infamous blackmail in the publications of this country, undertaking by every means, foul or otherwise, to reassert such calumnies as the Senator from Arkansas indulges in here, that there has been some nefarious motive in my undertaking to provide for the people in my State when people in the surrounding States have not been provided for.

Senators do not have to take my word for it. Look on the front page of the Times-Picayune, which is represented in this document I have here, and it will be found that Louisiana does not need relief as other States are needing it. Why? That is the cause of the clamor. The Senator from Arkansas does not see like I see. He does not view these matters as I view them. It will be his own fortune and not mine. We would all be personally fortunate today if we were voted out of the United States Senate. There is no man here who would not be lucky the day he loses his place in the Senate as I have seen it. There is not a living on the money we receive for serving here, and Senators are afraid to vote for a living. I hope I have not violated the rules of the Senate in saying that. If I have, I will take it back. But there is not a living here, and I do not believe we will ever vote for a living. Let me put it in that language. The living I have had is not paid here. It is about the sorriest one I have ever had since I left the printing office. Not near as good as I had on the farm. So we will all be fortunate when we lose our seats here, But if we want to stay here and live nonetheless, I say that there is a certain section of this country that is informed; I repeat, there is a certain section of these United States that is informed. Out in the wide open spaces the people are not going to stand for these things. Take my word for it.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt.

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. I am utterly unwilling to take your word for that or anything else.

Mr. LONG. Well, I think the Senator thinks that is very smart.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I do not think it is smart, but it is an honest expression based on his utterances here.

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir. But I will bet he does not go back to the United States Senate next year. How about that? I just make a prophecy you will not be reelected to the United States Senate.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I am utterly indifferent— Mr. LONG. I hope you are, because you are not coming back.

Mr. BAILEY. To the Senator's judgment concerning me or my prospects of coming back.

Mr. LONG. All right, sir. The Senator has seen fit to hurl an unnecessary insult at me. I do not answer it except by saying: I bet you do not come back to the Senate.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator from Louisiana directed his index finger directly at me and asked me what I had to say. I just could not be silent under the circumstances, and I spoke the truth.

Mr. LONG. That is perfectly all right. I have not a doubt in my mind that the Senator will not be here after next year. He wrote me a little different about that a while back. He wrote me a nice letter telling me what a nice man I was and how I had been done such great injustice. I still have the letter. Of course, he has changed his mind lately. That is perfectly all right. I let every man take his own stand, Mr. President, with me. Whenever you want to be an enemy of mine, that is an easy thing to be. I will reciprocate it right off the bat. If you want to be a friend of mine, I will go double the way. It is no trouble to have me either for a friend or an enemy. I will take whichever pole a man wants to pick. I have never seen them too big and never seen them too little. I would rather have any man for my friend than to have him for my enemy-any manbut whenever he chooses the reverse, I have never quarreled about it. I will meet them in their own bailiwicks. I will not be unfair with them. I will invite them to my own, if they can get anybody to talk to. And I will go to their own bailiwicks.

I said the people are not going to stand for this thing we are doing here. I hope I have not pointed toward the same Senator again. They are not going to stand it. You cannot keep these people starving to death in the United States, as has been done these last 2 years, under a promise that we made to these people that we were going to do this very thing.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state the point of order.

Mr. DIETERICH. This body has not been guilty of starving people to death in the last 2 years. I ask the Senator to take his seat until my point is decided.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under rule XIX, the Senator from Louisiana will take his seat until the Senator from Illinois has stated his point of order.

Mr. DIETERICH. My point of order is that the Senator made a remark which cast a reflection upon the Senate. That he said that we had kept the people starving to death for the last 2 years. That the people would not continue to tolerate that. The Senate has not been responsible for any misery, but the Senate has tried to relieve it for the last 2 years.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It occurs to the Chair that that is a matter of opinion, and that probably the Senator from Louisiana has a right to express his opinion as to what effect the legislation has had upon the country.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. As I understood the Senator's statement he was perfectly within his rights. He said "You cannot let the people starve as they have been starving the last 2 years." That was not a reflection upon the Senate of the United States, unless someone is so thin-skinned he cannot stand that kind of language. I suggest, Mr. President, in all fairness, that the statement made by the Senator is as the Vice President has ruled; that he has made a perfectly logical statement, because there are millions of people at the present time who are underfed and who are undernourished in this great country of ours.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, a point of order. The Chair has ruled. Therefore the Senator is out of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has already ruled that the Senator from Louisiana was within the rules of the Senate, and the Chair recognizes the Senator from Louisiana. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Montana. Mr. WHEELER. I had finished my statement.

Mr. LONG. I am glad, Mr. President, that the Senate has found out that there are hungry people in the United States. I was afraid they did not know that. I am sorry my friend from Illinois has not found that out. It is too bad. That is our trouble. I did not intend, of course, as I hope my friend will understand, to reflect upon the Senate. I say again, at the risk of being misunderstood, that you cannot we cannot-sit here and let this starvation in the United States continue two more years like we have the last two. We told the people we knew about the starvation in this country, and we told them how we were going to end it. We told them a whole lot-maybe we told them too much. But we told them we knew all about it; and the people of the United States are not going to stand for it. You remember what I am saying. The people of the United States are not going to stand for this distress and this destitution and this wreckage which is going on and has been here for the last 2 or 3 or 4 years in the form of famine even in a land of too much of everything.

I have tried to be generous. I have tried to be fair. I have tried to be honorable. If I have uttered an insulting word to a man in this body at any time I do not know what it has been, and I would undertake to correct it if I had.

I have lived within the rule. Let me tell you something: Do not think I am going to take anything off of anybody that is not right and fair, because I am not. I am not afraid of anybody. I am not going to be afraid. I have enjoyed my life because I have never allowed myself to get afraid even when I wanted to be. I am not going to get afraid of anybody nor anything. What do I care for a life of ease in the United States Senate when my brothers and sisters, my uncles and aunts, my relatives and friends, are starving to death? What do I care, then, about a little old job in the United States Senate?

I have suffered much from a little write-up which I saw in a Chicago paper about a little 4-year-old boy who was out at 5 o'clock in the morning with an ax on his shoulder hunting for wood to cut because his mother was freezing. I suffered more from reading that article than I had pleasure from any job that came to me because of being in the United States Senate. I have suffered more from a picture on the front page—oh, yes; I see you smile! It tickles you. That is what makes it so hellish to me—that a man can enjoy sitting in a body like this with starvation and pestilence existing among the people. That is what makes it so disgusting. Where is the honor, the sincerity, the humanity left that a man can smile at such conditions?

I have suffered more at seeing the front page of the American Magazine weekly, showing a child standing in front of a furnace in a show window, carrying the statement that he had been to the foreman's house and had seen three furnaces in one house, and yet that child was standing in the snow freezing. Hundreds of them are doing that, starving to death—literally starving to death. I have picked up and helped men who were trying to maintain the appearance of respectability, trying to make their collars look clean, trying to make their clothes look respectable, when they were starving to death on the inside.

We do not know half the misery going on in this country because 80 percent of it is still shielded beneath the pride of the people who hate to admit among their neighbors the destitution into which they have fallen.

Let the Senate go on. Let the Senator from Arkansas insult everybody who dares to come here and point out that the wreckage of Baruchism under Hoover is the wreckage of Baruchism under Roosevelt. Let it go on. Let the Senator go on. None the less my voice will be the same as it has been. Patronage will not change it. Fear will not change it. Persecution will not change it. It cannot be changed while people suffer. The only way it can be changed is to make the lives of these people decent and respectable. No one will ever hear political opposition out of me when that is done.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana has concluded his remarks by an effort to make it appear that there is someone here who has willingly contributed to destitution in the country or has been amused at poverty and suffering. I think everyone who hears me will agree that this is illustrative of the methods of the Senator from Louisiana which I characterized in a previous speech this day.

The Congress during the present administration, the administration which the Senator from Louisiana so bitterly condemns, has appropriated literally billions of dollars from the Treasury for the purpose of relieving suffering among our citizens. We have now under consideration a great measure designed for the same purpose, carrying approximately $5.000.000.000.

It is not based on facts nor on justice nor on generosity, nor any other attribute which the Senator from Louisiana claims for himself to the exclusion of his colleagues in the Senate, to say that the Senate is desirous of starving the people of the country. It is a declaration which is illustrative of the character which underlies the speech that has just been made.

The Senator from Louisiana has made personal allusions of which I shall take no notice. The Senate cannot be interested in the petty conversations, the disagreements or the agreements, into which the Senator from Louisiana and other Senators have entered.

He did make one statement with respect to myself to which I wish to make a brief reply. He said that the administration of State affairs in Arkansas occupies the same relation to me that the administration of affairs in Louisiana has to himself or, to quote his statement more accurately, that I am exerting the same influence and control over the administration of State affairs in Arkansas that he is exerting in Louisiana.

Mr. President, since retiring from the office of Governor of Arkansas a good many years ago and becoming a Member of this body I have never in any way interfered in or sought to control the administration of public affairs in that State. It has been my policy to permit those officers whom the people select by the process of election to perform their constitutional and statutory duties. For that reason I am not so familiar with the situation of the State administration as I should like to be. It would be helpful to me in my work if I were more familiar with it. I have never sought to place in office as Governor of my State one whom I treated as a puppet, to whom I gave orders or instructions, and who was responsive to my dictates.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I yield to the Senator. Mr. LONG. The Senator from Arkansas has some rela-

Mr. LONG. The Senator from Arkansas has some relatives on the pay roll?

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, yes; and so has the Senator from Louisiana. What has that to do with it? That is another illustration of the magnitude of the mentality of the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. The Senator takes it as being outside of the proprieties to ask him if the relatives he has on the pay roll are not subject to his ordinary recommendations? If I was getting my relatives on the pay roll, I would think I had some influence with them.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have very few relatives on the pay roll of Arkansas, probably not half the number the Senator from Louisiana had on the pay roll of his State. I do not think that is relevant. I think it is silly, if I may use such a term in the United States Senate.

The point I am making is that I have never assumed to control the Governor of my State nor the other officers of my State. But what is the fact in that regard with respect to the Senator from Louisiana? He seems to boast of the fact that he is not only Senator but he is Governor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I yield.

Mr. LONG. When did the Senator hear that?

Mr. ROBINSON. I have never heard anything else.

Mr. LONG. Did the Senator hear that from me?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I never heard anything else from the Senator from Louisiana except that he was going down to his State to tell Governor Allen what to do. I have never heard anything else from him after he got there except quick, snappy orders to the Governor as to what he should do; and I will say of the Governor that he has been fairly responsive

Mr. LONG. Did the Senator say he had heard that himself or heard me say that?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I think the whole course of the Senator's addresses and his public interviews is to indicate that he is boastful of the fact that he dominates Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Published interviews?

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, well, I know the Senator-

Mr. LONG. I should just like to have the Senator refer to one of them.

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, the Senator from Louisiana and I, I think, cannot agree about these things.

Mr. LONG. For instance, take the national administration. The Senator speaks for the national administration, does he not, quite frequently?

Mr. ROBINSON. Sometimes I feel that I do.

Mr. LONG. Sometimes I speak for my faction in Louisiana.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the Senator cannot perceive the difference between my relationship to the national administration and his relationship to the Governor of Louisiana, there is a hopeless obliquity in his mental vision.

Mr. LONG. There is a difference, and I will tell the Senator what the difference is. Will the Senator let me tell him?

Mr. ROBINSON. No; I think not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). The Senator from Arkansas declines to yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator, I think, has claimed to himself a great many virtues. All the measures that he espouses are wholesome and in the interest of the people! He is the champion of the people; and his boast that he has some of the electors in Louisiana so well trained that they will take money from the opposition and still support him and his cause is remindful of an incident that is said to have occurred during the contest between the late President Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. Taft.

In a community, of course, without the knowledge of the candidates—a community said to be situated in Maryland—many efforts were being made to influence the electors, and there were said to be present persons who were expending money after the fashion that the Senator said money was expended in Louisiana. Some one approached an old colored man and asked him how he was going to vote. "Well," he said, "Mr. Taft's friends paid me $15 and Mr. Rosenfelt's friends only paid me $10. Being as I think Mr. Rosenfelt is the least corrupt, I think I will vote for him." [Laughter.]

Mr. President, of course, under our standard of government and of politics it is nothing to boast of that one's supporters will take money from the opposition and still remain loyal.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. How are we going to break up this corruption that the national administration—

Mr. ROBINSON. By men like the Senator from Louisiana, of great power, refusing to be corrupt, and refusing to participate in corruption. That is the best way to do it.

Mr. LONG. No; but let me ask the Senator further: When they are running a gang of brigands and thieves down there, and are trying to buy their way into office, do you not think honest people—

Mr. ROBINSON. Who started running the gangs of brigands and thieves?

Mr. LONG. For instance, in the Capital here-

Mr. ROBINSON. Whose gang started it, and who is it that goes about the Capital of the Nation and the capital of his own State with an armed guard, afraid that the people of his own State will do some violence to him?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Does the Senator think that with 400 armed men passing a resolution that they are going to meet the next day and kill me, I should go out without anybody?

Mr. ROBINSON. O Mr. President, it is well known that the Senator from Louisiana has been going about Washington with an armed guard ever since he has been a Member of the Senate. In my judgment, it is to his disgrace.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Do not the President of the United States and Mr. Farley have bodyguards? [Laughter.]

Mr. ROBINSON. Oh, yes; oh, yes! Now the Senator has it on the correct basis; has he not? [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I think the remarks of the Senator from Louisiana illustrate his conception of himself. Everything he does is all right. Everything you and I do is all wrong.

It is said that a few years ago a prominent American citizen was returning from a visit abroad, and he saw on the dock a gigantic object towering above everything that came within his vision—the most colossal object he had ever gazed upon—and he wondered what it was. When he arrived he found that it was nothing more than the opinion of the Senator from Louisiana of himself strutting around the dock. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The Senator from Arkansas has referred to the fact that I have had an armed bodyguard. I wish to say to the Senator that Mr. Farley has armed bodyguards. I think I am as big as he is in the affairs of this country. I occasionally have to have a few with me—sometimes one, sometimes none—but when 50 men meet—

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President-

Mr. LONG. I rise to a question of personal privilege, I have a right to do that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. No; please let me get through. I shall be through in a minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LONG. For instance, when the faction of the President of the United States brings a man up here and puts a gun on him, and three witnesses have sworn that he had been the leader of a conspiracy to murder me, and that he had said, "I cannot get him here, but I will get him in Washington", and after he takes the stand and refuses to testify on the ground that it would incriminate him, you bring him up here and give him a job, and then you criticize anybody for having anybody that might offset that kind of a culprit, that is a remarkable thing.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Senator does not mean that I brought anybody here?

Mr. LONG. I do not mean you did.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator has said that twice.

Mr. LONG. I beg the Senator's pardon; I mean the national administration.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, now will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. LONG. Yes, sir; I am pleased to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator from Louisiana mean to say that he has an armed guard in the galleries of the Senate?

Mr. LONG. No.

Mr. McKELLAR. At any time?

Mr. LONG. No; I do not.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does he appear here in the galleries of the Senate armed?

Mr. LONG. He does not that I know of.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does he sit in the galleries day after day to guard the Senator?

Mr. LONG. Oh, no!

Mr. McKELLAR. Does he do it at all?

Mr. LONG. Oh, no! If I go out at night, or go to my home, I try to take someone with me. Does the Senator object to that?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I have no objection to that; but I have been told that the Senator has an armed guard in the Senate gallery.

Mr. LONG. Well, I have not that I know of.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is he in the gallery now?

Mr. LONG. No; none that I see. Do you want me to go and count the occupants of the gallery? [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. No; but I think that if the Senator has an armed guard in the Senate gallery, it is something that the Senator ought not to be guilty of.

Mr. LONG. Well, what about this armed thug that you have got over here in the House of Representatives? Do you not think you ought to get him out of there, too?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no armed thug anywhere.

Mr. LONG. I am not talking about you; but, since you are so excited, what did you think about their bringing this man Parker up here, whose picture they put in the paper, and three witnesses have sworn that he said he was coming here to Washington to kill me? What did you think of their putting him on the pay roll and giving him a gun to go around this Capitol? What do you want to do? Do you want to say that I have to be murdered here? Is that what you have to say, that I must go out and be shot? That is a marvelous thing you are doing here, and you raise holy murder—

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, as the Senator is addressing his remarks to me, I desire to say that I do not think anybody will ever do that. I doubt if they would fire at the Senator. I think the Senator is unduly alarmed about his own safety.

Mr. LONG. I am not unduly alarmed a bit. There is not anybody going to bother me, personally or otherwise.

GEN. JOHN H. RUSSELL

The Senate resumed the consideration of the nomination of John H. Russell to be a major general in the Marine Corps.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Black] to recommit the nomination to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The motion was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of General Russell? [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and the nomination is confirmed.

IN THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations for promotions in the Navy.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I ask that the naval nominations be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations for promotions in the Marine Corps.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I ask that the Marine Corps nominations be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed en

PURLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk read the nominations of Oscar Mikkelsen and Mark E. Bowers to be passed assistant dental surgeons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate resume the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

JANUARY REPORT OF RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, reporting, pursuant to law, relative to the activities and expenditures of the Corporation for January 1935, together with a statement of authorizations made during that month, showing the name, amount, and rate of interest or dividend in each case, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads:

House Joint Memorial 4

A joint memorial requesting the construction by the Federal Government of the scenic highway from Santa Fe to Las Vegas, N. Mex., over the Sangre de Cristo Range through the Santa Fe National Forest

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of New Mexico:
Whereas the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of New Mexico in 1903, in one of the first "good roads" measures in this State and the then Territory, established a public road from the city limits of Santa Fe in the county of Santa Fe to the limits of Las Vegas in the county of San Miguel, over the most feasible route through or near the canyon of the Santa Fe River over the Sangre De Cristo Range through the then United States Pecos River Reservation; and

Reservation; and
Whereas such a highway, beginning at or near the canyon of the Santa Fe River, thence east over the mountain range in the most feasible and practical direct route to Las Vegas, would pass almost in its entirety through the Santa Fe National Forest, and over the Sangre De Cristo Range, the upper Pecos River country, and the most beautiful mountain parks region in this State, and would render to the inhabitants of this and other States accessibility to unexcelled scenic grandeur, and, for the purpose of trade and healthful recreation, would open up a section, now isolated, but abounding in beauty, resourceful in mineral deposits, and rich in historic associations; and
Whereas the Federal Government is creating public works for historic associations; and

Whereas the Federal Government is creating public works for the purpose of relieving the distressed unemployed of the Nation, and the construction of such a road by the Federal Government would afford employment to the stricken and destitute unemployed of the counties of Santa Fe, Mora, and San Miguel; and Whereas said highway would lie within the Santa Fe National Forest almost in its entirety, and it having been the policy of the National Government to improve its forest by the construction of roads and highways therein: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved. That the Senate and House of Representatives of the

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of New Mexico respectfully and earnestly memorialize and request the Congress of the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture to construct and maintain such a highway with Federal funds; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Senators and Representatives of New Mexico in Congress.

ALVAN N. WHITE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Attest:

J. R. T. HERRERA, Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives. LOUIS C. DE BACA, President of the Senate.

Attest:

F. E. McCulloch, Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Approved by me this 23d day of February 1935.

CLYDE TINGLEY,

Governor of New Mexico.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

House Joint Memorial 7

A joint memorial petitioning Congress for consent to tax inter-state sales of goods for use or consumption within the State

To the President and Congress of the United States:

Whereas it has come to the attention of this legislature that the United States Senate in the second session of the Seventy-third Congress passed Senate bill No. 2897, entitled "An act to regulate interstate commerce by granting consent of Congress to taxation by the several States of certain interstate sales", and that the same legislation has been proposed in the House by H. R. 2021 and H. P. 2022, and 8231 and H. R. 8303; and

Whereas the various States have had to resort to sales taxes of various kinds in order to meet emergencies which have arisen during this world crisis, to prevent collapse of their finances and to relieve the intolerable burden of property taxation; and

Whereas great hardship thereby has been imposed upon the local merchant because of the inability of the State to tax like sales by concerns doing a tax-exempt business across State lines in competition with such land merchants, and which commerce does not carry its proportionate share of the burden necessarily imposed on the same business when carried on by a citizen in the State, though receiving the same benefits and protection: Now, therefore, be it

State, though receiving the same benefits and protection: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Twelfth Legislature of the State of New Mexico respectfully petition the President of the United States and the Congress thereof, to carry forward and enact into law such legislation as was initiated by Senate bill 2897, and H. R. 8231 and H. R. 8203, permitting the States with sales-tax laws to tax, on a nondiscriminatory basis, interstate sales of goods for shipment into the State, for use and consumption therein, in competition with like transactions of local merchants; and be it further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Clerks of the House of Representatives and of the Senate of the United States, and to the Senators and Members of Congress from New Mexico.

ALVAN N. WHITE,

ALVAN N. WHITE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Attest:

J. R. T. HERRERA, Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives. LOUIS C. DE BACA, President of the Senate.

Attest:

F. E. McCulloch, Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Approved by me this 23d day of February 1935.

CLYDE TINGLEY, Governor of New Mexico.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

House Concurrent Resolution 9

concurrent resolution memorializing Congress to amend the Bankhead Cotton Control Act to exempt the first three bales of cotton raised by any cotton grower from the operation of said

Whereas the Bankhead Cotton Control Act in its present form operates as a severe restriction upon the income of the small farmer and grower of cotton, and especially on tenant farmers of Oklahoma and of the United States; and

Whereas the people of Oklahoma believe that the purpose of said act is to restrict the growing of cotton in large quantities on individual farms: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Fifteenth Legislature of the State of Oklahoma (the senate concurring therein), That the Congress of the United States is hereby memorialized by the people of the State of Oklahoma, through their representatives in the legislature, to amend the Bankhead Cotton Control Act to exempt from the law the first three bales of cotton raised by any cotton grower of the United States whose major crop is cotton and whose major income is from cotton; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be mailed to the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States Congress and to each member of the Oklahoma delegation in Adopted by the house of representatives on the 25th day of February 1935.

Adopted by the senate on the 20th day of February 1935.

LEON C. PHILLIPS,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

CLAUD BRIGGS. President pro tempore of the Senate.

Correctly enrolled.

LOUIE W. BECK Chairman Committee on Enrolled and Engrossed Bills.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

House Concurrent Resolution 18

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Arkansas, and the Senate concurring therein, That Arkansas is deeply interested in the passage of the work-relief bill proposed by our honored President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the entire State is in need of the funds, and the permanent public improvements that will come to the State if such bill is passed;

That it is the sense of this body that it would be a mistake to attach to the proposed bill the so-called "McCarran amendment" providing that laborers on such relief works should receive the prevailing wage because such a provision would not only vastly increase the cost but also would deprive private industries of laborers who would flock to the easier Government work for the same wages;

That we respectfully urge upon our Senators and Representa-tives in Congress that they continue united and vigorous support of the President's own plan and aid in the passage of this deeply needed legislation;

That a copy of this resolution be sent to each Senator and Representative from this State to Congress.

I, H. P. Smith, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of House Concurrent Resolution No. 18.

(Signed) H. P. SMITH, Chief Clerk. [SEAL]

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

Senate Joint Memorial 12

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent:

That the work of the Federal Bureau of Mines is of great importance to our State because of its great undeveloped resources of both base and precious metals;

That research and exploration conducted under the jurisdiction of this Bureau have in the past been of tremendous benefit in the discovery and development of the natural resources of our State;

That adequate appropriations for the maintenance of this Bureau should be provided in order that work now under way should not be curtailed and that further activities may be prosecuted looking toward a thorough development of the vast hidden treasures of our State: Therefore be it

State: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Idaho (the house of representatives concurring), That we most respectfully urge upon the Congress of the United States that the proposed appropriation for the Bureau of Mines now pending in Congress is not sufficient for a proper functioning of the Bureau and that said appropriation should be increased so as to provide adequate funds for carrying on work already begun and making the Bureau an efficient and effective agency in the development of mining resources throughout the Nation; the providing of proper safety provisions in the industry and the collection and dissemination of authentic information concerning this great industry; and be it further mation concerning this great industry; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho be authorized, and he is hereby directed, to immediately forward certified copies of this memorial to the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

House Joint Memorial 3

memorial memorializing the President and Congress of the United States for a grant of land containing a hot-water spring for the use and benefit of the State of Montana as an infantileparalysis sanatorium

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, has set aside January 30 of this year for the purpose of raising funds for sanatoriums for the relief of infantile paralysis;

Whereas it is impracticable to send those in need of treatment to other State sanatoriums; and Whereas Montana was visited this past year by an epidemic of infantile paralysis, which will more than ever necessitate a means of treatment; and

Whereas there are remaining in the State of Montana several hot springs on vacant, unappropriated, unreserved public land: Now, springs on vacant, unappropriated, unreserved public land. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the joint action of the Twenty-jourth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That the Congress of the United States be memorialized to grant to the State of Montana a site containing a hot spring for the use and benefit of an infantile-paralysis sanatorium; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be forwarded to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives dent of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and each of the Senators and Members of the House of Representatives of Montana in Congress and to the Secretary of the Interior.

W. P. PILGERAM,

Speaker of the House. ERNEST T. EATON, President of the Senate.

Approved January 31, 1935.

F. H. COONEY, Governor.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the petition of Hannah Buckhalter, of Tibbee, Miss., praying for the enactment of old-age pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of the State of California, praying for the adoption of the so-called "Townsend old-age-pension plan", which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Chambers of Commerce of Canton and Yazoo County, Miss., opposing the ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisor of the City and County of San Francisco, Calif., protesting against enactment of legislation vesting any control of municipally owned water terminal facilities in the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of the State of Idaho, praying for the enactment of legislation to eradicate all subversive movements against the Government of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of students of the Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va.; and Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College, Tallahassee, Fla., favoring the enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Common Councils of Laredo, Tex., Trinidad, Colo., and Rochester, Minn., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BARBOUR presented resolutions adopted by the Board of Commissioners of Perth Amboy and the Common Councils of the Cities of Nutley and Rahway, in the State of New Jersey, favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution of the Municipal Council of Clifton, N. J., favoring the enactment of the so-called "Pat-man bill", being the bill (H. R. 1) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjustedservice certificates and for controlled expansion of the currency, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MALONEY presented resolutions adopted by Group No. 25, of Bridgeport, District No. 152, of Waterbury, Group No. 2327, of Wallingford, and Group No. 1038, of Norwich, all of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, in the State of Connecticut, favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TYDINGS presented memorials of officers and members of St. Anthony's Branch of the Baltimore Section of the Archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name Society, and members of the Holy Name Society of Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, in the State of Maryland, remonstrating against alleged antireligious conditions and religious persecutions in the Republic of Mexico, and condemning the alleged attitude of the United States Ambassador to that country, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the publication of personal income-tax returns, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Frederick and vicinity, in the State of Maryland, praying for the adoption of the so-called "Townsend old-age-pension plan", which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Group No. 692 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, of Baltimore, Md., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented the memorial of the Board of Directors of the Peabody (Mass.) Chamber of Commerce, remonstrating against the enactment of Senate bill 1807, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented the memorial of Dr. Daniel Lawrence Hunt and sundry other citizens of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the making of an appropriation of $4,880,000,000 for public-works relief, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented letters in the nature of petitions from the Joint Conference Board of Bookbinders of Greater Boston; Local No. 16, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, of Boston; and International Wood Carvers' Association of Dorchester, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the adoption of the so-called "McCarran amendment" providing for the payment of prevailing wages in connection with proposed appropriations for public-works relief, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented the petition of Harold N. Keith, Unit No. 204, American Legion Auxiliary, of West Boylston, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the payment of adjusted-compensation certificates of World War veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of the Peabody Chamber of Commerce, of Peabody, and sundry citizens of Newton, Melrose, and Andover, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation repealing the requirement of publicity in individual income-tax returns, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petitions of Lodge Fratelli Vandiera, No. 240, of Marlborough, and Lodge Eleonora Duse, No. 1690, of Norwood, both of the Order of Sons of Italy in America, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for inclusion in pending old-age-pension legislation of a provision whereby the benefit of pension would be extended to residents who have lived for many years continuously in the United States, although not naturalized, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Grand Executive Council, Massachusetts Grand Lodge, of the Order of Sons of Italy in America, favoring inclusion in pending oldage-pension legislation of a provision whereby the benefit of pension would be extended to residents who have lived continuously in the United States for 10 years, although not naturalized, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a letter from William Irving Brown, of Dorchester, Mass., enclosing copy of a speech to be used in the extension course (oratory) at Boston College, relative to the so-called "Townsend revolving old-age-pension plan", which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented letters and papers in the nature of petitions from the Worcester Laundry Owners' Association, of Worcester; the joint boards of the First Presbyterian Church, of Worcester, and C. Leslie Glenn, rector of Christ Church, of Cambridge, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for amendment of proposed pension legislation providing that exemption be granted to organizations which provide pensions similar to the requirements of pending social-security legislation, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Lawrence, Mass., remonstrating against alleged antireligious conditions and religious persecutions in the Republic of Mexico, and favoring the recall of the United States Ambassador to that country, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented letters in the nature of petitions of Post No. 37, of Boston, and Post No. 29, of Lowell, both of the Polish Army Veterans' Association, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the passage of House bill 2739, providing for an extension of time for the naturalization of alien veterans of the World War, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented the memorial of the Worcester (Mass.) Laundry Owners' Association, remonstrating against the passage of legislation proposing to make the coal industry a public utility, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Barre, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing a 30-hour work week in industry and the making of a $4,000,000,000 relief appropriation, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of members of the Lawrence Turn Verein, Lawrence, Mass., praying for the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing a referendum vote on declarations of war, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petitions of Local Union No. 2332, of Northbridge, and Local Union No. 2385, of Dudley, both of the United Textile Workers of America, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation providing a 30-hour work week in industry, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented memorials of employees of the Superior Laundry Co., the Boston Blacking & Chemical Co., the Tailby-Nason Co., the Ashton Valve Co., the Carter's Ink Co., and the Daggett Chocolate Co., and sundry employers of labor, all of Cambridge, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing a 30-hour work week in industry, which were referred to the Committee on the Indicions

He also presented the petition of Osmond Cummings, of Salisbury, Mass., praying for the passage of House bill 5846, to fix the value of subsistence and rental allowance under the Pay Readjustment Act of June 10, 1922, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the General Court of Massachusetts, favoring adoption of the resolution (S. Res. 70) protesting against religious persecutions by the Government of Mexico, and authorizing an investigation thereof by the Committee on Foreign Relations, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(See resolutions printed in full when laid before the Senate on yesterday by the Vice President, p. 2814, Congres-SIONAL RECORD.)

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, favoring the enactment of legislation providing a relief program adequate to maintain a "decent standard of living", and to accomplish other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented on yesterday by Mr. Duffy, p. 2817, Congressional Record.)

Mr. LA FOLLETTE also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, favoring the enactment of legislation to provide work for persons who have secured loans from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and from other sources and who, because of unemployment, are unable to meet the required payments, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented on yesterday by Mr. Duffy, p. 2817, Congressional Record.)

Mr. NORBECK presented a resolution adopted by the city council of Mitchell, S. Dak., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. NORBECK also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

House Concurrent Resolution 12

A concurrent resolution requesting and urging the Federal Government to acquire, set aside, preserve, and maintain as a national park a tract of land in Knox County, Nebr., locally known as the "Devil's Nest"

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the twenty-park a tract of land in Knox County, Nebr., locally known as the "Devil's Nest"

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the twenty-fourth session (the senate concurring):

Whereas the tract of land in Knox County, Nebr., locally known as the "Devil's Nest" and described generally as follows:

"All of sections 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, in township 33 north, of range 3 west; all of sections 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, and northeast quarter of section 6 and east half of section 8, in township 32 north, of range 3 west, all of said described lands being in the political subdivision of Knox County known as 'Herrick Township'; also

"All of sections 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 35, 36, and northeast quarter of section 33 and north half of section 34, in township 33 north, of range 4 west, all of said described lands being in the political subdivision of Knox County known as 'Santee Township'; also

"North half of section 1 and northeast quarter of section 2, in township 32 north, of range 4 west, Hill Township";

All real estate herein described is situated in the sixth principal meridian west, in Knox County, Nebr., including all accretion land to said described tract to the main channel of the Missouri River, naturally in all things fit to be established as a national park; and Whereas if established as a national park, (a) it would be of great benefit to the people of the States of South Dakota and Nebraska; and (b) the public good from its establishment would far outweigh its cost; and (c) it would furnish a recreational playground, centrally located, for a large population; and (d) would furnish a needed game refuge for all migratory game birds and assure its being continued to be used as a natural feeding and resting grounds for wild ducks and geese and other migratory birds; and (e) would lend itself to wild-animal husbandry; and (f) having many natural springs and being within the artesian-well basin, a great number of small natur hereby, instructed to forward a copy of this concurrent resolution to each of the Members of the South Dakota delegation in Congress.

Mr. NORBECK also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

House Concurrent Resolution 8

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to appropriate moneys sufficient to pay and contribute a proportionate share for the maintaining of the public schools within the various school districts within this State wherein there is Government-owned or controlled lands.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the Twenty-fourth Legislative Session of the State of South Dakota (the senate concurring):

Whereas the Federal Government, through its Department of Indian Affairs, has or is about to promulgate a policy of furnishing education to Indian children in the school districts in which they educated to Indian children in the school census of said districts and reside, thereby reducing the school census of said districts and materially reducing the tax revenue therein; and materially reducing the tax revenue therein; and

Whereas the Federal Government likewise through its various rehabilitation centers, C. C. C. and veterans' camps, and through its proposed submarginal land-buying program, and other Federal projects, has or will acquire and take from the tax rolls large bodies of land in various portions of this State and will thereby cause an extra and enlarged tax burden to be placed upon privately owned lands for the purpose of maintaining the schools within the districts wherein said lands are located; and

Whereas it would create no appreciable burden on the Federal Government to reimburse said school districts for the revenue thereby lost: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, memorialized to forthwith appropriate moneys sufficient to pay and contribute to said school districts the revenues lost to pay and contribute to said school districts the revenues lost to them by reason of the acts of the Federal Government as herein-before set forth, and that said payments continue during all of the times hereafter while such conditions exist; be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this resolution be presented to each Senator and Representative of the State of South Dakota in the Congress of the United States to be by them presented to the proper committee in Congress to determine such legislation.

Mr. NORBECK also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce:

House Concurrent Resolution 9

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to take immediate and appropriate action to place all interstate commercial transportation by highway under Federal regulation

Whereas there is now no Federal regulation or interstate carriers for hire by highway and the public necessity existing for such regulation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of South Dakota (the senate concurring)—

SECTION 1. That we hereby request and urge that the Congress of the United States take immediate and appropriate action to place all interstate commercial transportation by highway under Federal regulation.

SEC. 2. Be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the journal of the house of representatives and that a copy thereof be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of South Dakota in the Congress of the United Adopted January 29, 1935.

ADDITIONAL JUDGES IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. ASHURST presented a telegram from the Board of Governors of the Patent Law Association, of Los Angeles, Calif., which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Telegram]

Los Angeles, Calif., March 5, 1935.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 5, 1935.

Hon. Henry F. Ashurst.

Chairman Senate Committee on the Judiciary,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

The Board of Governors of the Patent Law Association, of Los Angeles, strongly recommends that your committee act promptly on provision for additional judge for Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit, and for two additional judges for southern district of California. Present congestion amounts to a denial of justice and leaves Federal Government with no adequate law-enforcement machinery in this district at a time when it is most urgently needed.

BOARD OF GOVERNOES, PATENT LAW ASSOCIATION,

BOARD OF GOVERNORS, PATENT LAW ASSOCIATION, OF LOS ANGELES.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. TYDINGS, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 707) to amend the act of May 19, 1926, entitled "An act to authorize the President to detail officers and enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps to assist the governments of the Latin American Republics in military and naval matters", reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 238) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 365. A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Elmer E. Miller (Rept. No. 239);

S. 708. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Velie Motors Corporation (Rept. No. 240);

S. 931. A bill for the relief of the Concrete Engineering Co. (Rept. No. 241); and

S. 1860. A bill for the relief of the Tampa Marine Co. (Rept. No. 242).

Mr. LOGAN also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1055) authorizing adjustment of the claim of Frank Spector, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 243) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Mines and Mining, to which was referred the bill (S. 1432) to amend section 5 of the act of March 2, 1919, generally known as the "war minerals relief statutes", reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 249) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 28. A bill for the relief of R. B. Miller (Rept. No. 244);

S. 925. A bill to carry into effect the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of William W. Danenhower (Rept. No. 245).

Mr. BAILEY also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 148) for the relief of the estate of Donnie Wright, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 246) thereon.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 794. A bill for the relief of the Bowers Southern Dredging Co. (Rept. No. 248); and

S. 1863. A bill for the relief of Trifune Korac (Rept. No. 247).

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 65) to extend the period of suspension of the limitation governing the filing of suit under section 19, World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 251) thereon.

Mr. DUFFY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1135) for the relief of Alice F. Martin, widow, and two minor children, reported it adversely and submitted a report (No. 252) thereon.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM—REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. GLASS. From the Committee on Appropriations, to which was recommitted the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, I report back the joint resolution favorably, with amendments, and I submit a report (No. 250) thereon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be placed on the calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. MALONEY:

A bill (S. 2155) to grant relief to persons erroneously convicted in courts of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TYDINGS:

A bill (S. 2156) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay between Baltimore and Kent Counties, Md.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 2157) granting an increase of pension to Lou Sutton; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BULKLEY:

A bill (S. 2158) for the relief of Franz J. Feinler; and A bill (S. 2159) for the relief of Tom L. Taylor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

A bill (S. 2160) for the relief of George C. Mansfield Co. and George D. Mansfield; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2161) granting a pension to Mary Pratt (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NYE:

A bill (S. 2162) to restore to Congress its constitutional power to issue money and regulate the value thereof; to provide for the orderly distribution of the abundance with which a beneficent Creator has blessed us; to establish and maintain the purchasing power of money at a fixed and equitable level; to restore the values of property to just and equitable levels; to increase the prices of agricultural products to a point where they will yield the cost of production plus a fair profit to the farmer; to provide a living and just annual wage which will enable every citizen willing to work and capable of working to maintain and educate his family on an increasing level or standard of living; to repay debts with dollars of equal value; to lift in part the burden of taxation; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. NORBECK:

A bill (S. 2163) for the relief of Harry T. Davison, Sr., and Emma E. D. Davison; to the Committee on Finance.

A bill (S. 2164) granting an increase of pension to George P. Benedict (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TYDINGS (by request):

A bill (S. 2165) to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing the Great Falls Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Potomac River at or near Great Falls", approved April 21, 1928; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2166) for the relief of Ludwig Larson (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2167) for the relief of Mrs. William E. Smith and Miss Clara Smith (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2168) for the relief of the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 2169) for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DICKINSON:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 76) relating to leave with pay for employees of the Government Printing Office; to the Committee on Printing.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 3808. An act to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction of an electric generating station and electric distribution systems, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $118,000; and

H. R. 6084. An act to authorize the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the electric light and power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., and to finance and operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

H. R. 4751. An act to amend section 24 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to the terms of office of members of the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

H. J. Res. 134. Joint resolution to continue the Commission for Determining the Boundary Line Between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia for not to exceed 1 additional year, and to authorize not to exceed $10,000 additional funds for its expenses; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

41 new squadrons, an increase in the number of fighting planes from 840 to 1,300.

Mr. Baldwin's remark on Britain's "new frontier" was supplemented in today's White Paper by the following:

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion of Mr. McNary, the Committee on Claims was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 2097) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine claims of certain bands or tribes of Indians residing in the State of Oregon, and it was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

MARGARET A. SCOTT

Mr. HAYDEN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 93), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for Miscellaneous items, contingent fund of the Senate, fiscal year 1934, to Margaret A. Scott, widow of Daniel U. Scott, late a laborer of the Senate under supervision of the Sergeant at Arms, a sum equal to 1 year's compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

INCREASE OF GREAT BRITAIN'S ARMAMENT BUDGET

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an article from this morning's edition of the New York Times relating to the decision of the British Government to increase its military budget as the result of the increase in the military budgets on the part of the United States and other governments. At a later time I shall have occasion to refer to this article and the action of the British Government.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Mar. 5, 1935]

BRITAIN TO INCREASE ARMS—LOSS OF FAITH IN PACTS SEEN—WHITE PAPER CITES THE GERMAN MENACE, WEAKNESS OF SECURITY TREA-TIES, AND REARMING OF JAPAN, RUSSIA, AND THE UNITED STATES

By Charles A. Selden

LONDON, March 4.—The British Government today announced a new defense policy. From this the only inference to be drawn is that it has no faith left in any of the various existing or contemplated pacts now pending for the peace or security of either Europe

The new policy, presented in the House of Commons in the form of a White Paper signed only with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald's initials, sounds the knell of arms-reduction programs for this country. It calls for increases in the Army, Navy, and air force

The White Paper, being only a general statement of policy, contains no figures indicating to what extent the new policy will be implemented in the immediate future. Army estimates issued today, however, show an increase over last year of about 10 percent to a new total of £43,550,000 and an increase in personnel to 152,-200 from 149,500. (The pound was quoted yesterday at $4.77%.)

The air force estimates will follow tomorrow and those of the Navy Wednesday. Increases are also expected as a matter of course in both these forces, but they will not be sensational.

The new Army figures themselves were not so significant as the warlike tone of the statement from Viscount Hallsham, Minister of War, that accompanied them. He was thoroughly in tune with of War, that accompanied them. He was thoroughly in tune with the White Paper.

The chief needs of the Army now, he said, were further mechanization, new installation of coast defenses at home and abroad, expansion of antiaircraft defenses, and increase of ammunition and general stores. His references to coast defenses abroad chiefly concerned Singapore and Hong Kong.

"In the deliberate judgment of government," he declared, "the time has now arrived when action should be taken to bring our military preparations more up to date; and provision is included military preparations more up to date; and provision is included in these estimates for expenditure, material, and some increases in numbers as an installment of a program which will necessarily be spread over a period of years."

The Government must feel sure of itself, as far as domestic politics are concerned, for this new burst of Tory militarism voiced by a former Socialist Prime Minister stifles all hopes that there might be a reduction in the income tax in the April budget

It is a direct challenge to the labor opposition to fight the next election on the peace issue. It flies in the face of the popular peace ballot, which, with more than 2,000,000 votes already cast, shows 92 percent for arms reduction and 86 percent for abolition of military aircraft. It is in the air force that the new Govern-of military aircraft. It is in the air force that the new Government program provides for the largest increase.

Air force increases were promised by the Government last summer when Stanley Baldwin made his famous remark that the British frontier was no longer the chalk cliffs of Dover, but the Rhine. At that time it was announced that British military aviation strength would be augmented over a period of 5 years by "The range of territory on the Continent of Europe from which air attacks would be launched against this country is constantly extending and will continue to extend. If in war an enemy were in possession of countries bordering on the Channel, the area of England liable to attack would be still further increased. For these reasons the importance of the integrity of certain territories on the other side of the Channel and the North Sea, which for centuries have been and still remain of vital interest to this country from a naval point of view, looms larger than ever when air defense also is taken into consideration."

The countries indicated above are, of course, Belgium, France, and The Netherlands.

No mention is made in the White Paper to Sir John Simon's visit to Berlin Thursday, but, after alluding to British charges made in the House of Commons on November 28 that Germany was illein the House of Commons on November 28 that Germany was illegally arming, today's document says:

"This rearmament, if continued at the present rate, unabated and uncontrolled, will aggravate the existing anxieties of Germany's neighbors and may consequently produce a situation where peace will be in peril.

"The British Government have noted and welcomed the declarations of leaders in Germany that they desire peace. We cannot, however, fail to recognize that not only their forces but the spirit in which the population, especially the youth, of their country are being organized, lend color to and substantiate the general feeling which has already been incontestably generated."

which has already been incontestably generated."

These are the parts of the White Paper which the Government's critics condemn tonight as a strange prelude to the Foreign Minister's visit this week on a mission of peace to Berlin. They are cited as evidence to support the suspicion that the recent Anglo-French agreement is not intended to bring Germany back to the collective system but to keep her out.

There was no debate on the subject today, but there will be one next Monday. The nature of the opposition's attitude was fore-shadowed today by George Lansbury, Labor leader, who referred to the White Paper as "most extraordinary and alarming."

The Labor opposition will probably offer a motion to censure the government because of this unlooked-for departure from its disarmament policy. The Liberals may join in the minority rebuke. The matter will be settled later in the week by the leaders of the two opposition groups.

two opposition groups.

The Government's critics all regard the program as most untimely and wonder why the announcement should have been made just 3 days before Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon's visit to Inasmuch as the Government document refers more specifically to Germany's rearming than to that of any other country, the White Paper is interpreted as meaning either that Sir John expects to accomplish nothing in Berlin or that some useful effect might follow a warning to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler that Great Britain is now going to be as warlike as the rest of the world.

follow a warning to Reichstuehrer Adolf Hitler that Great Britain is now going to be as warlike as the rest of the world.

Britain's official justification for this new departure in general policy is that her good example in unilateral arms reduction has not been followed by other nations and that all the post-war collective peace efforts, in which she claims to have been a leader, have proved inadequate to bring security. The White Paper enumerates all these efforts, including the Kellogg-Briand Pact, the Locarno Treaty, the Disarmament Conference, the Washington and London Naval Treatles, the Pacific Pacts, and various other agreements even including the Anglo-French arrangement of last ments, even including the Anglo-French arrangement of last month. Then it treats them all severally and collectively as insufficient to assure peace without an arms increase.

Relevant to the same point is the White Paper's reference to the fact that "the deterrent effect of the Locarno Treaties and of other methods of collective security is weakened by the knowledge that our contribution in time of need could have little decisive effect.

"The same consideration would, of course, apply to any other method of collective security to which we might be parties."

PACTS NO LONGER ADEQUATE

"Hitherto, despite many set-backs," says the White Paper, "pub-Hitherto, despite many set-backs, says the White Paper, "public opinion in this country has tended to assume that nothing was required for the maintenance of peace except the existing international political machinery and that the older methods of defense—navies, armies, and air forces—on which we have hitherto relied, are no longer required. The force of world events, however, has shown this assumption to be premature, and we have far ever, has shown this assumption to be premature, and we have far to go before we can find complete security without having in the background the means of defending ourselves against attack.

"Nations differ in their temperaments, needs, and state of civilization. Discontent may arise of various causes—from recollection of past misfortunes, from desire to recover past losses, of pressure occasioned by increase in population. All these are fruitful sources of friction and dispute, and events in various parts of the world have shown that nations are still prepared to use or threaten force under the impulse of what they conceive as national necessity.

"And it has been found that, once action has been taken, the existing international machinery for the maintenance of peace cannot be relied on as a protection against an aggressor."

UNITED STATES CITED AS ARMING

UNITED STATES CITED AS ARMING

In this citing of bad examples from other parts of the world, the White Paper also mentions the United States.

"Nor is the increase in armaments confined to Germany," it asserted. "All over the world, in Russia, Japan, the United States, and elsewhere, armaments are being increased. We could not afford to overlook this, and so had to begin to meet our deficiencies.

"But we are anxious not to make our provisions for necessary defense merge into an armament race."

In that connection the Government says the new policy is elastic, so that if sudden peace should come to the world, this country could change its arms program.

country could change its arms program.

With reference to naval policy, the statement is not surprising, because the British made it known last year in London conversations with Norman H. Davis, the United States Ambassador at sations with Norman H. Davis, the United States Ambassador at Large, that this country was determined to increase her cruiser strength from 50 to 70. The White Paper seems to be based on the assumptions that there will be a naval conference this summer and that the British hope to get an agreement that will give her all the fleet she wants without starting a competition.

After rehearsing the familiar arguments that the security of the United Kingdom and all other parts of the Empire depends absolutely on the navy, the White Paper says:

"The main fleet is the basis upon which our naval strategy rests; but the cover it can provide is rarely complete and it may always be expected that detached enemy units may evade our main fleet and carry out sporadic attacks on territories and trade. To deal with these attacks, a considerable number of cruisers is required over and above those forming part of the main fleet.

CAPITAL SHIPS ESSENTIAL

CAPITAL SHIPS ESSENTIAL

"In the main fleet, the capital ship remains an essential element upon which the whole structure of our naval strategy depends. The age of our battleships renders it necessary to commence their replacement at an early date, but the extent of new construction will be subject to any agreement reached at the forthcoming naval conference. The advent of an air attack in the present form was foreseen when existing battleships were designed, but antiaircraft armament is being increased to enable them to perform their primary function.

designed, but antiaircraft armament is being increased to enable them to perform their primary function.

"The strength of our Navy is now fixed by the Washington and London Naval Treaties, which are due for reconsideration this year. Divergences of national points of view have developed since the negotiation of those treaties, as evinced by the recent notice of Japan to terminate the Washington Treaty and by the program effected or contemplated by some European powers.

"It is the hope of His Majesty's Government to secure an arrangement that will avoid competition in naval armaments, while leaving us free to maintain our fleet at a strength necessary to our absolute requirements. This involves calculation of the number of ships of each type which together make up the fleet, and its essential minimum numbers so calculated should be maintained. It is equally essential that our fleet should be kept up-to-date in all respects, including a sufficient highly trained personnel; adequate provision for aircraft, which are becoming more and more important to the Navy; the most modern weapons, repair facilities, the necessary reserves and full ammunition stores of all kinds at convenient bases. Without these facilities, or if our ships are less well equipped than those of possible enemies, all the money spent will be wasted, as the ships cannot perform effectively their defensive functions."

THE NARCOTIC DRUG EVIL

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask that a series of addresses made in connection with the narcotic evil be inserted in the RECORD. As health commissioner of New York I became familiar with the evils of the traffic in narcotic drugs, and I am heartily in sympathy with the efforts being made to deal adequately with the problem. I am informed that the last in the series of broadcasts on this subject will be an address by the Attorney General of the United States.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BROADCAST OVER THE NATIONAL NETWORK FEBRUARY 27, 1935

BROADCAST OVER THE NATIONAL NETWORK FEBRUARY 27, 1935

The announcer said: "This is the fourth in a series of broadcasts under the auspices of the World Narcotic Defense Association, of which Admiral Richmond P. Hobson is president. The narcotic association is now carrying on a comprehensive campaign to secure adoption by all our States of a uniform law on narcotics. "Today eminent narcotic authorities will discuss the general question of 'Law versus the narcotic drug evil.' Mr. Hayne Davis, vice president of the narcotic association, will conduct the broadcast and present the speakers."

Mr. Davis said: "The unrept peed is to secure interestate according the control of the part of the secure interestate according to the secure interestate according to the control of the part of the secure interestate according to the secure interestate according to the control of the part of the secure interestate according to the part of the p

Mr. Davis said: "The urgent need is to secure interstate accord Mr. Davis said: "The urgent need is to secure interstate accord on narcotics through adoption of the uniform narcotic drug act by all the States of our Union. You are privileged today to hear from the very highest authorities on this subject: The United States Commissioner of Narcotics, Mr. H. J. Anslinger; the president of the American Bar Association, Hon. Scott M. Loftin, of Florida; the president of the Bar Association in 1932, when that association endorsed the proposed uniform narcotic drug act, Hon. Clarence E. Martin, of West Virginia.

"The subject of the discussion is 'Law Versus the Narcotic Drug Evil.'

"The first speaker is Mr. H. J. Anslinger, the able, faithful, and efficient United States Commissioner of Narcotics—the chief Federal official for enforcement of the national narcotic laws and treaties—Mr. Anslinger."

ADDRESS BY MR. H. J. ANSLINGER, UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER OF NARCOTICS

Opium has been a boon to mankind in alleviating suffering, but a terrible curse to those who have become victims to its

The hope of a practical solution lies in strict control of the production, sale, and distribution of narcotic drugs, as well as of the raw materials capable of use in the making of these drugs. Great progress has been made in these directions, and further progress is in prospect.

The first opium conference was the outcome of American initiative. Similar conferences with wider scope followed in due-

The first opium conference was the outcome of American initiative. Similar conferences, with wider scope, followed in due course, at The Hague in 1912, at Geneva in 1925 and 1931. The delegates assembled at these conferences from all parts of the world were appalled by the evidence of human wreckage and misery through the abuse of narcotics which was laid before them. They were alarmed also by proof that this evil was rapidly spreading throughout the world. Some of those who were thus enlightened as to the fact and extent of narcotic drug abuse, resolved to stamp out this evil, and at each conference they succeeded in securing general consent to some plans calculated to further this good purpose.

purpose

At the 1931 conference great strides were taken by agreement upon terms for effective limitation of the manufacture of narupon terms for effective limitation of the manufacture of narcotic drugs to the actual needs of mankind, for scientific and medicinal purposes, and for strict control of the drugs manufactured for these purposes so that none of them would find their way into the channels of illicit trade. The treaty evolved by that conference constitutes the most powerful blow that has thus far been dealt to the illicit narcotic traffic. This treaty is now the basis of international accord on narcotics. Indeed, the Limitation Treaty of 1931 may properly be called the Magna Carta of world freedom from the narcotic drug tyrant. Internationally, the allied forces in the warfare on the narcotic drug evil have achieved great victories, and are now consolidated in a strong position, well prepared for the next offensive. In the United States, however, there is weakness in the lines of defense against this enemy of all mankind.

"This is due not to willingness among our good people to let states, however, there is weakness in the lines of defense against this enemy of all mankind.

"This is due not to willingness among our good people to let this evil have its way here but to the division of sovereign power between the Nation and the States composing the Union, and to the difficulties encountered in getting full information on the narcotic problem into the hands of the several thousand State legislators, who alone have power to enact the laws necessary for consolidating this country behind the National Government in the splendid position it has taken on narcotics. Long ago the Treasury Department took steps so far as it lawfully could to limit manufacture of narcotic drugs in the United States to the needs of this country for scientific and medicinal purposes. Its broad policy is to limit the importation of opium and coca leaves to the medical and scientific needs as determined by the United States Public Health Service, and to control manufacture and the distribution of the drugs made from the raw material so imported. This distribution is under effective control from importation of the raw material to delivery of the manufactured drug to the consumer. I know of no finer tribute to the control system of your National Government than one expressed by a delegate of Canada at a recent world narcotic conference. He said that the United States manufactures drugs for 120,000,000 people, and that there is a 3,000-mile border between the two countries, making smuggling comparatively simple yet in all his experience he had there is a 3,000-mile border between the two countries, making smuggling comparatively simple, yet in all his experience he had never found narcotics of American manufacture in the illicit traffic in Canada, although he found large quantities of narcotics of European manufacture.

traffic in Canada, although he found large quantities of narcotics of European manufacture.

"Our entire field force does not exceed 300 officers for the whole United States, or 1 for each 400,000 of the population, and it can be readily seen that the ordinary police work of narcotic law enforcement, such as the detection and apprehension of the many petty street peddlers and the even greater number of those improperly possessing narcotics, cannot be adequately performed by Federal officers. State cooperation is essential to a reasonably adequate system of narcotic law enforcement, and the several States of the Union have a serious obligation to perform in doing their proper part in the suppression of this evil.

"The adoption of a uniform narcotic drug act by all the States will do away with the existing weaknesses in our narcotic laws by giving to the people of the United States and of each State as good protection against the narcotic evil as can be secured through legislative action, will enable the authorities of the States to cooperate more effectively with each other and with the officials of the National Government, and will be a great aid to the United States in properly fulfilling its part in combatting the narcotic evil in those phases which can be dealt with effectively only through international cooperation. We obligated ourselves to control production of opium under The Hague Convention of 1912, we can fulfill that obligation under this State legislation."

Mr. Davis said:

"Thank you Mr. Commissioner."

Mr. Davis said:

"Thank you, Mr. Commissioner.
"No one knows better than Mr. Anslinger what the present law on narcotics is and what that law ought to be.

"Members of the bar who have been recognized by their colleagues as worthy of election to the presidency of the American Bar Association are certainly qualified to plead the cause of law versus the narcotic drug evil before the supreme court of public opinion. You will now hear the views of Hon. Scott M. Loftin, of Florida, president of the American Bar Association, regarding the uniform narcotic drug act. Mr. Loftin found it impossible to be here today, so I shall read a message received from him.

" MESSAGE FROM HON. SCOTT M. LOFTIN, OF FLORIDA

"It has long been customary for the Governors of the several States to appoint commissioners on uniform State laws to confer with one another on those questions, in which uniformity in the laws of the States is deemed to be for the best interests of the people. The Forty-second Annual Conference of these Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, held in 1932, formulated a comprehensive program of legislation on the narcotic problem, which is commonly known as the "uniform narcotic drug act." The American Bar Association held its meeting for that year soon after this act was approved by the conference of commissioners. The act came very appropriately, therefore, before the Bar Association for consideration at its 1932 session.

"The Honorable Clarence E. Martin was president of the Bar for consideration at its 1932 session.

"The Honorable Clarence E. Martin was president of the Bar Association that year, and he was also a member of the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, which formulated this act. He is especially well qualified, therefore, to explain in detail how the adoption of this act by all the States will promote the welfare of the American people. As President of the American Bar Association, I content myself, therefore, with saying that there is no member of our association better qualified than Mr. Martin to demonstrate the present need for adoption of this act by all of our State legislatures. In addition, I am saying a few words more as a citizen of the State of Florida. The proposed uniform narcotic drug act was adopted by the Florida Legislature in May 1933, and the people of Florida were benefited substantially and immediately. diately.
"The Jacksonville Journal, in its issue of October 27, 1933, car ried a strong editorial concerning the uniform narcotic drug act, entitled 'The Workings of a Good Law' and worded as follows:

"'Few enactments of the 1933 legislature were more significant in purpose or sounder in design than the uniform State narcotic law.

"'Occasion for reflection in this regard was presented by the "Occasion for rejection in this regard was presented by the important marijuana arrest and seizure here last week.

"The sale on which the case was made involved 2 pounds of the dried weed prepared for smoking.

"Subsequent investigations led to a larger seizure and the discovery that the plant from which the drug is made has been grown inside the city limits of Jacksonville.

"First among the points to be noted in that the case could not

"'First among the points to be noted is that the case could not have been made prior to the passage of the uniform State law. The Harrison Act applies only to opium and coca leaves and their derivatives.

"'In the second place, the case affords illustration of the integration of enforcement agencies under the new law. It resulted from the cojoint efforts of Federal, State, and city forces.

"'Again, it properly relegates the prosecution of such crime to local courts set up for handling of local problems. The Federal Bureau of Narcotics is left free to exercise its major function of controlling medical movements and smuggling.

"'Eight of the 24 cases made here strictly under the uniform law have been tried and eight convictions have been returned.

"'Scheduled for trial are two types of cases not covered pre-viously. One doctor's license is up for revocation and several addicts will be prosecuted for obtaining narcotics under false pretenses.

"'Revocation of medical licenses and restriction of drug issue misrepresentation by addicts were not provided for in former laws.

former laws.

"'Through the closing up of loopholes and the coordination of existing regulatory agencies, the new uniform State law places that control upon a higher basis of intelligence and efficiency.

"'Florida is in the vanguard of States adopting it."

"I conclude by saying that, in my opinion, all of the States should adopt the uniform narcotic drug act, so as to effectively cooperate with the Federal Government in its war against the illegal drug traffic, and, I will add, so as to secure for the people of each State the protection which we in Florida now enjoy through the adoption of this act in 1933.

"President American Bar Association."

Mr. Davis then said: "Here you have proof from experience, brief but convincing. And after hearing these words of Mr. Loftin, president of the American Bar Association, in regard to the qualifications of Hon. Clarence E. Martin, of West Virginia, that gentleman needs no further introduction. Mr. Martin."

ADDRESS OF HON, CLARENCE E. MARTIN, OF WEST VIRGINIA, FORMER PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

"The World Narcotic Defense Association is engaged in the public-spirited effort of backing every good movement and plan for controlling narcotics, so that they will not be used to the detriment of mankind. So effective has this world-wide movement been elsewhere, that the eyes of the world are now turned toward America in this fight to prevent the illegal and immoral use of narcotic drugs. We are compelled to accept the challenge and measure up to, if not surpass, the standard set in other parts of the civilized world.

"Representatives of nearly all the nations met at Geneva in 1931 and formulated a convention for limiting the manufacture and regulating the distribution of narcotic drugs. This convention was submitted by President Hoover to the Senate on March 1992, and on March 21, 1992, was unanimously retified by the 1932, and on March 31, 1932, was unanimously ratified by the Senate

4, 1932, and on March 31, 1932, was unanimously ratified by the Senate.

"The uniform narcotic drug act is an outgrowth of efforts on the part of the American Bar Association to secure the passage of uniform statutes on subjects of State legislation, where modern conditions require this through the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, composed of three or more commissioners or delegates from each State. These men are supposed to be outstanding lawyers in their respective States and meet annually for a week to deliberate upon proposed uniform statutes.

"A proposed uniform statute is not finally adopted until it is discussed by five or more sessions of the conference. Great care is taken to make the model statute cover all phases of the subject and to be as near perfect as is humanly possible. In addition, before final recommendation to the States for action, these proposed laws must be approved by the American Bar Association.

"In this manner, under modern conditions of society, the sovereignty of the States is being preserved and the perpetuity of our dual system of government insured. The uniform narcotic drug act, now before the legislatures of the many States, is the work of the Conference of Commissioners, having been completed and adopted in 1932. It is the result of 5 years' work by the committee in charge, and by experts connected with various organizations and associations, which were and are interested in the subject. In drafting this act, which covers not alone a social but also an economic problem, it was essential to determine the legal use of narcotic drugs and to protect that use, and to fix what is to be illegal use and provide punishments therefor.

"Consideration had to be given to the various functions of manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, drugglists, doctors, dentists, nurses, and others. The committee in charge of drafting the act was compelled to familiarize itself with the medical effects of the manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, druggists, doctors, dentists, nurses, and others. The committee in charge of drafting the act was compelled to familiarize itself with the medical effects of the various drugs as well as other phases of the problem. This gives you an idea of the conference and of its method of formulating the uniform narcotic drug act. The following enumeration of outstanding points will give an idea of its scope and purpose. The act makes it unlawful to manufacture, possess, prescribe, administer, dispense, or compound any narcotic drug, save in conformity with the provisions of the act: requires manufacturers and The act makes it unlawful to manufacture, possess, prescribe, administer, dispense, or compound any narcotic drug, save in conformity with the provisions of the act; requires manufacturers and wholesalers to have a State license; compels applicant for license to be of good moral character (and if a corporation the officers must be of such character) and be possessed of proper land, buildings, and all paraphernalia needed for carrying on such business; authorizes officials who grant licenses to suspend or revoke them for cause; limits the manufacturer or wholesaler in the sale of the product; forbids sale by apothecaries, except on written prescriptions, which cannot be refilled, and provides for registration of the name of the purchaser and character of the drug bought; regulates administration of drugs by physicians, dentists, veterinarians, with requirements for return of unused portion to the doctor when it is no longer necessary for the patient; limits the amount that can be lawfully sold, so as to keep all purchases within the bounds of medicine and science; restricts the cultivation of raw materials capable of being used in the manufacture of narcotic drugs, so as to keep the quantity down to the actual needs of our people for medical and scientific purposes; covers, in fact, every phase of the problem, with all loopholes for improper use closed up and every safeguard for proper use provided.

"The act is, in brief, a common-sense treatment of a present-day problem, every effort being made to prevent improper acquirement or use of the narcotic drug, from the time of its manufacture down to its actual good and proper use, or to its destruction as provided in the act, when not put to proper use. As to attempted improper use, may I elaborate?

"According to the uniform crime reports for the United States and its possessions for the year 1934, issued by the United States Department of Justice, the age trend of law violators is going downward instead of upward.

"First. All lawful manufacturers, dealers, docto compelled to attempt to ascertain, and then to comply with the meaning of various State statutes having many different and conflicting provisions, as at present.

"Second. There can be cooperation in enforcement among all of the agencies of justice of the States and of the Federal Government.

"Third. All obligations of the United States under the narcotic

"The States are what we make them. They are as strong, and as Ine States are what we make them. They are as strong, and as strong only, as the men who make, interpret, and administer their laws and conduct their affairs. It is essential for the very preservation of our form of government that there be proper and timely action by the States upon major social problems. By the adoption of this uniform narcotic drug act by all our States we of this day not only fulfill our international obligations on narcotics, but we perform a duty we owe to society here at home and make a we perform a duty we owe to society here at home and make a complete answer to those who believe that local self-government is

"It is in this spirit that all persons are asked to urge their legislators to give serious consideration to and secure the passage of the uniform narcotic drug act by their own State."

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the War Department appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

Mr. McNARY. I appeal to the Senator from New York to let us at this time take a recess until tomorrow.

Mr. COPELAND. I shall be very happy to have the Senate take a recess now and proceed with the bill tomorrow.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 6, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 5 (legislative day of Mar. 4), 1935

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

TO BE CAPTAIN

Stephen B. McKinney

TO BE COMMANDER

Greene W. Dugger, Jr.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COMMANDERS

John E. Dingwell Emil Chourre George T. Campbell Hubert K. Stubbs John B. McGovern Elmer J. Tiernan William N. Thornton Albert McI. Wright Charles R. Will Jackson R. Tate John F. Wegforth James M. Fernald William B. Coleman Benjamin C. Purrington Harold J. Walker James H. Foskett

Anton L. Mare
Laurence Bennett
Sumner C. Cheever
Horatio G. Sickel, 4th
Raymond W. Holsinger
Virgil E. Korns
Edmund T. Wooldridge
Charles B. Momsen
Marcy M. Dupre, Jr.
Edgar P. Kranzfelder
Elwood M. Tillson
Alva J. Spriggs
Norman R. Hitchcock
Daniel F. Worth, Jr.
Lemuel P. Padgett, Jr.

TO BE LIEUTENANTS

Hugh B. McLean Richard S. Moss William L. Erdmann John M. Sweeney Frederick J. Ilsemann Lewis E. Coley Joseph J. Woodward Harold B. Edgar Joshua C. Shively Arthur B. Dickie Charles L. Lee George Edward Peterson Henry Plander Clifton G. Grimes Victor D. Long Philip S. Creasor Frederick K. Loomis Paul W. Hord

Stanley P. Moseley John H. Long Paul A. Hartzell David R. Hull James A. McNally John R. van Nagell Bruce D. Kelly Stirling P. Smith Jeane R. Clark Horace W. Blakeslee Chester C. Smith George C. Wright Homer O. Dahlke Robert H. Gibbs DeVere L. Day Clarence E. Haugen Kenneth V. Dawson

TO BE LIEUTENANTS (JUNIOR GRADE)

James D. Grant Hepburn A. Pearce

TO BE PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEON

Leland J. Belding

TO BE PAYMASTERS

Charles E. Leavitt Harrison W. McGrath Josephus M. Lieber Charles W. Fox William H. Phillips Lamar Lee Andrew C. Shiver Carl W. Seitz Cyrus B. Kitchen Charles D. Kirk Walter W. Mahany John H. Davis David W. Robinson

TO BE CHIEF GUNNERS

Clarence W. White Gardner J. Douglass

TO BE CHIEF MACHINISTS

Joseph A. Oehlers Sam B. Ezell

MARINE CORPS

John H. Russell to be major general. Richard P. Williams to be brigadier general. Thomas Holcomb to be brigadier general. Charles F. B. Price to be colonel. Karl I. Buse to be lieutenant colonel. Donald J. Kendall to be major. Lewis B. Reagan to be major. Lawrence R. Kline to be captain. William W. Paca to be captain. Shelton C. Zern to be captain. John E. Curry to be captain. Louis C. Plain to be first lieutenant.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Oscar Mikkelsen to be passed assistant dental surgeon. Mark E. Bowers to be passed assistant dental surgeon.

POSTMASTERS

AT ARAMA

Robert E. Bowdon, Jr., Calera. Clarence C. Calhoun, Jackson. Henry G. Sockwell, Tuscumbia. Edgar A. Tatum, Valley Head. Alma Cardwell, Vredenburgh.

CALIFORNIA

Clayborne L. Boren, Bell. Lela Opal Houghton, Newhall. George H. Gischel, Tracy. John J. Madigan, Vallejo.

GEORGIA

Herman E. Malaier, Chattahoochee.

TLLINOIS

Chrystal W. Beckett, Golden. Clem Wiser, Martinsville. Cora G. Rutherford, Medora. Milton O. Harriss, Pinckneyville. Alfred H. Barrow, Roodhouse.

KANSAS

William L. Brumbaugh, Portis.

MATNE

Walter E. Hurd, Berwick. Mollie M. Armstrong, Cape Cottage. John H. Gilbert, Monson. Grover Cheney, Wells.

MONTANA

Mary A. Fetterman, Saco.

NEVADA

Elva I. Hermansen, East Ely. Cyrus E. Hutton, Ruth.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Frank J. Young, Hinsdale.

NORTH DAKOTA

Peter Meier, Napoleon. Julius C. Pfeifer, Richardton. Emma Kittelson, San Haven. OREGON

Harold R. White, Wasco.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Paul M. Davis, Donalds. John H. Payne, Johnston. Helen DuPre Moseley, Spartanburg.

VIRGINIA

Rosalie H. Mahone, Amherst. E. LeRoy Smith, Appomattox. Lavone A. Baker, Cartersville. Dewey Arrington, Cleveland. Robert B. Spencer, Dillwyn. James F. Walker, Fort Defiance.

WASHINGTON

Marie L. Wenberg, East Stanwood. Gladys E. Gillmore, Medical Lake. Tolaver T. Richardson, Northport. Andrew J. Cosser, Port Angeles. Clifford L. Thomas, Sumas. M. Berta Start, Winslow.

WISCONSIN

Dey E. Clemons, Brule.

James W. Harkin, Shullsburg.

Blanche Delany, Sinsinawa.

Alice M. Clinton, Sullivan.

WYOMING

George J. Snyder. Glendo.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MARCH 5, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we look up to Thy throne of mercy with thanksgiving and praise. Thy benefactions are like a goodly river that flows in soft and gentle radiance through the fields of our lives. In faith may we be dedicated to our ideals and be true to our immortal convictions. Heavenly Father, crown us with that soul power that keeps looking upward to the open skies. Hasten the day, speed the hour when industry shall rejoice and labor be glad and every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree. O may Dives and Lazarus soon come together, heart to heart, and each claim the privilege of carrying the heavier burden. Keep before us the unveiled heavenly hills where the great ones of earth stand clothed in the light eternal and where we hope to rest some day and unfurl the signal of victory. In our Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 147. An act to alter the amount apportioned to certain States for public employment offices affiliated with the United States Employment Service;

S. 209. An act for the relief of Carmine Sforza;

S. 236. An act for the relief of the heirs of Burton Stearns Adams, deceased:

S. 243. An act for the relief of Curtis Jett;

S. 279. An act to extend the time for the refunding of certain taxes erroneously collected from certain building-and-loan associations:

S. 428. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Korber Realty, Inc.;

S. 535. An act for the relief of William Cornwell and others;

S. 537. An act for the relief of C. O. Meyer;

S. 713. An act granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear the case of David A. Wright;

S. 741. An act for the relief of the Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd.;

S. 743. An act to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the claim of the Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co.;

S. 857. An act to authorize the Department of Labor to continue to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes;

S. 872. An act for the allowance of certain claims for extra labor above the legal day of 8 hours at the several navy yards and shore stations certified by the Court of Claims;

S. 937. An act for the relief of the J. M. Dooley Fireproof Warehouse Corporation, of Brooklyn, N. Y.;

S. 998. An act to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of George Lawley & Son Corporation, of Boston. Mass.:

S. 1037. An act authorizing adjustment of the claims of Sanford A. McAlister and Eliza L. McAlister;

S. 1038. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Elda Geer:

S. 1056. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Schutte & Koerting Co.:

S. 1180. An act to amend section 4865 of the Revised Statutes, as amended;

S. 1266. An act for the relief of Robert E. Masters; S. 1360. An act for the relief of Teresa de Prevost;

S. 1392. An act conferring upon the United States District Court for the northern district of California, southern division, jurisdiction of the claim of Minnia C. de Back against the Alaska Railroad;

S. 1472. An act for the relief of the First Camden National Bank & Trust Co., of Camden, N. J.;

S. 1694. An act for the relief of C. B. Dickinson; and

S. J. Res. 21. Joint resolution authorizing the President to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

SOPHIE DE SOTA

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a concurrent resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 14

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to return to the House of Representatives the enrolled bill H. R. 330, entitled "An act for the relief of Sophie de Sota"

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand, this pertains to the spelling of a word?

Mr. RUDD. That is all.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I read an article in the Post this morning much to my astonishment and with some amusement. I refer to its portrayal of the consideration of the "clerk-hire bill" yesterday. The article stated that it was a victory for the Democratic leadership. As I remember the exact wording, it stated, "The Democratic leadership cracked the whip and emerged victorious" to the tune of 242 to 146.

Mr. Speaker, let us look at the facts. If I remember correctly, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] told me the other day when I propounded a question to him that this bill was brought in because the Democratic steering committee requested that it be presented to the House. In looking over the record vote that was cast, I find there were only four or five Republicans who voted for the bill.

I find that the gentleman from Colorado, Mr. Taylor, the leader of the majority; the gentleman from New York, Mr. O'Connor, the Democratic chairman of the Rules Committee; the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Sabath, the chairman of the Democratic steering committee; and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Boland, the Democratic whip of the House, all voted for this bill. If these men are not the leaders on the majority side, I respectfully request that the leaders' names be published in tomorrow's Record. If this was a victory for the Democratic leadership, I do not understand procedure in the House.

Mr. Speaker, may I further say that if the Post would take a suggestion from me, I think the man who wrote this article should give his time to writing for the "funnies" and not act as the political dopester of the House of Representatives.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman kindly tell the House how many Republicans voted against the bill yesterday and at the same time were praying that the bill pass?

Mr. SNELL. So far as I know, none.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the House was kind enough to grant unanimous consent to print in the Record the evidence given by Mr. Fahey, Chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, before the Rules Committee. The Public Printer has returned the statement of Mr. Fahey, calling attention to a regulation of the Joint Committee on Printing which limits the matter permissible for insertion in the absence of estimate of cost. It seems that the statement violates this rule, because it contains more matter than is permissible. The Printing Office gives an estimate as to the cost of the printing of the statement, which is $270.

Mr. Speaker, for the more than 10 years that I have been a Member of this body I have never made a unanimous-consent request of this character. I think the statement is well worth the cost of the printing, and I therefore ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein the statement of Mr. Fahey.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does the gentleman think on his own responsibility that this is worth that amount of money?

Mr. COX. I do.

Mr. SNELL. I am willing to take the gentleman's word. Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there has been complaint universally from the Members of this House against this H. O. L. C. Board since Mr. Fahey was placed at the head of it. If this arrogant head of that Board had done like other heads of departments and had subjected himself to questioning before a committee by the Membership of this House, that might alter somewhat his situation. There are Members here, for instance like the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney], who requested permission, as I understand it, to ask this gentleman some questions. He had a right to do this as a Representative of the people of the United States. The hearing was on his resolution. He was not accorded that privilege, and now to put in a one-sided ex parte statement here of 23 pages of manuscript at this great cost, when the Membership had no opportunity whatever to question Mr. Fahey, I doubt the wisdom of, and I doubt that his statement has any public

I have not yet had an opportunity to read this 23-page statement, but from information I have from others about it, I understand that Mr. Fahey has misrepresented the facts regarding Hon. Fred Cockrell, of Abilene, Tex., and that several statements he made about Judge Cockrell are absolutely false. Mr. Fahey has not a man in his entire organization who will outclass Judge Cockrell in any respect.

I object, Mr. Speaker.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California [Mr. Hoeppel] made the statement yesterday that the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] had placed on the Speaker's table a petition to relieve the Committee on Ways and Means from consideration of the McGroarty bill in reference to the Townsend old-age-pension plan.

I want to say to my colleague from California that either his eyesight is bad or else he has been misinformed. The petition was filed by the gentleman who is now addressing the House.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. CARTER. Did not the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] announce, however, that he proposed to file that petition and sent the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer] and a number of other Members a letter to that effect?

Mr. KRAMER. I do not know what the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] announced, and I received no letter from him. I am just correcting the Record so far as the statement of the gentleman from California [Mr. HOEPPLE] is concerned.

Mr. CARTER. I understand from the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] that a letter was delivered to each and every Member of Congress, including the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer]. These letters were delivered through the post office in the usual course of mail delivery. While I do not want to accuse the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer] unjustly, it would seem to me that he must have had knowledge of the intentions of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan], not only by reason of the delivery of the letter but also from his contact with the Clerk of the House.

I have been informed by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] that the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer] contacted the Clerk of the House for the first time in reference to this matter on Monday, March 4, which was after the date of the delivery of the letter.

The gentleman from California [Mr. Knamer] did not confer with the author of the bill. The author of the bill desired to have the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan] file the petition. Personally I am not concerned about which gentleman should file the petition, but I did regret to see the gentleman from California [Mr. Kramer]—aware, as he apparently was, of the intentions of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Monaghan]—rush in and file the petition ahead of him. I do not believe that such tactics should be countenanced by the Membership of the House of Representatives.

PRESERVE FROM DESTRUCTION OUR NATURAL RESOURCES BY PASSING THE PUBLIC WORKS BILL

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, in the language of one of the greatest sages and statesmen of this Union, Grover Cleveland, today, "A condition and not a theory confronts us." On January 24, 1935, we heard a message to Congress from the vigorous and patriotic President of the United States concerning our duty in conserving our resources; that something must be done, and done at once, to preserve the natural resources of this great Nation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what has produced this condition? If you have listened attentively to his message; you have learned that our forests are being denuded; our land is being washed away and made worthless; our water powers are exhausted; our harbors are filling up with silt, thereby paralyzing our commerce; and something must be done to stop this waste and extravagance and to bring forward a remedy, else this great Nation cannot go forward in the future.

What is the most serious of all these terrible conditions now confronting our people? I can answer in almost a word. It is the failure of the people throughout the States to preserve from destruction our natural resources. Few countries possess natural wealth of so varied a nature and of such immense value, yet nowhere has the use of this wealth been marked with less foresight and more indifference on the part of the public. For years scientists and students of our natural resources have sought to call attention to the early exhaustion of our forests, coal and mineral beds, and oil wells, to the great permanent injury of the people. But they, busily engaged in the pursuit of their various occupations and inspired by optimism, feeling that somehow matters would be corrected, have postponed their consideration to the time when the evil should have taken a more concrete and urgent form.

Each generation should be willing to leave after it more than it finds at its beginning. There would be little left in the world for us today if the policy had been for one age to exhaust and destroy and leave but little to the succeeding one.

Our ambition during our short stay in the world should be to accomplish much and to husband our own resources and the resources of our country. We should help ourselves, those dear to us, and our neighbors, and leave behind us for the generations that shall succeed us for a valuable heritage. It is true and often quoted: "We brought nothing into the world, and we can take nothing out of it", but it is our privilege and it is in our power to make the world better and richer by our having lived in it, and make it easier for those who shall follow us.

It is my conviction that the great prosperity of our country rests upon the abundant resources of the land chosen by our forefathers for their homes and where they laid the foundation of this great Nation.

I look upon these resources as a heritage to be made use of in establishing and promoting the comfort, prosperity, and happiness of the American people, but not to be wasted, deteriorated, or needlessly destroyed.

I agree, in the light of facts, brought to my knowledge by the National Resources Board, appointed by the President June 30, 1934, and from information received in the report made by the Mississippi Valley Committee of the Public Works Administration, which committee has also acted as a water-planning committee.

For the coming 18 months the President has asked the Congress for $4,000,000,000 for public projects. A substantial portion of this sum will be used for objectives suggested in the reports.

We, as a body, should commend the wise forethought of the President in sounding the note of warning as to the waste and exhaustion of the natural resources of the country, and signify our high appreciation of his action through cooperation of the Nation and the States.

This cooperation should find expression in suitable and immediate action by that body located on the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. Speaker, we as an English-speaking people, have been planted on this continent 328 years. As a nation, we are 158 years old. In this time we have substantially conquered the natural difficulties of this rugged continent. We have attained a large degree of national wealth, a large degree of national comfort, and a large degree of national culture. We have attained a stage of civilization where we need, for the highest development of our people, the conservation of the natural beauties of this—

Land where my fathers died, Land of the Pilgrims' pride, of which we sing in one of our national anthems. May the Senate pass the public-works bill so much desired by the President, that we may go on with other important legislation, with a deeper love for our native land and a stronger determination to protect, so far as we may, her "rocks and rills", her "woods and templed hills", her "mountain heights" whence "freedom rings."

ALCOHOL AS A MOTOR FUEL

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, back in 1932 a young man named Paul Beshers, of Gridley, Ill., while pondering on the depression and on what might be done to relieve the farmers of the Corn Belt of the plight of ruinous prices, began in a local way to agitate the idea of converting corn into alcohol and compelling the use of such alcohol by law as an admixture to gasoline motor fuel. Mr. Beshers addressed local luncheon clubs and farm organizations on the plan and in the course of these addresses cited figures to show that this Nation was consuming about 17,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline annually and that if 10 percent of this amount could be displaced by alcohol made from domestic grains and other farm products, it would create an outlet for the equivalent of six to seven hundred million bushels of grain annually, and by the operation of the law of supply and demand, bring about not only an enlarged market but a much better price for farm commodities.

So appealing was this idea to farmers and to those business enterprises that were entirely dependent upon farm purchasing power for their continued existence, that in a little while the idea spread from coast to coast. Farm organizations, implement dealers, farm-machinery manufacturers, luncheon clubs, and many other organizations began to promote this idea as a sound method of farm relief. Pamphlets, circulars, and booklets were sent out in great quantities, and in the course of the Seventy-second Congress several bills were introduced in Congress seeking to make the use of alcohol-gasoline blends compulsory.

Obviously, this movement, as it gained momentum and strength, engaged the attention of motor-car manufacturers, motorist associations, and petroleum companies. House organs such as the Texaco Star began to ridicule the idea. The American Automobile Association and the American Motorist Association attacked the feasibility of alcohol gasoline as a motor fuel by pointing out how expensive it would be to motorists and farmers as well. The Sun Oil Co., of Pennsylvania, prevailed upon Mr. Lowell Thomas, radio news-commentator, to attack the idea in his most engaging fashion over the air. Cartoons appeared in newspapers and trade journals, showing motor cars, using alcohol-gasoline blend, staggering (if motor cars can stagger) in and out among trees, billboards, and bridges. Experts, in the employ of petroleum companies, solemnly inveighed against the proposal and pretended to prove how unsound and impractical it was. A great barrage of ballyhoo, made possible by the expenditure of vast sums of money, was concentrated on the alcohol-gasoline blend idea in the hope of giving it a death stab, but like the soldier who fooled the doctors, the idea refused to be killed or remain dead.

The American Automobile Association was particularly active in its opposition to the idea and published fine glossprint brochures and pamphlets which it sent out to its many members, warning them of the exorbitant tax that would be imposed on motorists if alcohol-gasoline came into general use through legal compulsion. I believe the association was sincere in its contentions, but, to one standing on the outside, it looked as if this intensive attack on the alcoholgasoline idea might have been inspired by petroleum companies. As the result of some direct questions propounded to the American Automobile Association, requesting a statement as to whether all or any portion of the pay of officers and directors of that association was paid by petroleum companies and a further statement as to what percentage of the advertising of the association came from petroleum companies, there crystallized an arrangement to have a demonstration of the merits of alcohol gasoline as motor fuel, to be staged under the direction of all interested parties.

This demonstration was held on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, just south of Alexandria, Va., on June 9, 1933.

The interested parties first gathered in front of the Department of Agriculture, where group photographs were made. Included in the group were Hon. Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Under Secretary; Col. E.V. Rickenbacker, distinguished World War ace; and many others.

Included in the groups which attended the demonstration were Members of Congress from Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota, and Kansas; members of the United States Department of Agriculture; chemists and experts from many petroleum companies which were members of the American Petroleum Institute, members of the National Grange, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the American Automobile Association, the United States Bureau of Standards; and others.

An arrangement was concluded between myself and Mr. Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association, whereby the contest board of the American Automobile Association would supervise the demonstration, and a joint committee consisting of Dr. Leo Christensen, of Ames, Iowa; Dr. J. F. T. Berlinger, of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware; Dr. P. J. Piccirilli, former naval expert on airplane fuels, from New York City; Dr. Sydney Bevins, of the Tidewater Oil Co., of New York City; and Dr. G. G. Brown, of the University of Michigan, were to supervise and arrange for the compiling of the report.

Using stock automobiles, consisting of a Chrysler, Ford, Rockne, and an Oldsmobile, the tests on the highway were made to determine mileage on regular gasoline and alcohol blend, as well as fuel consumption for a fixed distance of several miles. At the Bureau of Standards laboratory in Washington, dynamometer tests were made, together with other tests, to determine the separation of alcohol and gasoline, and improvement in the octane number by adding alcohol to gasoline.

Several factors entered into the demonstration to prevent it from being a really representative test. In the first place. the temperature was 100 degrees and the discomforts so great that everybody worked under difficulties. Secondly, the course over which the tests were made was very short. Thirdly, the dynamometer at the Bureau of Standards broke down and caused further difficulty. The results were released before the right kind of a canvass could be made, because many of those who participated were compelled to return home, so that all in all it was by no means a conclusive demonstration. Had a proper and deliberate break-down of the figures been made, it would have easily disclosed the superiority of alcohol-gasoline blend as a motor fuel. Yet, on the basis of this demonstration, reports appeared in the newspapers in all sections of the country to the effect that alcohol-gasoline blend was not a practical and feasible motor fuel. The same old arguments were put forth, but since that time many researches have been conducted, notably by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. These have been published as Senate Document No. 57 of the Seventy-third Congress, and it contains much authoritative information on the subject.

From the subject matter of this document and from the exhaustive independent researches conducted by Dr. Leo Christensen, of Iowa State College, and many others the opponents of alcohol gasoline as motor fuel have taken a different tack. They no longer seriously contend that anhydrous alcohol will separate from a gasoline mixture or that it will absorb moisture from the air and cause cars to stall. They no longer maintain seriously that alcohol-gasoline blends will corrode engines, fuel lines, and fuel tanks. They no longer set forth that alcohol gasoline is an inferior fuel that will not deliver the mileage or the efficiency claimed for it by its proponents. They no longer insist that the use of alcohol-gasoline motor fuel will require a special carburetor or other gadgets before it will work.

The experience of Australia, Austria, Germany, China, the Philippines, Poland, Sweden, Chile, Brazil, England, France, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Latvia, and other nations, where hundreds of millions of gallons of alcohol gasoline have been sold by the same companies that have subsidiaries in those nations as well as in the United States, is the answer to their vapid and unwarranted contentions. For the Shell Petroleum Co. to market millions of gallons of alcohol-gasoline blend in Australia under the trade name of "Shellkol" and in the same breath contend that it would not be technologically feasible in the United States, or for the Cities Service Co. to market hundreds of millions of gallons of their "Koolmotor" brand of alcohol-gasoline blend in England as a premium fuel for motor boats, motor cars, and airplanes, and then contend that it would not work in the United States, was becoming so transparent that the opponents have desisted from this line of attack and now state that such a fuel would be too expensive for the American motorist.

involved, and mysterious figures that alcohol-gasoline blend would be costly to the American motorist and to the American farmer, they are grasping at a straw. Any intelligent person can at once break these figures down and show that they have been pulled out of a hat and prove exactly nothing. But such is the opposition of the petroleum industry—which for years has been driving the farmers' horses and mules from the market by displacing them with oil-burning tractors, trucks, and automobiles and now refuses to relinquish a portion of that gallonage in the interest of relief for the farmer. The technical and fiscal arguments of the opponents of alcohol-gasoline blend will not stand scrutiny, but they will continue to oppose the idea just the same. It is now a most propitious time for the farmers of the Corn Belt to start developing a strong, irresistible movement to place legislation on the statute books of the Corn Belt States, which shall provide for the use of alcohol-gasoline blend and, by indirection, gradually expand the consumption of this fuel through the levy of a tax differential.

At this point let me say a word about the future prospects for the farmers of the Corn Belt. Within a few hundred million bushels, we raised as much corn in 1895 as we did in 1930. At that time our population was about 75,000,000. We have gained about 50,000,000 in population, have not increased our production of corn materially, and yet we had such a surplus in 1933 that the price went to 15 cents per bushel. The reason is not far to seek.

The forces which have been operative to produce a surplus did not come into being overnight. They have been in operation for many years and will continue to operate. An outlet must be found.

For years our agricultural colleges have been teaching scientific feeding and showing how to get a farm animal to market with less feed. Whatever cumulative saving on feed is effected, therefore, goes into our surplus. For the last quarter of a century the horse and mule population of the farms and in the cities has decreased by more than 11,000,000. They have been replaced by iron and steel animals which eat gasoline, kerosene, and crude oil instead of hay, oats, corn, rye, wheat, and barley, and the millions of bushels of grain used for this purpose now go into the marketable surplus to be sold so that the farmer can buy liquid feed for the iron animals. From 85 to 90 percent of the corn formerly remained on the farm to be marketed in the form of beef and pork. The domestic consumption of pork and beef has materially decreased in the last generation, so that this outlet has been partially destroyed, and whatever grain was marketed in the form of meat for domestic consumption has been diminished and can be added to surplus. Every year we import from the Dutch East Indies and from Cuba, Puerto Rico, and elsewhere large quantities of tapioca starch and blackstrap molasses.

Almost 200,000,000 pounds of tapioca starch are imported annually. It comes in duty free, it is produced on cheap land with cheap labor, and is therefore much cheaper than cornstarch. This tapioca starch is used to make glue and adhesives, in confectionaries, and in the sizing of textiles, and for other purposes. Every pound that enters this country curtails the industrial outlet for corn. Similarly, blackstrap molasses, which is a byproduct of sugar refining, is now used to produce alcohol and thereby displaces corn and other cereals. In 1932, of a total of 142,000,000 gallons of industrial alcohol produced in this country, less than 5,000,000 | gallons were produced from grain. Here again the industrial outlet for grains has been curtailed, and what was formerly used for that purpose can now be dumped into surplus. Finally, our exports of meat and lard and bacon have gradually decreased. In 1933 we exported 200,000,000 less pounds of lard and pork products than we did in 1910. There is no mystery about the reason for this reduction in exports. After the war, Germany, Sweden, Denmark, and other countries were anxious to get on a self-contained basis and began to encourage their farmers to expand agriculture and the production of meat by offering protection against imports and by direct subsidies to the farmers. These nations not only have enough for their own use, but a surplus, and are now bidding for trade in the world market. In a pamphlet issued in January of 1935, by the Honorable Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, under the title "Agriculture's Interest in America's World Trade", he states, on page 18, that:

Excessive exports of pork products from practically all hogproducing countries into the United Kingdom (England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales) in 1932 led to a quota being placed on British imports under which the United States now supplies 8.1 percent of the ham and bacon, tinned or otherwise, and salt pork now received in Great Britain.

The table which follows this statement is eloquent of the loss of our foreign outlet for hogs and pork products, which is another way of saying the loss of our corn outlet.

	American	ican exports to Great Britain
	1924-25 to 1928-29	1931–32	1932-33 (first quota year)
Bacon Ham	Pounds 64, 747, 000 140, 761, 000	Pounds 6, 048, 000 52, 201, 000	Pounds 3, 089, 000 67, 426, 000

Then Mr. Wallace makes this significant observation: "The obstacles to getting back America's pork markets are serious, though possibly less serious in the case of pork than of wheat."

The future of the Corn and Hog Belt is apparently not so rosy. More improved ways of getting meat to market with less feed will be found as time goes on. That accords with the law of progress and betterment. The truck, motor car, and tractor are here to stay. There may be a slight increase in the numbers of horses and mules as years go by, but it will not be material. Moreover, neither the farmer nor the urban dweller cares to go back to horse and buggy days and relinquish the speed and the delights of the automobile. Tapioca and blackstrap imports continue to enter our country and displace farm commodities. Domestic consumption of beef and pork products is always directly proportional to purchasing power, the standard of living, and to the fads which sweep the country periodically and cause consumers to abstain from meats or curtail the consumption of meat. High prices for meat set up consumer-resistance, and they switch to cheaper substitutes. And, finally, the hope of finding a substantial export outlet holds forth small assurance for a long time to come.

What, then, shall be done to provide a remedy for this condition? Shall we sit idly by and twiddle our thumbs, hoping that something will happen? Shall we subscribe to a permanent system of regimentation whereby acreage reduction, which began as a necessary emergency measure, shall be continued year after year or even enlarged? Or shall we seek an outlet-a new outlet-for farm commodities so that all acreage that was cultivated before the acreage-reduction program became effective can once more be brought back into tillage, at commodity prices that will be fair to the farmer? It can be done by converting our agricultural commodities into alcohol, mixing it with gasoline in proper proportions, and thus burning up the corn crop efficiently and constructively by letting it go through the exhaust pipes of millions of internal-combustion engines which propel our trucks, tractors, and automobiles. A 10-percent mixture of alcohol in gasoline would provide an outlet for the equivalent of 700,000,000 bushels of corn annually, and if this can be effected, the farm problem will be solved for many years to come.

It is economically sound, technically practical, and fundamentally justifiable. Moreover, it is fair and equitable. It merely asks the petroleum industry to surrender 10 percent of the gallonage which the truck, tractor, and motorcar have taken away from the farmer in the last 30 years. Too, it would be a distinct contribution to the conservation of our natural resources. The Natural Resources Board, appointed by President Roosevelt, which made a comprehensive report to him on December 1, 1934, states: "Known supplies of oil, natural gas, and certain metals are sufficient for, at most, a few decades." We are fast depleting our mineral resources, and, when once exhausted, they cannot be replaced. The use of alcohol-gasoline blend as a motor fuel would aid in conserving those resources.

Now, how is this to be accomplished? By sitting at the wishing well? Wishing puts no laws on the statute books. By depending on the voluntary adoption of the alcoholgasoline blend idea? Where human selfishness is concerned, that would require a generation. By law? Yes. If a lower tax is imposed on alcohol-gasoline blend in the public interest and particularly in the interest of the farmer, than on other kinds of motor fuel, it will mean the gradual expansion of the sale of alcohol-gasoline blend as motor fuel and gradually enlarge the outlet for the commodities of the farm.

This movement can best be started on a State scale. If such legislation is adopted by the States which are most affected thereby, namely, the agricultural States, it can be progressively expanded until it embraces the entire Nation. Bills are now pending before various midwestern legislatures, and, if these can be enacted into law, it will mean that other States will soon follow suit and thus set the alcohol-gasoline blend idea in motion.

Try as we will, we cannot set the law of supply and demand aside. It is as fundamental and as necessary today as it was in the days of the Caesars. The sensible thing to do in perfecting our own internal economy is not to work at cross-purposes with sound economic law but to work with it. Prices will appreciate to fair and proper levels only when demand counterbalances supply. We have the supply. We can by proper legislation, compelling the use of alcoholgasoline blend motor fuel, create the demand.

Why not throw the solid weight of agriculture and of everybody who depends upon agriculture for a livelihood behind this type of legislation and write upon the statute books of the States a sane, sensible, and fundamental kind of farm relief that will actually relieve and continue to relieve for many years to come.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BINDERUP] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BINDERUP. Mr. Speaker, whither are we drifting as a nation? Sometimes I wonder.

I would, indeed, be negligent of my duty and wasting a great privilege if I should ever fail to respond to an opportunity to come to the rescue of the farmers of our Nation—our greatest industry.

I have come this afternoon to amplify the voice of the great agricultural outdoors of the Nation.

I have come to amplify the warnings of the custodians of the great cupboard that feeds the Nation.

And I come with a specific message, a definite plan, and unquestionable theory; I have come to present the Frazier-Lemke bill, for liquidating and refinancing farm mortgages at 1½-percent interest and 1½-percent payment on principal for 47 years. I have come with a plan to build millions of small homes, wherein shall dwell the tillers of the soil. A peaceful people, the bulwark of the Nation, the Gibraltar of government—agriculture, the home.

I have come to plead the cause of the holy fountain of all prosperity—labor combined with the natural resources of the earth; the source, and the only source, from which all wealth comes. After labor has turned the natural resources into blessings, you can shift it from Peter to Paul, you can gamble with it on the board of trade, but you cannot add the smallest unit to its value. I speak in behalf of this worthy class, with whom I have breathed the air from childhood until the present time; with this class with whom I ate and drank and starved together as a childhood pioneer on the prairies of Nebraska; that class with whom I have always been proud to stand up and be counted.

We do not ask for gold and silver; we do not ask for donations or doles. Ours is a business proposition; we ask only for kind consideration and attention; and for such favors as we may receive, we shall obligate ourselves to return in full. We will pledge our honor and our homes, the most sacred things we own—our homes—part of God's green earth, our part of our Nation's great domain. We will pledge all this and our great Nation shall also grow stronger, for we will thereby be strengthening the very foundation of our Government—agriculture, our Nation's principal industry. In the words of Goldsmith:

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates and men decay; Princes and lords may flourish or may fade; A breath can make them, as a breath has made; But a bold peasantry, their country's pride, When once destroyed can never be supplied.

We ask only that Uncle Sam will extend to us the same credit he so willingly did under the Federal Land Bank Act, where he undersigned for the bondholders who used his credit without pay; and as under the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, where he undersigned for the farmers on miserable, poor, second farm mortgages, at this time practically worthless when it comes to collections.

I speak with considerable knowledge and information along this line, because in my office at home it is my business to write mortgages for the Federal Land Bank and the Commissioner of Mortgages. I know that in the last summer only 1 out of 19 was granted a mortgage and I live in a good State, a fine agricultural State. It has become a very miserable failure—this bright, shining light we looked forward to a few years ago that would relieve the farmers has become a desolate failure.

At home my office has been filled from morning until night with people who have come with their plea for assistance that they might save their homes. Application after application I have carried with me to Omaha, where they have been refused. There was only one bright, glimmering light of hope I held out to my people at home. I said, "You have only one chance, and that is if we can pass the Frazier-Lemke bill that they are considering down in Washington." Thus I have become so intensely interested in this piece of legislation that shall bring to the farmers that long-looked-for relief.

We want to bring Uncle Sam out of this hole with the Frazier-Lemke farm-loan bill. We do not even ask Uncle Sam to expand his credit responsibility only just for a short time, as we will, by the Frazier-Lemke Loan Act, using Uncle Sam's credit as a revolving fund, gradually liquidate and relieve Uncle Sam of his obligations or surety or guaranty on these Federal land-bank bonds and take up these second farm mortgages made under the Government Commissioner's loans and using the Federal land-bank machinery perhaps, we will give Uncle Sam in turn first-class first mortgages on our homes and farms.

But we will do much more than this, we will pay Uncle Sam in place of asking alms, as the Federal land bank does. We want to go into partnership with Uncle Sam 50-50 and liquidate and refinance farm mortgages. There is a potential profit in this deal of $12,492,500,000 in refinancing farm mortgages. We want to pay Uncle Sam a net profit of $6,345,000,000; no money invested, only his credit slowly shifted to the Frazier-Lemke plan from the Federal land bank. That ad bank and second-mortgage plan and large insurance companies that need the money. We want to give Uncle Sam a profit for the use of his credit thus shifted, amounting to earth; the source, and the only source, from which all wealth comes. After labor has turned the natural resources into blessings, you can shift it from Peter to Paul, you can gamble with it on the board of trade, but you cannot add the smallest unit to its value. I speak in behalf of this worthy class,

The farmers will also have a gain almost as large by reducing their interest to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  percent and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  percent amortized payments on principal, paying Uncle Sam cash for the use of his credit; and we are not selfish about this gain. We are willing and desirous of passing this gain on to others—oh, for paper and lumber from Maine, shoes from Massachusetts, clothing from the cotton mills from the South and East; for, remember, by saving the farmer this difference in interest charge you have increased their consuming power and ability to buy and pay; you have revived the great American market to a nation that is becoming more and more self-contained.

There are eight outstanding reasons why we should pass the Frazier-Lemke bill this session:

First. Because it is right and just. We cannot make paupers out of our farmers and turn our farmer, by fore-closure, over to the large insurance companies and loan companies and institute a serf system of landowner and land slave.

Second. Because 28 legislators have petitioned this Congress to pass this Frazier-Lemke loan bill this session, and, besides this, seven houses or senates have sent in individual petitions.

Third. The leading farm organizations, as well as many other organizations, realizing the necessity of this farm relief, have sent in petitions to this Congress asking that this bill become a law at once.

Fourth. Because it will not cost the Government one cent in cash—only the use of Government credit while we are slowly paying up and liquidating the Federal land bonds and relieving the Government of this obligation in exchange for ours.

Fifth. Because the Federal land bank is not helping the farmers in distress, because it is a double-jointed affair—half fish and half fowl, half Government and half private bank.

Sixth. Because it would increase the buying and consuming power of the farmer, which is half the consuming power of the Nation. It would start once more the factories of the East. Remember the farmer is 50 percent of the purchasing power of the articles of eastern industries.

Seventh. Because there is not a soul on God's green earth that can give one reason why it should not be passed.

Eighth. Because it will put into circulation, down the line among the farmers, $3,000,000,000 new money, the crying need of the Nation today, not interest-bearing, tax-exempt bonds.

I have listened with much interest and at times with much distress to the discussion of the military bill on the floor of this Congress the past few weeks, when we, as a nation at peace with the world, made an appropriation of $400,000,000, and contemplate an appropriation almost as large for the Navy, and added to this the expected allotment from P. W. A., which, according to the public press, will total an amount over $1,000,000,000—by far the largest appropriation ever made by any nation in the world in time of peace, and few nations in the world have ever made so large an appropriation even in times of war—and this at a time when we are talking disarmament among nations of the world, a movement in which we have earlier been proud to take leadership. Oh, I am not criticizing our Committee on Military Affairs; I am not criticizing anyone, even though I considered it my duty to vote against this large appropriation.

And I stop to mention the fact that Uncle Sam is now furnishing the same credit that we are asking for to the Federal land bank. That act was passed in the last session of Congress, when the Farm Act was passed, and the Federal land bank was allowed to take these bonds to the R. F. C. and receive cash in full.

We are willing and desirous, furthermore, of passing this gain to the farmers to others. We want to buy fruit from California and shoes from Massachusetts and a lot of those cotton goods you men from the East and the South have been telling us about, where your factories are closed down. We want to pass this money on to you, for by saving the farmer this difference in interest you have increased his consuming power to purchase goods from the industrial East by $6,149,-000,000. You have created an ability in the great farming class to buy and pay. You have revived the great American market of the Nation, a Nation so fast becoming self-

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. COLDEN. Does the Frazier-Lemke bill make any distinction as between landlords, the commercial farmer, and the man who actually lives and rears his family on a farm?

Mr. BINDERUP. No; it does not. The matter has been talked about for the last year, and especially for the last few days, as to whether it is advisable at this time to make a distinction. My own opinion is a good deal like I think the gentleman's is. I should like to see the Frazier-Lemke bill provide for one thing, and that is for building little homes limited to a certain piece of land; but at the present time most of the speculative land is land that does not have much mortgage on it, and, furthermore, the distributing of these mortgages, the taking up of these mortgages, will be determined by the board of the Frazier-Lemke bill. Secondly, we do not have to issue these mortgages unless we want to.

Mr. COLDEN. I do believe there should be a great distinction between the farmer who lives on his farm and the landlord or the commercial farmer.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes. Mr. LUNDEEN. The Frazier-Lemke petition, as I understand it, was placed on the Speaker's desk this noon.

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes. Mr. LUNDEEN. It is there for signatures for all the Members of the House.

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. Under the present set-up of the Farm Administration it is difficult for the landowner to secure a loan from the Government unless he lives on his farm. The Frazier-Lemke bill, if enacted into law, which I hope it will be, will merely employ the mechanics and machinery of the Farm Credit Administration?

Mr. BINDERUP. That is true. As I have said, 28 legislatures in 28 different States of the United States have sent petitions to this Congress petitioning it to pass this bill. Nebraska and some of the others were not satisfied to send petitions from the legislatures once, but they have sent them twice, and a number of other States have sent petitions to this Congress either through the House or the Senate.

Further, to repeat somewhat, the leading farm organizations of the Nation are favoring this, and sending petitions to pass the Frazier-Lemke bill. As to cost, it will not cost our Government one cent. It will not even cost our Government more credit risk or surety, because eventually we are taking over the land-bank mortgages, relieving the Government of its responsibility to the Federal land bank and shifting it over to the Frazier-Lemke bill.

In the past years my experience has been that the Government was always handed the ragged end of the deal. The Federal land bank fixes the mortgages so low that when the second mortgage was added it was not as much as the first mortgage was originally. At the present time there is only one price for a farm, and that is what the first mortgage is, and it does not make any difference how high or low it is. Consequently the Federal land bank, that is, a private institution, when foreclosing on the Federal land-bank mortgage now, gets the equity of the farmer and then gets the equity of Uncle Sam, so that it must be a safe proposition for them, but a risky thing for the farmer and a risky thing for Uncle Sam.

Mr. CARPENTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. CARPENTER. The gentleman represents a great agricultural district?

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. CARPENTER. The same as I do. Mr. BINDERUP. Yes.

Mr. CARPENTER. Representing that district, the gentleman is in touch with the farmers of that district. Does the gentleman know of any piece of legislation before the Congress in which the farmers are more interested or more desirous to have enacted than the Frazier-Lemke bill?

Mr. BINDERUP. Absolutely not. The farmers are looking forward to the Frazier-Lemke bill. There is not a bill in the United States as well known among the farmers as the Frazier-Lemke bill. It is their only hope at the present time to keep their farms.

Mr. CARPENTER. Will the gentleman yield for one other question?

Mr. BINDERUP. I yield.

Mr. CARPENTER. The farmers are not asking something for nothing in this bill, are they?

Mr. BINDERUP. They are not. Mr. CARPENTER. They are willing to put up their own possessions and their own land for this relief?

Mr. BINDERUP. Yes. They put up their homes. We as a nation have always recognized that the home was the greatest security. We said to land companies, to insurance companies, "We will only allow you to loan the people's money for one thing-the home-because it is the greatest security there is." The home, for which a man will sell his shirt and give his life. That is what we are giving to the Government in security—not for money, but just for the credit of our Nation in order that our Nation may live and our farmers may keep their homes. [Applause.]

Mr. CARPENTER. They are not asking for any contribution from the Government in this bill?

Mr. BINDERUP. Not at all; not a bit.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BINDERUP. I yield.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Is the gentleman able to give any statistics as to the number of farms sold under sheriff's sale during the past year?

Mr. BINDERUP. No; I do not have that in my memory at the present time.

I want to give a little comparison. I have been a silent student among you, listening with the most intense interest in these days that I have walked so silently among you. I want to make a comparison with the loan that we are asking for. I have listened with much interest and at times with much distress to a discussion of the military bill on the floor of this Congress during the past few weeks when we, as a nation at peace with the world, made an appropriation of $400,000,000; and we are contemplating, I understand, an appropriation almost as large for the Navy.

Perhaps it is necessary. Added to this are the expected allotments from the P. W. A., which, according to the public press, will constitute an amount over one billion. figures are appalling. They paralyze the mind. They startle the imagination. A billion dollars, Mr. Speaker, for preparation for war at this time when we are at peace with all nations. But let me not criticize. Perhaps it is necessary, even though I could not support the measure. This, Mr. Speaker, is at a time when we are talking disarmament among the nations of the world, a move in which we have earlier been proud to take leadership. So I am not criticizing our Committee on Military Affairs. I am not criticizing anyone. I am simply drawing to your attention these facts, as a matter of comparison, and I am anxious that I may not create any prejudice and not render any judgment that is not exactly right. Continuously I am reminded, since I came to this Congress especially, of President Hoover when he said, and when President Roosevelt, who honorably and nobly repeated these same warning words in his radio speech in New York during the campaign:

Our Nation is facing a crisis more serious than war.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ne- | braska [Mr. BINDERUP] has expired.

Mr. CARPENTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I have been granted permission to address the House for 30 minutes following the gentleman's address. I must attend a funeral at 1:45. The gentleman can see where I am.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLETTE. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. BINDERUP. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. As I understand, the discharge petition which the gentleman has placed on the Clerk's desk today is not to discharge a committee from consideration of the Frazier-Lemke bill?

Mr. BINDERUP. No; not at all. Mr. GILLETTE. But is is a petition to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of a resolution, which will bring it up for debate on this floor?

Mr. BINDERUP. I am glad the gentleman made the suggestion. He is correct.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BINDERUP. Yes; I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. In the gentleman's time will he not discuss how this is to be financed, because I think that is really the thing the House is interested in. We all know about the condition of agriculture, but if the gentleman will just tell us how this is going to be financed, we will all be interested. That is what is bothering us.

Mr. BINDERUP. In making my discussion and presentation of the Lemke bill this morning I will not go into all of those details, because those will be discussed later. This is a bill of great importance, so I beg of you the privilege of going on at this time with the outline of my talk, and I will take up the matter to which the gentleman referred a little later, if you please.

We hear the echo of these words again in the report of the Committee on Military Affairs. At first we wondered, for the committee said:

From the witnesses before them no information had been dis-closed that there was any immediate danger from Mexico on the south nor Canada on the north, or invasion of any foreign enemy.

But at least one of the committee said, rather reluctantly, "If you had heard the testimony of adjutant general from this or that State "-and they mentioned the State-" if you had heard of threatened anarchy and uprising, you would not now vote to reduce this amount." And then we understand what the committee meant. Then we heard the echo of the warning given by President Hoover and President Roosevelt-"that our Nation was facing a crisis more serious than war." Then we understood that there had been considered in this huge appropriation the possibility of having to protect our Government against our own people. No wonder it made us shudder and tremble for the safety of our people and our

Oh, I know, my friends and fellow Congressmen, many of you are condemning me for saying this; but you would not appreciate me among you as a counselor if I feared to tell you the truth in this people's forum, the people's court, where we may speak frankly and freely. But, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask unanimous consent that if there is anything in these remarks that might imperil peace in the least it be expunged from the RECORD.

We knew it was true, for did we not hear the distant rumbling of the wheels of revolution in 1932? Did we not see the black cloud of discontent on yonder horizon, and did we not hear the roaring and the rumbling of the approaching

Thank God, it passed over us. Did we not hear, Mr. Speaker, at that time the murmurings of a great but outraged farming class out in my country-people who were government of its power and divides a people so that one-being deprived of their homes, out on the public highway tipping over milk trucks, produce trucks, stock trucks, and hindering traffic on the public highway? We knew that was revolution because our Nation was depriving those people of their homes. But the clouds passed over. Why? Because we passed in Iowa and Nebraska the moratorium to save the homes, and later the Nation came to their rescue and passed the Frazier-Lemke Moratorium Act, and their homes were saved. God's sanctuary on earth to man. This should be to us, the people's representatives, a powerful warning, for we also know that when you rob a man of his home you rob him of his pride and his individuality; you rob him of his patriotism and his loyalty; you leave a mere skeleton where before there was a great citizen; and you leave a Communist where before you had a great warrior. You turn a victory into a defeat, peace into chaos, when you rob a man of his home. Once more, Mr. Speaker, I say that the object of the Frazier-Lemke bill is to prevent that thing, the sacrifice of the home, and to preserve the homes of the people of our Nation.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let us remember that true democracy must not go into partnership with shot and shell, that liberty and justice to the toiling masses in its power and omnipotence spurns the cooperation and futile efforts so insignificant and so unworthy as a sword and gun. A mighty nation, my friends, is not a nation of mighty armies, navies, and forts; a mighty nation is a nation of a million little homes, because there is where patriotism reigns supreme. Patriotism does not echo from the roaring sound of a cannon; that is militarism. Patriotism, Mr. Speaker, was never born of the tyranny of war; that is despotism. Patriotism, Mr. Speaker, is born in a million homes; it is born of the spirit of human love. Patriotism is born in the home. The home for which a man will sell his shirt and give his life-the home, God's sacred sanctuary to man on earth. The home-that is the unit of the great foundation of our Government, the home wherein is created the character of your child and mine; the home wherein is bred the peaceful dispositions of our citizens. Mr. Speaker, that is where patriotism is born. That is what makes a mighty nation. I repeat it, Mr. Speaker, because it is emphatic, that a powerful nation is not a nation with great, big standing armies, forts, and fortifications; it is a nation with a million homes which men will fight to the last ditch to

Then let us make our Nation strong once more. Let us build millions of homes for the tillers of the soil, the creators of wealth and happiness. I come with the specific plan and governmental machinery, the Frazier-Lemke bill, that provides for 11/2-percent interest and 11/2-percent amortized payments, paying out in 47 years. That is the silver lining of the dark clouds; that is the only hope for the farmers of our Nation who purchase 50 percent of the products of the industry of the East. The eastern industrialists cannot live without them. You will benefit just as much as they. We are desirous that it be scattered around. It is a national issue, a cornerstone of the Nation; but all will profit by the Frazier-Lemke plan of refinancing farm loans. [Applause.]

Then let us rather use $400,000,000 to build homes under the Frazier-Lemke bill to protect our Government against its own and then we will not need armies and navies.

For, my friends, no army or navy is strong enough to kill communism and anarchy, but you can choke it to death with liberty and justice; communism cannot grow in such environments. Communism grows out of injustice, despotism, and tyranny, but it dies when associated with liberty and justice.

May I take the liberty to advise you, my fellow Congressmen, that the greatest and only duty we are asked to perform, the only reason we were sent to Congress, the only reason we have government is for the one purpose—for the protection of the worthy weak against the mighty

The only enemy of mankind we are asked to combat is human greed, the centralization of vast capital, that robs half is ruined by lust and luxury and the other is destroyed by poverty, privation, and starvation; and when our people are thus divided, the Nation dies.

By the combination of wealth you can, through the instrumentality of hunger, warp the brain and sear the conscience and make out of your most worthy citizen a raving Communist.

But give this man a home, under the Frazier-Lemke plan, and you can again bring back his love for his Government and his patriotism; the environs of a home is the Government's only guaranty of safety.

[Here the gavel fell.]

UNADDRESSED ADVERTISING MATTER AND THE UNITED STATES MAILS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, the Postmaster General, Hon. James A. Farley, has issued an official order that strikes a severe blow at the newspapers and the small business man. It places the Government and the mail-order houses in partnership. This combination of Government and big business will bring ruin to the small merchant and local dealer. At the same time it will weaken the financial structure of the newspapers by destroying their revenues. Furthermore, in his zeal to put his official order into effective operation the Postmaster General has suffered and permitted a violation of the postal laws of the United States by Government officials.

On October 12, 1934, the Postmaster General, yielding to the demands of the mail-order houses, issued order 6338, which permits the direct-by-mail advertising groups to send their advertising broadsides into the cities for delivery without requiring that such mail matter bear either the name or the address of the person to whom it is sent. To be more specific, all that a mail-order house has to do, under this order, is to request from the Post Office Department the number of city routes and the number of patrons on each route; then it sends its unaddressed advertising circulars to the postmaster of that city who superintends the delivery of this unaddressed advertising matter. Thus the city mail carriers become glorified hand-bill distributors for the mail-order houses.

The "throw-away advertising sheets" are one of the keenest forms of competition with which the newspapers have to contend. When the delivery of such matter is extended through the post offices, it means disaster to their advertising revenues. To deprive them of this revenue can only result in the ultimate destruction of a free press.

Now, as to the violation of the postal laws of the United States by Government officials. A campaign was launched with the approval of the Postmaster General, by the postmaster at Washington, D. C., as an initial experiment upon which to base a Nation-wide drive, similar in character, to bring this governmental advertising plan to the attention of the "direct-by-mail advertising" groups. I have before me a circular which was sent out through the mail by the local postmaster and delivered by the letter carriers to 5,000 business men in Washington. There was not a word of official character printed on the face of the circular, either inside or out, to bring this advertising matter within the purview of the postal laws of the United States. On the face, or outside of this unaddressed circular, appear these words: "The first of its kind in Washington" and "It can help you increase your business."

Let us examine the postal laws of the United States. Title IV, Domestic Mail Matter, section 615 specifically states:

It shall be lawful (for all officers of the United States Government) to transmit through the mail, free of postage any letters, packages, or other matters relating exclusively to the business of the Government of the United States, * * the envelops of such matter in all cases to bear appropriate endorsement containing the proper designation of the office from which or officer from whom the same is transmitted with the statement of the penalty for their misuse. Every such letter or package to entitle it to pass free shall bear over the words "official business" an endorsement showing also the name of the department, and if from a bureau or office (or officer) the name of the department and the bureau or office (or officer), as the case may be, whence transmitted (with a statement of the penalty for their misuse).

Here is what the Washington postmaster did with his highly colored, artistic propaganda. As I have stated, he delivered or caused to be delivered through the mail 5,000 copies of this circular to "Washington businessmen." The circular does not relate "exclusively to the business of the United States." It was not mailed in a "penalty envelop." It contained no "description of the office from which, or officer from whom, it was transmitted." It did not contain any statement "of the penalty for its misuse." It did not contain the words "official business."

With the approval of the Postmaster General the Washington postmaster has ignored, defied, and violated the provisions of the postal laws. If this usurpation of power is not challenged, then further misuse will be made of the mails to the destruction of private business.

The Tennessee Valley Authority "yardstick" is now sending its monthly bills to consumers under Government frank, as well as its advertising and propaganda, which is a gross abuse of postal privileges in competition with private business.

I know, and every Member of the House knows, that it will be futile for the small business man, hampered as he is now with codes and regulations of all kinds, to meet the competition of the highly organized mail-order houses. With the special dispensation of the Postmaster General, the mail-order houses can nullify whatever efforts the small merchants may make, individually or collectively, to meet such competition as will result from this order.

A Nation-wide campaign on the part of the Government to encourage the city distribution of unaddressed advertising broadsides is a cruel blow to thousands of small merchants who are fighting to exist.

The recent appointment of the head of Sears, Roebuck & Co. to dispense the $4,880,000,000 under the work-relief bill, if and when it is passed, is not without significance. This danger has not been overlooked by the merchants and manufacturers of the country. I have on my desk protests from merchants and manufacturers in my district against the appointment of the president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. to administer this vast sum, if and when it is placed at his disposal. Those who are familiar with the practices of large monopolistic concerns are quite well aware how anxious those concerns are to place their executives in key positions that will enable them to expand the business of the firms which they represent, and all at the expense of the taxpayers of the country.

It is well known that more than 500,000 small business men have been destroyed during the past 2 years. Many of those that have so far survived are threatened with prosecution for alleged violations of the N. R. A. They are taxed under numerous codes, and they are flooded with official documents demanding detailed reports as to the conduct of their business.

This Congress is fully cognizant of the disaster the Postmaster General has brought to the Mail Service. The air mail scandal, resulting in the death of Army aviators, the unlawful distribution of stamps to his personal friends indicate the callous indifference of this high and all-powerful official.

When oppression stains the robe of state, and power's a whip of scorpions in the hands of heartless knaves, to lash th' o'erburthen'd back of honest industry, the loyal blood will turn to bitterest gall, and th' o'ercharged heart explode in execration.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the House was kind enough to grant me the privilege of addressing the House today for 30 minutes. I find it will be almost impossible to talk today.

I ask, therefore, Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent that it be transferred to Thursday; that on Thursday next after the reading of the Journal and disposition of business on the Speaker's table I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes. Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I say that I have objected to the requests of several gentlemen to make speeches on Thursday and Friday. I did this because I understood the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill will be taken up at that time; and if it is taken up, it will undoubtedly take practically the rest of the week. If that bill is not brought in for consideration, I have no objection to the gentleman's request. It is unfortunate that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton] allowed the other speeches to come in ahead of him and now has a very serious and important engagement which prevents him from making his speech.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I may say to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Taylor] that I am not particular about any one day. If it does not fit in with the program on Thursday, a later day will be acceptable. I desire to accommodate myself to the convenience of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. If we are going to take up the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill, I feel that I should not permit numerous speeches to interfere with that important matter. I cannot consistently object to other gentlemen's speaking and permit the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee to make a 30-minute speech.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. When are we going to know whether that bill will be taken up?

Mr. SABATH. May I suggest that the gentleman change his request and ask permission to speak tomorrow?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I modify the request and ask unanimous consent that tomorrow, after the reading of the Journal and disposition of matters on the Speaker's table, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the majority leader tell us when we are going to have this Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill up for consideration? Does he not know whether it is coming up Thursday or not?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. The committees in charge of that bill have come to no agreement about it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may state that we have arranged to hear the Committee on Banking and Currency tomorrow before the Rules Committee for a rule. If we grant a rule tomorrow, the matter should be brought up on Thursday.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman does not have any serious question but that the organization could bring it up on Thursday if they had the desire? I think the Membership of this House ought to know something about the matter.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is in the hands of the Banking and Currency Committee, to a certain extent, whether or not the bill will be brought up Thursday.

Mr. FISH. The Banking and Currency Committee reported that out some days ago, and they would like to have it brought up immediately.

Mr. O'CONNOR. As I stated yesterday, so far as I am personally concerned, the buck is not going to be passed to the Rules Committee, because yesterday was the first indication we had that the rule would be requested, and immediately we set a hearing for tomorrow in order to hear the application.

Mr. FISH. That is because the chairman was away.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know the reason, but that is the

Mr. MICHENER. Why cannot the gentleman get his information from the steering committee? You have such an organization which is supposed to arrange the program here. May I suggest that the gentleman inquire of the steering committee so that we may have an idea when the House will consider this important piece of legislation?

Mr. O'CONNOR. If I had my way about the matter, it would be taken up Thursday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes in reference to the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Will the gentleman yield before he starts his speech?

Mr. O'CONNOR. This is not going to be a "speech"; but I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. Well, call it an address. Can the Chairman of the Rules Committee inform the House when they expect to bring up for consideration the bill to take profit out of war?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I understand the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSwain] is out of the city. That is why that matter has not been brought up heretofore. The rule has been granted, and the bill will be brought up whenever the Committee on Military Affairs desires and as it fits in with the program of the House. As far as the Rules Committee is concerned, it is willing to bring the matter up at any time.

Mr. FISH. Is the Rules Committee willing to bring it up, if the author, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSwain], wants it brought up?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Any time the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina wants it brought up.

Mr. Speaker, last June our distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], then Chairman of the Rules Committee, appointed a subcommittee, consisting of myself, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Greenwood], the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Lehlbach], to investigate the rules pertaining to the consideration of the Private Calendar and to attempt to devise a more satisfactory method of handling that calendar. Since that time we have done considerable research and given a great deal of study in reference to some solution of this problem that has been with us for at least a generation. We have had researches made of all methods of handling this matter in similar parliamentary bodies.

We have communicated with all the Members of the House on several occasions and have received many valuable suggestions. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Lehlbach] introduced a resolution which was very helpful. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] introduced a resolution which we considered. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Harlan] has given a great deal of study to the matter of handling tort claims which are reported from the Claims Committee.

With all these suggestions before us the Rules Committee, through its subcommittee and the whole committee, has considered this problem on several occasions, and we have worked out what we think may be a solution of the problem for the time being, at least. Maybe we have not solved the problem at all. Maybe when we put the plan to work, it will not be satisfactory. We hold no brief for this plan as the last word on what ought to be done with the Private Calendar, but we offer it as a possible solution.

Mr. Speaker, today I introduced House Resolution 148, and the reason I take the floor at this time is to request the Members, if they are interested in the matter of handling the Private Calendar, to get a copy of this House Resolution 148 and give it some study.

The resolution is as follows:

House Resolution 148

Resolved, That rule XXIV of the House of Representatives be, and is hereby, amended by striking paragraph 6 thereof and inserting in lieu thereof:

"6. On the first Tuesday of each month after disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, the Speaker shall direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Private Calendar. Should objection be made by three or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution so called, it shall be recommitted to the committee which reported the bill or resolution and no reservation of objection shall be entertained by the Speaker. Such bills and resolutions, if considered, shall be considered as in Committee of the Whole. No other business shall be in order on this day unless the House by two-thirds vote on motion to dispense therewith shall otherwise determine. On such motion debate shall be limited to 5 minutes for and 5 minutes against said motion.

"On the third Tuesday of each month after disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, the Speaker may direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Private Calendar, preference to be given to omnibus bills containing bills or resolutions which have previously been objected to on a call of the Private Calendar. All bills and resolutions on the Private Calendar so called, if considered, shall be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole. Should objection be made by three or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution, other than an omnibus bill, it shall be recommitted to the committee which reported the bill or resolution and no reservation of objection shall be entertained by the Speaker.

"Omnibus bills shall be read for amendment by paragraph, and no amendment shall be in order except to strike out or to reduce amounts of money stated or to provide limitations. Any item or matter stricken from an omnibus bill shall not thereafter during the same session of Congress be included in any omnibus bill.

matter stricken from an omnibus bill shall not thereafter during the same session of Congress be included in any omnibus bill.

"Upon passage of any such omnibus bill, said bill shall be resolved into the several bills and resolutions of which it is composed, and such original bills and resolutions, with any amendments adopted by the House, shall be engrossed, where necessary, and proceedings thereon had as if said bills and resolutions had been passed in the House severally.

"In the consideration of any omnibus bill the proceedings as set forth above shall have the same force and effect as if each Senate and House bill or resolution therein contained or referred to were considered by the House as a separate and distinct bill or resolution."

The resolution has not yet been reported by the Rules Committee. We want the reaction of the House, and we will set down a hearing within a few days, at which time any Member of the House interested either in opposition to the resolution or having any suggestions may appear and give his or her views as to how the resolution might be perfected or what different method should be followed.

There have been many methods proposed. A very usual suggestion from the Members has been to increase the number of objectors. Another method proposed was to call the bills in the regular way under the general rules of the House. This has been tried, in part, under the existing rule, subsection 6, of rule XXIV, which was perfected by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Greenwood]. That rule provides that when a bill is objected to, it is placed on a deferred list. This deferred list was to be taken up on a later day in the month, and the bills on that list were to be considered under the general rules of the House.

On the one day this deferred list was tried out, only about three bills were passed, because the opportunity of filibustering to prevent bills further down the list from being reached was obvious to the objectors. This rule therefore did not work, and ever since the Private Calendar has been considered under unanimous consent and not under any rule of the House

Our present thought as to the way the Private Calendar might better be handled is this—and as the resolution is not very long I shall read it to you. It is House Resolution 148 which I have introduced today, and which I hope you will study carefully:

On the first Tuesday of each month, after disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, the Speaker shall direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Private Calendar.

You will note this provision is mandatory on the Speaker, as with the Consent Calendar. He must call the calendar on the appointed day.

Should objection be made by three or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution so called, it shall be recommitted to the committee which reported the bill or resolution * * *.

You will note that 3 objections are required in the first instance; and you will note that if there are 3 objections, the bill is then recommitted to the committee—the Claims Committee or the Military Affairs Committee or the Naval Affairs Committee, or some other committee.

And no reservation of objection shall be entertained by the Speaker.

It is the opinion of many Members who have given thought to the subject that the reservation of objection on the call of the Private Calendar—and, in fact, generally in the House—takes up too much time and accomplishes very little purpose except to permit some Members to make a speech or some comments, very often not pertinent to the bill or the subject matter. When the Private Calendar is called on the first Tuesday, objection must be made, and the Speaker cannot entertain any reservation or objection. When objection is made by three Members, the bill is recommitted to the committee which reported it.

Such bills and resolutions, if considered, shall be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

This provision is principally to save the time of going in and out of the Committee of the Whole. In the House, as in Committee of the Whole, the bill would be considered under the general rules of the House—the 5-minute rule, for instance.

No other business shall be in order on this day unless the House, by two-thirds vote on motion to dispense therewith, shall otherwise determine. On such motion debate shall be limited to 5 minutes for and 5 minutes against such said motion.

This same rule applies to Calendar Wednesday. Calendar Wednesday cannot be dispensed with by less than a two-thirds vote of the House. Of course, usually it is done under unanimous consent, but on this first Tuesday of the month it is mandatory to take up the Private Calendar, and this could not be dispensed with unless a two-thirds vote of the House was obtained.

On the third Tuesday of each month, after the disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, the Speaker may direct the Clerk to call the bills and resolutions on the Private Calendar, preference to be given to omnibus bills containing bills or resolutions which have previously been objected to on a call of the Private Calendar.

The plan of this rule, as developed in the Rules Committee, is to take bills which are objected to on the Private Calendar, have them recommitted to the committees which reported them for further study, and a real study, and, if the committee on review sees fit, they may include them in omnibus bills.

We discussed with the Claims Committee here the ideal way for the committees to handle this review, and we hope if this rule goes into effect the committees will each try to set up a subcommittee of about five members to review bills which have been objected to.

Preferably on the subcommittee there should be no Member who has reported any of the bills objected to. This committee would determine whether any of the bills objected to should be included in the omnibus bill to be brought again before the House.

On the third Tuesday the Speaker may direct the Clerk to call the calendar, and the omnibus bills are taken up.

All bills or resolutions on the Private Calendar, if considered, shall be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

On the third Tuesday, in case the omnibus bills do not require the whole time, individual bills on the Private Calendar can be called.

They would be treated in the same way that individual bills on the Private Calendar are considered on the first Tuesday.

Should objections be made by three or more Members to the consideration of any bill or resolution, other than an omnibus bill, it shall be recommitted to the committee which reported the bill or resolution and no reservation of objection shall be entertained by the Speaker.

Omnibus bills shall be read for amendment by paragraph, and no amendment shall be in order except to strike out or reduce amounts of money stated or to provide limitations.

An attempt to prevent filibustering on omnibus bills is the reason that this limitation is put in. In other words, an amendment could be offered striking out one paragraph, say,

"House bill 29, for the relief of John Jones" or any other item, or the amount for "the relief of John Jones" being $5,000, an amendment reducing it to $2,500 would be in order, but no amendment would be in order increasing the amount.

Any item or matter stricken from an omnibus bill shall not be thereafter during the same session of Congress included in any omnibus bill.

In other words, a private bill has two chances-it is considered on the Private Calendar first and if objected to by three Members it may then be included in an omnibus bill, and if that particular item is stricken out of an omnibus bill it cannot then be reported again during that session of Congress in any omnibus bill.

Upon passage of any such omnibus bill, said bill shall be resolved into the several bills and resolutions of which it is composed, and such original bills and resolutions, with any amendments adopted by the House, shall be engrossed, where necessary, and proceedings thereon had as if said bills and resolutions had been passed in the House severally.

That is, the bills composing the omnibus bill shall be broken down again into individual bills rather than sending the omnibus bill to the President to be signed as one bill.

The reason for that provision is that if you send an omnibus bill to the President to be signed, he has no power to veto a particular item, and if the President did not feel inclined toward some particular item in the omnibus bill he would be compelled to veto the entire bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Further quoting from House Resolution 148:

In the consideration of any omnibus bill the proceedings as set forth above shall have the same force and effect as if each Senate or House bill or resolution therein contained or referred to were considered by the House as a separate or distinct bill or resolution.

The consideration of Senate bills in an omnibus bill has caused us some trouble. We think the last clause will protect the procedural situation as to those bills.

I shall be glad now to answer any questions, if I am able. Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. With reference to the provision that in the first instance it requires three objections, I call the attention of the gentleman from New York to what was well known in this House during the last 18 years as the Sevier heirs claim. During the last 18 years that bill was reported favorably by the committee a number of times. One time it had the unanimous committee report-21 members. The claim was 100 years old and involved with interest over $100,000,000. The objection that stopped that bill each time was one objection, until it was finally killed on its merits.

In looking up the matter in the Department, down here in old, musty files, I found the receipt that old Governor Sevier, who was the first Governor of Tennessee, had himself signed, written with his own handwriting, and over his own signature, wherein he acknowledged that he had received from this Government every dollar that the Government owed him, and gave a full release to the United States of all claims

If it required three objections and you could not reserve the right to state what was behind that bill, and show why it should not pass, how on earth could you stop a bill of that kind. We did stop it, and we finally beat that bill on its merits here in the House.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I know nothing about that particular

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman will find lots of bills. involving tremendous sums, aged, hoary with the years, that are wholly without merit. Unless, by reserving the right to object, you could tell colleagues something about them how could you stop them? You could not get three objections. It would mean passing all private bills, and you might as well take the Treasury door off of its hinges, and invite everybody to help themselves.

Mr. O'CONNOR. If there is anything that is unanimous in the opinion of the people who have studied this subject, it is that reservations of objections must be stopped. Personally I do not think there is any material difference between requiring one objection or three objections. I think it is as easy to get three objections as it is to get one, but it may be more difficult to get three arbitrary objections. If there are three sincere objections to the bill on its merits, there will be no difficulty getting the three.

Mr. BLANTON. During my 18 years in Congress I have never yet made an arbitrary objection. I have stopped many private bills, but the ones I have stopped were wholly unmeritorious.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that last year in the last session of the Seventythird Congress there was approximately $20,000,000 of private bills stopped by the objecting committee. When you prohibit the right of Members who stand up here for a mark to be shot at by disgruntled Members to state why they object to another Member's private bill, I think it is wrong. The Member objects because that bill is either unworthy, vicious, or is a plain grab into the Treasury. Under a reservation of objection, a Member can explain to other Members and to the country at large why this vicious bill is objected to. In that way they are stopped. Under this proposed change in the rules there will be no opportunity for a Member who has given these bills careful study and who desires to object to a bill because it ought to be objected to, to explain why he does it. There is no opportunity for him to say that the bill has not been recommended by the Department affected.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yielded for a question, and the speech the gentleman is now making is typical of a reservation of objection.

Mr. TRUAX. That is true, and I am glad to say that I stopped $469,000 worth of Senate bills on the last day of the Seventy-third Congress.

Mr. O'CONNOR. And at the same time the gentleman may have done a great injustice to a number of citizens of the United States.

Mr. TRUAX. Not so far as the bills that we stopped are concerned. The gentleman is simply attempting to cram down the throats of this House another gag rule, one of the worst of all.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Oh, it is not my rule, nor is it a gag rule. It is a proposed rule to expedite the business of the House with fairness to its Members and to our citizens without lodging in the hands of any one Member the right to arbitrarily interfere with the conduct of the business of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes; I yield to my distinguished colleague on the Rules Committee.

Mr. SABATH. As I understand it, the subcommittee has agreed tentatively on the draft and is ready to give the Members an opportunity to come before it and present any and all objections to any provision in the resolution.

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is correct.

Mr. SABATH. I did not have an opportunity of seeing the subcommittee's report. Is there a limitation to bills that are to go on the omnibus bill?

Mr. O'CONNOR. A limitation as to what?

Mr. SABATH. As to amount.

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; the committee feels that a claim for $1,000,000 which has merit should be paid just as quickly by the United States Government as a claim for $100.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Do I understand that the omnibus bill is to be considered under unanimous consent?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Oh, no.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. That comes up under the rule and is to be discussed in the House?

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is called up by the Speaker. It is read by paragraphs like an appropriation bill for amendment.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. And each item is subject to amendment?

Mr. O'CONNOR.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. And a majority vote will pass the

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes; I yield gladly to my distinguished colleague on the Rules Committee, who has given this subject so much study.

Mr. GREENWOOD. I have been impressed with the work that has been done by the official objectors. In fact, I was at one time one of the official objectors myself; but I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRUAX] is laboring under somewhat of a misapprehension. After objections have been made and a bill is referred back to the committee, it is my understanding that a subcommittee will permit the objector or his colleague to appear before it, as well as the proponent of the bill, and if the Committee on Claims, for instance, has been misinformed, that gives the gentleman who raised the objection or the three gentlemen, the opportunity to present an argument before the subcommittee of the Claims Committee, along with the proponent of the bill. It does not necessarily follow that the bill will be reported back into the omnibus bill or that there will be further hearings on it. Then when it comes up in the omnibus bill it is like any other legislation. The House majority can work its will, and every objector will have his opportunity, under the rules of the House, to rise and offer his objection and his argument. I think that is all any of us ought to desire or ought to ask. If the House has an opportunity to consider the bill on its merits, and the person who is opposed to it presents his argument and the gentleman who is the proponent of the bill presents his argument, and the House votes on it, that ought to take care of all interests, the claimant, the committee's pride, the objector, and everybody else, because the House has spoken its will.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I now yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York, my colleague [Mr. Bloom.]

Mr. BLOOM. Did I understand the gentleman to say that on the third Tuesday the Speaker "may" or "shall"?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The proposed rule says "may." The idea of that is that we cannot arbitrarily set aside 2 days in the month for consideration of the Private Calendar. That might interfere with other more important legislation. We thought it was safe to leave the second day to the discretion of the Speaker, because there is such a unanimous demand for the consideration of the Private Calendar, unless there was some legislation of tremendous importance, undoubtedly the Speaker would call the bills on that date.

Mr. BLOOM. But there is no assurance that he will call them up? It is in the discretion of the Speaker?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The second day is left within the discretion of the Speaker.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield. Mr. BULWINKLE. Does the gentleman not think that the only way to cure this is through the committees?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Does the gentleman mean by giving better consideration to bills?

Mr. BULWINKLE. By the committee giving better consideration to them?

Mr. O'CONNOR. We do not agree with that. We have given that matter a great deal of thought. Objections are made sometimes to certain types of bills because they are types, rather than because of the merits of the bill.

Mr. BULWINKLE. I was a member of the Claims Committee for 8 years. There are claims running from 1804 on down to the present time. If the committee will, by the rules of the committee, eliminate a lot of those old claims and thoroughly consider what they have before the subcommittees, I venture to say there will not be much trouble in the House or much trouble from objectors on the floor.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have 3 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I gladly yield to one of the most conscientious members of our Claims Committee.

Mr. NICHOLS. I wish to say to the gentleman that there has been a rule adopted in the Claims Committee, and we do not consider bills back of 1916 in that committee.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Is it not a fact that on several occasions when the Private Calendar was considered at a night session, we have passed as many as 50 or 60 or 70 meritorious bills? That is one question. I wish to ask the gentleman the further question, if it is not a fact that every time we have made any attempt to change the rules respecting the Private Calendar, which have been in force and effect for the last 75 years, we have gotten into deep water and made things

Mr. O'CONNOR. I know of only one occasion on which we tried to change the rules. I thing this proposal may be an advance in that direction.

Mr. MILLARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield. Mr. MILLARD. Does not the gentleman think that any claim over 5 or 6 years old should not be allowed in an omnibus bill?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not agree with the gentleman. There are many people around this Capitol who have been driven to nervous prostration and mental collapse because they have been continuously here, pounding at the doors of this Capitol for 20 or 25 years in some instances, unable to get a meritorious claim against their own Government granted by Congress.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Does the gentleman not think that whenever we have an omnibus bill from the Claims Committee it will be pretty much of a "pork barrel" proposition?

Mr. O'CONNOR. We hope not, because if that situation develops the Rules Committee would be inclined to try to change the rule again. We hope the committees, before putting bills in an omnibus bill, will eliminate many of the bills objected to, and that there will be no member of the reviewing committee which reports the omnibus bill, who previously reported a bill so included-

Mr. MEAD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. I should like to ask the gentleman if he has explained to the House how these omnibus bills will be broken down and entered and reported to the Senate?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have spent 40 minutes doing that. The gentleman was not present, apparently. The omnibus bill will be broken down and the items reported as individual bills.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. TRUAX. Has the gentleman any plan to obtain better attendance of the Membership at these sessions of the Private Calendar? The night sessions to which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] referred to a moment ago are usually attended by about a corporal's guard of this House.

Mr. O'CONNOR. May I suggest to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, the full-pedigreed watchdog of the Treasury, that the matter he mentions had best be taken up with the Sergeant at Arms of the House. [Applause and

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New | York [Mr. O'Connor] has again expired.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DELGADO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the conclusion of the special orders I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Resident Commissioner of the Philippine Islands?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, on the 24th of January there was introduced into this House the $4,880,000,000 bill practically without any consideration by any committee in the House, rushed through almost without a hearing because of the avowed desire for speed for purposes of relief. That was 6 weeks ago, yet the bill is still pending on the other side of the Capitol.

I rise, Mr. Speaker, for one purpose and one purpose alone, and that is to ask for consideration of the measure introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] the Republican floor leader, to divide the bill and put through this House at least the $880,000,000 bill which transfers funds and makes them immediately available for relief purposes. We were told when the bill came to us that it was absolutely essential to pass it immediately and that unless we did so all relief funds would be exhausted by the 10th of March and that Mr. Hopkins, the Relief Administrator, would have to shut down on relief. The House, acting upon that advice, practically did not give any consideration to the bill, but rushed it through, and, as I said before practically without any hearings at all.

We find that 6 weeks have gone by and nothing has been done to afford immediate relief to those people who are dependent for their livelihood on relief from the Government. In order to make the position at least of the minority side evident, that we are not trying to block relief, I want to emphasize that every Member on the minority side, and I believe every Member on the Democratic side as well, is ready and has been ready for more than a month to provide that $880,000,000 and make it immediately available.

Everyone on your side and everyone on our side knows perfectly well the reasons for the $880,000,000 bill, but the people back home do not. This I know because I get letters from my people, and I suppose you do from yours. They think that the $4,000,000,000 bill, the public-works bill, has something to do with relief, that it is for relief purposes, and that unless it passes and is enacted into law immediately that these millions of people who are now receiving relief will be cut off the relief rolls. That is what these people actually believe; and I think the time has come to clarify the issue and let them know that no Republican or no Democrat wants to block making the money available immediately to carry on this relief to the 1st of July. This is the purpose of the $880,000,000 relief bill introduced by my colleague [Mr. SNELL].

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Did the gentleman vote for this bill when it was before the House?

Mr. FISH. I certainly did not vote for it when it was before the House, and I shall give the reason for not voting for it. I am glad the gentleman brought it up. I voted against it because you attached onto this $880,000,000 relief proposal the $4,000,000,000 public-works bill, turning over the entire power and authority without limitation or qualification to the President. They never should have come up together. There was no reason in the world for their being combined together except sheer politics in order to give that power to the President. It was tied to the $880,000,000 relief bill in order to expedite favorable consideration of the publicworks bill, which robs Congress of its legislative functions and control over the purse strings.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FISH. Certainly. Mr. McREYNOLDS. Is not the gentleman just playing sheer politics when he addresses the House in this way at the present time?

Mr. FISH. No; not at all.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. FISH. I would rather proceed.

In my opinion, it is just playing politics with human relief when you tie up a public-works bill without any plan for the purpose of turning legislative power over to the President. This relief fund of $880,000,000 should have been considered by itself on its own merits; and the Democratic leaders on this side of the House are responsible for not passing it a month ago. You cannot blame the Senate of the United States, because the House made the original blunder. The people back home, according to the authorities in Washington, will be cut off the relief rolls on the 10th of March.

Who is responsible? Is the minority side responsible because you tack on a $4,000,000,000 bill for public works without a single plan except to give the President autocratic power? That is the only reason I am speaking today-not politics—because I honestly believe that the gentleman from Tennessee and every other Democrat on this side wants to make that money available immediately. I believe the gentleman from Tennessee and every other Democrat would have voted for it 6 weeks ago, when it should have come in here as a separate measure. At least, we on this side are not responsible.

I did not start out by making a political speech; but as long as the gentleman from Tennessee injected that remark, I will proceed and conclude by making a political speech. [Applause.] The entire responsibility for the failure of relief funds, if they are exhausted on March 10, will rest squarely on the leadership of this House and upon the Senate of the United States; and there is no alibi, no excuse, and no way of getting out of it. The Democratic majority accepted the combined bill as it came from the White House without hearings worthy of the name and jammed it through at the request of the President by means of a vicious gag rule.

Mr. FITZPATRICK and Mr. COCHRAN rose.

Mr. FISH. I shall have to recognize my colleague from New York first.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Is the gentleman in favor of appropriating money for direct relief or appropriating money for a public-works program that will give employment? does the gentleman prefer?

Mr. FISH. I personally prefer a public-works program; but we should have a plan before us that does not rob the House of its legislative powers.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. All of the criticism in reference to the public-works program comes from the gentleman's side.

Mr. FISH. It is not against any reasonable public-works program, but because the gentleman's party has no program. Bring in a program here and we may vote for it.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The gentleman will get it. Mr. FISH. You have nothing but a planless plan.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. What is the gentleman's program? Mr. FISH. I am in favor of permitting this House, as it has in the past, control appropriations, and have something to say about the make-up of a public-works program.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. What public-works program has the gentleman in mind?

Mr. FISH. I have exactly the same program in mind that this House has had for 50 years; that is to control appropriations itself and have something to do with formulating legislation instead of legislating away all of our power to one man in the White House.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. I understood the gentleman to say the Senate of the United States is not to blame.

Mr. FISH. No: it is not.

Mr. COCHRAN. Does the gentleman know of any rule in the Senate that will prevent the Senate from dividing the question immediately and sending the bill back here with only the relief program incorporated?

Mr. FISH. I am reminded of the fact that the Senate of the United States has a majority of Democrats. If they would do that and stop playing politics with this bill and with human misery and report it back they would be serving a useful purpose and the best interests of the country. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Does not the gentleman feel that in view of the promises made in the last election the Democrats in the other body should go ahead and pass the bill? How can the House be blamed when we passed the bill as the President desired?

Mr. FISH. And take away the power from Congress to legislate and control appropriations? I certainly do not.

Mr. Speaker, although the prevailing wage-scale issue has not yet reached the House, and I do not know whether it will or not, I do not mind stating where I stand on the matter, because from the time the President sent over his message on January 24, asking for this $4,880,000,000, the cost of living has gone up anywhere from 10 to 15 percent on the necessities of life.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, merely for the purpose of asking a question. The gentleman objected to this being turned over to the President for administration. May I ask the gentleman who, other than the President of the United States, is the chief administrative officer of this Government?

Mr. FISH. I am not questioning the fact he is the Ex-

Mr. BLANTON. He is the one who administers the laws which the Congress passes?

Mr. FISH. And we are supposed to write the laws here on a constitutional basis and not turn over the control of the purse strings to the President.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, since the President sent in this message some 6 weeks ago, the cost of living has gone up on the necessities of life from 10 to 15 percent. If any fair-minded man thinks that $50 a month is a living scale for a wage earner with a family to buy meat, butter, and the necessities of life, then he does not know anything about what a wage earner and a consumer has to do in order to support a family with three or four children under present conditions with the necessities of life skyrocketing as they have in the last 6 weeks.

Who is responsible? The Democratic Party. The Democratic Party has claimed to be the party of the consumers all of its existence; it claims to have protected the consumers; it has stood for free trade and for the lowering of the tariff in order to protect the consumers. Now, it comes in here and throws all of its principles overboard and for the first time establishes, by act of Congress, processing taxes within our country on meat and foodstuffs so that we have a tariff between States, which increases the cost of living to all wage earners and consumers. The fact is that the Democratic Party is no longer the party of the consumer.

Today you have to bear the responsibility for the administration of the A. A. A., which has increased the cost of foodstuffs to all the consumers of the United States. When you go before the people and say that $50, according to your President, is a living wage, you and I know it is not a living wage and it does not come anywheres near being a living wage because of the high cost of living since the first of this year, which is steadily rising and reducing the standard of living of 90 percent of the American people.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for just a question?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. Regarding the Government supplying work as a gratuity and the beneficiary demanding the highest commercial wage, if one without an overcoat would ask the gentleman to give him an overcoat and the gentleman from New York gave him a good warm overcoat, should the one so favored object because the gentleman from New York had not given him his main fur-lined favorite overcoat? Apropos there is an old saying "Never look a gift horse in the mouth."

Mr. FISH. I do not own a fur-lined overcoat and have not been able to get one under this administration.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, I referred to the handsome coonskin coat the gentleman used to wear at Harvard.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. May I answer the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] in this way: This is an old story, supposed to have been told by Abraham Lincoln. He said that two men with overcoats on fought so hard that they fought into each other's overcoat. That is what has happened between the Republican and Democratic Parties. The Democratic Party has fought so hard that it has fought itself into the Republican overcoat of centralized government. The Jeffersonian party of democracy has fought itself into the Republican overcoat of centralized government, but has not stopped there but has gone much farther than that, far, far beyond into Government ownership, regimentation, bureaucracy, collectivism, and State socialism. That is the answer to the gentleman's question about overcoats, and I might add that the antics of the administration and its frantic efforts to raise commodity prices without increasing wages has alienated the consuming population which it has ceased to represent.

The only reason I rose today, getting back to my original purpose, was to call the attention of the House to the fact that 6 weeks ago we were called upon to rush legislation through for immediate relief. This was the avowed reason, and many of you did this without asking any questions whatever. Six weeks have gone by and nothing has been done, and relief funds will be exhausted on the 10th of March. I am making my appeal for consideration of the Snell resolution, if the Senate does not act within the next few days or before the 10th of March. The resolution ought to be reported unanimously. It ought to have the name of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee on it and that of its sponsor, Mr. SNELL, and it ought to be presented as a nonpartisan bill and should be acted on immediately and by a unanimmous vote. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

(Mr. Carter asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the Record.)

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I can well appreciate the predicament in which my friend from New York and other gentlemen find themselves, as they are beginning to get letters from back home complaining because they have obstructed the recovery program of the President.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] complains very bitterly over the fact that the people back home seem to think he voted against relief, and that those people who are hungry, when the food gives out on March 10, are going to blame him for this, when, as a matter of fact, he was willing to vote for the relief but not for the work-relief part of the bill.

I know how shrewd and ingenuous the gentleman from New York is, and I do not believe he failed, or that any gentleman here failed, to catch the high point in the President's message on the work-relief bill. My friend says that the with the $4,000,000,000. Why, it was an integral part of it. It was almost an incidental part of it, because the President said that "the time has come when this Government must and shall quit the business of direct relief"; but, realizing the fact it could not be done by a waving of a magic wand, that it could not be done overnight, and that there had to be a period between which the direct relief would cease and the work-relief program would start, it was therefore estimated that $880,000,000 would carry the direct-relief program until July 1, and that if Congress would speedily give the President the authority, there were already approved public-works projects that had been surveyed and for which estimates had been made that could be got under way, and that the $880,-000,000 for direct relief would be sufficient to ease off of direct relief and take the three and a half million able-bodied men off of the relief rolls and put them to work.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. RICH. How much of the $4,000,000,000 was to put the Government in business in electrical fields all over the country, thus robbing those who are now honestly engaged in that field and putting them out of business?

Mr. WOODRUM. Well, that is like the question that was asked by the judge: "Do you still beat your wife like you used to?" [Laughter.] I do not admit that that fund is to put the Government in business in order to put any legitimate concern out of business.

Mr. RICH. They are doing it right along, every day.

Mr. WOODRUM. You cannot go out and build a bridge or a viaduct or dig a ditch that you do not, at least to some extent, theoretically, compete with private business. Everyone knows this. It is utterly impossible for the Government to go out with any sort of a work program that does not, to some extent, compete with private business, but the President said that projects would be selected that would, to a great extent, stay away from the field of private industry.

My friend over here complained because we did not bring in a work-relief bill setting out exactly what was to be done and naming the projects. Now, in all fairness and in all justice, are they sincere in that and would they have voted for such a measure? They would not.

Some of you gentlemen were perhaps here a few years ago at the beginning of this depression, so called, and you will recall the famous Garner bill. It turned out to be termed an "infamous" bill by some of these gentlemen. They called Garner "Pork Barrel Jack", because he brought in that bill. What was it? The author of that bill got the list of approved projects that had been passed on by the interdepartmental committee, made up mostly of Republican officials, who had passed on the projects, and said, "These public buildings and these public projects ought to be constructed." He put them all in a bill and brought it in here and offered it as a work-relief bill, and our friends hollered to high heaven about it as being a pork-barrel bill, and defeated it. This is what they would have done in this instance, and every man who has had a month's experience in this body knows it. You could sit here until the crack of doom, and you would never bring in a real workrelief bill, naming the projects. Has the gentleman from New York any work-relief bill? What would you do? What would you do with these three and a half million ablebodied American citizens who are begging you for what they have the right to expect of their Government-a job on which they can live?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? The gentleman has asked me a question.

Mr. WOODRUM. I asked the gentleman what he would do and I pause for an answer.

Mr. FISH. I shall tell the gentleman what I would do. I would restore confidence in America. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM. By electing the Republicans again? [Laughter and applause.]

This is an evidence of what we get from that side—restore public confidence. Now, if I were to press the inquiry further have to.

$880,000,000 for direct relief should not have been hooked up and ask how we would restore confidence, the gentleman would say, "By electing him President or some other good Republican." [Laughter and applause.]

Personally, if such a calamity has to come, I cannot think of any Republican I would rather see there. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. I also want to call attention to the fact that in the last administration the Republicans opposed direct Federal relief, while the present administration has given it, and now we find our friend from New York advocating something which the last Republican administration and his colleagues absolutely opposed.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. I yield.

Mr. MAY. How long in the gentleman's career has he been hearing it said that this confidence is necessary?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes; now one word as to prevailing rate of wages. My friend is wrong when he said it did not come up in the House. It did come up in the House, and we voted it out of the bill, refused to adopt an amendment. or perhaps it went out on a point of order. I do not recollect which.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The amendment was introduced by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery] and was held in order but voted out under a teller vote in the House.

Mr. WOODRUM. By no stretch of the imagination can you make out that this is militating against the rights of organized labor. What is the living standard of the man who takes his basket to the relief station and gets his bag of flour or his pound of coffee? He has no standard of living.

This bill says that Admiral Peoples testified that the average rate would be about $50 a month. To the ordinary laborer $30 a month and to the skilled mechanic $75 a month. It is not on the basis of a living wage. It is compensation for honest labor that they may feel when they get their provisions or clothing or their money they were working for and thus saved their respect as an American citizen.

I want to say to my friend that it is a tragedy; that this great program of the President is being held up because of intellectual or theoretical argument. We are confronted with a condition and not a theory.

I believe that the American people have confidence enough in the President to believe that he can and will work the thing out if given an opportunity to do so. I want to express the hope that the differences will be wiped out and that the gentlemen will be able to compose their views and permit that which means so much to the American people to go forward without further delay. [Applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Last year the administration demanded the prevailing wage for men in my part of the country. Is it any wonder that Senators-even the Senator from Virginia—are confused at the somersault and change of opinion on the prevailing wage?

Mr. WOODRUM. I do not know that there has been any somersault by the administration in trying to hold up the rate of wages in industry. I do not think there is any comparison in the prevailing rate of wages and the feeding and clothing of the man.

Mr. RICH. The whole thing is intended as a relief measure?

Mr. WOODRUM. It is relief work.

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman explain the change of attitude?

Mr. WOODRUM. I would not undertake to explain changes occurring in this kaleidoscopic situation.

Mr. GIFFORD. The somersaults have been so many.

Mr. WOODRUM. Well, we had good training in that from the gentleman's side.

Mr. GIFFORD. Is that the gentleman's alibi?
Mr. WOODRUM. I do not have any alibi; I do not ginia has expired.

AIDE DE CAMP TO THE GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, there are times when I wish the rules did not apply that former Members of the House may not be heard on this floor. There is serving for this body as clerk a former Member. He served for three terms as a Member of the House before some of the present Members were born. Also, he was speaker of the House of Representatives of the State of Kentucky and has been elected for the seventh term as Clerk of this House. I need not comment on his efficiency as Clerk, but today I wish he could perform a very pleasant task which he has asked me to do in his stead. Possibly one of the reasons why South Trimble is as popular with both sides of the House as he is, results from the fact of his fairness to all, whether in the majority or the minority. [Applause.]

It happens that occasionally he has an opportunity to do honor and courtesy to a member of the minority. So at this time he has asked me to convey to the leader of the minority the following commission, which I read:

IN THE NAME AND BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY

RUBY LAFFOON, GOVERNOR OF SAID COMMONWEALTH

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Know ye, that Hon. Bertrand H. Snell, Potsdam, N. Y., having Know ye, that Hon. Bertrand H. Snell. Potsdam, N. Y., having been duly appointed as aide de camp on the Governor's staff, with the rank and grade of colonel, I hereby invest him with full power and authority to execute and discharge the duties of the said office according to law. And to have and to hold the same, with all the rights and emoluments thereunto legally appertaining, for and during the term prescribed by law.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the Commonwealth to be hereunto affixed. Done at Frankfort, the 1st day of March, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-five and in the one hundred and forty-third year of the Commonwealth.

(Signed) Ruby Laffoon.

(Signed) RUBY LAFFOON, Governor.

By the Governor.

SARA W. MAHAN Secretary of State. By C. W. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State.

The great seal of the State of Kentucky is duly affixed

So, Colonel SNELL, acting in behalf of Mr. South Trimble, I have the pleasure and honor of handing you herewith your commission on the staff of Governor Laffoon, of Kentucky. [Applause.]

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York, Colonel SNELL, asks unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, this is one of the greatest and least expected honors I have ever had conferred upon me. In the presence of the House of Representatives and all of the duly elected Representatives from the great State of Kentucky, let it be known that I accept with pleasure this great and distinguished honor. [Applause.]

I have always known that the State of Kentucky was famous for its gallant men and beautiful women, and it is a great honor to be even an adopted son of so distinguished a constituency. Also, as it is well known that this State and the Governors thereof have always been very careful of the character and standing of men selected for this high honor, it is specially appreciated. Considering the fact that the Governor of this great State has at this time gone a long ways from home, about as far as he could, in this instance to find a suitable man upon whom to confer this coveted honor, I congratulate him and his officials on the good judgment shown in selecting a man with proper military attainments. I have always been for preparedness. I have voted

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Vir- | for every measure of that character that has ever been presented on the floor of the House, and, of course, there is no doubt about my future actions.

In conclusion, I simply want to extend my happiest felicitations to the distinguished Governor of the State of Kentucky and assure him that I am ready at any time to bear arms for that great State, and that I accept, with deep humility, this distinguished honor. [Applause.]

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that acceptance of a commission of this kind involves an obligation to attend the Kentucky Derby, can the Chair advise us as to the program of the House of Representatives during the time that great event is being run?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will refer that to the Kentucky colonel.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. J. Res. 46. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holdingcompany structure, or otherwise.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow. Wednesday, March 6, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

Hearing on Wednesday, March 6, 10:30 a. m., room 445, old House Office Building, on bills H. R. 4340 and H. R. 6083, providing for restriction of habitual commuting of aliens from foreign contiguous territory.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

Hearings Wednesday, March 6, 10 a. m., room 219, old House Office Building, to consider following bills: H. R. 2893, H. R. 9208, H. R. 5494, H. R. 6035, H. R. 6037, H. R. 6038, H. R. 6042, and H. R. 6043, on safety of life at sea.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

244. A letter from the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, transmitting report of its activities and expenditures for January 1935, together with a statement of authorizations made during that month, showing the name, amount, and rate of interest or dividend in each case (H. Doc. No. 120); to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

245. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting draft of a proposed bill for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States; to the Committee on Claims.

246. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting draft of a proposed bill for the relief of the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania; to the Committee on Claims.

247. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting draft of a proposed bill for the relief of Ludwig Larson; to the Committee on Claims.

248. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting draft of a proposed bill for the relief of Mrs. William E. Smith and Miss Clara Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

249. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting draft of a proposed bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to acquire a suitable site at Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, for a rear range light; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

250. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1936, to be immediately available, for the War Department, for United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, amounting to $225,000 (H. Doc. No. 121); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. WERNER: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 5229. A bill directing the Secretary of the Interior to investigate, hear, and determine claims of the individual members of the Stockbridge and Munsee Tribe of Indians of the State of Wisconsin; without amendment (Rept. No. 288). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WERNER: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 5230. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear claims of the Stockbridge and Munsee Tribe of Indians; without amendment (Rept. No. 289). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. KRAMER: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 3023. A bill to provide for citizenship to persons born in the United States, who have not acquired any other nationality by personal affirmative act, but who have heretofore lost their United States citizenship through the naturalization of a parent under the laws of a foreign country, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 290). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. SMITH of Washington: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2466. A bill for the relief of John E. Click; without amendment (Rept. No. 291). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STACK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3337. A bill for the relief of James Akeroyd & Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 292). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. PITTENGER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4031. A bill for the relief of Stanley T. Gross; with amendment (Rept. No. 293). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4290. A bill for the relief of Harriet V. Schindler; without amendment (Rept. No. 294). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4610. A bill for the relief of John J. Moran; with amendment (Rept. No. 295). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4630. A bill for the relief of William A. Ray; without amendment (Rept. No. 296). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4699. A bill for the relief of Estelle M. Gardiner; with amendment (Rept. No. 297). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4718. A bill for the relief of Yamato Sesoko; with amendment (Rept. No. 298). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DALY: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4798. A bill to authorize the settlement of individual claims of military personnel for damages to and loss of private property incident to the training, practice, operation, or maintenance of the Army; without amendment (Rept. No. 299). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4799. A bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed as a result of the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931; with amendment (Rept. No. 300). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DALY: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4833. A bill for the relief of Ciriaco Hernandez and others; without amendment (Rept. No. 301). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HOUSTON: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4845. A bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain enlisted men and former enlisted men of the Navy for the value of personal effects lost, damaged, or destroyed by fire at the naval training station, Hampton Roads, Va., on February 21, 1927; without amendment (Rept. No. 302). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. S. 267. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of catastrophes of nature; with amendment (Rept. No. 303). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOXEY: A bill (H. R. 6424) to continue the Cotton Control Act, to exempt a limited quantity of cotton from the tax thereunder, to provide for the better administration of such act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 6425) to provide for a technical staff in the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation in the Department of Commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. DINGELL: A bill (H. R. 6426) to provide for the coinage of 2- and 3-cent pieces; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. KRAMER: A bill (H. R. 6427) to prohibit statements and publications advocating overthrow of the Government by violence, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SANDERS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 6428) to regulate the manufacture and sale of stamped envelops; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. CITRON: A bill (H. R. 6429) for the improvement of village delivery service and also the working conditions of village delivery carriers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. DOCKWEILER: A bill (H. R. 6430) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act for the retirement of employees of the classified civil service, and for other purposes', approved May 22, 1920, and 'Acts in amendment thereof'", approved July 3, 1926, and May 29, 1930; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. DOXEY: A bill (H. R. 6431) to restore the 2-cent rate of postage on first-class mail matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NICHOLS: A bill (H. R. 6432) to create a separate bureau in the Department of the Interior to be known as the "Soil Erosion Service"; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request); A bill (H. R. 6433) for the relief of certain Indians of the Flathead Reservation killed or injured en route to dedication ceremonies of the Going-to-the-Sun Highway, Glacier National Park; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also (by departmental request), a bill (H. R. 6434) to provide for the leasing of restricted Indian lands of Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also (by departmental request), a bill (H. R. 6435) to transfer certain lands from the Veterans' Administration to the Department of the Interior for the benefit of the Yavapai Indians, Arizona; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 6436) to amend section 3342 | of the Revised Statutes to modify the requirements with respect to affixing internal-revenue stamps on containers of fermented liquors; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOEPPEL: A bill (H. R. 6437) to amend Private Act No. 5, Seventy-third Congress, entitled "An act to convey certain land in the county of Los Angeles, State of California"; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 6438) providing that congressional investigations be held only when Congress is not in session; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 6439) to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mrs. GREENWAY: A bill (H. R. 6440) to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. O'CONNOR: Resolution (H. Res. 148) amending rule XXIV of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. COLDEN: Resolution (H. Res. 149) to change the designation of the Committee on the Disposition of Useless Executive Papers to the Joint Committee on the Preservation of the Public Archives; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HOUSTON: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 194) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to taxing of incomes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the support of a relief program adequate to maintain a decent standard of living and to accomplish other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, praying for the relief of certain property owners of Santa Cruz County: to the Committee on Claims.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, regarding jobs for those who have borrowed from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and are unable to meet the required payments; to the Committee on Banking and

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, regarding an import duty to protect the asbestos-mining industry in the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, regarding the construction of a highway to link reclamation projects on the Colorado River and connect with the proposed deep-sea channel to the Gulf of California; to the Committee on Roads.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Puerto Rico; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, regarding aid to distressed school districts; to the Committee on Education.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of California; to the Committee on Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CARTWRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 6441) to extend the benefits of the Employees' Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, to J. C. Wilkinson; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COCHRAN: A bill (H. R. 6442) for the relief of James H. Taylor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DOCKWEILER: A bill (H. R. 6443) to extend the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes approved May 22, 1920, and all acts in amendment spect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters thereof, to Lycurgus Williams: to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. EKWALL: A bill (H. R. 6444) for the relief of Jane Alice Everson; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6445) granting a pension to Mark Baldwin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HEALEY: A bill (H. R. 6446) for the relief of George Norman Higgins; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL: A bill (H. R. 6447) granting a pension to Catherine King; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H. R. 6448) for the relief of George Presley Rhodes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6449) for the relief of Clyde G. Allen: to the Committee on Military Affairs,

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers werelaid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2626. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of the Common Council of the City of North Tonawanda, N. Y., favoring passage of the General Pulaski Memorial Day resolution; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2627. By Mr. BERLIN: Petition adopted by the city of New Kensington, Pa., at a regular meeting of the council held February 19, 1935, praying for the enactment of House Joint Resolution 81 or Senate Joint Resolution 11, providing that the President proclaim October 11 of each year as Gen. Casimir Pulaski Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2628. Also, petition of Groups 1241, 2791, 2226, and 791 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, praying for the enactment of House Joint Resolution 81 or Senate Joint Resolution 11, providing that the President proclaim October 11 of each year as Gen. Casimir Pulaski Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2629. By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: Petition of Alphonse E. Johnson, secretary, in behalf of the Happy Corner Unit of Stephen, Minn., American Farm Bureau, praying for support and passage of the Patman bonus bill (H. R. 1), and opposing the issuance of interest-bearing or tax-exempt bonds for the purpose of payment of the adjusted-compensation certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2630. Also, petition of Alphonse E. Johnson, secretary, in behalf of the Happy Corner Unit of Stephen, Minn., American Farm Bureau, praying for support of a fully adequate old-age pension act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2631. By Mr. COLDEN: Resolution adopted by the City Council of Gardena, Calif., expressing approval of the President's plan of relief by the construction of worth-while projects in order to provide employment to those in need, as opposed to the dole system; to the Committee on Appropria-2632. Also, resolution dated February 26, 1935, of the City Council of the City of Torrence, petitioning Congress to provide for payment of adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2633. Also, resolution adopted by the City Council of Torrence, Calif., expressing approval of the President's plan of relief by the construction of worthwhile projects in order to provide employment to those in need, as opposed to the dole system; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2634. By Mr. CROWE: Letter from the Crawford County Conservation Club, English, Ind., by L. L. Land, president, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2635. Also, letter from the Elnora Kennel Club, Elnora, Ind., by Harry R. Stalcup, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with rerelating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2636. Also, letter from the Bicknell Conservation Club, Bicknell, Ind., by C. G. Ballard, president, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2637. Also, letter from the Izaak Walton League of Evansville, Ind., by Harry L. Nussmeier, president, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2638. Also, letter from the Spencer County Fish and Game Association, Rockport, Ind., by M. B. Savage, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2639. Also, letter from the Patoka Valley Fish and Game Club, Winslow, Ind., by John P. Vinyard, secretary, urging the passage of the Crowe resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to authorize a compact or agreement between Kentucky and Indiana with respect to hunting and fishing privileges, and other matters relating to jurisdiction on the Ohio River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2640. By Mr. DEMPSEY: Petition of the New Mexico State Legislature; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2641. Also, petition of the New Mexico State Legislature; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2642. Also, petition of the New Mexico State Legislature; to the Committee on Roads.

2643. By Mr. FISH: Petition of 123 citizens of New York State, protesting against religious persecutions in Mexico, and petitioning the recall of the American Ambassador, Josephus Daniels; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2644. Also, memorial of the Common Council of the city of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., favoring the proclamation of October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2645. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Resolution of Group 1749 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, urging the adoption of House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2646. By Mrs. KAHN: Petition of the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, urging the immediate development of Sunnyvale in part as a heavier-than-air naval base; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

2647. By Mr. LAMNECK: Resolution in behalf of national defense, submitted by the board of directors of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Columbus, Ohio, urging that the United States Government make further and adequate provision for the national defense by greatly expanding the air force of the Nation, establishing a system of air frontier defense bases along our coasts and inland frontiers, etc.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2648. By Mr. LUNDEEN: Petition of the Minnesota State Bar Association, urging repeal of certain legislation which restricts the right of attorneys to practice before certain Federal departments and limits the fees of attorneys for the performance of certain services, and that the enactment of similar legislation in the future be prevented; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2649. Also, petition of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, urging the passage of House bill 5450, calling for a reduction in taxes on 10-cent packages of cigarettes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2650. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of Group No. 255 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, Buffalo, N. Y., requesting the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2651. By Mr. MILLARD: Petitions signed by residents of New York State, opposing the enactment of the holding company bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2652. By Mr. MILLER: Petition of Henry Taylor and numerous other citizens of Pocahontas, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2653. Also, petition of Henry Cox and numerous other citizens of Holly Grove, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2654. Also, petition of E. L. Sisson and numerous other citizens of Holly Grove, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2655. Also, petition of J. M. Jenkins and numerous other citizens of El Paso, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2656. Also, petition of A. J. McCall and numerous other citizens of Swifton, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2657. Also, petition of W. B. Huddleston and numerous other citizens of Batesville, Moorefield, and Pfeiffer, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2658. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Joint resolution of the City Council of Providence, requesting passage of resolution now pending in the present session of the United States Congress providing for the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2659. By Mr. RICH: Petition of citizens of Knoxville, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2660. Also, petition of citizens of Wellsboro, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2661. Also, petition of citizens of Potter County, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2662. Also, petitions of citizens of Mansfield, Pa., protesting against the passage of House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2663. Also, petition of citizens of Westfield, Pa., protesting against the passage of House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2664. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition of W. D. Watts and numerous other citizens of Gordo, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2665. Also, petition of W. H. Chambers and numerous other citizens of Double Springs, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2666. Also, petition of R. E. McIntyre and numerous other citizens of Winn, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age and Means.

2667. Also, petition of D. B. Allmon and numerous other citizens of Clarkesville, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2668. Also, petition of Benie Griffin and numerous other citizens of Mitchell Station, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2669. Also, petition of Rance Brownage and numerous other citizens of Tuskegee, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2670. Also, petition of L. V. Pleasant and numerous other citizens of Fort Necessity and Winnsboro, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2671. Also, petition of Arthur Rabon and numerous other citizens of Simsboro, Arcadia, and Bienville, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2672. Also, petition of Ira Warren and numerous other citizens of Kingbee, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2673. Also, petition of Peter Philips and numerous other citizens of Texarkana, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2674. Also, petition of Frank Easter and numerous other citizens of Melrose and Edgemont, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2675. Also, petition of A. L. Bryan and numerous other citizens of Bellwood and Geneva, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2676. Also, petition of Wain Jacson and numerous other citizens of Littlefield and Amherst, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2677. Also, petition of Louis Wesley and numerous other citizens of Washington, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2678. Also, petition of Ray Allbright and numerous other citizens of Des Moines, Iowa, favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2679. Also, petition of W. A. Bates and numerous other citizens of Jumbo and Miller, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2680. Also, petition of Robert Laningham and numerous other citizens of Philadelphia, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2681. Also, petition of E. D. Norwood and numerous other citizens of Mendenhall, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways | old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2682. Also, petition of Monroe Berry and numerous other citizens of Clark and Union Church, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2683. Also, petition of J. D. Lewis and numerous other citizens of Simsboro, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2684. Also, petition of Roy Lutz and numerous other citizens of Clark and Gibson City, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2685. Also, petition of A. J. Richey and numerous other citizens of Mountain Grove, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2686. Also, petition of John W. Miller and numerous other citizens of Idabel, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2687. Also, petition of J. W. Adair and numerous other citizens of Moyers, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2688. Also, petition of Arch C. Rubin and numerous other citizens of Tishomingo, Madill, and Wewoka, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month. to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2689. Also, petition of J. H. Dorsey and numerous other citizens of Dossville and Kosciusko, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2690. Also, petition of Ellis Mallard and numerous other citizens of Georgetown, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2691. Also, petition of B. J. Burray and numerous other citizens of Louisville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2692. Also, petition of W. B. Fairchild and numerous other citizens of Ellisville and Moselle, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2693. Also, petition of John Barron and numerous other citizens of Star and Braxton, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2694. Also, petition of J. M. Moore and numerous other citizens of Mize, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2695. Also, petition of Frank B. Webb and numerous other citizens of Lansing, Mich., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2696. Also, petition of W. C. Ivey and numerous other citizens of Augusta, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2697. Also, petition of Jack Homes and numerous other citizens of Woodbury, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2698. Also, petition of John W. Harris and numerous other citizens of Woodbury, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2699. Also, petition of E. J. Belcher and numerous other citizens of McComas, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2700. Also, petition of Noah Harris and numerous other citizens of Wake Forest, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2701. Also, petition of Luther Anderson and numerous other citizens of Seneca and West Union, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2702. Also, petition of Steve Saul and numerous other citizens of East Radford, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2703. Also, petition of Henry McArthur and numerous other citizens of Wallace, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2704. Also, petition of Frank Clenton and numerous other citizens of Wilmington, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2705. Also, petition of John A. Adams and numerous other citizens of Etta, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2706. Also, petition of J. B. Seal and numerous other citizens of Tupelo, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocks, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2707. Also, petition of John A. Bell and numerous other citizens of Summerfield, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2708. Also, petition of John Moody and numerous other citizens of Cypress and Bermuda, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2709. Also, petition of E. D. Collin and numerous other citizens of Hosston, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2710. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Harry Denzler Richard Roberts, of Brooklyn, N. Y., regarding the income-tax publicity provision in the tax law of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2711. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, city of New York, favoring the Brunner bill for a 2-cent postal rate in the Borough of Queens; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2712. By Mr. SANDERS of Texas: Petition of Thomas Anderson and numerous other citizens of Spurger, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2713. Also, petition of John A. Harris and numerous other citizens of Longview, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2714. By Mr. SMITH of Connecticut: Resolution of District 152 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, memorializing Congress to enact legislation proclaiming October 11 as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, signed by Marion Budney, president; S. S. Chenichinski, secretary; and K. J. Kawiski, treasurer; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2715. By Mr. SMITH of Washington: Petition signed by 2,472 residents of Clark, Cowlitz, Grays Harbor, Lewis, Mason, Pacific, Skamania, Thurston, and Wahkiakum Counties, State of Washington, urging favorable action by Congress on House bill 3977, known as the "Townsend old-age revolving pension bill"; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2716. By Mr. SUTPHIN: Petition of the Santa Monica Stamp Club; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2717. By Mr. WERNER: Resolution of citizens of the Black Hills of South Dakota, endorsing the Townsend oldage revolving pension bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2718. Also, Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 5 of the Legislature of South Dakota, memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass legislation for the development of the hydroelectric and irrigation sites upon the Missouri River within the boundaries of the State of South Dakota; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2719. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the City Commission of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; to the Committee on the Judiciary. 2720. Also, petition of the City Commission of the City of Manistee, Mich.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2721. Also, petition of the city of Dearborn, Mich.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2722. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of St. Cloud, Minn.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2723. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of Mishawaka, Ind.; to the Committee on the Judiciery 2724. Also, petition of the City Council of Providence, R. I.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2725. Also, petition of the board of trustees of the village of Port Chester, N. Y.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2726. Also, petition of H. C. Hahn and others; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2727. Also, petition of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, Calif.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Robinson, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, March 5, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 14) requesting the President of the United States to return to the House of Representatives the enrolled bill (H. R. 330) for the relief | necessarily do environment, culture, and learning cause those of Sophie de Sota, in which it requested the concurrence of

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	La Follette	Robinson
Ashurst	Couzens	Logan	Russell
Austin	Cutting	Lonergan	Schall
Bachman	Dickinson	Long	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Dieterich	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bankhead	Donahey	McCarran	Shipstead
Barbour	Duffy	McGill	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McKellar	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	George	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gerry	Metcalf	Townsend
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Trammell
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Truman
Bulow	Gore	Murphy	Tydings
Burke	Guffey	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hale	Neely	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Harrison	Norbeck	Wagner
Capper	Hastings	Norris	Walsh
Carey	Hatch	Nye	Wheeler
Clark	Hayden	O'Mahoney	White
Connally	Johnson	Pope
Coolidge	Keyes	Radcliffe
Control of the Contro

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis] is necessarily detained from the

Mr. DIETERICH. I desire to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] is necessarily absent.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

DEATH OF OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I consider it most appropriate that the Senate of the United States should pause at the very beginning of its deliberations today in order that tribute may be paid to Oliver Wendell Holmes, who died here in the Capital City of the Nation early this morning in his ninety-fourth year.

Few men have been spared to give such fullness of years to the service of their fellow countrymen as has this distinguished citizen of the United States. A soldier in the Civil War, dropping from his hand his Harvard degree for the musket, he served 4 years as a young officer in that momentous struggle. Shot through the breast at Balls Bluff, shot through the neck at Antietam, shot through the heel at Maryes Heights, his military record alone is a patriot's monument.

A lawyer of the highest integrity, law professor, and authoritative author in jurisprudence for 15 years, he became a member of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. to serve on that body for 20 years, 3 of those years as its chief justice. That service and, until January 1932, his distinguished labors of 29 years as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, made a total activity in the highest judicial tribunals of his State and Nation of more than 49 years. No man in our Nation's history served the cause of justice more devotedly and continuously.

It is not merely his many years of service that his fellow countrymen have always proclaimed with pride but especially the character of his service. The clarity of his vision, the tolerance and broad-mindedness of his outlook, his championing of the cause of liberality, impartiality, and truth; in a word, his untrammeled and discerning legal opinions, coupled with great courage, made him a national figure both conspicuous and beloved. He demonstrated, perhaps better than any other man in American life, that not born to ease and blessed with the advantages of educational and social accomplishments to be diverted from sympathy with the struggles of the average citizen and from the display of such sympathy, even when it required standing alone and against his own social class for the fullest protection of the legal rights of the humble. Truly this man was a veritable soldier for the right all his life.

The 93 years of honorable, useful, and patriotic life that speak to us today from his death chamber, in life earned Oliver Wendell Holmes the affection and gratitude of the Nation; in death his memory should inspire all who are called to public service, in peace or in war, to emulate his industry, independence, intelligence, integrity, and unflinching devotion to his country's welfare.

The Senate of the United States, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, justly proud of her noble son, and 120,000,000 of grateful Americans join in thanking the God of Nations for having given us Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the most able, cultured, and patriotic Americans of our generation. May the noble soul of the grand old man of the judiciary rest in peace! Oliver Wendell Holmes, hail and farewell!

SOPHIE DE SOTA

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution coming over from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (H. Con. Res. 14), as

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to return to the House of Representatives the enrolled bill (H. R. 330) entitled "An act for the relief of Sophie de Sota."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, as will be observed, the concurrent resolution adopted by the House, which has just been laid before the Senate, requests the President to return to the House House enrolled bill 330, for the relief of Sophie de Sota. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the concurrent resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was considered and agreed to.

WHITE HOUSE POLICE FORCE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a draft of proposed legislation amending section 2 (a) of the act entitled "An act to create the White House police force" proved September 14, 1922 (42 Stat. 841), as amended, to provide necessary police and to establish additional police posts in and about the White House and grounds so as to insure protection of the new and enlarged executive offices, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of California, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service:

Senate Joint Resolution 5

Relating to retirement of Federal employees who have been in the service for 15 to 30 years or more and restoration of pay of said employees as of January 1, 1935

Whereas employees who have attained the age of 60 years and have rendered at least 15 years' service should be eligible for retirement, and all civil-service employees who have rendered at least 30 years' service, regardless of age, should be allowed to retire at their option with adequate pensions to insure their proper care during the balance of their lives; and

Whereas the President of the United States has determined that

Whereas the President of the United States has determined that the percentage of reduction of Government employees' salaries shall continue to be 5 percent to and including June 30, 1935; and Whereas it is believed that such reductions should be discontinued and that full pay of Government employees should be restored as of January 1, 1935: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the senate and assembly, jointly, That the Legislature of the State of California at its fifty-first regular session urges that the Congress of the United States adopt such legislation as will enable this to be done; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary of the senate to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of Labor of the United States, and to each Member of Congress and the United States Senate from the State of California.

GEORGE J. HATFIELD, President of the Senate. EDWARD CRAIG, Speaker of the Assembly.

Attest:

J A BREK Secretary of the Senate.
ARTHUR A. OHNIMUS,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of California, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Senate Joint Resolution No. 6

Relative to accepting amendments to permit from the Government of the United States for the construction of approach roads and toll areas over certain rights-of-way leading to the Golden Gate Bridge in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, and relating to the retrocession by the Congress of the United States of jurisdiction over said rights-of-way and toll areas as relocated

Whereas, on February 13, 1931, the Secretary of War, pursuant to authority in him vested by section 6 of the act of Congress approved July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. 104), granted to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District a right-of-way for the extension, maintenance, and operation of a State road across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, Calif., and across the Fort Baker Military Reservation, including space for toll booths and facilities for regulating traffic, and also the right to erect, operate, and maintain the ends of the Golden Gate Bridge with cable anchorages, upon the said military reservations; and

Whereas said grant has been accepted by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District and also by the Legislature of the State of California under the terms of Senate Joint Resolution No. 11, of the forty-ninth session of the Legislature of the State of California; and

California; and
Whereas the said permit and grant were amended by amendments dated April 1, 1931, May 1, 1933, and July 21, 1933, which said three amendments have been accepted by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District and approved and accepted by joint resolutions of the Legislature of the State of California; and resolutions of the Legislature of the State of California; and Whereas, on the 19th day of March 1934, the Secretary of War did grant to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District a further modification of said permit as amended, and being a modification providing for the enlargement of the toll area theretofore granted under the original permit in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, which said amendment and modification of the date last mentioned is hereby expressly referred to; and Whereas it was in said last-named modification and amendment, expressly provided that the amendments and modifications therein expressly provided that the amendments and modifications therein contained should not become effective and the original permit of contained should not become effective and the original permit of February 13, 1931, should remain unchanged thereby, unless and until the said Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District should have accepted said amendment, and unless and until the State of California should have, with respect to said amendment, taken the same formal action which it was required to take with respect to the original permit, and which is set forth in paragraph 11 and subparagraphs 11a, 11b, and 11c of that instrument, as a condition precedent to the taking effect thereof: Now, therefore, be it condition precedent to the taking effect thereof: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and Assembly of the State of California, fointly, That said modification and amendment, dated the 19th day of March 1934, to said permit dated February 13, 1931, as amended by amendments dated April 1, 1931, May 1, 1933, and July 21, 1933, granted by the Secretary of War to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, be and the same hereby is, together with each, all, every, and singular the terms, conditions, limitations, reservations, and requirements therein contained, accepted by and on behalf of the State of California; and be it further

Resolved, That the State of California does hereby make application to the Congress of the United States for a retrocession of jurisdiction over the rights-of-way and toll area as relocated and amended by said modification, dated the 19th day of March, 1934, in leu of and superseding the application for retrocession of jurisdiction over the right-of-way heretofore granted across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation in the original permit of February 13, 1931, in case said relocation of the right-of-way and toll area is finally granted to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District; and be it further

Resolved, That the State of California will, in case such retrocession of jurisdiction is granted by Congress, accept such retrocession of jurisdiction, and will assume the responsibility of managing, controlling, policing, and regulating traffic thereon, all subject to the following limitations and to such other limitations as Congress may prescribe.

(a) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed as Congress may prescribe.

(a) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed to give to the State of California or any of its agents, authority at any time to regulate traffic of military personnel or vehicles upon the said bridge or roads. All traffic upon said roads and upon said bridge shall be free from any tolls, charges, or any form of obstruction by State or other agencies, against military and naval personnel and their dependents, civilians of the Army and Navy traveling on Government business under military authority, and Government traffic.

(b) That whenever in the judgment of the Secretary of War or his authorized representative any emergency exists which justifies it, he may assume exclusive control and management of said bridge and roads and may then in his discretion prohibit, limit, or regulate traffic thereon.

limit, or regulate traffic thereon.

(c) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed to confer upon the State courts the right to try persons subject to military law for crimes or offenses committed on said roads, or upon said bridge within the boundaries of the respective military reservations involved, but the courts of the United States or military tribunals as now or hereafter provided by law, shall retain exclusive jurisdiction to try such persons for such offenses; be it further

Resolved, That the State of California does hereby agree to make such relocated right-of-way and toll area in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation in said amended permit described a part of the system of public highways of the State; and be it

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of War, to each House of Congress, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of California.

GEORGE J. HATFIELD. President of the Senate. EDWARD CRAIG, Speaker of the Assembly.

Attest:

J. A. Brek,
Secretary of the Senate.
ARTHUR A. OHNIMUS,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor:

Assembly joint resolution to the honorable the President of the United States relative to the policy of establishing a reasonable and equitable preferential basis in connection with certain contracts and works in favor of Nevada contractors, Nevada materials and Nevada laborations. rials, and Nevada labor

To the honorable the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Whereas the Thirty-seventh Legislature of the State of Nevada, in regular session, represents: The State of Nevada, in common with every State in the Union, is confronted with the important task of providing employment for its citizens. Funds are appropriated from time to time by the Congress of the United States for the construction of Federal public buildings and the constructhe construction of receral public buildings and the construction of national forest, national park, and national monument highways within the State of Nevada, upon which considerable numbers of men are employed. Many of the contracts for such works are let to contractors located outside of Navada, who, usually, if not invariably, import into the State the labor required for their construction. The employment of needy citizens of this State on such work would in some measure alleviate the scrious upenployment situation in Navada, would be a just policy in unemployment situation in Nevada; would be a just policy, in that it would avoid adding to Nevada's duties in the matter of police protection and the legal rights of persons permanently or temporarily residing within its borders; would be a justifiable policy from an economic standpoint, since it would obviate the policy from an economic standpoint, since it would obviate the expense of transporting employees from other parts of the United States; and would work no injustice to any community; and

Whereas the Federal law, being section 6 of "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and other purposes", approved July 11, 1916, reads, in part, as follows: "That in the expenditure of this fund for labor preference shall be given, other conditions being equal, to honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines, but any other preference or discrimination among citizens of the United States in connection with the expenditure of this appropriation other preference or discrimination among citizens of the United States in connection with the expenditure of this appropriation is hereby declared to be unlawful"; and Whereas it is advisable for the better carrying out of the intent and purpose of the said law to restrict this preference to the citizens of the State in which said work is being performed; and Whereas said section 6 should be amended to give preference to the citizens of the State in which any of the work under the said act is being performed. Now therefore he it

Whereas said section 6 should be amended to give preference to the citizens of the State in which any of the work under the said act is being performed: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the Assembly and Senate of the State of Nevada, That departments of the United States Government having under their charge and control the awarding of contracts for the construction of public works within the State, or the supervision of such works, if any, by force account, pursue the policy of establishing a reasonable and equitable preferential basis in connection with such contracts and works in favor of Nevada contractors, Nevada materials, and, in particular, of Nevada labor; and that the good offices of the President of the United States be exerted to this end: be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted forth-with by the secretary of the State of Nevada to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to our Senators and Representative in Congress, and to the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, and a copy, under the great seal of the State of Nevada, to the President of the United

FRED S. ALWARD, President of the Senate. EDWARD A. DUCKER, Jr., Secretary of the Senate.
WILLIAM KENNETT, Speaker of the Assembly. LEONARD A. WILSON, Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

State of Nevada, executive department. Approved February 27,

RICHARD KIRMAN, Governor.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Senate Concurrent Resolution R

Whereas the Bank of North Dakota is organized and estab-

Whereas the Bank of North Dakota is organized and testab-lished by the State of North Dakota and is part of the State of North Dakota functioning in its sovereign capacity; and Whereas the Bank of North Dakota is backed and guaranteed by all resources of the State in its sovereign capacity and is one of the soundest financial institutions in the United States; and

Whereas the State of North Dakota in due course of its business whereas the State of North Dakota in due course of its business issues bonds and securities for the proper financing of its business and its institutions, which said bonds and securities are all within the limitations prescribed by the laws of the State of North Dakota and are guaranteed and backed by the integrity and all the resources of the State; and

Whereas the State of North Dakota makes use of the Bank of North Dakota to handle and purchase these bonds and securities;

Whereas the Bank of North Dakota has on hand and does handle a large amount of these State bonds and securities as part of its resources and reserve; and

Whereas it would be of great advantage and benefit to the State of North Dakota in the proper financing of its business enterprises and its institutions, that the Bank of North Dakota should be authorized, empowered, and permitted to pledge with the United States Treasury such of the bonds and securities of the State of North Dakota handled by the Bank of North Dakota, and be further authorized and permitted to issue currency in place thereof. In this matter the Bank of North Dakota would not be required to begrow money for short-time financing and pay inrequired to borrow money for short-time financing and pay interest thereon: and

Whereas an act of Congress is necessary to qualify the Bank of orth Dakota to take advantage of this medium of financing:

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of North Dakota (the house of representatives concurring therein), That we petition the United States Congress now assembled, to enact the proper and necessary law qualifying the Bank of North Dakota to participate in the facilities of the United States Treasury for the issuing of currency in the name of the Bank of North Dakota, secured by a deposit of the bonds of the State of North Dakota and acceptable State securities; and be it further State securities; and be it further

Resolved, That we petition the United States Treasury and Comptroller of the Currency to make such rules and regulations as will give to the Bank of North Dakota, as a sovereign institution of the State of North Dakota the facilities for issuing of currency; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of North Dakota be and is hereby instructed to forward an authenticated copy of this resolution to the President of the United States, the copy of this resolution to the President of the United States, the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C., to the Secretary and to the Comptroller of the United States Treasury, and to the two United States Senators and two Representatives from North Dakota in Congress.

A. S. Marshall,

President are tempore of the Senate

President pro tempore of the Senate.

F. E. TUNNELL,

Secretary of the Senate.

WILLIAM M. CROCKETT, Speaker of the House.
WALTER S. MARTIN,
Chief Clerk of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was ordered to lie on the table:

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass, and the President of the United States to approve, if passed, the General Pulaski Memorial Day resolution now pending in Congress

Whereas a resolution providing for the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as "General Pulaski Memorial Day" for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski is now pending in the present session of Congress; and

Whereas the 11th day of October 1779 is the date of the heroic death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, who died from wounds received on October 9, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, Ga.; and on October 9, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, Ga.; and Whereas the States of Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Nevada, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and other States of the Union have, through legislative enactment, designated October 11 of each year as "General Pulaski Memorial Day".

designated October 11 of each year as "General Pulaski Memorial Day"; and

Whereas it is fitting that the recurring anniversary of this day be commemorated with suitable patriotic and public exercises observing and commemorating the heroic death of this great American hero of the Revolutionary War; and

Whereas the Congress of the United States has by legislative enactment designated October 11, 1929, October 11, 1931, October 11, 1932, and October 11, 1934, to be "General Pulaski Memorial Day" in the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That we hereby memorialize and petition the Congress of the United States to pass, and the President of the United States to approve, if passed, the "General Pulaski Memorial Day" resolution now pending in Congress; and be it further

Resolved, That suitable copies of this resolution be sent forthwith to the President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of the United States Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Michigan.

Adopted by the senate, February 5, 1935.

Adopted by the house of representatives, February 26, 1935.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the State executive committee of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, in the State of Pennsylvania, protesting against communistic teachings and propaganda in the schools and colleges of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of Annie E. Miller, of Lovettsville, Va., praying for the enactment of old-age-pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the State executive committee of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, in the State of Pennsylvania, protesting against ratification of the World Court protocols, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the General Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Little Rock, Ark., protesting against an investigation of alleged religious persecutions in the Republic of Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry colored citizens of Little Rock, Ark., praying for the enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from Hilda Phelps Hammond, chairman Women's Committee of Louisiana, of New Orleans, La., transmitting petitions of citizens of the States of California, Illinois, Kentucky, and New York, praying for an investigation of charges filed by the Women's Committee of Louisiana relative to the qualifications of the Senators from Louisiana [Mr. Long and Mr. OVERTON], which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of the States of Kansas, Maryland, Indiana, Ohio, and Maine, praying for an investigation of charges filed by the Women's Committee of Louisiana relative to the qualifications of the Senators from Louisiana [Mr. Long and Mr. OVERTON], which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the State Executive Committee of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, in the State of Pennsylvania, favoring the enactment of legislation calling for Federal participation in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. which was referred to the Committee on Rules.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Lebanon, Tenn., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram from Arthur Higgins, secretary of convention, quoting a resolution adopted by the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, at Buffalo, N. Y., favoring the adoption of the so-called "McCarran amendment" providing for the payment of prevailing wages in connection with proposed appropriations for public works relief, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from John P. Burke, president-secretary, International Brotherhood of Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, assembled in convention at Buffalo, N. Y., praying for the adoption of the so-called "McCarran amendment" providing for the payment of prevailing wages in connection with proposed appropriations for public works relief, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAPPER presented a resolution adopted by Ellsworth Post, No. 174, American Legion, of Ellsworth, Kans., favoring the passage of legislation known as the "Patman bill", being the bill (H. R. 1) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates and for controlled expansion of the currency, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WALSH presented the following resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Resolutions memorializing the Congress of the United States relative to the prevention or punishment of the crime of lynching

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts respectfully represents to the President and the Congress of the United States the necessity of the more strict enforcement of existing Federal statutes, whereunder the crime of lynching may be punished, and of the passage of additional Federal statutes effectively prohibiting and punishing such crime; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded forthwith by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and to the Members of Congress from Massachusetts.

In house of representatives, adopted February 11, 1935.

In house of representatives, adopted February 11, 1935. In senate, adopted in concurrence February 18, 1935. A true copy. Attest:

[SEAL]

F. W. Co

F. W. Cook, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Mr. WALSH also presented the memorial of employees of F. S. Payne Co., of Cambridge, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing a 30-hour-work week in industry, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Plymouth, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the improvement of the banks of the Cape Cod Canal, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a petition from Harry Badmington, of Rockland, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation repealing the 10-percent tax on furs, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of the Pulaski Club, of East-hampton, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation known as "The Workers' Unemployment Old-Age and Social Insurance Act", which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the memorial of members of the faculty of the Walnut Hill School, of Natick, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing for payment of adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the mayor and City Council of Brockton; Lorraine Post, No. 29, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Haverhill; and Benjamin D. Cushing Post, No. 2425, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Marion, all in the State of Massachusetts, favoring the enactment of legislation providing immediate payment of adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, praying for the publication at Government expense of all testimony taken by the Federal Communications Commission, broadcast division, in relation to the broadcasting of programs of interest, convenience, and necessity, together with the report of the Commission, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, remonstrating against the passage of House bill 3971, to regulate sales in interstate commerce by taxation, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the memorial of Henry K. Barnes Co., of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against amendment of section 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act providing for the shortening of the present 3-year period for recovering freight overcharges, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the memorial of the board of directors of the Dorchester (Mass.) Board of Trade, remonstrating against taking jurisdiction from the Interstate Commerce Commission over freight rates in competing sections of the country, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a resolution adopted at Worcester, Mass., by Scandinavian residents of that city and vicinity, protesting against war and excessive preparations for war purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the petition of members of R. H. Dowling Camp, No. 35, United Spanish War Veterans, of Pittsfield, Mass., praying for the passage of House bill 100, providing for the reenactment of provisions of law relating to pensions for Spanish War veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of the Ladies' Auxiliary Division, No. 2, Ancient Order of Hibernians, of Holyoke, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the issuance of a special commemorative stamp in honor of Commodore John Barry, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. BORAH presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring ascertainment of a fair and equitable contract between the beet-sugar grower and processor, and in the making of sugar sales allotments to the off-shore and domestic processors, preference to be given to the domestic industry, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See joint memorial printed in full when presented by Mr. Pope on Feb. 25, 1935, p. 2518, Congressional Record.)

Mr. BORAH also presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring the enactment of legislation creating price-fixing terminals in each State and imposing a processing or consumer's tax on commodities in commerce out of which freight charges shall be paid from the terminal point of destination for the relief of the livestock and agricultural industries, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See joint memorial printed in full when presented by Mr. Pope on Feb. 11, 1935, p. 1779, Congressional Record.)

Mr. BORAH also presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring the enactment of legislation to remonetize silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

(See joint memorial printed in full when presented by Mr. Pope on Feb. 18, 1935, pp. 2061–2062, Congressional Record.)

Mr. BORAH also presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, protesting against any change in existing tariff regulations affecting importations of cherries, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

(See joint memorial printed in full when presented by Mr. Pope on Feb. 25, 1935, p. 2518, Congressional Record.)

Mr. BORAH also presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring the making of adequate appropriations for the Bureau of Mines, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

(See joint memorial printed in full when laid before the Senate on Mar. 5, 1935, by the Vice President, p. 2958, Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD.)

Mr. BORAH also presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring adequate marking of the western boundary line of the Yellowstone National Park in Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

(See joint memorial printed in full when presented by Mr. Pope on Feb. 25, 1935, p. 2518, Congressional Record.)

Mr. KEYES presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Hampshire, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

Joint resolution for the procurement of Federal cooperation in the stabilizing of the Merrimack River stabilizing of the Merrimack River

Whereas it appears to be the policy of the Federal administration in pursuance of its purpose to relieve unemployment, to extend full cooperation or assume complete responsibility in the work of establishing water-storage projects which shall be permanent in their character and which will contribute to the stabilization of water flow in important streams; and

Whereas the Merrimack River is among the most important streams in the eastern section of the country, serving two States with highly developed industrial centers which are dependent upon that river's water flow: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives in general court convened: That His Excellency the Governor be requested to lay before the proper authorities in the Federal Government the problem of bringing about the stabilization of water flow in the Merrimack River and that our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to cooperate with the Governor in such steps as he may take to this end, and that they be requested to seek, if necessary, the sanction of Congress for the purpose of effecting this highly desirable object.

WILLIAM J. AHERN.

WILLIAM J. AHERN,
Acting Speaker of the House of Representatives.
HUSAN C. ALEXANDER,
Acting President of the Senate.
H. STYLES BRIDGES, Governor.

Approved February 28, 1935.

Mr. BARBOUR presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Joint Resolution 1 Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to adopt measures directed against mob violence and lynching

Whereas in many sections of the United States crimes of violence are rapidly increasing both in numbers and in seriousness; and Whereas one of the most deplorable types of crime is the wanton whereas one of the most deplotable types of trime is the wanton destruction of human life, public and private property, by mobs under so-called "lynch law"; and

Whereas such crimes strike at the very fundamentals of our constitutional rights and our system of democratic government, tending, if unchecked, to result in an absolute disregard for and defence of duly constituted agreement, with the approximation of the constituted agreements. defiance of duly constituted agencies charged with the protection of life and property and with the proper enforcement of our criminal laws; and

Whereas a continual disregard of the taking of human life and the destruction of property by irresponsible individuals banded together under the influence of excitement to usurp the preroga-tives of legal agencies devoted to the apprehensions, prosecution, and punishment of criminals can but encourage the rising tide of and punishment of criminals can but encourage the rising tide of violence; and

Whereas a stable government can only be maintained where the courts, operating under due process of law, shall be the only agency or power permitted to deprive any citizen of his constitutional rights to life and liberty; and
Whereas we firmly believe that this unfortunate situation can be best curtailed and eradicated through the power of our Federal Government: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of

New Jersey—

1. That the Congress of the United States now in session be memorialized and requested to as speedily as possible adopt and pass some remedial measure, and to take such other action as may be necessary, fit, and proper to curtail as far as possible under Federal laws this growing national evil of mob violence and lynching to the end that everyone in the United States of America may be accorded and guaranteed full protection of life, liberty, and property under our Constitution; be it further *Resolved*, That copies of this joint resolution be transmitted to the Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States from the State of New Jersey.

2. This joint resolution shall take effect immediately.

2. This joint resolution shall take effect immediately. Approved February 21, 1935.

ADDITIONAL JUDGES IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. ASHURST presented resolutions adopted by the Bar Association of San Francisco, Calif., which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution relating to the appointment of a fifth circuit judge to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit

Whereas in connection with the increase of the business of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit the following salient facts appear:

(a) That the territory comprising the circuit contains 1,372.461 square miles;

(b) That the population of the circuit for the decade, 1920-30, increased 40 percent (the State of California alone increased 65.7 percent);

(c) That the number of cases docketed for the decade 1920-30 increased 62 percent, or at a rate 22 percent greater than the rate of increase in population;

(d) That the industrial development of the circuit, particularly that of the State of California, has increased in direct ratio to the increase in population;

(e) That the drain upon the time of circuit judges has been enormously increased by reason of the three-judge cases arising under Twenty-eight United States Court of Appeals, sections 380 and 266, Judicial Code, as amended in 1925, in traveling and sitting in cases;

(f) That the present docketing of cases is at the rate of 380 per year, resulting in the requirement that each judge dispose of 95 cases, participate in 282 cases, and write 60 opinions each year—a burden beyond the power of any judge long to endure;
(g) That the new deal has increased the work of the three-judge court, and likewise present regulation by the States of matters heretofore not regulated by public authority has increased litigation in the Federal courts;

(h) That at the present time 96 percent of all judgments of the court are final, which fact emphasizes the importance of time for the careful consideration of opinions; and

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress H. R. 5917, which measure has already received the approval of the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee: Now, therefore, by reason of the foregoing salient facts, and by further reason of a consideration of the volume of business of said court as set forth in a résumé thereof hereby referred to and attached to this resolution: Be it, and it is hereby

"Resolved by the Bar Association of San Francisco, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby respectfully petitioned and urged to provide an additional, that is to say, a fifth circuit judge of said United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit, by the immediate passage of H. R. 5917.

"Resolved further, That certified copies of this resolution be transmitted, respectively, to the President of the United States, to the Chief Justice of the United States, to the Attorney General of the United States, to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States."

ARTHUR W. BROUILLET,
President Bar Association of San Francisco.

GEO. J. MARTIN, Secretary.

The above resolution was authorized at a special meeting of the board of governors of the Bar Association of San Francisco called for that purpose and held on February 26, 1935.

GEO. J. MARTIN, Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. NORRIS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 64) requesting the Department of Justice to investigate the advisability of redistricting the State of Michigan with reference to judicial districts, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 253) thereon.

Mr. WHITE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1854) giving jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Cherokee Fuel Co., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 254) thereon.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 1079) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to execute a certain indemnity agreement, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 256) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1817) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, consider, and render judgment on the claim of Squaw Island Freight Terminal Co., Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., against the United States in respect of loss of property occasioned by the breaking of a Government dike on Squaw Island, reported

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 283) for the relief of Beatrice I. Manges, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 258) thereon.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 593) for the relief of Fred C. Blenkner, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 259) thereon.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1856) for the relief of Arthur Smith, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 43) for the relief of Lucile A. Abbey, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 261) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 896) for the relief of Anna W. Ayer, widow of Capt. Asa G. Ayer, deceased, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 262) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 1386) for the relief of Duke E. Stubbs and Elizabeth S. Stubbs, husband and wife, both of McKinley Park, Alaska, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 263) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 712. A bill for the relief of A. H. Marshall (Rept. No. 264): and

H. R. 426. A bill for the relief of Jacob Santavy (Rept. No. 265).

Mr. TOWNSEND also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 906) for the relief of Chellis T. Mooers, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 266) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 391) for the relief of Ralph E. Woolley, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 685. A bill for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Co. (Rept. No. 268);

S. 1041. A bill for the relief of Cohen, Goldman & Co., Inc. (Rept. No. 269); and

S. 1051. A bill for the relief of the Western Union Telegraph Co. (Rept. No. 270).

Mr. LOGAN also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 780) for the relief of the Standard Dredging Co., reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 271) thereon.

it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 257) | the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

> Resolved, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended by the Federal Power Commission for printing and binding the preliminary report of said Commission and such other reports as may be hereafter made pursuant to Public Resolution No. 18, Seventy-third Congress, approved April

> The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

> There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

> Mr. HAYDEN. I ask to have printed in the RECORD, following the passage of the joint resolution, a letter from the Commission relating to it.

> There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> > FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION, Washington, February 21, 1935.

Hon. CARL HAYDEN.

Chairman Senate Committee on Printing, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: In response to your request I submit the following statement outlining in brief the reports of the electric rate survey which remain to be submitted by the Federal Power Commission in compliance with the terms of Public Resolution No. 18, approved April 14, 1934, together with an estimate of the number of pages.

of pages.

1. Rates and typical bills for domestic and residential service: This report, which will cover the residential rates in every city, town, and village in the United States, will be submitted State by State. It will show the essential facts for more than 15,000 separate communities. Publication by States will greatly reduce the cost of publication. The number of copies should be determined separately for each State, perhaps upon the basis of 100 copies for each congressional district and 500 copies for each Senator. A proportionate number of additional copies should be printed for the use of newspapers. I understood from our telephone conversation that about 500 copies were required for Government depositions. the use of newspapers. I understood from our telephone conversation that about 500 copies were required for Government depositaries and another 500 copies should be made available for distribution through the Federal Power Commission to the State public service commissions and other public bodies. This would mean editions ranging from, say, 2,500 copies for the smaller States to, say, 6,000 copies for New York.

say, 6,000 copies for New York.

The reports for the separate States will average about 12 pages, folio size, ranging from about 5 or 6 pages in the case of the smaller States to about 25 pages in the case of New York.

The cost of printing will, however, be greatly reduced because of the fact that the explanatory text for each of the States will be substantially the same and the headings of the tables of rates and typical bills will be the same throughout all of the State reports.

2. Rates and typical bills for commercial and industrial light and power: This report will cover the rates charged for light and power to stores, shops, factories, mines, and other large industrial users in cities and towns of more than 5,000 population.

It will require about 125 pages, a large part of which will be tabular matter, but with substantially unaltered headings for all tables.

3. Rates and typical bills for farms and other rural service: This report will cover the rates and other charges to rural customers throughout the United States. It is estimated that it will require approximately 100 folio pages, about half of which will be text and half tabular matter.

a report (No. 271) thereon.

PROHIBITION OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS ACTING AS ATTORNEYS

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to file a report to accompany the bill (S. 574) relative to Members of Congress acting as attorneys in matters where the United States has an interest, heretofore reported by me from the Committee on the Judiciary. The report was not filed at the time the bill was reported, and I now ask permission to submit the report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received.

PRINTING AND BINDING FOR FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by direction of the Committee on Printing, I report a joint resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 77) authorizing printing and binding for the Federal Power Commission, was read

Because of the many variable factors which have been pointed out above, it is impossible at this time to submit even an approximate estimate of the aggregate cost

In view of the impossibility of determining at this time the exact number of copies of the various reports that will be required and the proportion of text and tabular matter, it is recommended that the concurrent resolution, introduced by Senator Norms, be amended so as to provide for printing such number of copies of each of the reports other than the preliminary report as may be approved by the Joint Committee on Printing and to provide that the aggregate cost shall not evered $55,000.

wide that the aggregate cost shall not exceed $25,000.

I have been called out of town unexpectedly and am just about to catch a train, but am asking Dr. William E. Mosher, director of the Electric Rate Survey, to present this letter to you and make such explanations as may be necessary to give you a clear picture of the entire situation.

With sincere appreciation of your very great interest in this matter, I am,

Very truly yours,

Basil Manly, Vice Chairman.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

Mr. LONERGAN (for Mrs. CARAWAY), from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on March 5, 1935, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing and directing the Federal Communications Commission to investigate and report on the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and on all other companies engaged directly or indirectly in telephone communication in interstate commerce, including all companies related to any of these companies through a holding-company structure or otherwise.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. GEORGE:

A bill (S. 2170) for the relief of Preston Brooks Massey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BACHMAN:

A bill (S. 2171) granting an increase of pension to Rufus M. Barnes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD and Mr. CONNALLY:

A bill (S. 2172) to amend the act of May 13, 1924, entitled "An act providing for a study regarding the equitable use of the waters of the Rio Grande", etc., as amended by the public resolution of March 3, 1927; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. ROBINSON (for Mrs. CARAWAY):

A bill (S. 2173) granting an increase of pension to Albert E. Longman; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 2174) to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States; to the Committee on Immigration.

A bill (S. 2175) to grant to the State of California a retrocession of jurisdiction over certain rights-of-way granted to the State of California over certain roads about to be constructed in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation and Fort Baker Military Reservation; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BLACK. I introduce a bill, for reference to the Judiciary Committee, which is intended to expedite appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States for the granting of injunctions.

By Mr. BLACK:

A bill (S. 2176) providing for appeals from orders of Federal courts prohibiting compliance with Federal laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion of Mr. HARRISON, the Committee on Finance was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 2014) for the relief of Alexander Gilchrist, Jr. (introduced by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND]), and it was referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

AMENDMENT TO INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. CAPPER submitted an amendment proposing to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to pay to the Sac and Fox Tribe of Indians of Missouri the amount of $9,158.20, representing the amounts remaining in the Treasury in two separate funds, plus $273.71 interest, which have accrued to and including December 31, 1934, on the amount of $1,141.70 now in the Treasury derived from the sale of lands of these Indians, etc., intended to be proposed by him to House bill 6223, the Interior Department appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM-AMENDMENTS

Mr. STEIWER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

On page 3, line 12 (in the committee amendment), before the word "and", to insert the word "bridges";
On page 3, line 20 (in the committee amendment), before the word "and", to insert the words "rivers and harbors"; and On page 3, to strike out the proviso of the committee amendment commencing in line 5 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

following:

"Provided, That except as to such parts of the appropriation made herein as the President may deem necessary for continuing relief as authorized under the Federal Emergency Relief Act of relief as authorized under the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, as amended, this appropriation shall be available for the following classes of projects, the amounts to be expended for each class shall not, except as hereinafter provided, exceed the respective amounts stated, namely: Highways, roads, streets, bridges, and grade-crossing elimination, $780,000,000; rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, $487,500,000; rural electrification, $97,500,000; housing, $438,750,000; projects for professional and clerical persons, $292,500,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $585,000,000; public projects of States or political subdivisions thereof, $877,500,000; sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, and miscellaneous projects, $341,250,000; rivers and harbors, $100,000,000."

On page 3, to strike out the further proviso commencing in line 21 of the committee amendment and insert in lieu thereof the of the committee amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following

"Provided further, That the President may, in his discretion, in order to effectuate the purpose of this joint resolution, increase the allocation for any one or more of the classes of projects specified in this section by an amount not to exceed 20 percent of the amount allocated for such classes of projects; and to provide such increase, the President may reduce the allocations hereinabove set forth in an amount not to exceed 20 percent of the amounts provided for any such classes." vided for any such classes

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, the amendment being what is sometimes referred to as the "McCarran amendment." I ask that it may be printed and lie on the table.

I also ask leave to have inserted in the RECORD at this point an editorial appearing in the Fallon Eagle, of Fallon, Nev., which, while I may not agree in every respect, appears to me to have the spirit of fairness with reference to the amendment which I have just offered. This paper is outstanding for its independence and the writer of this editorial has always displayed his ability to analyze public matters.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed and to lie on the table, as follows:

Strike out all of section 6 of the committee amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Src. 6. The President is authorized to prescribe, and shall give full publicity to, rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purpose of this joint resolution: Provided, however, That (a) such rules and regulations shall stipulate that the rates of wages paid to rules and regulations shall stipulate that the rates of wages paid to all laborers and mechanics employed by any contractor or subcontractor or by the public officer in charge for the United States or for the District of Columbia, for work done under this joint resolution, whether by contract or otherwise, involving the expenditure of any money appropriated by the resolution, need not be uniform throughout the United States but shall not be less than the prevailing rates of wages paid for work of a similar nature at the time of the approval of this resolution in the city, town, village, or other civil division of the State in which the work is located, or in the District of Columbia: Provided, however. That nothing in other civil division of the state in which the work is located, or in the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall apply to the administration of the Civilian Conservation Corps; (b) rules and regulations prescribed under this section shall not abrogate any existing law."

The editorial presented by Mr. McCarran was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Fallon (Nev.) Eagle, Mar. 2, 1935] PERHAPS M'CARRAN IS RIGHT

Nevada critics of Senator Pat McCarran, who charge that he has blocked passage of proper relief measures by the Federal Government because he insisted on his prevailing-wage amendment to the $4,800,000,000 public-works bill, seem to overlook the fact that what the Senator is trying to do is maintain a decent standard of living wages for labor.

As anyone who has to support a family of average size on $50 a month will testify, the sum named is sufficient for a bare existence—nothing more. That is the sum proposed in the administration measure as the monthly wage allowance calculated to provide subsistence relief for the largest number of unemployed. It is quite true that $50 a month is better than nothing. But it is equally true that the man who is drawing no more than that has no money to spend beyond what he must spend for bare necessities, and is certainly not able to stimulate recovery of business any more than if he and his family were on direct relief.

If there were no other course open, it would be better to provide work for the unemployed at $50 a month than to provide direct relief in an equal amount, and most men would probably be better satisfied with work relief than with direct relief, particularly with really worth-while projects under construction, as the larly with really worth-while projects under construction, as the public-works bill contemplates.

But Senator McCarran reasonably contends that work provided for as many men as can be employed with the funds available, at the prevailing rate of wages, will enable those who are so em-ployed to become consuming factors to the extent that private industries which produce consumer goods can increase their employment because of improved demand, thus making up for the difference in the number of men who can be employed on public works. He also contends that low wages on public works will tend to hammer down all wage scales, and this, too, seems reason-

The administration contends that if prevailing wages are to be paid on public works, there will be no incentive to workers to seek private employment. On the other hand, as McCarran contends, if the prevailing wage on public works is to be only $50 a month, private employers will pay only enough more than that to get the labor they need, and a general trend of wages downward will be the result, with strong resistance of attempts to maintain high wage standards under codes which the Government would itself disregard in its employment policy.

gard in its employment policy.

In other words, Senator McCarran believes—and he was supported by enough of his colleagues to balk the administration bill at least temporarily—that it will be better all the way around to employ a million men at $4 a day than to provide a scanty existence for 2,000,000 men at $2 a day, and in so doing demoralize wage standards in private industry. The 1,000,000 men at $4 a day will have enough to spend to improve private industry and stimulate private employment at increasing wages as profits improve. The 2,000,000 men at $2 a day will have nothing more to spend than the Government is already providing in direct relief, with no net gain in private employment made possible and a strong likelihood that private wage standards would drop.

There is increasing doubt, as shown by the two major defeats

There is increasing doubt, as shown by the two major defeats recently suffered by the administration at the hands of the Senate, recently suffered by the administration at the hands of the Senate, which before it approved the McCarran amendment had rejected the World Court, as to where the whole plan of the administration is leading us. But there is little difference of opinion as to the necessity of widespread employment at wages sufficient to enable the workers to buy what they produce. A public-works wage scale of $50 a month can hardly be anything more than another stopgap, and the combined result of all the stopgaps so far employed has not been permanent improvement in the accomplisations status of has not been permanent improvement in the economic status of those most deeply affected by the depression.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I also ask leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement of the Farmers Union endorsing the amendment known as the McCarran amend-

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FARMERS UNION ENDORSES PREVAILING WAGES

Joint statement by E. H. Everson, president, and E. E. Kennedy, secretary, National Farmers Union

The Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union of America

secretary, National Farmers Union

The Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union of America (the National Farmers Union), most powerful Nation-wide organization of farmers in America, supports the McCarran amendment to the administration's work-relief program, according to a statement issued today by its two authorized legislative representatives in Washington, D. C., Mr. E. H. Everson, president of the union, and Mr. Edward E. Kennedy, national secretary.

"The administration's proposal to pay prevailing rates of interest to the money changers and prevailing prices to manufacturers for material and to pay less than prevailing wages to labor out of the $4,880,000,000 proposed work-relief program appropriations is as indefensible and as un-American as it is for the Government through the A. A. A. to require farmers to produce food and fibre for less than cost of production prices.

"Both are destructive of American standards of living.

"Both will continue to deadlock recovery.

"The interests of farmers and laborers are inseparable. The American farmer, receiving cost of production prices for his products, is the best potential customer of labor and the laborer, who receives a 'living wage' is the best potential customer of the farmers. When farmers receive less than cost of production prices, labor is penalized with unemployment and low wages, because the home market for its products and services is destroyed. When labor receives less than a living wage or is unemployed, the home market for agriculture is destroyed and farmers are penalized with low prices.

"So-called 'parity prices' to farmers and $50 a month to labor are both in exactly the same category of 'subsistence wages.' Both proposals provide for inadequate 'wages.'

"The National Farmers Union is opposed to reducing in any manner the standard of living of either farmers or laborers in America. The National Farmers Union is for the McCarran amendment to the administration's work-relief program. The National Farmers Union is for the payment of prevailing wages on Public Works projects." Works projects.

ARRESTING OF SOIL EROSION

Mr. GORE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 94), which was ordered to lie on the table:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to submit to the Senate a report showing the results of efforts or experiments heretofore made to arrest soil erosion and to submit any recommendations upon the subject which might be serviceable to the Congress in preparing legislation to promote soil conservation.

GRANTS OF SUBSIDIES TO PUERTO RICAN SUGAR PRODUCERS

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President. I submit a very simple resolution which seeks information from the Secretary of the Interior, which it is rather important to procure promptly. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the reso-Intion.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 95), as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior is requested to inform the Senate (a) regarding contemplated plans for new loans, grants, or subsidies to sugar producers in Puerto Rico; (b) regarding any pending proposals for supporting sugar production in Puerto Rico with public money drawn either from the sugar processing tax or from the Public Works Administration or from any new instrumentality which may be created under the so-called "work-relief" bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I do not know that I shall have any objection, but I ask the Senator to let the resolution go over until the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] returns to the Chamber. He has been called from the Chamber temporarily.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Very well.

Mr. VANDENBERG subsequently said: Mr. President, earlier in the day I submitted a resolution (S. Res. 95) asking briefly for some information from the Secretary of the Interior. Consideration of the resolution was held up at the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] until the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] might be present. I wonder if the Senator from Arkansas has any objection to it? It is simply a request for information which I am very anxious to procure as soon as possible.

Mr. ROBINSON. I shall not object to the consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

MARY G. WALSH-WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS

On motion of Mr. HALE, it was Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill S. 583 granting an increase of pension to Mary G. Walsh (74th Cong., 1st sess.) be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

PREVAILING WAGE-RATE LAWS (S. DOC. NO. 27)

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed as a Senate document a paper prepared by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, bearing on the subject of the prevailing wage-rate laws as they exist in the several States. I want to say in this respect that I have conferred with those in charge of the printing. The document will comprise less than 50 pages, and to have it printed as a Senate document will cost much less than to have it printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM-STATEMENT OF CLERGYMEN

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD a statement on the work-relief bill by Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish clergymen. Preceding the statement is a paragraph in which it is stated:

A group of prominent Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish clergymen issued a statement yesterday expressing their personal support for a program of public works as opposed to a mere relief dole, and favoring the payment of prevailing wage scales, but suggesting that by limiting the total number of relief work hours per month it would be possible not to exceed the total proposed amount of $4,000,000,000 for work relief.

The statement is signed by some of the leading Methodist, Catholic, and Jewish preachers in the United States. I ask that the statement, with the list of the signers, be printed

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT ON RELIEF BILL BY CATHOLIC, PROTESTANT, AND JEWISH CLERGYMEN

A group of prominent Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish clergymen issued a statement yesterday expressing their personal support for a program of public works as opposed to a mere relief dole, and favoring the payment of prevailing wage scales, but suggesting that by limiting the total number of relief-work hours per month it would be possible not to exceed the total proposed amount of $4,000,000,000 for work relief.

Among the signers were the following:

per month it would be possible not to exceed the total proposed amount of $4,000,000,000 for work relief.

Among the signers were the following:

Rt. Rev. Mgr. John A. Ryan, professor of moral theology, Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City; Rabbi Bidney E. Goldstein, chairman Social Justice Commission, Central Conference of American Rabbis, New York City; Rev. James Myers, New York City; Rev. Francis J. Haas, director National Catholic School of Social Service, Washington, D. C.; Rabbi Edward L. Israel, Har Sinai Congregation, Baltimore; Prof. Reinhold Neibuhr, Union Theological Seminary, New York City; Rabbi Stephens S. Wise, Free Synagogue, New York City; Rev. Frederick K. Stamm, Brooklyn; Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, assistant director of Catholic Charities, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Albert E. Day, Baltimore; Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, the Temple, Cleveland; Rev. John Haynes Holmes, the Community Church, New York City; Rev. Clair E. Ames, Minneapolis Church Federation, Minneapolis; Rabbi Joseph L. Baron, Milwaukee; Rabbi Solomon N. Bazell, Louisville; Rev. John P. Boland, rector St. Columba's, Buffalo; Rev. Dr. Charles A. Bruehl, professor Seminary of St. Charles, Overbrook, Pa.; Rev. John P. Boland, Petor St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia; Rev. J. Henry Carpenter, Brooklyn Church and Mission Federation, Brooklyn; Rev. John M. Cooper, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of social ethics, Boston College, Boston; Rev. John Maurice Deyo, Danbury, Conn.; Rev. Dorr Diefendorf, Madison, N. J.; Rev. Joseph P. Donovan, C. M., Webster Groves, Mo.; Rabbi Victor Eppstein, Madison Avenue Temple, Scranton, Pa.; Rev. George B. Ford, Chaplain Newman Club, Columbia University, New York City; Rev. Theodore Ainsworth Greene, New Britain, Conn.; Rev. Joseph Huffleis, S. J., St. Louis; Rabbi F. M. Isserman, St. Louis; Rev. Bord, Chapian Newman Club, Columbia University of America, Washington, D. C.; Rev. John H. Webster Groves

The full text of the statement follows:

"The latest and most reliable statistics indicate that there are about 12,000,000 men and women in America out of work whole about 12,000,000 men and women in America out of work whole time. The standard of relief in every section of the country is inadequate to maintain the families of the unemployed upon a normal level of life. This in itself is a serious indictment of our social system in an age of surplus and abundance. But more serious than this is the danger that America will develop a relief program as an answer to the problem of unemployment.

"We believe that relief is necessary to meet an emergency and to mitigate the suffering of the unemployed. No government, however, has the right to place 12,000,000 and more self-respecting workmen upon the rolls of relief and to assume that the problem is solved. What the unemployed need and want is work and wages and not a dole.

"In view of the fact that private enterprise is apparently unable to provide employment in this crisis, work and wages for all the unemployed will come only through a fundamental and comprehensive program on the part of the cities and States and Federal Government. When private enterprise fails government enterprise must come to the rescue.

"We are convinced that Congress should at once pass a bill providing not only relief but work for the unemployed; and that this work should be paid at a wage equal to the prevailing scale in every section of the country. This can be accomplished through the simple device of limiting the hours of labor per month and without increasing the appropriation of $4,000,000,000 for construction."

Copies of the statement were forwarded to Members of the Senate and to the President.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM-THE PREVAILING WAGE

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask leave to insert in the RECORD an excerpt from the American Federation of Labor Weekly News Service setting out the speech of President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, on the McCarran amendment.

In addition to the speech of President Green, there is in this same excerpt a telegram sent by President Green to William Randolph Hearst.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the American Federation of Labor Weekly News Service, Saturday, Mar. 2, 1935]

PREVAILING WAGE RATES ON RELIEF PROJECTS ARE NECESSARY TO PRO-TECT WAGES OF ALL WORKERS, PRESIDENT GREEN DECLARES IN RADIO ADDRESS—MCCARRAN AMENDMENT IS DISCUSSED IN TERMS THAT ALL MAY UNDERSTAND

("The issue is not a political one", A. F. of L. head states, "nor is it in any sense a partisan or sectional issue, for it concerns equally the wage earners in every part of the country and in every line of work.")

("In their desire to defeat the prevailing-wage principle, special

("In their desire to deteat the prevailing-wage principle, special pleaders and pressure groups have not hesitated to resort to every possible means of obscuring the real issue", says labor official.)

(Facts are brought out which definitely refute allegations against proposed amendment and show clearly the pressing need for it; no additional appropriation required; no change of policy, as prevailing rates apply now on Federal projects; subject is of "crucial importance.")

Washington .- A vigorous defense of the McCarran prevailing wage amendment to the $4,800,000 work-relief appropriation bill now before the United States Senate was made here by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address over the coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co.

Declaring that the purpose of the McCarran amendment "is to protect and maintain wage standards and wage rates established in the different communities of the Nation through years of struggle and effort of organized labor", Mr. Green insisted that paying less than the prevailing wage on the vast projects contemplated by the appropriation would inevitably result in an onslaught on wage rates in private industry.

To substantiate his position, President Green declared that, although as the depression advanced, wage rates paid by private employers were driven to a level "where the worker could not earn enough even to pay for his subsistence", nevertheless when the Government in 1933 slashed the wages of Government employees 15 percent "another wholesale lowering of wages throughout private industries took place."

He insisted that "in the light of these facts it is inevitable that payment of wages below the prevailing rate on Government projects will result in another wave of wage cutting in private industries, undermining the gains we have accumulated under the recovery program." Declaring that the purpose of the McCarran amendment "is to recovery program.

The fact that those who oppose the prevailing wage rate for labor do not propose to apply the same subversive policy to prices for construction material was stressed by Mr. Green. Declaring that at least $2,000,000,000 of the big appropriation will be paid for materials, he said: "Does the Government propose to pay for the material used on these projects at less than the prevailing price? No; and for the very obvious reason that the payment of such prices would destroy the price structure throughout the country and drive private industrial enterprise out of business."

He was equally emphatic in his denial of propaganda to the country and drive private industrial enterprise out of business."

He was equally emphatic in his denial of propaganda to the effect that applying the prevailing wage principle would recuire the expenditure of billions of dollars in excess of the $4,800,000,000 carried in the relief measure. "Not a single dollar need be added to the present appropriation in order to carry out the entire program on the basis of prevailing wage payments", he said, adding: "It will not cost the Government one additional dollar to pay the prevailing wage rate."

He also stressed the fact that the prevailing wage rate is now paid on Government construction projects including those controlled by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In conclusion Mr. Green declared that in giving its solid support to the McCarran amendment the American Federation of Labor was animated by the determination to protect the wage standards and rates built up by the organized workers during many years. He said the great mass of workers know that slashing wage rates by the Government on vast construction projects will result in their wages being lowered, and that for this reason it was imperative for them to raise their voice "in support of the prevailing-wage principle incorporated in the McCarran amendment" and insist that it be retained in the $4,800,000,000 work-relief measure.

ment and insist that it be retained in the $4,800,000,000 work-relief measure.

The text of Mr. Green's address follows:

"Fellow citizens, I want to speak to you tonight about an issue which is more vital to the economic welfare of the Nation than any other issue that has faced us since the inception of the recovery program. This issue is of crucial importance, for on its settlement depends the economic status of every wage earner in the country.

"This issue is not a political one. Nor is it in any sense a par-"This issue is not a political one. Nor is it in any sense a partisan or sectional issue, for it concerns equally the wage earners in every part of the country and in every line of work. This issue before the Congress of the United States and before the country is whether under the proposed public-works program involving the expenditure of $4,000,000,000, wage rates prevailing in your community will be maintained on public works or whether lower wage rates will be paid.

"The principle providing for the payment on public projects of wage rates which prevail in the community was embodied in the amendment to the appropriation bill advocated by Senator McCarran. Although the McCarran amendment was approved by the Senate of the United States on February 21, an attempt is being made to eliminate this amendment from the bill at the risk of jeopardizing the entire emergency public-works program.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT

"The language of the McCarran amendment is simple and straightforward. I quote it in full, so that you may fully appreciate its purpose and meaning:

"'SEC. 6. The President is authorized to prescribe, and shall give full publicity to, rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purpose of this joint resolution: Provided, however, That (a) such rules and regulations shall stipulate that the rates of wages resid to all leborars and mechanics employed by a proportion of the purpose of the state of the st such rules and regulations shall stipulate that the rates of wages paid to all laborers and mechanics employed by any contractor or subcontractor, or by the public officer in charge for the United States or for the District of Columbia, for work done under this joint resolution, whether by contract or otherwise, involving the expenditure of any money appropriated by the resolution, need not be uniform throughout the United States, but shall not be less than the prevailing rates of wages paid for work of a similar nature at the time of the approval of this resolution in the city, town, village, or other civil division of the State in which the work is located, or in the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall apply to the administration of That nothing in this section shall apply to the administration of the Civilian Conservation Corps; (b) rules and regulations prescribed under this section shall not abrogate any existing law."

"In their desire to defeat the prevailing-wage principle, special pleaders and pressure groups have not hesitated to resort to every possible means of obscuring the real issue. This is why it is so important that wage earners—those employed and those now out of work and all their friends—have a thorough understanding of the real, unassailable facts. These are the facts you must know:

FACTS ARE CITED

"1. Labor has given and will give its unqualified support to the President's program of unemployment relief through public works, designed to create future new wealth for the Nation.

"2. Labor is fully in accord with the principle that in the administration of public projects under this program aggregate monthly compensation should be limited in order to make effective the purpose of the bill, which is the reemployment of three and one-half million wage earners now out of work.

"3. This objective can and will be attained without jeopardizing the existing wage structure in the communities where such projects are to be undertaken. To preserve the wage structure of the country, prevailing wage rates must serve as a basis for compensation. This does not mean, however, that the total monthly earnings on these projects should be in excess of the limits which the administration might find it necessary to impose.

"4. I want to deny most emphatically any statement alleging

"4. I want to deny most emphatically any statement alleging that the acceptance of the prevailing wage principle would require the expenditure of additional billions of dollars. Not a single dollar need be added to the present appropriation in order to carry out the entire program on the basis of prevailing wage payments.

"5. Payment of wage rates lower than those prevailing in the community will inevitably undermine the entire wage structure throughout the country. This is not a matter of theory but of concrete and repeated experience. There is no question but that the rejection of the prevailing-wage amendment will completely destroy every gain made by the wage earner during the past 2 years of recovery, will weaken the very foundation of our economic structure, and will send the country back to a state of chaos and economic disorder, such as was experienced in March 1933.

MEANING IS CLEAR

"Slow and painful steps are bringing this country out of the depths of economic depression. Following the blueprints of recovery legislation, we have patterned a solid framework around which recovery and future standards of economic life are being built.

This structure, yet unfinished, rests squarely upon the existing wages. On the maintenance of wages depends our immediate economic future.

"I am confident that the American people will avert the danger of the gains of recovery being swept down amidst the wreck of the existing framework of wages to bring the country back to the darkest days of depression.

"It is clear that those who have opposed the prevailing-wage amendment have not grasped the full significance of its purpose, "First of all, what is meant by the term 'prevailing wage rate'? The term 'prevailing wage rate' means just what it says. It refers to the hourly or daily rate of wages which prevails in similar occupations or on similar operations in any given community in the country. It is a term which has been incorporated in Federal legislation for a number of years.

PREVAILING RATES EFFECTIVE

PREVAILING RATES EFFECTIVE

"At present there is not an activity of the Government that does not provide for the payment of the prevailing rate of wages within the meaning of the definition I have just given. The payment of such wages was accepted as a basic principle by Congress in the Davis-Bacon bill, which became law in March 1931.

"This law provided that every contract to which the United States is a party and which requires the employment of laborers and mechanics in the construction of public buildings throughout the Nation should contain a provision to the effect that the rate of wages for all laborers and mechanics employed by a contractor or subcontractor on the public buildings covered by the contract shall not be less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar nature in the city, town, village, or other civil division of the State in which the public buildings are located.

"Shortly after the National Industrial Recovery Act became effective the Federal Board of Public Works, created under the act, prescribed certain hourly wage rates to be paid on construction projects in established geographical zones. This Board also provided that whenever the prevailing hourly rate rises above the minimum set for any district within the zone, such prevailing rate is to be paid to workers on Federal construction projects.

"The Tennessee Valley Act, approved May 18, 1933, also requires all contracts to contain a provision that not less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar nature in a given community is to be paid to workers.

"On October 30, 1933, Mr. James J. McEntee, Assistant Director of Emergency Conservation Work, issued a statement that the prevailing rate of wages is to be paid on construction work in all C. C. C. camps.

C. C. C. camps.

ESTABLISHED PRACTICE

"On March 6, 1934, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, issued the following

Federal Emergency Relief Administration, issued the ionowingorder:

"'Wages will be at the prevailing rate for the occupation and the locality in which work is done, and in no case will the pay be less than will yield 30 cents per hour, provided, however, that the hours shall be limited so that the maximum weekly earnings shall not in any case exceed the amount necessary to meet budgetary requirements."

"In his testimony before the Senate Committee on Appropriations a few days ago, Mr. Hopkins, the Federal Emergency Administrator, stated: 'We now pay the prevailing hourly rate of wages.' This testimony brings out a significant fact—that in all the work which is being done under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration the prevailing wage is being paid.

ECONOMIC NECESSITY

ECONOMIC NECESSITY

"This order gives full recognition to the prevailing-wage principle which has been closely adhered to by Congress and the Government at every step taken to build up the national recovery program. This principle, which has been impressed by every agency of the Federal Government concerned with the payment of wages, has been and must remain fundamental. Its repudiation at this time would mean the destruction of the very cornerstone of recovery.

"Now, the question naturally arises, Why has Congress and the Federal administration adhered so completely to the principle of the prevailing wage? This adherence is the result of economic necessity tested by long experience, which has fully demonstrated that existing wages in private industries cannot be maintained if lower wages are paid for the same work by the Government.

"The wage structure of the entire Nation rests upon the rate of pay on the hourly or daily basis. Any arbitrary change in this rate inevitably affects the entire wage structure.

"It has been a matter of concrete experience that the wage level prevailing in the industry is highly sensitive to downward changes in any major wage group. We have had repeated experience showing that each wage cut effected by the United States Steel Corporation during the depression years was immediately followed by a wholesale reduction in wages in all of the major industries. This experience in itself gives undisputed evidence of the fact that the entire industrial wage level is reduced automatically when a sufficient stimulus is given by arbitrary wage cutting in a substantial section of the country. section of the country.

EXPERIENCE TEACHES

"The 15-percent wage reduction carried out by the railroads throughout the country in 1932 had the same depressing effect upon wages in other industries.

"When the depression low was reached, wage rates appeared to be at a level where the worker could not earn enough even for his subsistence. There was hardly room for further reductions, yet we saw that when the Government slashed wages of all Government employees by 15 percent in 1933, another wholesale lowering of wages throughout the private industries took place.

"In the light of these facts, it is inevitable that payment of wages below the prevailing rates on Government work projects will result in another wave of wage cutting in the private industries, undermining the gains we have accumulated under the recovery program.

"Is it conceivable that the Government, constructing buildings in a community, should pay wages at a lowered relief scale and an employer in the same community should be generous enough to pay wages at a higher scale to his employees performing the work?

"Like water finding its lowest level and draining the reservoirs above that level, so the reservoir of existing wages is bound to be drained as soon as an outlet at a lower level is opened. Experience has taught us that we cannot establish and maintain two different wage standards in any community. That is economically impossible.

HUMAN VERSUS PROPERTY

"Two billion dollars, or half of the proposed appropriation, is expected to be paid for the materials to be used under the prorwo binon donars, or han of the proposed appropriation, is expected to be paid for the materials to be used under the program. Does the Government propose to pay for the materials used on these projects at less than the prevailing prices? No. And for the obvious reason that the payment of such prices would destroy the price structure of materials throughout the country and drive private industrial enterprise out of business.

"What, then, is the justification of applying the same principle to wages? Is it that the wage earner does not exert the same financial power as is exerted by the corporate interests? Or is it because the wage earner is expected to sacrifice his immediate economic interest and to jeopardize the buying power that he could command in private employment in the future, that the elimination of the prevailing-wage principle is urged by its opponents? American business shall never consent to the payment of prices by the Government for materials and supplies at less than the prevailing-price schedules. For identical reasons American labor cannot consent to the payment of wages on these projects at less than the prevailing-wage scales.

OPPONENTS' FALSE CLAIM

OPPONENTS' FALSE CLAIM

"Opponents of the prevailing-rate proposal argue that workers would be drawn into the works projects from private employment. There is no evidence indicating that such a tendency would develop.

"Our experience with the C. W. A. showed that workers were not diverted from private employment and that the existing reserves of unemployed are much too great to give this possibility any serious consideration at the present time.

NO EXTRA EXPENDITURE

NO EXTRA EXPENDITURE

"It is quite possible, however, to establish safeguards against diverting workers from private employment without resort to the antisocial and uneconomic method of wage reductions. Men may be given work at a reduced number of hours per week with a maintained scale of wages. The difference between the number of hours worked on works projects and the number of hours offered in private employment will be certain to provide a sufficient incentive for the worker to return to private and full-time employment when such employment becomes available.

"By reducing the hours instead of wages, the Government could put to work the desired number of three and a half million unemployed for the entire period of 1 year as contemplated in the bill without exceeding the amount of the appropriation.

"In this way, the benefits of the program would be distributed equitably among the workers affected; their employment on the works projects would have greater stability during the life of the program; they would be given the benefits of the plan without lowering the rates of compensation in the industry as a whole, and the workers' own earning capacity would not be jeopardized through the lowering of compensation in similar employment from private sources.

"Another argument has been advanced that the type of workers." "It is quite possible, however, to establish safeguards against private sources.

"Another argument has been advanced that the type of workers

"Another argument has been advanced that the type of workers available for works programs does not meet the requirements of normal private employment because of lack of skill and experience. It is, therefore, argued that employment at the prevailing wage scale is not justifiable.

"The figures furnished by the F. E. R. A. show, however, that 63 percent of those employed on work relief have more than 4½ years' experience at their usual occupation.

"It is obvious that the major portion of the present unemployment reserves possesses high qualifications of skill and that these qualifications can fully justify the payment of the prevailing rate.

"Opposition to the prevailing rate comes at a time when concrete experience has been built up of public employment on Government-supervised projects. The prevailing wage amendment is not a venture into unexplored territory. The amendment must be viewed in the light of experience at Muscle Shoals. It follows the lessons learned under the Tennessee Valley Authority. It comes after the spending of $720,000,000 on C. W. A. Not one but many concrete precedents have been established in the experience of the Government which point to the need of its unqualified acceptance. fied acceptance.

AVOID CONFUSION

"The country must not be confused with the idea that in order to pay the prevailing wage it would be necessary to appropriate several billion dollars more. The McCarran amendment does not propose to encroach upon the Federal Treasury for an additional appropriation.

"The prevailing wage can be paid on these Public Works projects with the same appropriation as provided in the bill. It will not cost the Government one additional dollar to pay the prevailing wage rate.

"If the prevailing wage scale is maintained, there is no objec-

"If the prevailing wage scale is maintained, there is no objection to limiting the monthly compensation on this work to a specific sum. It may be fully practicable to establish a maximum limiting average monthly pay to $50, or a sum best suited to carry out the objective of reemployment of 3,500,000 people under the terms of the proposed appropriation.

"Careful estimates made by the American Federation of Labor show that if a $50 monthly maximum is established and the prevailing rate of wages is maintained, it would be possible to give work to 3,500,000 unemployed for a full year at the total cost of $3,943,200,000, which is well within the proposed appropriation. Under this plan 125 hours of employment can be given each month on the average, and the program can be carried out to the fullest extent without endangering the existing wages of the workers.

CONGRESS NOT STAMPEDED

"Such, then, are the facts. Supporters of the measure have stated their purpose in plain language firmly founded on fact. It is the language keenly understood by every laborer, mechanic, and office worker upon whose combined pay envelop rests our entire national income.

"Opponents of the amendment have presented no valid argument, have declared no sound principle, but have attempted to destroy the amendment amid the smoke and confusion of a gen-

"But Congress has shown that it will not be stampeded into legislating out of existence a measure designed to protect the economic status of the great mass of wage workers. It refused to be captured under the cover of noise and evasion.

PRESS EVASIVE

"A certain section of the press has strained every effort to obscure the issue and to distort the real meaning of this legislation. This group has sought to serve special interests by pandering to popular prejudices at the risk of jeopardizing the economic future of the common weal. For this reason I speak to you, the citizens of the Republic vested with power to determine the form and character of legislative measures.

"Labor endorsed and approved the President's annual message to Congress, in which he pleaded for a public-works program for the sole purpose of putting three and a half million people to work.

work.

"The objective of this program is to create 'future new wealth for the Nation.' The measure we are discussing was designed to relieve unemployment and to attain recovery by making available earned purchasing power for those who must otherwise depend on the dole.

"This objective cannot be attained if the McCarran amendment is stricken from the bill. Without this amendment whatever purpose the modified measure would accomplish, it would call for the payment of a price the Nation cannot afford to pay.

ACTIVE SUPPORT ESSENTIAL

"The American Federation of Labor has given solid support to the McCarran amendment with only one purpose in mind. That purpose is to protect and maintain wage standards and wage rates established in the different communities of the Nation through established in the different communities of the Nation through years of struggle and effort on the part of organized labor.

"Increases in wages and salaries which have resulted from the organized effort over this period of years have brought about a higher standard of living in America and higher compensation for work performed by every wage earner in this country. We stand justly guarding those standards, and we cannot believe that the Congress of the United States will adopt any legislative plan that would tend to lower or impair those standards.

"The overwhelming majority of the people are vitally interested in the maintenance of the wage scale in this country, and in seeing that they are lifted, not lowered.

in the maintenance of the wage scale in this country, and in seeing that they are lifted, not lowered.

"This great mass of workers know that if the Government embarks on a program of construction and improvement for which labor is to be paid a low wage scale, the effect will be a lowering of their own wages. Undoubtedly it would be so.

"That is why it is not only important but imperative that you raise your voices in support of the prevailing wage principle incorporated in the MCCountry among their the state of the st porated in the McCarran amendment, so that it shall be adopted and maintained."

HEARST PAPERS' VITRIOLIC ATTACK IS CONDEMNED BY PRESIDENT GREEN—STRING OF NEWSPAPERS DEVOTED TO CAMPAIGN AGAINST PROPOSED MCCARRAN AMENDMENT TO WORKS RELIEF BILL, RESORTS TO VILIFICATION OF SENATORS AND LABOR AND EXCEEDS "ORDINARY

WASHINGTON.—The energetic and vitriolic campaign of several newspapers in different parts of the country controlled by William Randolph Hearst, against the McCarran amendment to the works relief bill, climaxed by an especially shocking editorial in the Hearst papers, entitled "Reckless Demagogy", elicited a strong reply from William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor.

While reiterating past friendship, President Green was constrained to set forth sound and established facts, in a special telegram sent direct to Mr. Hearst. The editorial was referred to as "shocking to all decent men's sense of justice and to one's ordinary conception of fair play."

As this telegram sets forth important facts, it is reprinted herewith as a matter of public record:

[Western Union telegram]

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 25, 1935.

W. R. HEARST,

Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles, Calif.:

Because I have always held you in high regard it is difficult to reconcile myself to the belief that you sponsored the shocking editorial entitled "Reckless Demagogy" published in the Hearst papers today.

The characterization in this editorial of labor and labor representatives as demagogues and a large number of United States Senators who are known to be honest, upright, conscientious men as renegades is shocking to all decent men's sense of justice and to one's ordinary conception of fair play. The one who wrote this editorial charges labor representatives who are fighting to maintain wage rates established as a result of years of struggle and effort and to destroy the influence of subversive elements in our national life as demagogues and brilliant, patriotic Senators who effort and to destroy the influence of subversive elements in our national life as demagogues, and brilliant, patriotic Senators who voted their honest convictions upon the prevailing wage rate amendment, which provided for the maintenance of American standards of living, as renegades.

This is going far beyond the limits of ordinary decency, good sportsmanship, and fair play. I resent this editorial and am doing all I can at the moment by submitting to you my solemn protest. It is the working people of America and not the favored class who have suffered hunger, distress, and oppression during the past 5 years of unemployment.

have suffered hunger, distress, and oppression during the past 5 years of unemployment.

It ill becomes those who have not been forced to endure the pangs of hunger, who are more fortunately situated, to charge these hungry men and women and those who represent them as being demagogues, when they seek to protect them and to maintain for them the wage standards and wage rates established in every community throughout the land.

The special attack which your editorial writer made upon Senator Wagner, a brilliant, devoted, honest, incorruptible, patriotic American citizen, marked a climax to the loose writing and vituperation engaged in. Your attack upon this distinguished Senator from New York has solidified the strength of the mass of people in New York and throughout the Nation behind him.

I repeat my solemn protest against the unjustifiable and reprehensible editorial attack which appeared in the Hearst papers today against labor and loyal, patriotic United States Senators. I trust I may receive a reply to this message assuring me of your personal disavowal of sponsorship of this wicked editorial.

WILLIAM GREEN,

President American Federation of Labor.

STABILIZATION BY SPECIE PAYMENT

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD an article appearing in Scribner's, for March, entitled "Stabilization by Specie Payment", by Edward Tuck.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STABILIZATION BY SPECIE PAYMENT By Edward Tuck

Throughout the world there is at the present time a universal demand on the part of governments, chambers of commerce, and mercantile bodies for the stabilization of currencies. Even as recently as in December last a leading conservative speaker, during an important monetary debate in the British House of Commons, an important monetary debate in the declared:

"We shall never get international trade going on a wide scale unless we have currency stabilization. The whole future of our economic system, and possibly civilization, depends on the cooperation between this country and the United States, and if we cannot get that we may as well throw up the sponge."

ation between this country and the United States, and if we cannot get that we may as well throw up the sponge."

These are strong and truthful words, but how is it proposed to effect this great reform? Thus far it has been planned to accomplish it only by the establishment of so-called "stabilization funds" to buy and sell the different paper moneys (which are really not money at all, but only dishonored promises-to-pay money on demand), under the control of Government committees or agents seeking to regulate the exchange markets at fixed rates in accordance with their personal judgment and direction. This would be a monetary experiment unique in the world's history, having no scientific basis. There never has been complete stabilization of the currencies, there can be none, except with countries which are on a specie-paying basis, when it is fixed by the comparative weight of the precious metals—gold and silver coins. Stabilization of irredeemable fiduciary money, which is the only currency in use the world over today, the varying, uncertain product of the printing press, is a mathematical impossibility. In the United States, Government notes, called "greenbacks", and bank notes, specie payments being suspended, were our national currency from 1862 till 1879. A "gold room" was established in New York alongside the stock exchange, where the metal was bought and sold daily, at fluctuating premiums in currency value, to satisfy the demands of merchants in payment for their foreign importations and for duties at the customs.

On January 1, 1879, we resumed specie payments "in coin" importations and for duties at the customs.

On January 1, 1879, we resumed specie payments "in coin", under acts of Congress passed in January 1875 and in February 1878. The latter contained the following important provisions as to the part that silver should take in accomplishing resumption:

"Section 1. There shall be coined at the several mints of the United States silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the act of January 18, 1837, which shall be legal tender at their nominal value for all debts and dues, public and private.

"Sec. 2. That immediately after the passage of this act the President shall invite the governments and countries composing the Latin union, and of such other European nations as he may President shall invite the governments and countries composing the Latin union, and of such other European nations as he may deem advisable, to join the United States in a conference to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money and securing fixity of relative value between these metals. The President shall appoint three commissioners to attend such conference."

The President called the conference as the law required. It was held in Paris in 1878. France was ready to join the United States and England in an international agreement for the remonetization of silver, but England refused and the conference was a failure.

and England in an international agreement for the remonetization of silver, but England refused and the conference was a failure.

In partial fulfillment of section 1, the Bland-Allison Act was passed in 1878, under which 2,000,000 silver dollars were coined each month. In 1890 the Sherman law increased the silver coinage to something over $4,000,000 monthly. Later on, however, President Cleveland, a bitter and uncompromising opponent of silver, secured a repeal of the latter bill and this limited silver coinage thereupon ceased. Meantime the unprecedentedly severe panic of 1893 took place, and its ill effects continued hopelessly until the prodigious development in the late 1890's of the newly discovered gold mines of the South African Rand and of Alaska and Cripple Creek—the production of the Rand increasing yearly with great rapidity until 1915—filled the void in the world's needed additional metallic money and general prosperity ensued. This certainly was inflation, but only in proportion to the constantly growing requirements of increasing population, industry, and commerce in all countries.

It is estimated that the Rand mines have produced up to date merce in all countries.

It is estimated that the Rand mines have produced up to date at least five thousand million dollars of gold, the bulk of which was added during 20 years to the existing money in circulation, thereby maintaining values and prices. Since that period, however, while public and private debts have been augmenting enormously, uncounted tons of gold have gone and are continuing to go into Government and individual hoards, where the metal is of no more benefit commercially and financially, in raising prices, than when previously embedded in the bowels of the earth. Gold has ceased to be a current medium of exchange, which is the first requisite of money. Values have continuously declined, and idleness and suffering have increased to the danger point.

The monetary system of the United States was established, not upon gold or silver alone, but upon the two metals, at a fixed ratio to each other, with no limitation upon the coinage of either, each standing on an equal footing before the law. This bimetallic ratio to each other, with no limitation upon the coinage of either, each standing on an equal footing before the law. This bimetallic system (then called the "double standard"), prevailing at that time in both England and France, adopted by Hamilton, sanctioned by Washington and Jefferson, its wisdom and justice questioned by none, endured until 1873, when the coinage of silver dollars at the mint, under its new regulations, was stopped, and bimetallism in our country thereby unwittingly destroyed.

The present law, under which our Government is coining monthly a limited amount of silver dollars, will never reestablish true bimetallism. It has become manifest to all competent authorities that gold alone is insufficient to maintain the world's thorities that gold alone is insufficient to maintain the world's monetary currency upon a metallic basis. To insure the resumption of specie payments in the United States, which has now become an economic necessity, and is within our reach, we must ourselves return to the full and unlimited monetization of silver ourselves return to the full and unlimited monetization of silver as of old.

It is gratifying to know that the people of the United States are now going through a process of reeducation on the whole question of monetary standards, although it is still considered in hidebound banking circles, and even in colleges and universities, that it is bad form to introduce the subject of bimetallism for discussion, the conspiracy of silence still persisting. The vis inertiae of banking and academic public opinion on the question of money since the Bryan campaign has been astounding. It is encouraging, however, that thinking business men generally are becoming more open-minded and receptive of the thought that their fixed ideas in favor of a single gold standard are subject to revision. It is most significant, too, that Walter Lippmann, an eminent exponent of intelligent public opinion, should have declared:

"Make silver legal money exchangeable for gold and it will produce the same effect as if the world had discovered new gold. It will cheapen gold, raise world prices, make further paper inflation unnecessary, and restore solvency."

All this is very true, and it is the only enduring remedy for the universal "monetary morbus" with which the world was afflicted in the later 1880's and for 10 years thereafter, until the new South African gold furnished the needed curative. The same monetary morbus now endangers the entire world again, with much greater severity than before, and threatens to lead to disastrous political consequences.

Silver monetization, once readopted and established in the United States, restoring full specie payments in both metals, the two coins, or coin certificates, having the same debt-paying power, would be of identical value, as is now the case. There would be no flood of silver to fear from abroad or from the mines, as predicted by the gold monometallists. India and China have from time immemorial been annual absorbers of silver and will never cease to be such. They could no more divest themselves of their silver money than they could of the clothes on their backs. As regards silver mines, those of the United States have been very largely exhausted, with no important new discoveries, and this is likewise true of the world at large.

Forty years ago the United States was heavily indebted to Europe, and the adoption of bimetallism by our country alone at that time might have been hazardous. Today the reverse is the case. We are a creditor nation as regards the world. We owe virtually nothing abroad. The trade movement is in our favor. Our independent action would be successful, and a blessing to all the nations, by furnishing the vitally needed large augmentation of the world's metallic real money, accompanied by a considerable diminution of the paper assignats which are now affoat in all countries. countries.

Our purchases of silver for full legal-tender coinage should at countries.

Our purchases of silver for full legal-tender coinage should at once be largely and rapidly increased, with the consequent result of an approaching legal parity in market value of the two metals, in preparation for the passage of the final resumption act, under which our present depreciated and dishonored paper money would be stabilized at par in coin and in the foreign exchanges.

It was Salmon P. Chase who said, in an oft-quoted phrase: "The way to resumption is to resume." We are now abundantly prepared for resumption as regards gold, but the amount of silver coin, at the present rate of purchase, will be totally inadequate. Its coinage must be free and unlimited. We cannot have too much full legal-tender money of the precious metals, money of ultimate redemption, provided by Nature's mines and not by the unlimited fertility of the printing press.

The legal weight of the silver dollar will be a most important problem to be decided upon. The old ratio of 16 to 1, based upon the world's estimated comparative annual production. It is today probably nearer 13 to 1, and very rarely, if ever, has been as high as 16. The statistics of all the great mints confirm this.

The present is a crucial moment in our history and also in the affairs of the entire world. Europe, almost in despair, is turning more and more to the United States as the predominant power which can with its enormous wealth and progressive spirit solve this vital problem. We are given an opportunity to lead in this great movement for monetary reform. Let us not allow the occasion to slip past us. I doubt if our people, even the keenest silver protagonists, are fully aware of the sympathy and support Mr. Roosevelt's action as regards silver coinage is meeting with in Europe. In England, Lord Desborough has written:

"I believe America can do this great thing alone, and other countries will be obliged to follow."

Numerous financiers, economists, and leaders of public opinion have expressed themselves to the same effect. Lord Greenway, th bimetallism, I hope it will not be long before concrete proposals are made to this country to follow suit, with a view to securing greater stability in international exchanges."

We cannot ourselves too often meditate upon these words of Daniel Webster, the great expounder of our Constitution, pronounced in the United States Senate in 1836:

"Gold and silver is the money of the Constitution. The constitutional standard of value is established and cannot be overturned. To overturn it would shake the whole system. Gold and silver, at rates fixed by Congress, constitutes the legal standard of value in this country, and neither Congress nor any State has authority to establish any other standard or dispose of this."

OUR NEW ORDER IN TRANSPORTATION-ADDRESS BY SENATOR REYNOLDS

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] was kind enough to go to Baltimore and address the Traffic Club of Baltimore on February 5, 1935. He made a very interesting address upon the subject Our New Order in Transportation. I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, members of the Traffic Club of Baltimore, and guests, I deeply appreciate your invitation to be with you and appear on your program this evening. I have been a frequent visitor to your delightful and historical city. Each time I come here I am impressed with the charm of your people, your key position in the field of industry and commerce, and the progressive way in which you endeavor to meet new conditions. You seem to have ever before you the desire that Baltimore shall continue to develop and prosper and that your people shall enjoy the highest standards of living.

highest standards of living.

In appearing before you tonight, I do so as a substitute. As some of you here know, I am attempting to fill the place of your distinguished Senator and my good friend and colleague, Millard E. Typings. Thus you will readily see that I have undertaken a most difficult assignment, for I know that he is well equipped from the standpoint of both training and experience to deal with the broad subject of transportation. I also know that he is vitally concerned with the effort now under way to improve our national system of distribution.

system of distribution.

However, I have always been intensely interested in transportation. I have used every modern, and I might say some of the medieval, forms of travel. I have studied the distribution methods of many lands. I have watched new means of transportation replace old. Not so long ago I stood silently on the main street of my home city of Asheville, N. C., and saw the last electric car traverse the streets of that city. There came to my mind a vivid memory of the day when the first electric-powered car was operated in Asheville. It was one of the first in the country, and the event attracted widespread attention. And as I saw the last car move on its steel rails I realized that within the brief span of my own lifetime a significant change in transportation had taken place.

place.

Fortunately, from a national standpoint, we are not faced today with the problem of discarding our older forms of transportation to make way for new forms. Instead, we are simply confronted with the task of coordination. Every means of travel and distribution in existence today has distinct advantages. The job before us is simply to eliminate the weakness in each and preserve the best so that our country may continue to enjoy the most efficient and economical transportation. And in my opinion, the most efficient is the most economical.

At the outset, let me say that I accepted your invitation with most efficient is the most economical.

At the outset, let me say that I accepted your invitation with a certain degree of hesitancy. I realized that I would be addressing men who have made transportation their life work, men who are experts in this field, whether they represent the railroads, highway carriers, rate bureaus, or whether they are shippers. So in selecting as a subject for my address, "Our new order in transportation", I did not intend to imply that I hope to give you an accurate prediction of what our new order will be. It is not that easy. I shall not even try to offer a panacea for our transportation ills.

Rather, I shall talk to you as an individual Monkey.

Rather, I shall talk to you as an individual Member of the United States Senate concerned with the problem before us, assure you of my unfailing interest and support in the effort to arrive at a solution, and appeal to you as experts to give freely of your time and your energy to the movement designed to bring common sense into our mediums of travel and transportation. We are certainly not using common sense in allowing existing conditions

At the risk of boring you gentlemen, let me exercise the privi-lege of a speaker and trace in a few words what has happened in

At the risk of boring you gentlemen, let me exercise the privilege of a speaker and trace in a few words what has happened in our country.

In the early days our few and scattered communities were along the Atlantic seaboard and navigable streams pouring into the sea. These settlements were almost, if not entirely, self-sufficient. Westward expansion began with the building of canals, and their effect on the country was almost as profound as the coming of the railroads in later years.

Following the Civil War, rail lines spread their network in many directions. This development may be truly said to have been the most important nineteenth-century influence in the social and economical life of our country. The West was opened and new frontiers beckoned to our American man power. Towns and cities were located on railroads or where one would eventually be. Communities began to lose some of their self-sufficiency. Steel rails became a powerful arbiter in settling industrial rivalries between communities. Equally as important the connecting of towns and cities transformed the minds of men and extended the horizon of their imagination. Along with many of you here, I thrill to the boyhood memories of the desire to be a locomotive engineer; the social importance of the daily arrival of a passenger train and of my parents discussing the trip of some neighbor to a nearby community or to some distant point. The railroads were not only woven into the fabric of American life, but in many respects reconstructed that life in the process. Thus for many years the railroads dominated the transportation picture. The stage coach and the canals had lost their prestige and our people locked to the future along ribbons of steel. No one questioned the future of the railroad and its place in our economic scheme seemed secure. Then came the motor era. Off to a slow start as our people hesitated to accept this individual means of transportation, motor transportation soon proved its advantages from the standpoint of convenience and flexibi

Then came the motor era. Off to a slow start as our people hesitated to accept this individual means of transportation, motor transportation soon proved its advantages from the standpoint of convenience and flexibility. From 8,000 private passenger cars in 1900, the number had increased to more than 20,000,000 at the end of 1933. From 410 in 1904, the number of motor trucks had increased to 3,225,000 in 1933, and the year-to-year increase in improved road mileage over which moves highway transportation, has almost kept pace with gains in the number of units of operation. Our country has invested, roughly speaking, $15,000,000,000 in highways, with the result that nearly 1,000,000 miles of surfaced highways are now available for the use of not one class of our people but all our people. Here let me sound the solemn warning that by no turn of the imagination can the expenditures for highways be called a subsidy to any form of highway transportation. Our people paid and are still paying for these highways through motor taxes, gasoline taxes, property taxes, and other forms of taxes. And the American people cannot subsidize themselves. You can only subsidize private interests.

Simultaneously with the motorization of our country there came other important developments vitally affecting our whole economic and social structure. New frontiers waiting for development ceased to exist. Our rural communities began to enjoy all of the advantages of modern improvements and invention. Residents of cities turned to outlying areas, and thus enjoyed city advantages while virtually living in the country. More recently the trend of population has been away from large metropolitan areas and toward smaller communities. The result has been a revolutionary change in our distribution requirements. From large warehouses modern chain stores serve retail outlets in areas 100 and 150 miles from the warehouse.

These things I have mentioned have to do with the cause of These things I have mentioned have to do with the cause of the conditions confronting virtually every form of transportation. That we must better the conditions is obvious. But how? We cannot say to motor transportation that the railroads were here first, nor can we say to the railroads that they have outlived their usefulness. Such an approach to the problem would only bring economic disaster. Instead we must, fully respecting the rights of each, make an adjustment so that the railroads and highway transportation can each fill their niche in our modern scheme and render maximum service to our people.

It is also obvious that our people are looking to the Federal Government to bring order out of chaos in all fields of transportation and eliminate the wasted effort, useless expenditures, and Government to bring order out of chaos in all fields of transporta-tion and eliminate the wasted effort, useless expenditures, and costly duplication of service. Some time ago it was my privilege to read an address delivered by the Federal Coordinator of Transpor-tation, Joseph B. Eastman. I regard Mr. Eastman as one of the country's outstanding and most fair-minded transportation ex-perts, and I fully agree with him as to the fundamentals we must consider in arriving at the details for solving our transportation problem. Let me cite these fundamentals, as viewed by Mr. Eastman:

First. The country ought to have the best and cheapest means of transportation. If a new agency develops which is better than the old one, that is unfortunate for the latter, but progress cannot be halted for its protection. It would have been a crime if the railroad had been stopped for the benefits of the stagecoach and

"Second. The country ought to be protected against unnecessary duplication or waste in transportation, whether by the older or the newer agencies. Some waste cannot be avoided, but there is much which can be, and in one or another way all pay for it. It cannot be quarantined, or can the evil effects be confined to the guilty which can be, and in one or another way all pay for it. It cannot be quarantined, or can the evil effects be confined to the guilty party.

"Third. The country ought to have at all times safe, convenient, and efficient service by reliable and responsible operators. In the long run, these conditions cannot be met unless carriers are able to operate at a reasonable profit and with fair treatment of labor.

"Fourth. The rates charged for transportation ought to be known, dependable, and reasonable, and relatively fair to all shippers, places, and localities, whether they be big or little."

In my opinion the above can be accepted as a new bill of rights in the field of transportation. It offers a basis for approaching the present-day problems in an eminently fair manner, without prejudice to any form of transportation. It has been wisely said that in our past efforts in regulation we have concentrated on attempted cures, rather than included in our regulatory measures any method for orderly planning. Such mistakes must not be made again. However, there are established facts that must be taken into consideration. For example, our railroads have a definite place in our national social economy. Through investments, public and private, their financial status is closely linked with the well-being of all our people. Their relationship with the balance of our economic structure is such that disruption might vitally affect every citizen.

Despite this condition, it is only during the last 2 or 3 years that we have given any adequate attention to considering coordination as a possible means of maintaining the benefits of our new methods of transportation and still retain the advantages of the old. And it would be a most short-sighted policy to allow selfish interests or differences of opinion as to details to prevent the American people from reaping the fruits of what we have learned.

Unfortunately, a wave of propaganda has been allowed to con-learned.

Unfortunately, a wave of propaganda has been allowed to confuse the mind of the public. Competing forms of transportation have been active in blaming each other for the present conditions. Schools of thought have clearly reflected controlled opinions rather than desire for the public good. In this campaign every form of transportation has had a part. We may expect it to continue. Let me hasten to say, however, that many of the sponsors of propaganda have believed that they were justly representing their cause. But it offers fresh evidence of one of the evils of our system of allowing private thought to influence public welfare. The American people should be given the facts and allowed to draw their own conclusions.

The real problem in any effort to improve transportation con-

The real problem in any effort to improve transportation conditions, aside from the betterment of rail operations through maximum efficiency at the lowest reasonable cost lies, of course, in

First, there is the private passenger automobile. No one seriously contends that any effort should be made to deprive people of their right to own a car so as to increase the passenger business of commercial lines. Thus this form of transportation may be eliminated in approaching the question of regulation.

Second, there is the truck, the most important factor to be considered in any plant for regulation.

sidered in any plans for regulation. As I have said, there are some sidered in any plans for regulation. As I have said, there are some 3,000,000 trucks in use today. By far the greater number are privately owned and operated and therefore not subject to regulation in its accepted sense. The remainder represents common carriers, interstate and intrastate, and contract carriers. How much success we may expect in regulation of the latter is problematic. And the common carrier trucks comprise only a small preportion of those in operation. Some experts place the number at between 150,000 and 200,000. Figures given to Congress by the Coordinator place the number of trucks subject to regulation at approximately 203,000.

In my desire to secure some information with reference to high-way carriers, I recently conferred with Charles P. Clark, Deputy Administrator, in charge of all transportation codes of the National Recovery Administration. Mr. Clark is one of the ablest men in the highway-transportation field. It was surprising to me to learn of the definite achievements to date under the transportation codes. tion codes.

Anyone familiar with trucking operations knows of the sadly disorganized state of affairs within the industry prior to the advent of the codes. Therefore, any gains under the N. R. A. codes were distinct advances, and I am convinced that many have been made. They may be cited briefly as follows:

Approximately 300,000 "for hire" trucks have been registered under the trucking code and their owners have assented to code provisions.

provisions.

These trucks have been classified as to class of operation, common carrier, etc., body types, load limits, and so on. Thus we are securing for the first time in history accurate information. It is most essential as a prerequisite to any form of regulation. It is also essential from the standpoint of our national defense to know just what mediums of transportation might be available In case of an emergency. As a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, I can readily appreciate the advantages of and necessity for the data regarding highway transportation now available, for the first time.

available, for the first time.

Uniform wages and hours have been established, and there is every evidence that success is being attained in otherwise improving labor conditions. The trucking industry was long conducted on a 60-hour basis. Today it is on a 48-hour basis.

Trade-practice agreements have been set up as another indication of healthier conditions within the industry. There is every reason to believe that it is operating on a higher plane of business ethics than ever before.

Now remember, gentlemen, that all this has been accomplished through self-regulation, the American ideal. Through the National Code Authority for the Trucking Industry and 49 State code authorities, including the District of Columbia, the industry is endeavoring to solve its own problems. There is, of course, a minimum control by the Government, which acts as umpire in the administration of the control of th ministration of codes as a means of protecting labor and the public interest.

I mention the trucking code only because it has a more vital bearing on my subject. But gains have been made under the other transportation codes. The motor-bus industry, for example, has been ready and urging sound Federal regulation for many years, and has strengthened its place in the transportation picture under

It is my sincere hope that whatever steps we may take to improve transportation, we shall not fall to preserve the gains we have made under the codes. They offer a fertile basis for self-regulation and when this is attained supervision by agencies of Government is simplified and is more in keeping with our American system.

It is my intention to make further studies of code activities and administration in connection with the proposal for coordinating our transportation system now before the Congress. They must not be overlooked. Naturally, Government supervision under codes is largely based on self-regulation and therefore may not be as effective as direct Federal regulation. My point, however, is that code administration does offer background experience in approaching the problem of deciding the best form of regulation.

Obviously, if gains can be made through self-regulation in the transportation field more can be accomplished through incorporating the same principles into a sound plan for Government regulation.

ing the same principles into a sound plan for Government regulation. The relationship of the self-regulated agency to other transportation units must also be considered. We cannot in fairness regulate or control one and leave the other free to use any sort of competitive methods.

It is not unusual to find truck and bus lines which have thrived as a result of their freedom in fixing rates, appealing to Government agencies for protection when the railroads sought to meet the competition with even lower rates. Thus it is evident that rate stabilization is desirable.

Recently there has been submitted to the President and the Con-recently there has been submitted to the President and the Congress a broad program designed to coordinate our various units of transportation. It represents the most advanced thought and is based on intensive studies made by the Federal Coordinator of Transportation. The report is a most constructive document.

It is my hope that the Congress will give careful attention to the recommendations of Coordinator Eastman and write these into the statutes. Most of you present have undoubtedly considered the statutes. Most of you present have undoubtedly considered the report in detail and formed your own opinions as to its merit.

However, it seems significant to me that while the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission subscribe to the plan advanced and urge the enactment of the legislation necessary to carry it out, they object to enlargement of the Commission. In other words, they, with one exception, feel that the present I. C. C. is composed of honorable and fair-minded men. Quite likely the members are not entirely "railroad-minded" as some of the proposes of new forms of the proposes of new forms of the proposes. likely the members are not entirely "railroad-minded" as some of the sponsors of new forms of transportation claim. But if the motor carriers, air transport, and water lines are to be asked to submit to Federal regulation, they are perfectly fair in asking that those who attempt to handle their problems be thoroughly qualified in their respective fields. It would seem obvious that railroad interests have in the past, and will continue in the future, to carefully check the qualifications of new appointees to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

be little more than examiners, and privileged to vote in the disposition of but a limited class of cases. While theoretically they will be equals with the Commissioners who are to sit as members of the Control Board they will have no voice in any matters of administration; they cannot advise with their colleagues, except through courtesy; and they will not join in the reports of the Commission to Congress. Such a form of organization must result in discord and inefficiency and lack of concert of action."

That declaration seems to have all the earmarks of a desire to have a new order in transportation handled by old methods. It might be done efficiently. But one of the most frequent charges leveled at our Federal bureaus is "red tape", and I am one of those who believe that when we attempt to meet new conditions we should not plan to rely entirely on those who have perhaps become too much accustomed to old ways. The merit of my contention has been amply demonstrated in our experience of the last 2 years. Sometimes I fear that the unwillingness of agencies of government, Federal and State, to abandon some of their prerogatives and power is as much against the public interest as the unwillingness of private interests to consider the public good. It is high time that Washington learned that new agencies designed to meet modern problems are as important as those steeped in hallowed traditions by reason of their prior creation.

In regulation of motor carriers particularly it will be necessary to deal with many thousands of operators, most of them small. Serious practical difficulties will be encountered in securing adherence to rates, in keeping highway carriers limited to their respective fields, and in securing necessary dats. These are not, of course, insurmountable difficulties. But it is most important due to the fiexibility of highway carriers that they should have regulation will not be in the public interest.

Take, for example, the railroads after many years of experience in regulation. At present ultimate more effective action.

I have stressed the principal objections raised to the coordinator's report, designed to be the basis of "our new order in transportation", because of the feeling that the methods to be used in applying regulation should not be allowed to jeopardize the public good to be accomplished through a sound program. Perhaps I have stressed it too much. But it is hardly necessary to say that the personnel of any Federal agency, whether it affects transportation or any other field of activity, is, when all is said and done, the vital thing and will have a profound effect on the quality of regulation.

In conclusion, let me say that I have every confidence that our quality of regulation.

In conclusion, let me say that I have every confidence that our transportation problems will be solved. The magnitude of the task is such that we must proceed with care. The economic welfare of a nation largely depends on the results. Public hearings will, of course, precede congressional action. In these I hope we shall have the spirit of cooperation that is reflected in this organization and others like it. Such a spirit will do more than anything else to make possible speedy action along sound lines.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment, reported by the Committee on Appropriations, will be stated. The amendment was, under the subhead "Expenses of courts martial", on page 16, line 24, to strike out "$35,000" and insert "$50,000", so as to read:

For expenses of courts martial, courts of inquiry, military commissions, retiring boards, and compensation of reporters and witnesses attending same, contract stenographic reporting services, and expenses of taking depositions and securing other evidence for use before the same, $50,000.

PROGRESS OF THE SHIP OF STATE

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, on Monday night the distinguished Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Roper, delivered an address over the radio which I am sure attracted great attention. I did not hear the radio address, but I read it carefully

Let me read a paragraph from the letter from the I. C. C. transmitting the Coordinator's report. It says:

"But we do not agree that any such radical reorganization is now called for or is desirable. The plan seems to us to have positive disadvantages. The so-called 'Control Board', proposed to be set up from among the members of the Commission will in essence be the Commission. The remaining members, more than a majority of the whole number, while still to be called Commissioners, will be little more than examiners, and privileged to vote in the disposition of but a limited class of cases. While theoretically they will be equals with the Commissioners who are to sit as members of the Control Board they will have no voice in any matters of that I may explain why it was thought by some that the Secretary of Commerce was speaking to children. I quote:

The 4-year voyage of the Ship of State, which set forth upon an adventurous and challenging journey on March 4, 1933, with Franklin D. Roosevelt at the helm, today has reached the half-way point in its time schedule.

I have been asked to read the ship's log for the first part of the voyage, to interpret the ship chart, to report on whether the ship is behind or ahead of schedule, the direction in which the vessel is now moving, the condition of the passengers and crew, and, finally, the distance to, and the probable time of arrival at the port of destination.

Let us remember the terrific storm in which the ship set sail, the relatively uncharted waters through which it had to pass, the constant danger of hidden reefs and shoals, and the serious state of desperation and panic among the passengers. There was no time to remain in port and make vitally needed functional repairs. That job had to be done while the ship was under way and in the midst of a battle with the forces of a violent storm.

The outline chart for the course of the voyage was presented in 1932 by Roosevelt as the nominee for President. The people expressed their confidence overwhelmingly in the course as he charted it, and as the ship's log for the first 2 years is read and interpreted, brief reference will be made to the promises set forth and the extent to which they have been fulfilled.

Mr. President, as I view that ship, either as a passenger or a member of the crew, I should like to comment for a moment upon the condition which existed at the beginning. We find the great pilot of this great ship in the first instance selecting his first officers. We find him selecting those whom he placed upon his right hand. We find an entirely different group whom he selected, who were to sit on his left hand as he undertook the important job of navigating the Ship of

In my State there is a little stream running north and south which is so crooked-and it is a navigable streamthat after one has started south and sailed for a half hour or so, he finds himself some distance farther north than when he began to time himself. But the particular ship, of which this great pilot is in charge, is on a vast sea without any channel in it. The pilot is at perfect liberty to go in any direction he thinks wise. His first officers on his right are insisting that he turn the ship to the right. The officers who sit at his left insist that he ought to turn the ship to the left; and, not knowing just where he ought to go, he shifts from the right to the left, and has steered a zigzag course during this whole period of 2 years.

But the Secretary of Commerce, one of the officers, who is reading for the benefit of the country the ship's log, inquires, "What is the condition of the passengers during this period of 2 years?" He insists that at the beginning there was a panic among the passengers. That is true; there was. But what happened? In the first place, we found the purser of the ship, Mr. Morgenthau, insisting that everybody on board should give up his gold, bring it to the purser, and let him put it in the ship's safe. Most people did so. Occasionally an old lady may have slipped a 20dollar gold piece in some place where no decent man would try to find it; but, generally speaking, the passengers gave up their gold, and the gold was placed in the safe of the ship. The passengers were a little uncertain what would happen to them after they had given up their gold, but they still had confidence in the pilot. Some of them had confidence in the first officers sitting on the left. Others had confidence in those sitting on the right.

Having given up their gold, the passengers sailed along for a little while; and then came the order that the next morning 40 cents out of every dollar should be taken from every passenger, leaving him only 60 cents, with no gold, and with his paper dollar only worth 60 cents; but being loyal passengers, having faith in the pilot as well as in the officers, they continued to sail on and on for many more days and many more weeks.

After a while, however, as they reach the end of this 2-year journey—the half-way point—the passengers find themselves in this position: Not only has their gold been taken away from them, not only has 40 cents been taken from the dollar, but the bonds which the master of this great ship agreed to pay in gold at maturity have been tendered to the purser, and he has said, "No; we pay not at all in gold." "Why not? You promised to pay in gold." "Well, that is true; but we are on a difficult voyage. We shall have to repudiate our promise in order that we may be certain to bring to port this great ship with all its passengers. We are not going to pay you in gold; and you, passenger, had better go back to your bunk or the first thing you know we will take 10 cents more from your dollar."

The passengers go on and on; and at the end of 2 years, being concerned about the dollar and what it will buy, they find that the cost of their meals has gone up. In the meantime the purser has boosted the price of all their meals, and they are concerned about that.

That is the condition of the passengers at the end of 2 years; but I desire to call attention for a moment to the condition of the crew about whom Secretary Roper talks.

The crew is located on two decks of the ship. There is the lower deck, which has something like 435 sailors in it. With them the great pilot has no difficulty at all. With the upper deck, where there are only 96 sailors, and where they have signed for a longer time, he has much more difficulty. It must be borne in mind, too, that this ship is controlled by the papers of the ship. There are certain rules and regulations laid down which the pilot himself must follow. So, therefore, while ordinarily the crew has nothing to do with such matters, it is important, from the pilot's own point of view, that he go to the crew occasionally in order to get sufficient funds to continue to run the ship. He sends a request to that effect to the crew on the lower deck. They get the request one day and the next day they pass a resolution approving, without debate and without discussion, all that has been recommended by the pilot.

Then the request comes to this body, and here the situation is a little different. The crew on the upper deck is constituted a little differently than that on the lower deck. Its organization is a little different. For instance, it has at its head a distinguished-looking man, who is distinguished not only for his looks but for what he does not say. He acts as a referee in case the sailors get into a fight.

On one side we find what is called the minority—and a very small minority it is, indeed—low in voice, morale all gone, with but few votes; led, however, when we permit him to lead, by an attractive and intelligent man, who has some definite ideas about how things ought to be done on a ship. The minority, however, is unimportant. It is the majority of the sailors on the upper deck that count.

What do we find on the majority side? We find that they are led by a distinguished man, who has been a sailor for a long while. In repose he folds his arms and is as placid as can be; but when necessity requires he is as vociferous as it is possible for any other person to be. He confers with the pilot. We do not know, but we have an idea that he has differences of opinion with the pilot. Finally, however, the pilot convinces the leader that the pilot is right. Then this great leader of the majority of the sailors comes back here; but his trouble is not half over. The mere fact that he has agreed with the pilot does not mean that the leader has all the crew agreeing with him; and he goes forth doing the best he can to get the crew to agree with him. Sometimes they offer to help, and he cries out, "Give me help; the Lord knows I need it!"—and so it goes on from there.

Then we find, in one corner, one of the sailors who has been in the service for a long while, who does not agree at all with what the pilot is doing. He is afraid the ship is sailing to the Sea of Sargasso, the limbo of lost ships. He protests, but he does not advocate that there be mutiny among the sailors. I have no doubt that he hopes and prays every night that the ship and all its passengers and crew may be saved.

Then we find in the majority the son of an Irishman, large in frame, genial in appearance, vigorous in protest. He does not always agree with what the pilot says or with what his leader says, but he expresses his disagreement with much geniality and with much charm, comparable to those qualities of the new deal itself.

Over there, too, is a man who we are told is ignorant, egotistical, and autocratic. We may agree with that or we may not, but we know one thing that is beyond any question: He makes more noise than any other member of the crew. [Laughter.] He talks longer and he talks louder than any of the rest.

We find over there also one of those placid, genial persons whom everybody likes. He is comparatively a new sailor, but the pilot has more confidence in him than in anybody else. He calls this sailor to the pilot house, and the sailor goes. The pilot says, "What are the crew talking about? How do they feel about the way the ship is going?" The sailor proceeds to tell him. "Well, take back word that I want it done in this way." Back the sailor comes, and among his group of sailors he goes about and says, "This is what the chief wants; this is what he wants; this is what he does not want." "Well, what do you think about it?" "I have no mind at all with respect to it." [Laughter.] "I tell you what the pilot says is good for us, and I am following the pilot."

I remember that these same sailors at one time were on a ship piloted by another man. I remember particularly that senior sailor from Mississippi, and the senior sailor from Kentucky, and the junior sailor from Texas, and I listened to them for 4 long years complaining about the way the ship was being run.

After they had a new man at the helm, we heard not a word from them, either of complaint or praise. We cannot tell whether they agree with the pilot or not, except when it comes to casting the votes. When it comes to casting the votes, we can gamble before they are cast that they will do what the crown prince of the White House tells them the pilot wants done.

Mr. President, I have given this little history of the job of the crew in order that I may find out how serious this speech of the Secretary of Commerce may be with respect to this ship. I do not disagree with anything the Secretary said. I am not here complaining about what he said. However, when such a distinguished man, for whom I have the highest regard, goes on the radio and starts off as I have indicated, in order that he might get the women and children and everybody else to listen, I complain about him telling only half the truth.

I have understood heretofore that those who undertook to show that this ship was sailing in the right direction went upon the theory that the pilot of the ship found it necessary to change his course after he took the helm. Not so with Secretary Roper. He tells us in no uncertain language that that is not true. He says:

But even with these extenuating circumstances exerting such a basic influence on the course of national events and problems, the chart for the recovery voyage as outlined by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 comprises a blueprint of promises, principles, and philosophy which has been applied with consistency and effectiveness since March 4, 1933.

The speech of the Secretary occupies several columns of the newspaper. It must have taken him an hour to deliver it on the radio. He undertakes to show that everything that has been done by his great pilot was done in accordance with a blueprint made and signed by the pilot away back in 1932.

I am not at all certain that the quotations he made from the President's speech do not justify him in saying that because of the promises made these things are justified, but I desire seriously to call to the attention of the Senate one fact, two facts, three facts, which the Secretary does not mention in his speech at all, and when I call attention to them, I will ask Senators to ask themselves the question whether or not this great first officer of this great pilot has not left out the most important things that were promised in that blueprint created by and approved by this great pilot.

I will mention the two or three things. The first seems to me to be of some importance, although I doubt whether many people agree with me; I have not found many people agreeing with me that the cost of the Government means anything at all to anybody any more. It used to be an important issue in every campaign whether or not those who were seeking the votes of the electorate would run the Government economically or whether they would not. So far as I know, nobody in particular is paying any attention to that feature. Certainly the majority of this crew, speaking generally, is not doing so; there are a few exceptions. And certainly the minority-I started to say might not be heard; but certainly, if they are heard, very few people pay any attention to them.

It seems to me that a ship which has arrived at the halfway point, with 2 years yet to go, and with the hope of 4 more years after that, must some time, somewhere, find out and tell the passengers on the ship what the trip is going to cost them.

I am not at all certain, notwithstanding what I have said about people paying no attention to it, that the passengers of this ship are not going to begin to inquire very shortly what the trip is going to cost; and I hope that may be true. At the end of the 2 years, and before we start on the third year of the trip, this crew is asked to appropriate to the pilot the huge sum of $5,000,000,000, without any assurance that that $5,000,000,000 will take him over another year of the trip.

Mr. President, I refer to the promises made by the pilot in his blueprint, and I want to take a little time of the Senate in finding out and refreshing the memories of Senators as to whether the Secretary is entirely fair when he leaves out this part of the blueprint. It is not news, I know, but it seems to me that if we keep on repeating it, and doing so from day to day, after a while we will strike the conscience of somebody who is in authority and stop some of this business.

Let me call attention to the platform upon which this great pilot ran, to the blueprint which was prepared for him and which he agreed to support 100 percent. It says:

We believe that a party platform-

And Secretary Roper agrees-is a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power.

The Democratic Party solemnly promises by appropriate action put into effect the principles, policies, and reforms herein advocated.

Mr. President, here is the next promise made, which got more votes than any other promise made in the platform:

We advocate an immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and of-fices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating ex-travagance, to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 percent in the cost of Federal Government.

Look through Secretary Roper's speech, the log of this ship, and call his attention, if you will, particularly those who are close to him, to the fact that he left this out of his radio speech, and see if you can find out why he left it out. See if you can find out why it was not fair to the American people to tell them that this was one part of the pilot's promise which he had not kept.

We favor maintenance of the national credit by a Federal budget annually balanced on the basis of accurate executive estimates

I shall quote extracts from speeches of this great pilot, but they have been heard so often that it is not necessary to refer to the dates.

The platform which you have adopted is clear. I accept it a hundred percent.

A platform is a proposal and at the same time a promise binding on the party and its candidate. Now even the partisan opposition had found it hard to criticize the Democratic platform this year. It is forthright and genuine-honest to the core.

Let us have courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing de-Stop the deficits.

Revenues must cover expenditures by one means or another. Any government, like any family, can for a year spend a little more than it earns. But you and I know that a continuation of that habit means the poorhouse.

Now the credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income. And this is so of the nation. If the nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If, in some crisis, it lives beyond its income for a year or two it can usually borrow temporarily on reasonable terms.

But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay, and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

But when we come to consider prodigality and extravagance in But when we come to consider producinty and extravagance in the Federal Government—as distinguished from State or local gov-ernment—we are talking about something even more dangerous, for upon the financial stability of the United States Government depends the stability of trade and employment, and of the entire banking, saving, and insurance system of the country.

Our Federal extravagance and improvidence bears a double evil. First, our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation. Second, our credit structure is impaired by the unorthodox Federal financing made necessary by the unprecedented magnitude of deficits.

Commercial credit has continuously contracted and is contracting now. Most of the Government's newly created credit has been taken to finance the Government's continuing deficits. The truth is that our banks are financing these stupendous deficits and that the burden is absorbing their resources.

Then the President says:

I quote one paragraph from a document published a week ago and signed by both Alfred E. Smith and Calvin Coolidge:

"All the costs of local, State, and National Government must be reduced without fear and without favor. Unless the people, through unified action, arise and take charge of their Government, they will find that their Government has taken charge of them. Independence and liberty will be gone, and the general public will find itself in a condition of servitude to an aggregation of organized and selfish minorities." selfish minorities."

Then the President continued:

Every word of that warning is true, and the first and most important necessitous step is balancing our Federal Budget to reduce expenses.

I shall carry out the plain precept of our party, which is to reduce the cost of the current Federal Government operations by 25 percent.

I have been scrupulously careful to make no idle promises, to raise no false hopes. * * Instead I have offered the practical common sense of the Democratic platform, a document which will live in history as a model for brevity and clarity

And I may add, Mr. President, it will live in history as a platform which has been more abused, and has been ignored more nearly 100 percent than any platform that was ever adopted by a political party.

Mr. President, I shall not read all these extracts from the pledges of the Democratic Party with reference to bureaucrats.

Mr. Roosevelt said:

We must abolish useless offices. • • • We must merge, we must consolidate subdivisions of government, and * * * give up luxuries which we can no longer afford. * * * I propose that government of all kinds, big and little, be made solvent, and that the example be set by the President of the United States and his Cabinet. (Acceptance address, Chicago, Ill., July 2, 1932.)

Further along he said:

It (the Republican Party) is committed to the idea that we ought to center control of everything in Washington as rapidly as possible. Now, ever since the days of Thomas Jefferson that has been the exact reverse of the Democractic concept—which is to permit Washington to take from the States nothing more than is necessary to keep abreast of the major changes in our economic struction. situation.

Of course that means a complete realinement of the unprecedented bureaucracy that has assembled in Washington in the past 4 years. But I am no stranger to Washington. I knew it at first hand during the administrations of Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft. I served at Washington for 7½ years during the Wilson administration. I have some familiarity with the psychological aspects of the administration of our National Government. More than that I have conducted for 4 years the administrative and executive affairs of a State that has 13,000,000 inhabitants.

I regard reductions in Federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign. In my opinion, it is the most direct and effective contribution that government can make to business.

business.

I have sought to make two things clear: First, that we can make savings by reorganization of excess departments, by eliminating functions, by abolishing many of the innumerable boards and commissions which over a long period of years have grown up as excrescences on the regular system. Those savings can properly have made to total many hundred of millions of dellars. be made to total many hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

Mr. President, let me now call the attention of the Senate to an article by W. M. Kiplinger, appearing in Nation's Business which came out last week, giving certain figures. I verified these figures and I desire to place them in the RECORD at this particular point. This is published in the Nation's Business for February:

BUDGET IN RED FOR 6 YEARS

The heart, the meat, the focal point of most major government policies is in the budget. The blood of private business is credit, and the credit policies of the Nation are now made pretty much by the Government, and the Government's credit course is influenced largely by its own needs. Thus the Federal Budget's influence cuts deeply into your own business.

Look first to the past. The last year in which our Government ran in the black was 1930. In that and previous years the expenditures were in the neighborhood of four billions a year, and the receipts were more than that. Surpluses were used to retire the public debt, which got down as low as sixteen billions by the end of 1930, fiscal year.

Then came the red-ink years, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, and now

Then came the red-ink years, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, and now 1935 and 1936. Six years of unbalanced Budgets.

Net result of the 6 years: Increase of the public debt from sixteen to thirty-four billions (anticipated).

Mr. President, at that particular point I desire again to call to the attention of the Senate the President's message to the Congress under date of March 10, 1933, in which he asked the Congress to give him authority to reduce the pay of Federal employees, and to reduce the payments made to the soldiers. The act passed in pursuance of his request was known as the "economy act." He called attention to the fact that the appropriations already made for the fiscal year 1933 would indicate a $1,000,000,000 deficit unless that authority was given, making a total deficit of $5,000,000,000, and in that very speech he called attention to the fact that the country was on the road to bankruptcy. The Congress gave him the authority which he asked, Congress gave him full authority, and he did what he claimed he was going to do with respect to the Federal employees and the soldiers. Now let us see what happened:

And, as yet, no end in sight, for there is no promise to balance the Budget in 1937. It could be done, but I doubt it will be done before 1938.

BUDGET FOR 1935, 1936

I can give you no facts which have not already been published, but perhaps I can give you a bit of perspective and proportion.

First, 1935, the current fiscal year, ending next June 30:

Receipts, mainly from taxes		billions
Expenditures, more than half emergency	- CONTRACTOR (1997)	billions
Deficit, the largest of the depression		billions
Public debt by next June 30	31.0	billions

Now take 1936, fiscal year, starting in the middle of this calendar year, running to the middle of the calendar year 1936—the year for which Congress is now making appropriations:

Receipts, mainly from taxes	4.0	billions
Expenditures, about same as in 1935	8.5	billions
Deficit, to be covered by borrowings	4.5	billions
Public debt by June 30, 1936		billions

In 1936, where the money comes from:
Income taxes, individual and corporate	1.2 billions
Sales taxes of one kind or another, although not so	2 0 billions

ous." They include excise taxes on certain specific commodities. They include processing taxes, which are essentially sales taxes with proceeds earmarked for farm benefit payments. The point is that our tax revenues at present are lightly weighted on incomes, and heavily weighted on commodity sales. We already have "sales taxes" on a big scale.

Here's what we will get in 1936 from taxes on commodities, apart from income taxes: Processing taxes on farm stuff, 570 millions; liquor, 430 millions, including 225 from beer, 180 from distilled spirits, and very little from wines; tobacco, 466 millions; other excise taxes, 500 millions; total nearly 2 billions, see above.

The average man pays much more in taxes when he buys these four articles—cigarettes, beer, whisky, and gasoline—than he pays in income taxes. It's a point which is not generally recognized. Other relatively minor sources of Government income, 1936: Customs, 300 millions (they've shrunk); estate and gift taxes, 215 millions; capital stock and excess profits, 100 millions. Now turn to where the money goes, 1936:

Ordinary "regular" Government expenditures without any public-debt retirement sum In 1930, a normal year, regular expenses, without debt 3. 3 billions

(Thus the Roosevelt administration, in fact, has not reduced the usual Government expenses materially, despite its campaign pledge to cut them 25 percent.)
Add to the 3.3 billions of "regular" expenses the budgetary item for debt retirement, 636 millions, making:

Total ordinary or "regular" expenses. Add, also, the emergency expenditures. 4 6 billions

Total Budget, regular and emergency____ Deficit, to be covered by borrowing_____ _ 8.5 billions 4.5 billions

Mr. President, I think it is worth while to have those facts in the RECORD, but there is one other matter to which I desire to call the attention of the Senate with respect to the speech of Secretary Roper. I did not know that the N. R. A. had been planned in 1932, but Secretary Roper says that it was. He calls attention to the fact that in Chicago on July 2, 1932, the President said:

"So as to spread the point of all kinds as widely as possible, must take definite steps to shorten the working day and the working week."

In other 1932 addresses Roosevelt advocated the initiation of a program that would provide for minimum wages, maximum hours, and collective bargaining. Virtually every major promise of the N. R. A. was clearly enunciated during the campaign.

Mr. President, I think that will be a surprise to many people. I had no idea that the President had the N. R. A. in mind, although I do remember a speech made by Mr. Farley in Detroit to the effect that nothing had been done by the administration which Mr. Roosevelt did not have in his mind when he was running the campaign in 1932. I should like to inquire today why Mr. Roper referred to the N. R. A. at all? If there is any Member of this body or of the other House of Congress who is ready to stand up and defend the N. R. A., I should like to know who he is.

I realize that the President has sent to the Congress a message with respect to the N. R. A., urging that it be continued for another two years; but, Mr. President, if you should undertake to ascertain what the President really wants you would find that he wants to destroy at least 90 percent of the N. R. A. as it exists today; and it is to his credit that he does want to destroy it. But why should Mr. Roper undertake to make the country believe that N. R. A. has been a good thing, when everybody who has had any experience with it knows that it has been a miserable failure? It occurred to me that instead of calling it N. R. A. or N. I. R. A., or whatever it is-National Industrial Recovery Act-it might well be called the National Infernal Recovery Act, because I know of no one who agrees in principle with all the things that have been done under the N. R. A. If anyone wanted to get a definite notion about how this body feels regarding it he should have attended an executive meeting of the Finance Committee of the Senate vesterday.

There may have been some person present who was in favor of it; but, if so, it did not appear from anything that he said, and we all got the distinct impression—and I think it is true; I hope it is true—that the President himself is now ready to admit that the N. R. A. as it exists today is not the proper thing for this country and that it ought to be limited in operation perhaps to those industries engaged in interstate commerce and perhaps another class, as I understand, engaged in activities in connection with natural resources. Confined to those two fields, perhaps the Congress will agree with the President and we will be able to work out something that will be worth while; but to say that the President in 1932 had in his mind the N. R. A. is, I submit, no credit to the President and no credit to Secretary Roper, who gives that new information to the country.

Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but a moment or two longer, but, in order that we may find out something about the condition of the passengers on this great ship, and what is to be done with them on this further 2 years' voyage, I desire to read to the Senate extracts from an article which appeared in the magazine Time of the issue of March 4, 1935, the second anniversary of the pilot who has this ship. The article is headed-

-" BOOTLEG SLAVERY " FARMERS-

Last week the crusading Scripps-Howard newspaper chain started a stark series of articles by Correspondent Hugh Russell Fraser about the "peonage of 8,000,000 share croppers in the South."

The sensational New York Post published an even starker series on the same subject by earthy Author Erskine Caldwell (God's Little Area Tobacoa Bead) tle Acre, Tobacco Road).

From Cincinnati, earnest Socialist Norman Thomas broadcast:
"The most wretched conditions on any large scale anywhere to be found in exploited America exists in the cotton country. * * * These share croppers and casual day laborers of the cotton fields are the forgotten men of the new deal. A. A. A. has practically washed its hands of them and their problem."

In Georgia and Mississippi, approximately 70 out of every 100 farmers work somebody else's land as tenants or share croppers. The share cropper trades his services and those of his family for The share cropper trades his services and those of his family for a shack and half the crop he makes, less 10 cents an acre ditch and road-maintenance fee, 10 cents on every dollar's worth of supplies bought at the plantation commissary (patronage obligatory) for "management fee", further deductions depending on the character of the landlord. It was estimated that the average cash income of a southern share cropper and his family in an average year is $100.

To maintain at least a medium individual farm-income level To maintain at least a medium individual farm-income level was the purpose of the cotton acreage reduction program, launched in 1933 and continued last year. The landowner pledged himself "insofar as possible to maintain on this farm the number of tenants and other employees" which he had maintained in the past. He was also supposed to pass along pro rata the share croppers' share of the reduction-benefit payments.

But a number of southern landlords, correctly informed by their lawyers that the cotton-reduction contract has no level testly and

But a number of southern landlords, correctly informed by their lawyers that the cotton-reduction contract has no legal teeth and does not bind them to maintain the normal number of tenants or to pass their benefit shares along impartially, found means of withholding the reduction fee, ousting tenants from the land. A. A. A. now admits that whereas the "prenew deal" cotton income went 40 percent to landlords, 60 percent to tenants, the reverse ratio may now hold true. From a class and country where letter-writing comes hard, some 7,000 share croppers had by last week scrawled out despairing protests to Agricultural Adjustment Administrator Chester Davis. And so impartial an observer as the Federal drought relief director of Arkansas has reported wholesale "unloading" of tenants onto relief rolls by their former landlords. By last week a vast stretch of the South was the scene of humanity hit bottom. No statistics could picture the pallid acres from ity hit bottom. No statistics could picture the pallid acres from Georgia to Arkansas, pocked with the burnt stumps of slash pine, gully-gutted, unfertilized; where the whitewash peeled from treeless shacks; where hatchet-faced tenants were not even able to get the three M's—meal, molasses, and meat—a diet that nourishes pellegra but not men. pellagra but not men.

Two vignettes of life under the new deal for landless, dole-less, hopeless share croppers 25 miles from Augusta, Ga., as seen by Erskine Caldwell:

"In 1934 a tenant farmer in Jefferson County was unable, because of old age and illness, to work out his crop. A physician prescribed for his ailment, but the man could not buy the medicine, and no relief agency would supply it. A 4-year-old girl in the family died at the end of the year of anemia. The tenant moved several miles away to another farm, but after several weeks the landowner decided that he was too old and ill to work a crop on a tenant-farmer basis, or on any other basis, and he was evicted.

The household goods were carried to the land limits and deposited by the side of the road. Another tenant took the goods under shelter, and the landowner gave notice that if they were not removed from his land he would come into the house and burn them.

burn them.

"In the meantime the old man had gone off into the swamp, without ax, hammer, or saw, with the intention of felling trees and building a log house for his family. He has not been heard from since he left. * * *"

"Near Keysville a 2-room house is occupied by 3 families, each consisting of man and wife and from 1 to 4 children each. * *

each. * * *

"In one of the 2 rooms a 6-year-old boy licked the paper bag the meat had been brought in. His legs were scarcely any larger than a medium-sized dog's leg, and his belly was as large as that of a 130-pound woman's. Suffering from rickets and anemia, his legs were unable to carry him for more than a dozen steps at a time; suffering from malnutrition, his belly was swellen several times its normal size. His face was bony and white. He was starving to death.

"In the other room of the house, without chairs, beds, or tables, a woman lay rolled up in some quilts trying to sleep. On the a woman lay rolled up in some quilts trying to sleep. On the floor before an open fire lay two babies, neither a year old, sucking the dry teats of a mongrel bitch. A young girl, somewhere between 15 and 20, squatted on the corner of the hearth trying to keep warm.

"The dog got up and crawled to the hearth. She sat on her haunches before the blazing pine knots, shivering and whining.

After a while the girl spoke to the dog, and the animal slunk away from the warmth of the fire and lay down again beside the two babies. The infants cuddled against the warmth of the dog's flanks, searching tearfully for the dry teats."

INFECTION CENTER

To date Georgians have struck no blow against what shocked

To date Georgians have struck no blow against what shocked Under Secretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell has called their state of "bootleg slavery." Not so the lean tenant farmers of Arkansas, whose memorable bread riot at England, Ark., 4 years ago (Time, Jan. 12, 1931) made the country sit up and take notice. Encouraged by Socialist Thomas and Prof. William R. Amberson, of the University of Tennessee, who interrupted his noteworthy researches into artificial blood transfusions (Time, July 23), the Poinsett County share croppers last summer formed a protective association, the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union. Program: No evictions; no forced trading at plantation commissaries; direct payment of reduction benefits; representation on all agricultural control boards; cooperation of white and black share croppers. In spite of further evictions for union participation, in the face of ostentatiously armed "plantation riders", the union now numbers 5,000. 5.000.

All the elements of a rip-snorting class conflict were present in the little town of Marked Tree in January when a youngster of 24 named Ward H. Rodgers, on the executive committee of the union, addressed an outdoor gathering of hungry, disgruntled, and dispossessed tenant farmers. Ward Rodgers, a socialistic Texan with theological degrees from Vanderbilt and Boston Universities, was already in bad odor with the landlord class because he had been calling Negroes "mister." And as an instructor in F. E. R. A.'s adult education service, he had been mixing Karl Marx with the A B C's. He was quoted as saying he was willing, if share croppers were not fed, to "lynch every plantation owner in Poinsett County." Clapped into jail, he was speedily brought to trial, convicted of "anarchy." He has taken an appeal.

WHAT TO DO?

Just before the Rodgers trial the A. A. A. dispatched red-headed Mary Connor Myers, a Boston lawyer who helped the Department of Justice jail Al Capone, to Arkansas to see what all the trouble was about. Last week she reported to Washington. It was announced that the written part of her report was confidential, and the oral part was for the ears of Chester Davis alone. The United Press said: "Mrs. Myers, it was understood, uncovered contract violations which caused cruel hardships to part of the farm population. She found share-croppers straggling along the highways, homeless and unable to obtain relief."

The Myers report, soon to be amplified by an A. A. A. share-cropping investigation in every southern county, was withheld, explained Administrator Davis, "because it may lead to legal action."

action."

Meantime the Administration's agriculturists cast about for means of remedial legislative action. Best bet, according to Dr. Tugwell, was a bill recently introduced in the Senate by Alabama's BANKHEAD to set up a farm tenant homes corporation financed by the sale of $1,000,000,000 worth of bonds. F. T. H. C. would try to establish share croppers on land they could acquire for themselves by easy payments within 50 years. Under Secretary Tugwell, whose mind never lacks for invention, thought the homes might be established in little villages, European peasant style, because the share-croppers "like to be together."

Mr. President, if we turn to other pages of this magazine we will find how very closely the conditions there described come to what is going on in Russia just now. I call attention to it merely for the purpose of showing it to the distinguished Secretary of Commerce, who says that the time has come when we must make inquiry as to the condition of the passengers and the direction of the course of this great ship. I give him these facts as to the condition of the passengers, 8,000,000 of them, in order that he may know, in order that he may further investigate, in order that he may go further in the effort to relieve the distress among the passengers of this great ship.

I hope it is true that progress has been made. I hope greater progress will be made in the next 2 years which are to follow, but I should feel very much safer if I knew where the ship was going.

The Secretary started out to lead us to believe he was going to tell us where it was going and how and when it would arrive. I challenge any person to read his address from the beginning to the end and reach any other conclusion than that which I reached, that neither the first officer of the ship nor the pilot himself has much idea where it is going or how or when it is going to land.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point an editorial which appeared in the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal of February 27, 1935, entitled "Ground Lost."

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal Feb. 27, 1935] GROUND LOST

Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, writing in the daily Washing-Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, writing in the daily Washington Merry-Go-Round, published in newspapers throughout the country, recently emphasized what everybody already knew, that the Roosevelt administration has lost ground in the country at large and in the councils of the Democratic Party. This has been apparent for some time; in fact, it has been patent to everybody since Congress convened in regular session early in January. Observers everywhere are commenting on it, not necessarily in a partisan way. It happens that in this administration the American people for the most part fervently and ardently desire the "new deal's" triumph in behalf of the success of the country, for they know the one is dependent upon the other. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Allen offer the following:

deal's" triumph in behalf of the success of the country, for they know the one is dependent upon the other. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Allen offer the following:

"One of the tragic things about every White House incumbent is a condition which best can be summarized in the advertising slogan. 'Even his best friends won't tell him.' No one of a President's many friends and advisers seems ever to be quite willing to step up and tell him that he is slipping. This was particularly true of Hoover; and already it is beginning to be true of one of the shrewdest political observers ever to sit in the White House, Franklin Roosevelt. Within the last month there has been a sickening feeling in the stomach pits of a host of "new dealers" which told them that with the country at large their leader had lost ground. * * * The sardonic thing is that the Democrats apparently don't realize that he who destroys his leader destroys himself. For the Democrats are doing most of the under-cover knifing. * * All he [Mr. Roosevelt] hears is the raucous voice of that machine politician, James Aloysius Farley, who thinks that to win in 1936 he has to appoint an Irish Democrat as postmaster and another as county chairman throughout the United States of America, and who already is bragging: 'Nineteen thirty-six? Aw, it's already in the bag!"

Looking back over the 2 years of the administration observers may wonder whether, after all, President Roosevelt was the finished politician, astute, careful, shrewd, and omniscient, he was proclaimed to be. One may conclude that he has erred within his own party by attempting to force legislation through Congress of his own design, instead of yielding in a degree to the men chosen to make the laws. He lost the World Court issue. The Democratic Senate has astonished the country with its treatment of the Roosevelt relief and recovery bill. Two months of the session of Congress will have elapsed by March 3, and no major legislation has been enacted into law. The White House so far has been powerless to contro has been powerless to control and dominate Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt is slipping. He already has slipped perceptibly, not only with Members of Congress but with the people in the hinterland. Anyone may determine this for himself. Ask the man in the street, behind the counter, at the desk, in the shop, on the farm, anywhere. Many who were strong for the new deal last November have changed since the off-year elections when their votes were counted in another Roosevelt landslide. Heartbreaking as this must be to the man in the White House when he does discover it, it yet may be described as a natural, logical process. In 1932 Mr. Roosevelt was elected to the Presidency in the hope and belief that he would rescue the people from the depression. He was given every chance to rescue them. He has not made much headway. Improvements effected have not been enough. There still are some 11,000,000 unemployed. The cost of living is climbing steadily. Industrial production is still at a low enough. There still are some 11,000,000 unemployed. The cost of living is climbing steadily. Industrial production is still at a low figure. The depression continues.

On top of all this the country sees the mountainous debt increasing in billions. The people know, that cannot go on without an increase in taxes. They know their burden is to be increased, and they dread it. They wish to protect their property, their competence, and they feel that what they have is menaced. They wonder whether ruin of the country instead of rescue is on the way.

way.

The American electorate is thinking things over now with an eye on 1936. The election may not be in the bag as Mr. Farley insists. At least it may not be in his bag.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hastings] had read the succeeding paragraphs to those which he did read, he would have found the full answer to every complaint he has made against Mr. Roper and the administration. In order that the record may be clear, I ask at this point that, as a part of my remarks, the entire address of the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Roper, be placed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURPHY in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

TWO YEARS WITH ROOSEVELT

(Radio address by Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, Monday, Mar. 4, 1935)

Good evening, my friends of the radio audience, the 4-year voyage of the ship of state, which set forth upon an adventurous and challenging journey on March 4, 1933, with Franklin D. Roosevelt at the helm, has today reached the halfway point in its time schedule. I have been asked to read the ship's log for the first part of the voyage, to interpret the ship charts, to report on whether the ship is behind or ahead of schedule, the direction in which the vessel is now moving, the condition of the passengers and crew, and, finally, the distance to and the probable time of arrival at the ports of destination.

et us remember the terrific storm in which the ship set sail, the relatively uncharted waters through which it had to pass, the constant danger of hidden reefs and shoals, and the serious state of desperation and panic among the passengers. There was no time to remain in port to make vitally needed functional repairs. That job had to be done while the ship was under way and in the midst of a battle with the forces of a violent storm.

job had to be done while the ship was under way and in the midst of a battle with the forces of a violent storm.

The outline chart for the course of the voyage was presented in 1932 by Roosevelt as a nominee for President. The people expressed their confidence overwhelmingly in the course as he charted it, and as the ship's log for the first 2 years is read and interpreted, brief reference will be made to the promises set forth and the extent to which they have been fulfilled.

In the field of medicine the question is sometimes asked as to whether a patient would have recovered without the application of rational treatment by a competent doctor. After the treatment has been applied and the patient is on the road to recovery, no question could be more beside the point than to suggest that the recovery would have taken place without the help of the doctor. The same principle is applicable in relation to our national economic recovery. Psychologically, from a viewpoint of national welfare, we recognize the utter futility of even raising the question as to whether recovery would have been possible without the new-deal program. We do know that no period of recovery in our history has shown the degree of improvement and betterment that has taken place since March 4, 1933, when the ship of state set forth upon its recovery voyage. In a letter received recently from a prominent business man, I quote his appraisal, as follows:

"I do not hold with those critics who maintain that the upturn was bound to come anyway and that the administration is in no way responsible for it. There is too close a correlation between the beginning of the upward trend and the inception of the President's policies to admit of anything but the fact that they are way responsible for it. There is too close a correlation between the beginning of the upward trend and the inception of the President's policies to admit of anything but the fact that they are directly responsible." This unsolicited comment is typical of a great many communications received from business men, who analyze the recovery program from the broad viewpoint of general results and benefits. It goes without saying that anyone can find in every city and section of the country individual business enterprises which are wonderfully improved, and also others which are in a worse position today than they were in the early spring of 1933. Thus we cannot properly depend for our conclusions and appraisals about recovery results solely upon the limited basis of individual experience and individual observation. We must seek to visualize the entire Nation-wide scope of recovery purposes, methods, and results. A program for recovery which none would criticize, a program perfect in conception and application and productive of maximum possible results, would be divine in origin and in execution. and in execution.

and in execution.

"A little philosophy," said Lord Bacon, "inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion." In a similar way a little information may incline a man's mind to skepticism, while a breadth of information leads the mind to conviction. I invite you to examine with me briefly this evening the general record of experiences and results, what has been accomplished, and what still remains under the program to be done. to be done.

As I read the log of the first 2 years of the recovery voyage, I visualize a balance sheet which contains both assets and liabilities. This balance sheet is expressed in terms of factual and statistical measurements and results and in terms of principles, public opinion, and social and moral issues.

Statistically I find 30 major economic indexes, which, on the basis of the percentage of gain and betterment recorded between March 1933 and December 1934, support factually my statement that no period of recovery in our country's history has shown the degree of improvement comparable to that since March 1933. I degree of improvement comparable to that since March 1933. I wish to cite a few of the improvements recorded and salutary gains registered between March 1933 and December 1934. They are as follows: Industrial production, 45 percent; manufacturing production, 51 percent; electric-power production, 20 percent; retail sales in department stores, 33 percent; variety stores, 18 percent; rural general stores, 98 percent; sale of new passenger automobiles, 57 percent; freight-car loadings, 28 percent; factory employment, 34 percent; factory pay rolls, 70 percent; life-insurance sales, 30 percent; stock prices based on 421 issues, 60 percent; bond prices based on 60 leading issues, 30 percent.

Now let's state the situation from another angle. In the Ameribased on 60 leading issues, 30 percent.

Now let's state the situation from another angle. In the American political system campaigns are conducted on party platform promises, to which the national candidates are committed, thus forming the basis upon which the people register their will at the polls. Some of these promises can be applied specifically and de facto; others must necessarily represent the statement of a principle, motive, or intent. No Presidential candidate has the prophetic vision to determine in concrete form or in detail many of the problems that may be encountered throughout a 4-year period. Particularly was this true in 1932, when this country faced the severest peace-time challenge in its history.

A noted student of human affairs has pointed out that before the severest peace-time challenge in its history.

A noted student of human affairs has pointed out that before the World War a young person in the United States entered a social and economic order in which the expectancy of continuity was greater than the expectancy of change. After the World War, and particularly within the past 3 or 4 years, a young person has begun his life career in a society in which the expectancy of change is far greater than the expectancy of continuity. This distinction is vital and fundamental. Forces of change following the World War created a complexity of problems which culminated in the economic collapse beginning in 1929. Then the depression itself brought on with geometric rapidity an entirely new series of problems which this country by tradition and experience was unequipped to meet. But even with these extenuating circumstances exerting such a basic influence on the course of national events and problems, the chart for the recovery voyage as outlined by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 comprises a blueprint of promises, principles, and philosophy which has been applied with consistency and effectiveness since March 4, 1933.

During the summer and fall of 1932 the ghastly spectre of unemployment constituted a dominant social and economic issue. In a series of clear-cut statements during the campaign, Roosevelt stated his position on the mandatory requirements for relief. He said:

He said:
Chicago, July 2: "The Federal Government will assume bold leadership in distress relief."
Boston, October 31: "As to immediate relief, the first principle is that this Nation owes a positive duty that no one shall be permitted to starve. That means that while immediate responsibility for relief rests with local, public, and private charity insofar as these are adequate, the States must carry the burden, and whenever the States are unable adequately to do so, the Federal Government owes the positive duty of stepping into the breach. In addition to providing emergency relief, the Federal Government should provide temporary work whenever possible. The first is clearly and inescapably the task of the Federal Government. To this Federal action, therefore, I pledge my administration."

clearly and inescapably the task of the Federal Government. To this Federal action, therefore, I pledge my administration."

No one can say that this pledge has not been carried out to the letter of the stated promise. The relief problem, however, has been a far heavier burden than could possibly have been estimated in 1932, because State, local, and private action proved inadequate to meet their share of the responsibility. Furthermore, it is evident that the extent of unemployment was also considerably underestimated, thus enlarging the task of emergency relief. As we face future requirements for continued relief, certain definite principles must guide our course of action. Work relief must be placed upon a basis that will not be competitive with private business and thereby deter normal restoration. To administer it otherwise will obstruct the normal processes of reemployment in business and industry, and require a much larger work-relief appropriation over a far longer period of time, thus increasing the national debt burden unnecessarily and retarding the further development of confidence and constructive private action.

action.

Federal employment on various work projects was proposed by Roosevelt in the campaign as a corollary measure for reducing unemployment while accomplishing other salutary and needful objectives at the same time. In this respect he said:

Chicago, July 2: "I have favored the use of certain types of public works as a further emergency means of stimulating employment and the issuance of bonds to pay for such public work, but I have pointed out that no economic end is served if we merely build without building for a necessary purpose."

Albany, N. Y., October 13: "If funds can be properly provided by the Federal Government for increased appropriations for public works, we must examine the character of those public works. I have already spoken of the type which is self-sustaining. These should be greatly encouraged. In the national forests, on flood prevention, and on the development of waterway projects * * * thousands can be given at least temporary employment."

Also at Chicago on July 2: "I propose a wide plan of converting many millions of acres of marginal and unused land into timberland through reforestation. In so doing employment can be given a million men."

be given a million men."

the given a million men."

The record is clear on the fulfillment of these promises. On planned Federal projects such as those devoted to flood control, soil-erosion prevention, river and harbor work, reforestation and other projects designed to preserve, develop, and utilize the natural resources of the United States, approximately 1,000,000 people have been given direct employment. While such Federal publicworks projects cannot be appraised as "self-sustaining" by any accurate dollars-and-cents accounting, they may be fairly considered as vital to national welfare and development and productive of long-range pecuniary benefits.

Of over $1,000,000,000 allocated to non-Federal projects more than 75 percent is in the form of loans, repayable to the United States at 4 percent interest. The experience of the Public Works Administration has shown conclusively the lack on the part of most States and localities of any systematic fact-finding and planning for public works. Hence, much impetus was lost through the delay in preparing and submitting projects. Federal funds could not be granted on the basis of wholly inadequate plans and proposals. But even in view of these difficulties the direct and indirect employment, and the purchases of raw materials and proposals. But even in view of these difficulties the direct and indirect employment, and the purchases of raw materials and manufactured products for public works have constituted a real contribution toward the encouraging recovery that has taken place. In addition, the comprehensive experience gained in the administration of public works provides a reservoir of data and information which can be drawn upon to increase the effectiveness and efficiency of future public-works activities.

The downward spiral of unemployment in business and industry between 1929 and 1932 had reached alarming proportions. Functional weaknesses in the system of industrial employment, as well as general depression causes, contributed to the rapidly diminishing total of gainfully employed. While emergency relief and work relief on Federal projects were largely defensive in character, it was evident that offensive attacks against the depressed-employment problem were necessary in the form of specific corrective and rehabilitative processes. Again in this connection, Roosevelt stated in 1932 the principles and policies his administration would pursue to attain these objectives of industrial reconstruction.

tion would pursue to attain these objectives of industrial reconstruction.

San Francisco, September 23: "Private economic power is, to enlarge an old phrase, a public trust as well. This implication is, briefly, that the responsible heads of finance and industry, instead of acting each for himself, must work together to achieve the common end. They must, where necessary, sacrifice this or that private advantage, and in reciprocal self-denial must seek a general advantage. It is here that formal government—political government, if you choose—comes in."

Chicago, July 2: "So as to spread the points of all kinds as widely as possible, we must take definite steps to shorten the working day and the working week."

In other addresses in 1932 Roosevelt advocated the initiation of a program that would provide for minimum wages, maximum hours, and collective bargaining. Virtually every major promise of the N. R. A. was clearly enunciated during the campaign. Perhaps the chief criticism that can be made of the N. R. A. is that too much was attempted in a limited period of time. As a result, administrative confusion was bound to result. Mistakes naturally followed. But the good accomplished far outweighs the evil. The followed. But the good accomplished far outweighs the evil. The N. R. A. resulted in the reemployment of approximately 4,000,000 people. Child labor was abolished. Minimum wages and maximum hours are on the way to be established. Methods have at least been discovered whereby good business can successfully restrain the abuses and malpractices of unfair and unjust minorities. Many other similar constructive benefits could be merated.

Twenty months of intensive and comprehensive N. R. A. experience defines and clarifies the future course for refinements and improvements. Administrative procedures and regulations must be simplified. Many code provisions must have the necessary flexibility for individualistic treatment in administration. Additional protective features are required to safeguard against monopolistic tendencies. The relationship of the small business unit must be so adjusted that restrictions which might be necessary for large-scale endeavors will not impose handicaps on the small operator. However, even the small producer cannot be granted the freedom to keep his business going by penalizing those who work for him through long hours and at uneconomic wages. Neither can the inefficient marginal producer expect to have his business maintained through government paternalism. Thus, the future program of the N. R. A. must seek to correct existing inequities and to establish the fair treatment for all with maximum benefits for all.

all.

President Roosevelt, in a speech at Seattle in September of 1932, said, "I continue to advocate a tariff policy based in large part upon the simple principle of profitable exchange arrived at through negotiated tariffs with benefit to each nation." In other addresses the necessity for reciprocal and trade-bargaining arrangements was definitely stipulated. The President again made good his word to the American people and recommended to Congress the enactment of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act, which was approved June 12, 1934. Treaties with Belgium, Brazil, and Cuba have already been consummated, and extensive trade-treaty negotiations with a score of other nations are under way.

No summation of the first 2 years of the Roosevelt administration would be complete without mention of the indispensable work done by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. To date, $9,000,000,000 has been allocated by the R. F. C. Over one billion tration would be complete without mention of the indispensable work done by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. To date, $9,000,000,000 has been allocated by the R. F. C. Over one billion has been put into bank capital in almost 7,000 banks. More than $1,000,000,000 has been loaned to bank receivers for distribution to depositors in closed banks. More than $1,500,000,000 of R. F. C. money has been made available to farmers through the Farm Credit Administration. R. F. C. refinancing has prevented a complete collapse of the great railroad system of the Nation. The benefits in many other industrial fields have been far-reaching in their contribution to recovery. It is most encouraging to note that repayments to the R. F. C. have already exceeded $2,500,-000,000.

My limited time tonight does not receive.

My limited time tonight does not permit of a further-detailed analysis of promises and fulfillments. However, before passing from this may I quote from Roosevelt's speech of October 7, 1932, in Albany, in which he said:

"Whenever income in any great group of the population becomes so disproportionate as to dry up purchasing power within any one group, the balance of economic life is thrown out of order. It is a proper concern of the Government to use wise measures of regulation such as will bring this purchasing power back to normal. This emergency exists among the farmers in the Nation today, and I have not hesitated to say that the Government owes a duty with respect to the restoration of their purchasing power."

As a result of the President's agricultural program the farm As a result of the President's agricultural program the farm group in relation to income and purchasing power has been brought into a sounder and better-adjusted position with respect to the income and purchasing power of the business and industrial group. On the basis of prices received for what he sold and prices paid for what he bought, with the average from 1909 to 1914 as a pre-war average, the farmer in March 1933 was receiving in prices for what he sold about one-half as much as the prices he paid for what he bought. The prices the farmer received for what he sold in December 1934 showed an 83-percent increase over the prices he received for what he sold in March 1933. At the same time the prices he paid for what he bought increased only 26 percent. Thus the wide spread existing between prices received and prices paid is being effectively reduced. Furthermore, the total income for the farm group, excluding rental and benefit payments, has shown an increase of 32 percent between March 1933 and December 1934. The Farm Credit Administration, the organization of which was promised by the President in his July 2 speech in Chicago, has also brought great relief and benefits to the agricultural segment of the Nation.

A brief summary of other promises made by Roosevelt to the American people in 1932 shows that the administration's tariff- and reciprocal-trade agreement program was pledged in speeches made in Chicago, Seattle, Topeka, and Sioux City; that the social-security program recommended to this session of Congress was described in addresses made in Albany and Boston; the repeal of prohibition was made at Seagirt, N. J.; constructive publicutility regulation at Portland, Oreg.; railroad rehabilitation and transportation coordination at Salt Lake City; securities and stock-exchange regulation at Columbus, Ohio; and home-owner's mortgage relief at St. Louis.

This enumeration is indicative rather than comprehensive, for mortgage relief at St. Louis.

This enumeration is indicative rather than comprehensive, for the entire body of the underlying principles and philosophy of the new deal was defined and outlined in the category of 1932 promises to the American people. The significant fact is that with the ship of state at its half-way mark on the recovery voyage, a majority of these promises have already been translated into action. I cannot recall a comparable record in the first 2 years of any previous President.

With this necessarily brief review of the ship's log as a basis, and the omission of any detailed consideration of financial and credit rehabilitation through the Treasury Department, Federal Reserve System, and R. F. C., let us now turn briefly to a consideration of the next half of the 4-year journey.

credit rehabilitation through the Treasury Department, Federal Reserve System, and R. F. C., let us now turn briefly to a consideration of the next half of the 4-year journey.

While none of us wishes to countenance foolish optimism, a Pollyanna attitude, or any blanket agreement with everything that is being done, we must recognize the vital necessity of a constructive psychological approach to our present and future recovery problems. I am reminded in this connection of a doctor who, when asked by a patient who had a curable disease what the doctor thought of his case, answered: "I have seen patients not as ill as you die." You probably could not find a more flagrant psychological mistake on the part of a doctor. We all observe many similar instances as related to economic recovery. The defeatist attitude has repeated itself in precisely the same manner throughout history. Such defeatism today takes the form either of a failure to take the full facts into consideration or the willful misrepresentation of true conditions in all of their aspects for the purpose of obstruction or partisan advantages.

There are many who would have us believe that conditions today are as dire as they were represented to be in Harper's Weekly of October 10, 1857, in an analysis which said: "It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years has there been so much deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at the present time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow citizens are turned out against the approach of winter without employment and without the prospect of it." This analysis by one of the leading observers of 78 years ago paints a still more grave and gloomy picture. I find many similar commentaries on the depression of the seventies and the eightles of the last century. The panic of 1907 elicited the same doleful warnings. During the depression of the seventies and the eightles of the last century. The panic of 1907 elicited the existing problems.

There are concrete and fundamental concepts and principles which will serve to guide us today in our appraisal of the state of our Nation and what we can expect as to the future of the American people. I offer a few of these principles for your consideration:

people. I offer a few of these principles for your consideration:

First. To meet these conditions constructively, the extremes of radicalism on the one hand and the extremes of conservatism on the other must be avoided. Without an appreciation of this fundamental situation, people are easily made the prey of partisans and demagogues, who appeal to class dissension and hatred. Our people must be kept correctly informed as to what the real objectives are and concerning the methods necessary to attain these objectives. At best, the solutions offered under such conditions are, and of necessity must be, fragmentary and sometimes experimental, but they must not promise great advantages to one group at the unfair expense of other groups. Every citizen should examine loose promises in the light of the principles of Americanism as practiced by Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and the President you elected on November 6, 1932.

Second. Assess fairly and completely the balance sheet of your country's assets and liabilities. Study the real conditions and analyze recovery from the broad viewpoint of the problems involved and seek results and benefits for the common good rather than solely from the angle of your personal desires, experiences, and observations.

Third The linking of individual creative initiative under proper and observations.

Third. The linking of individual creative initiative under proper competition with constructive collective endeavor is the challenge and necessity of our times. If we are to be successful in the fullest realization of these social objectives, we must resist the inroads of the high salesmanship of group pressure, bloc action, and those factions which seek special and preferential advantages.

Fourth. Individual and cooperative action must be directed in economic, educational, and spiritual endeavors which will eliminate fears concerning our future. To this end schools, colleges, business organizations, patriotic clubs, rural and spiritual units must cooperate to provide those internal defenses which will protect and safeguard the sanctity and blessings of inheritances.

There is a certain amount of reform that each generation can obtain or effect with security for the future. To go beyond this in a given era is to endanger the very objectives and security sought. Therefore patience and deliberation in reaching results are vital to the defense of all concerned.

In our efforts at reform we must not go so far as to get into presents and security are the controlled radicalizer are are vital to the defense of all concerned.

In our efforts at reform we must not go so far as to get into uncontrolled radicalism, or in our efforts to control radicalism we must not go to the other extreme of destructive crystallized conservatism. What we wish to obtain in this generation is the amount of progress that informed people desire and will support. To proceed on any other basis at this time would be to endanger the advantages of the liberalism which we have already gained.

Liberalism seeks constantly to adjust to changing conditions and is thus able to offer a philosophy and a category of principles pertinent to existing circumstances. Liberalism per se never becomes crystallized but endeavors at all times to maintain a discipline of thought and action which prevents the extremes of radicalism on the one hand and the extremes of conservatism on the other.

the other.

the other.

We should stand, therefore, for that liberalism which is essential to maintain the esprit de corps of passengers on the ship of state at this time and not go so far in our efforts at impossible conservatism as to lose our opportunity of wise and successful guidance on the part of the pilot of the boat or so radical as to overlook the necessary discipline and, hence the necessary respect, for all segments of society.

In the light of this we should expect just what we are now having—fluctuations in progress. Even in a period of recovery we have in each 12 months the same seasonal variations and fluctuations that we have in any normal period, so we must expect in times like these that our recovery is not going to be uniform in any annual period.

any annual period.

any annual period.

The fundamental question is: Have we the breadth of vision, the experience, the patience, the knowledge, and cooperative spirit to demonstrate under the conditions through which we are now passing that the people are capable of ruling themselves; that is, of comprehending the interrelationship and interdependence of the various segments of society and of so coordinating those who believe in our form of government as to make themselves impregnable against the assaults of those who would destroy us. To this end we need leadership, nationally and locally, that is in sympathy with such a program, sincere and genuine in its intentions, and also so conditioned as to receive and utilize correct information with regard to conditions as developed from time to time among our people. time among our people.

information with regard to conditions as developed from time to time among our people.

President Roosevelt, speaking at William and Mary College in October 1934, said: "The pioneer does not call his life a failure if he comes to the end of one path. He knows that there are others, and with a sense of direction and a will to persevere, his life can go on with confidence into the uncertainty of the future." My friends, we are pioneers today in a new social order. Our great responsibility is to retain those institutions founded by our fathers which have stood the test of economic storms and vicissitudes. Those which have grown ineffective with the rapid changes of the past 15 years must be replaced with new mechanisms which will meet the demands of new complexities and exigencies of a more intricate and complex civilization. The half-way mark of the voyage of the Ship of State presents a log of tangible and heartening accomplishments registered during the most troublesome and exacting peace-time period in our history. Even though much has been accomplished, there are still great tasks before us. They can and will be surmounted if we enlist our patience, cooperation, and decisive action in the last half of our 4-year recovery voyage. In this way only can we reach the ports of destination which assure a perpetuation of great heritage that the struggles and victories of American history have given us today and now rest in our keeping for tomorrow. Are we equal to the test? I believe that we are and that we will prove true to that trust. that trust.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I thought I had the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; the Senator is mistaken. The Chair recognized the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. COPELAND. Then, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. COPELAND. It is more or less ancient history, but the fact is that I am chairman of the subcommittee on appropriations having in charge the War Department appropriation bill, which 3 days ago we started to have considered by the Senate. I appeal to Senators to let consideration of the bill go forward. It is necessary that other matters of legislative concern be brought before the Senate. I hope there may be an opportunity within a few minutes to proceed with the bill. I cannot take the Senator from Tennessee off the floor, and have no desire to do so even if I could, but I do ask that, so far as possible, speeches be limited in order that we may proceed with this important appropriation bill

Mr. McKELLAR. I quite agree with the Senator from New York and promise him that what I have to say will be very brief. I sympathize with the Senator in his efforts to have the military appropriation bill passed, and shall be glad to help in every way possible, because I am entirely in favor of the bill. I think, however, it is important that some reply to the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] should be made.

Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Delaware that we have not forgotten the condition of the country 2 years ago when his pilot, Mr. Hoover, gave up his direction of national affairs. The banks of the country were closed or closing. Business houses had failed and were failing in tremendous number all over the country. Business itself was practically at a standstill. Agricultural products were bringing not even the cost of production. The economic situation was not only involved in every way, but we were virtually looking disaster and ruin in the face when Mr. Roosevelt came into power 2 years ago.

If the Senator from Delaware had just read what Secretary Roper said about what has been done since that time, he would not, in my judgment, have made the speech he did make. I am going to read an excerpt, a very short one, from Mr. Roper's speech which contradicts everything the Senator from Delaware said on the subject. Said Mr. Roper:

We cannot properly depend for our conclusions and appraisals we cannot properly depend for our conclusions and appraisals about recovery results solely upon the limited basis of individual experience and individual observation. We must seek to visualize the entire Nation-wide scope of recovery purposes, methods, and results. A program for recovery which none would criticize, a program perfect in conception and application and productive of maximum possible results, would be divine in origin and in execution.

Here is what has been done by the present administration, by the pilot, President Roosevelt, if you please. All honor and respect to him for having gotten us out as well as he has of one of the worst difficulties in which this country was ever involved.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. McKELLAR. I decline to yield. We were in a condition of despair, distress, and ruin.

I read:

"A little philosophy", said Lord Bacon, "inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion." In a similar way a little information may incline a man's mind to skepticism, while a breadth of information leads the mind to conviction. I invite you to examine with me briefly this evening the general record of experiences and results, what has been accomplished, and what still remains under the program

And here the Secretary gives the accomplishments, which evidently the Senator from Delaware did not read:

Statistically, I find 30 major economic indexes, which, on the basis of the percentage of gain and betterment, recorded between March 1933 and December 1934, support factually my statement that no period of recovery in our country's history has shown the degree of improvement comparable to that since March 1933. I wish to cite a few of the improvements recorded and salutary gains registered between March 1933 and December 1934. They are as follows:

Industrial production-

No State in the Union, perhaps, according to its population, industrially produces more than the Senator's own State of Delaware; and what has been the improvement there and throughout the country?

Industrial production, 45 percent; manufacturing production-

And there, again, the Senator's State is involved-manufacturing production, 51 percent; electric power production, 20 percent; retail sales in department stores, 33 percent; variety stores, 18 percent; rural general stores, 98 percent; sale of new passenger automobiles, 57 percent; freight-car loadings, 28 percent; factory employment, 34 percent; factory pay rolls—

And probably there is no State in the Union which is more affected by factory pay rolls than the State of Delaware, which the Senator in part represents in this body-factory pay rolls, 70 percent; life-insurance sales, 30 percent; stock prices, based on 421 issues, 60 percent; bond prices, based on 60 leading issues, 30 percent.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McKELLAR. In just a moment.

Mr. President, these figures are not taken from newspaper or magazine stories. They are taken from the official documents. A survey has been made by the Department of Commerce, and the head of the Department has given these facts as the result. What is that result? Enormous increases in every line of business except agriculture; and everybody knows that the condition of agriculture has improved tremendously during the past 2 years.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. Does the Senator think the increase in the public debt from $16,000,000,000 to $34,000,000,000 in the meantime has had any influence on the record he has just read?

Mr. McKELLAR. Perhaps so; I think, unquestionably, our borrowings and expenditures have an effect, and I think a good effect. The debt would not have been increased if it had not been thought that the increase would have a beneficial effect upon the conditions prevailing in the country. The Senator, of course, knows that to be so. The Senator read just a few sentences from the speech of Secretary Roper, and he left out all of that which contradicts every word the Senator had to say. Does the Senator mean to say that business conditions in this country have not improved during the past 2 years?

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator to answer the question.

Mr. HASTINGS. My only complaint was that Secretary Roper told only part of the truth. I did not accuse him of saying anything that was not true.

Mr. McKELLAR. This is the first time I have heard any reference to its being part of the truth. Quite the contrary is the case.

Mr. HASTINGS. He did not tell the whole truth, to which the public is entitled. If the Senator will now go on and tell the whole truth, and make it part of the RECORD, it will be helpful.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Delaware put only part of Secretary Roper's address in the RECORD. If he had put all the address in the RECORD he would have found that all the truth, so far as it can come from the records of the Department of Commerce, was incorporated in it; but even if the Secretary had put the Ten Commandments in his address, they would not have pleased the Senator from Delaware

Mr. HASTINGS. The point I made-perhaps I did not make myself clear to the Senator from Tennessee-was that Secretary Roper was undertaking to show that the pilot of this great ship had created for himself a blueprint and had followed it. I merely pointed out that the Secretary overlooked the fact that we are about $18,000,000,000 more in debt than we were a little while ago. That is a matter which it seems to me is of some importance. It may not be of importance to the Senator from Tennessee: but going into debt at the rate of five or six billion dollars a year, unless we are going at some time to repudiate the debt, it seems to me is of some importance and is a matter to which the country ought to give weight.

Mr. McKELLAR. All of this, however, seems not to be of sufficient importance to induce the Senator from Delaware to answer my question. My question is a perfectly simple one. Are not business conditions, are not economic conditions, infinitely better today than they were 2 years ago? I yield to the Senator again to answer my question. Does the Senator deny that business and economic conditions are better? I yield again to my distinguished friend from Delaware to answer my question. He sits silent.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, if sixteen or eighteen billion dollars of the Government's money is spent among the industries of the country, it is perfectly silly to say that somebody is not going to get some benefit from it. That is my answer to the Senator's question. If that money had not been borrowed, if we had gone along in a normal way, God knows where we would have been. I do not know anything about it.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator means if we had gone along under Mr. Hoover for 4 more years there is no telling where we would have been. That is what the Senator means. [Laughter and manifestations of applause in the galleries.]

Mr. HASTINGS. No; I heard the Senator from Tennessee talk about Mr. Hoover until I got sick and tired of it. I know that we have changed captains of the ship, and I can understand how the Senator from Tennessee will object to anybody pointing out any of the infirmities of the present captain of the ship; but so long as I am here I propose to keep on doing so.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Delaware may do that, but I am unwilling to prognosticate a little for the future. I wonder if the Senator from Delaware is going to favor putting up Mr. Hoover again, so that other Senators on this side may discuss his former management of the country's affairs. I do not believe so.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall be through in just a moment, if the Senator will indulge me.

Mr. LONG. I wanted to ask a question.

Mr. McKELLAR. I know what the Senator wants.

Mr. LONG. I wanted to ask what is the difference between them? [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator from Louisiana has so little sense, if he has so little knowledge of public affairs, as to think there is no difference between Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt, then I cannot give him the information, and I do not believe anybody who lives can give him information.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to say that Roosevelt has only a few million more unemployed and $9,000,000,000 more debt than Hoover. The condition is about the same.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is in line with what the Senator from Louisiana says, but, of course, it is not the fact. It is not the truth. The Senator, however, does not care anything about the facts. As we all know, he merely makes assertions. He has made assertions here for a long, long time about the present President of the United States, and about anybody else to whom he takes a dislike; so I am not concerned with the mere assertions of the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. The Senator and I are not in disagreement. Mr. McKellar. Oh, no; I know the Senator and I are not in disagreement, except as far apart as the poles! I do not believe in the Senator's philosophy. I do not believe in his constant nagging of his brother Senators. I do not believe in his constant nagging of probably the best President this country has ever had. I do not believe in the wild theories and vagaries that constantly float through the Senator's mind, and are constantly given to the Senate and the country on the floor of the Senate.

I desire to say that the Senator and I do disagree. If I thought my views of public policy were like those of the Senator from Louisiana, I would resign my seat and go back to Tennessee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I am talking about facts instead of views.
Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator does not know a fact when he sees it in the middle of the road. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. The fact I am trying to state comes from the President of the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; it does not. The Senator from Louisiana does not have anything to do with the President of the United States. He does not know any facts concerning the President of the United States. I have served here with the Senator for the past 2 years, and so far as I can recall he has never uttered a fact about the President of the United States.

Mr. LONG. Now, will the Senator permit me to tell him what that fact is—that the public debt under Hoover was $19,000,000,000, and under Roosevelt it is $30,000,000,000—$11,000,000,000 more.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is not a fact coming from President Roosevelt. It has nothing to do with this discussion. We borrowed money under the present administration, and what have we done? We have not put our country in a worse condition, as suggested by the Senator from Delaware, and as believed by the Senator from Louisiana. They seem to be together on this matter of abusing the Democratic administration. The fact is, as everybody knows, that there has been a wonderful improvement in all kinds of business, in banking, in commerce, in trade, in agriculture; and our country is getting out of the depression. The only trouble with the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from Louisiana is that they seem greatly to regret that improvement, and to desire to charge those who are bringing the country out of the depression with all kinds of crimes and misdemeanors.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I will not interrupt the Senator any more if he will let me make just one remark. I note that the Senator from Tennessee accuses me of political kinship with the Senator from Delaware, and the Senator from Delaware intimates the same thing. I want to take this public position: I deny any political kinship with either one of them. [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. I think both will probably make the same denial, so there we are. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I have said more than I should have said. I think the argument of the Senator from Delaware was entirely unfounded. I think by his silence a while ago, and by his failure to answer the question as to whether or not conditions in the country had actually improved in the past 2 years, he has shown that he himself did not believe what he was saying.

The Senator from Delaware made a statement about another matter to which I desire very briefly to reply. He read an article to the effect that the tenant farmers of the South were in a worse condition than ever before under the present administration.

From personal knowledge, I desire as emphatically as I know how to say that there is not any truth in that statement. I know from my personal knowledge of the tenant farmers in my State and the adjoining States of Arkansas and Mississippi, especially, which States I have personally visited within the past year and 2 years, that the statement read by the Senator from Delaware is wholly without foundation. I say wholly without foundation; I do not mean that there may not be individual cases of suffering down there, such as those depicted by the Senator, but when he talks about that being representative of conditions in that section of the country, it is just not true, and I say that from personal knowledge. I know it is not true. I know that the tenant farmers in the South, on the contrary, although their condition may not be as good as it ought to be-and I want to continue to help to improve it—is infinitely better than it was 2 years ago.

If it had been 2 years ago when the investigation referred to was made, the Senator might have accurately stated that the illustrations he gave described the general condition at that time, under Mr. Hoover, but under the leadership of this pilot, President Roosevelt, whom the Senator seems to

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President-

Mr. McKELLAR. Under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and under the laws enacted under his leadership, the position of the tenant farmer in the South is infinitely better than it was 2 years ago.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I wish the Senator would not make that remark.

Mr. McKELLAR. What remark? Mr. HASTINGS. I have never said in the Senate or in any other place anything that would lead anybody to believe that I despised the President of the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am very happy that the Senator makes that statement. My only reason for saying what I did was the very vicious remarks in which the Senator indulged this morning. If I misunderstood them, I am happy to be corrected, and I am happy the Senator has called my attention to it; but I got the impression that the Senator was vigorously assailing the pilot of our present administration.

Mr. HASTINGS. I did not say anything vicious about anybody.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator feels that way, I take his word for it.

Mr. HASTINGS. Feels that way? There is nothing that would justify the remark of the Senator that I felt vicious about anybody.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to hear that the Senator is now in a better humor, anyway.

Mr. HASTINGS. I never was in a bad humor about it at all.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought it was one of the most vicious attacks-with the exception of those of the Senator from Louisiana; of course I always except him in such matters [laughter]—I thought it was one of the most vicious attacks I ever heard against Roosevelt since I have been on the floor, and I have been here nearly all the time.

Mr. HASTINGS. I will say to my dear friend the Senator from Tennessee that he never heard me say a word that was vicious about the President, not a single word.

Mr. McKELLAR. About his administration.

Mr. HASTINGS. Nor about his administration.

Mr. McKELLAR. I should not want to be President and have the Senator say about me what he said about Roosevelt. That is all I can say.

Mr. HASTINGS. The Senator had better read the REC-He evidently did not hear my remarks.

Mr. McKELLAR. I should not want to have the Senator "turn loose" on me, as the Senator from Oklahoma suggests to me aside. However, of course, I accept the Senator's correction.

Mr. President, having made this statement, I desire to yield the floor to my friend, the Senator from New York, and to thank him and to apologize to him for having taken this much time. But after the speech of the Senator from Delaware attacking the present administration and the section of the country from which I come, I could not remain silent under such an attack.

ALLOCATION OF FUNDS UNDER N. I. R. A.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Resolution 91, which calls upon the Secretary of the Treasury for certain information with respect to the expenditure from the appropriation of $3,200,000,000 that was authorized on June 16, 1933. Such information will be very valuable in the consideration of the public-works joint resolution which will come before the Senate tomorrow, I understand. Therefore, I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I suggest that the resolution be read before consent is given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 91) submitted by Mr. Byrn on the 4th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States is requested to furnish immediately to the Senate an itemized statement of allocations made for projects out of the appropriation of $3,300,000,000 authorized by an act entitled "An act to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes", and approved June 18, 1933; and shall furnish to the Senate the following information, to wit: First. Total cash disbursed to March 1, 1935.

Second. Balance unexpended out of the amount appropriated. Third. A list of projects, both Federal and non-Federal, and their locations on which disbursements have been made, the amount of such disbursements, and an estimate of the cost of completing each project.

Fourth. A list of future allocations authorized, both Federal and non-Federal, which the Government of the United States is obligated to make and on which no expenditures have as yet been made.

Fifth. A list of projects to which allocations of money were made and the money subsequently impounded, and why impounded.

Sixth. A list of allocations of money for public works that have been diverted to pay ordinary or other expenses of the Government.

Seventh. Copies of memoranda or agreements committing the United States Government to the building of public works upon which no expenditures have as yet been made.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, is the Senator asking for consideration of the resolution at this time?

Mr. BYRD. I am asking for present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not see any objection to the resolution. It calls for information which may take some days to prepare.

Mr. BYRD. For that reason I am asking for the consideration of the resolution today, so that the information may be available as quickly as possible.

Mr. ROBINSON. My attention has just been called to line 3, calling for an itemized statement of allocations made for projects out of the appropriation. Does the Senator feel that that provision is necessary in order to have supplied the information which he wishes?

Mr. BYRD. It provides for a list of the allocations: an itemized statement of the allocations, not of expenditures.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not desire to make objection to the resolution. I had indicated previously to the Senator from Virginia that I would not object to it.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I desire to modify the reso-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia desires to modify the resolution, and the clerk will read the proposed modification.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to modify the resolution by adding a new section, as follows:

Eighth. If allocations of money have been made to other departments of the Government, state unexpended balances of such allocations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution, as modified.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the pending resolution, which I think its author will accept. The amendment is intended to elicit information which I believe will be of service with relation to the workrelief bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the proposed amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of paragraph 3, substitute a comma for the period after the word "project" and add the following:

Including the following data: in cases where an estimate at to Including the Iollowing data: in cases where an estimate at to total labor costs in connection with the project was made in advance and was in excess of $1,000,000, a statement showing the total expenditure for the item of labor when the project was completed; and in respect to projects not yet completed, a statement showing the proportion of the disbursements already made in pursuance of such estimates and the proportion of the work already accomplished on such project as compared with the project as a whole.

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, Mr. President, that amendment very greatly broadens the resolution. I shall have to ask that the resolution go over for the present.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, if that is the position of the Senator from Arkansas, I hope the Senator from Oklahoma will withdraw his amendment.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Senator from Arkansas, I withdraw the amendment which I offered. I do not desire to defeat or delay the adoption of the resolution. The amendment which I offered, however, I think would bring forth information the Senator from Arkansas and other Senators would like to have, because I think it would shed light upon the amendment pending to the work-relief bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I suggest that the resolution go over for the present; and sometime this afternoon the Senator from Virginia may call it up again, after an opportunity has been afforded Senators to take note of it. Of course, the resolution is not in order.

Mr. BYRD and Mr. LONG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Has the Senator from Arkansas concluded? If not, does he yield; and if so, to whom? Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have concluded.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I withdraw my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma withdraws his amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator from Oklahoma has withdrawn his amendment. I was going to suggest that the Senate adopt the resolution of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrn], and if the Senator from Oklahoma later wishes to offer his amendment, we can take it up.

Mr. GORE. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, if the Senator wishes to have his resolution considered, I think it would be well to incorporate them in one; but no one has had an opportunity to see the amendment, and it broadens the resolution very

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator from Oklahoma has withdrawn his amendment. Unfortunately, I am obliged to leave the city now and shall not be back before tomorrow. I should like to have the resolution considered today, because the information requested will be of importance when the public-works joint resolution is considered by the Senate

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well; I will not object to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] as modified.

The resolution, as modified, was agreed to.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope we may now proceed with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the pending amendment.

The amendment pending was, under the subhead "Expenses of courts martial", on page 16, line 24, after the words "the same", to strike out "$35,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$50,000."

Mr. McNARY and Mr. LONG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield first to the Senator from Oregon. Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Schall] wishes to be recognized for a moment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, can I not influence the Senator from Minnesota to yield to me for a moment, so that I may submit a document to be read to the Senate which I propose thereafter to submit to the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, which is meeting at 2 o'clock. Will not the Senator from Minnesota permit me to send this document to the desk to be read, so that it may be sent to the committee immediately?

APPOINTMENTS OF POSTMASTERS IN MINNESOTA

Mr. SCHALL. I will be very brief. Mr. President, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the proceedings of yesterday my attention has been called to the statement made by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], the Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, in which he reiterates that notice had been sent to the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead] and myself as to appointments of postmasters in Minnesota. I desire to say that I have had no such notice. The Senator from Tennessee says that two letters were sent to me. Perhaps Mr. Farley is not through looking them over; at any rate, I have not received them as yet.

IN RE JAMES A. FARLEY AND OTHER MATTERS

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I should like the privilege of sending to the desk and having read a letter which is not very long. It is addressed to the Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and is in response to a letter from him. I ask that it be read. I suppose it will take about 5 or 6 minutes. It is not too long. I ask the Senator from New York to yield to me for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana for the purpose of having his letter read at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

MARCH 6, 1935.

COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS,

Washington, D. C.
Gentlemen: In response to the letter received from your chair-Gentlemen: In response to the letter received from your chairman, Senator McKellar, asking for information as to names of witnesses and what they would testify relative to James A. Farley and his connections and transactions handled under and with his authority, I beg leave to submit the following:

Your committee, I am sure, on reflection will not come to the conclusion that I should expose all witnesses and persons who are prepared to give testimony with regard to Mr. Farley, but who must of necessity be protected if there is to be an investigation.

Further, some of these witnesses have asked that they be called and placed under oath before their names are in any manner disclosed.

Gisclosed.

Further, surely your committee will understand that to a large extent the verification of the charges which I make, and others which could be made, would be shown from public and private records, the production and examination of which would be asked in ordinary course.

However, in order that this committee may know that to some extent I can offer to be specific, I stated the following which I expect to produce and prove:

1. Witnesses: Officers of the concerns listed on the building directory at 205 East Forty-second Street, as occupying office no. 1701 (being the private headquarters of James A. Farley), to show that more than twenty-odd concerns there operating, including six holding companies, have been organized, combined, and affiliated for practically the sole purpose of transacting and dealing in matters with which the United States Government is identified for the purpose of making private profit, a large part of which inures to James A. Farley, in violation of four criminal statutes of the United States insofar as concerns said Farley; said witnesses to prove the said purpose of concerns affiliated with said Farley and occupying said purpose of concerns affiliated with said Farley and occupying space in his office by reason of the same, and that they were in position of financial bankruptcy prior to Farley's ascendency and since that time have become financially affluent; to prove that Farley interposed his brother-in-law as a poor simulation as the head of concerns, and that any pretense to show the disposition of his interests is a further simulation; to prove that through the various concerns there enumerated as affiliated with James A. Farley, contracts for materials have been listed in advance of the awarding of contracts by the United States Government, and that contracts to low bidders have been refused until the bids could be awarded to firms buying materials from the concerns of the said James A. Farley. In this connection the officers and records of Stewart & Co., of Driscoll & Co., and of Severn & Co. will be produced. The testimony of Commissioner Robert Moses of New York, and the data which he has assembled will be called for the purpose of proving such sales have been made by firms with which Farley is identified, of the appropriation of funds on the jobs where Farley's firms were furnishers of materials, for the expansion of Farley's firms were furnishers of materials, for the expansion of subdivisions under the guise of being projects for slum removal; for the paying of excessive prices for property and retaining its frontage so its enhanced value may be enjoyed by interests with which Farley is affiliated, even after the work has been done and the development made. Numerous witnesses I do not here mention will be produced to show, along with public records, that each and every appointment, directly or indirectly had the approval of Farley if the same were connected with the building projects above mentioned.

We further expect to show from said witnesses and the production of their records, papers, and accounts, that these concerns and persons have manipulated manifold market transactions, reaping large profits, by taking advantage of information which could only be had by one close to the authority of Government and which would have made them aware of sudden falls and rises on exchanges.

would have made them aware of studies lais and lises of exchanges.

2. Witness A, and if necessary Witness B, whom we expect to testify that an important official of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad previously with no connection with James A. Farley, received a telephone call from the said Farley, informing him that he desired him to support one Clem Shaver for the United States Senate from West Virginia. The records of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will show that about the time there had been pending, and for causes otherwise unexplained, there had been held up a decision relative to a loan to be made to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for approximately $50,000,000. Witness A, and if necessary Witness B, to further testify that party called by said Farley hesitated, hoping the loan would come through, but finally disclosed that action on the same was held in abeyance and that he had no way to dodge the responsibility, but would have to declare for Shaver in accordance with Farley's instructions, and immediately upon so doing, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan of $52,000,000 was announced. announced.

announced.

3. While the report of the Seoretary of Interior states they have no records showing contractors and subcontractors in matters wherein the P. W. A. is participating, none the less the "Manual for Engineer Inspectors, Inspection Division, P. W. A., July 3, 1934", on pages 25 and 26, requires the pay rolls, unpaid bills, invoices, youthers, etc., for both materials furnished and persons hired, vouchers, etc., for both materials furnished and persons hired, from contractors, subcontractors, on plant equipment, rental and maintenance, bond and insurance premiums, and requiring the same to be neatly arranged and forwarded to the Director of the Inspection Division at Washington for final audit. By reason of the neglect of the Secretary of the Interior to locate such source wherefrom information might be had, we expect to call for production of such papers and their examination.

It is commented on in said Manual for Products of the Secretary of the Interior Technology.

It is commented on in said Manual for Engineer Inspectors that a break-down report is required whereby everything is segregated to the smallest item and units, and if it is too difficult for same to be examined by the Secretary of the Interior, and he is not so fully aware of the exact concerns and firms with which James A. Farley is identified, as to recognize the connection with firms and items found on said rolls, we propose to examine the same and orderly and regularly ascertain information that may be disclosed on such matters as are not forwarded by Mr. Ickes, and as to which witnesses, whom we will not mention, have given us to understand do exist.

That nearly all engineers of influence in charge of and supervising public works, or in which the United States Government is in ing public works, or in which the United States Government is in any manner concerned, is engineered through a combination which the said Farley has effected through the firm of Stone & Webster, who are operating the various Farley firms above named and mentioned, have formed a network of supervision of projects to inure to the advantage and control of said Farley, extending even to the N. R. A. and its functions. Examination of the records of said concerns will bear out said facts. Witnesses whose names cannot be given will be offered for said purpose.

be given will be offered for said purpose.

4. Letters, checks, vouchers, and witnesses, including Mr. Edwin P. Knotts and others, to show that Clyde O. Eastus, now United States attorney in Texas, while in Washington, D. C., in the month of April 1933, arranged for his appointment as said United States attorney in consultation with Mr. Farley, wired Edwin P. Knotts and otherwise gave to understand that the said Edwin P. Knotts' case was being arranged through Mr. Farley, provided said Edwin P. Knotts wired immediately $1,000 to go to Mr. Farley for politics; that in connection with the said matter a telegram was sent by said Eastus saving:

said Eastus, saying:

"Everything looks good."
And at another time the said Eastus wired, saying:
"Case continued. Must have $1,000 I wired you about Saturay. Wire now, and I don't mean maybe."

day. Wire now, and I don't mean mayne."

And when the said Knotts sent the money requested the same was acknowledged in writing by the said James A. Farley. Later the said Eastus was made United States attorney and assured the said Knotts that matters were going all right, even suggesting that he enter a plea of guilty, which he assured the said Knotts would be a mere formality; but upon securing the said plea, having already turned the money over to Farley, the said Knotts was left to the mercies and sent to jail. The witnesses to swear to these matters came to Washington and interviewed me, and while I did not announce their names, but gave certain facts shout it these matters came to Washington and interviewed me, and while I did not announce their names, but gave certain facts about it on the floor of the Senate, when they had returned to their homes they were immediately set upon by post-office inspectors sent there through the efforts of James A. Farley, giving them a scare, their records and papers were called for, and all such manner of things done as to prevent the disclosure of the facts and to put said Farley in position to suppress development of the truth. These witnesses inform me they are standing firm, regardless of such efforts, but this should be a fair reason why this committee should not require too many disclosures before investigation starts.

5. Witnesses: Richard M. Atkinson, former Attorney General in the State of Tennessee; Wayne Williams, former United States attorney in the State of Tennessee, and A. V. McLane and many others, including four former members of a United States grand jury in the State of Tennessee, who will testify that in the affairs of the American National Bank in Nashville, Tenn., one Paul N. Davis and his brother, Norman Davis, organized many groups for floating and financing matters and concerns, including one called the American National Co.; that through multifarious violations of the law, stockholders of the bank were caused to lose large sums of money; that the said multifarious concerns organized and floated through the said banks blew up in smoke with a terlarge sums of money; that the said multifarious concerns organized and floated through the said banks blew up in smoke with a terrible loss to everybody except the Davis brothers and their inside associates; that hundreds of forgeries, erasures, false statements, publications, and representations were made by the said Davises and their associates; some of the same were published and some were sent to Government agencies, and that as a result thereof, prosecutions were being instituted; that the Government started on the prosecutions and the Department of Justice in Washington and the United States Attorney in Nashville declared that indictments must be had immediately; that there suddenly stepped into the picture James A. Farley, who immediately began to maneuver the personnel and conduct of the personnel of those connected with the Department of Justice having the matter in hand, both in person and through agents whom he selected, and as a result thereof on the eve of the matter being presented to the United States grand jury in Nashville, the United States Atas a result thereof on the eve of the matter being presented to the United States grand jury in Nashville, the United States Attorney was removed and a special man sent at Farley's instance from Washington, D. C., who went before the United States grand jury and made a long and vigorous speech as to the harm that it would do to have the individuals guilty of violating the law indicted; that said agent after making said address to the grand jury for more than 1 hour, called several witnesses to be heard, interfered with their testimony and threw the matter out within a day's time. That the said witnesses have in their possession and have exhibited to me, Huey P. Long, photostats and innumerable documents and records and point to the source where others may be had, showing the admitted state of affairs, showing numerable documents and records and point to the source where others may be had, showing the admitted state of affairs, showing rampant violations of the law, protected in the manner aforesaid.

6. That further to prove the extent of the said Farley's control of the Department of Justice and the purposes to which it is manipulated, that when a gangster was about to be indicted in Kansas City by the United States grand jury, appeal was made to Farley to prevent the same, and Farley took the same in hand, upturned the course of justice, caused agents to be sent to Kansas City, so much so that the grand jury was informed that it could not indict the party, whereupon grand jurors went into open court and informed the court of said interference, whereupon the court instructed the jury it could return the indictment, which was done, and conviction resulted. That T. J. Pendergast and James A. Farley will be called to substantiate statements heretofore made, admit the foregoing to be true, and further that records of the Department of Justice will be searched, proving said state of affairs.

7. That witnesses have been hounded, telephones have been tapped, every device and scare cloud used to browbeat and intimidate witnesses against the production of such facts as are above disclosed, and it should not be the purpose of the committee to now require same. If investigation is ordered, proof will follow in rapid consequence.

Respectfully submitted to you in my humble and official capacity, and for the cause of public good in this country.

Sincerely,

HUEY P. LONG. United States Senator.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, let me enquire if he desires the document just read to go before the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads?

A meeting of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, considering the Long charges against Mr. Farley has been called for 2 o'clock p. m. It is now past that hour and members of the committee are waiting. I am obliged to go to that meeting. I merely want it understood why I shall be absent from the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield further to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana. Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I also send to the desk two telegrams which I have received this morning, substantiating in part what has just been read, and I ask that they may be read by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 6, 1935.

Hon. Hury P. Long,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

One postal inspector from Fort Worth, where district attorney spread out thousand dollars on table, paying Farley. Inspector said had received complaint against me because had attacked Federal court, and I told him had right to print truth and fight. Will go ahead regardless of intimidation.

HOWARD A. TUCKER.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 5, 1935.

Hon. HUEY LONG, United States Senate:

Two post-office inspectors spent hour interviewing myself and F. B. Imboden at my office, asked to see letters and photostats. We placed all cards face upward; they left apparently satisfied. Refused to pass on mailability of charges; we expect to flood Texas with data. Please keep good work going.

OKLAHOMA CITY OIL JOURNAL.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I send to the desk two articles for the RECORD, and ask that the Secretary read only the headlines as marked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana asks unanimous consent that the Secretary read the headlines of two articles which he asks unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Chief Clerk read the headlines as follows:

Only Arkansas loses relief-Hopkins irate over Davey charge of waste in Ohio.

"Hungry mobs face Arkansas," says Governor—ato vote emergency aid—United States cancels relief. asks legislature

(For the articles ordered to be printed in the RECORD on request of Mr. Long see exhibit A.)

Mr. LONG. Contrary to the advice which was given or rather the statement which was made about my return to Louisiana, I want to advise my friend from Arkansas that I will make no criticism under these circumstances if he will deny us his masterful presence and go back to Arkansas to help there.

Now, Mr. President, I want to send another document to the desk and ask the clerk to read. Then I will be through with documents, and I will conclude in a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read the document presented by the Senator from Louisiana.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

[Extract from Martindale's Directory, 1930]

Robinson, House & Moses: J. T. R., '72 '94 a v l g U. S. Sen.; J. W. H., Jr., '86 '11 a v l g; C. H. M., '87, '10 a v l g. Associates: Harry E. Meek; W. H. Holmes; J. F. McClerkin; Raymond Roddy; Frank Bird.

mond Roddy; Frank Bird.

Attorneys for: Arkansas Power & Light Co.; Louisiana Power & Light Co.; Mississippi Power & Light Co.; Southern Power & Light Co.; Southern Ice & Utilities Co.; Little Rock Gas & Fuel Co.; Southwest Dairies Products Co.; Southwest Ice & Cold Storage Co.; Southwest Joint Stock Land Bank; Pioneer Reserve Life Insurance Co.; Southwest Telephone; Graysonia, Nashville & Ashdown Railway; Louisiana & Arkansas Railway Co.; Hollenberg Music Co.; Arkansas Portland Cement Co.; Terminal Warehouse Co.; The Texas Co.; Twin City Bank; Guaranty Savings & Loan Co.; the Gus Blass Co.; Kempner Realty Co.; American Building & Loan Association; Boyle-Farrell Land Co.; Cox Cash Stores Co.; Equitable Surety Co.; Associated Employers Liability Co.; Columbian Mutual Life; Southern Surety Co.; Marion Hotel; Lafayette Hotel; Capital Hotel; Merchants Transfer & Storage Co.; Arkansas Transfer Co.; Union Bond & Mortgage Co.; Southern Securities Co.; Southern Mutual Savings Co.; Southern Investors, Inc.; Smith Arkansas Traveller Co.; City Delivery Co.; H. L. Doherty & Co.; Charles E. Gibson & Sons, Inc.; American Surety Co.; Ocean Insurance Co.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to make this observation: These companies operate in Arkansas and some of them in Louisiana. I have presented the plight of Arkansas today. I want to defend the attacks made against Louisiana's policy.

I find the H. L. Doherty Co. on this list. In Louisiana the H. L. Doherty Co. has to pay for refining oil. It does not have to pay for refining oil in Arkansas. It has to pay a kind of income tax in Louisiana that it does not have to pay in

We find the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. That company in Louisiana is the same thing as it is in Arkansas, except, I believe, it is the Southern Bell in Louisiana and the Southwestern Bell in Arkansas. In Louisiana that concern has to pay 2 percent gross on its business and 4 percent on its net income. Last week, on one of the trips which I took to Louisiana, I acted as the attorney for the people and the commission of that State, and notwithstanding that the rates in Louisiana were usually lower than they were in Arkansas, notwithstanding the fact that we voted a 2-percent tax on the gross income and 4 percent on the net, our commission further reduced Louisiana rates by $650,000 per year. That was the cause of one of my trips to Louisiana that was mentioned in the Senate.

Mr. President, I come now to the Louisiana Power Co., which I find on this list. That concern is operated by a friend of mine. He operates in Louisiana and he operates in Arkansas. In Louisiana that concern has to pay a 4-percent net income tax and 2-percent tax on gross, and even beyond that we are now proceeding to have made a material reduction in many of the power rates and are preparing to make up a reduction in the power rates. That has been a part of the necessity for my having journeyed backward and forward between Washington and Louisiana in the accomplishment of that effort.

The point I wish to make is this. I recommend Louisiana's policy to her sister State of Arkansas. I recommend to the States from whom we are receiving these messages that their State governments are bankrupt and that their schools must have from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 to keep open. I recommend that they adopt the Louisiana policy.

I do not have to go any further than the concerns I have already read here and say to those States, "If you will proceed to lower your costs among your people as Louisiana has done, if you will proceed to tax these big interests as Louisiana has done, if you will thereafter take the taxes you have levied on the big people off of the backs of the little people as much as you can, then you can operate your schools 9 months in every year, then you can give your children free school books, then you can take care of the insane with a reduced cost and an efficient administration, then you can take care of the helpless in your charity hospitals, then you can provide for a solvent and sound State government, then you can compare yourself to the beneficent benefits that Louisiana has, because you have the identical concerns and the identical industries, and you can cure much trouble all simply by following the Louisiana policy."

I wish to say to my colleagues, to those of them who have been misled by propaganda, that I hope they will look up Louisiana's system and profit thereby. If I could volunteer my services even by going to another State to assist someone who might ask me to accompany him there, I might even take the chance of losing the associations I enjoy here.

EXHIBIT A

[From the Washington Herald, Mar. 6, 1935] ONLY ARKANSAS LOSES RELIEF-HOPKINS IRATE OVER DAVEY CHARGE OF

WASTE IN OHIO

WASTE IN OHIO

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration announced last night that Federal unemployment-relief funds for March were being withheld from only one State—Arkansas.

"Money will not be forthcoming," said Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, "unless the State contributes $250,000 a month of its own funds." He said money would be advanced to Minnesota when he receives formal notification that the State legislature has appropriated $10,000,000 for relief this year.

Mr. Hopkins announced he had refused the request of Governor Martin L. Davey that the Federal Government take over the administration of relief in Ohio. He said he was "certain the legislature will raise the $24,000,000" he has required of that State.

Governor Davey charged there is "much waste in the present Ohio relief program", and that he "cannot in good conscience have the legislature enforce upon the people of Ohio an additional tax."

tax.

Mr. Hopkins, irate at Governor Davey's letter, denied charges the Ohio relief set-up is "loaded down with redtape", and said administration costs in the State were 8.4 percent.

[From the Washington Post, Mar. 6, 1935]

"HUNGRY MOBS FACE ARKANSAS", SAYS GOVERNOR—ASKS LEGISLATURE TO VOTE EMERGENCY AID; UNITED STATES CANCELS RELIEF

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., March 5.—Governor J. Marion Futrell today asked the State legislature to pass emergency-relief taxes, saying "mobs will be running loose in this State" unless hungry mouths of those on relief rolls are fed.

The Governor warned the assembly "public disorders" threat-ened as a result of the withdrawal of all Federal relief March 1. He listed twoscore special items to be taxed to provide relief funds, ranging from telephone poles to lipsticks.

The Governor estimated his emergency bill would raise $6,850,000 in the next 2 years and asked for its final passage without amendment "within the next 3 or 4 days to relieve a tense

Governor Futrell promised to veto if the legislature should adopt other revenue-raising measures. Sales-tax and liquor bills have been pending since the start of the session in Janua

He said the State needed to raise at once $1,500,000 a year for unemployables and $1,500,000 a year for work relief in order to interest Federal authorities in resumption of Federal relief in this

His proposed taxes ran the gamut of luxuries from radios and electric refrigerators to chewing gum, and included also special excise levies on bank checks, electrical energy, natural-gas pipe lines, and virtually every form of amusement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 5.—The question of who is to care for Ohio's 1,200,000 needy citizens became perplexing tonight as the Federal Relief Administration refused to shoulder all the respon-

Less than 12 hours after Governor Davey made known he had appealed to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, to take over the State relief administration, Hopkins, in Washington, flatly rejected the request.

Hopkins also insisted Ohio must contribute $2,000,000 a month to match the approximately $8,000,000 of Federal relief funds which have been poured into the State.

In a letter to Hopkins, Davey charged that the Ohio relief set-up is wasteful and inefficient.

Hopkins answered Davey's charge of waste and inefficiency with an assertion that "the Governor doesn't know what he is talking about."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I shall not take the time of the Senate to enter into a prolonged discussion of the subject which the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] has precipitated at this juncture. I realize that the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] and other members of the Appropriations Committee have hardly had a square deal in the consideration of the measure which is now the unfinished business before the Senate. The Senator from Louisiana and I have taken a great deal of time and our discussions have not been relevant to the subject matter of the War Department appropriation bill.

Mr. President, several times the Senator from Louisiana has put into the RECORD and discussed the relationship between myself and clients. I have never felt that was a matter for the decision of my colleagues. It has always seemed to me that I had as much right as the Senator from Louisiana to practice law. As a matter of fact, during the last 10 years my duties here have been so numerous and my public responsibilities have seemed so great that I have only had the opportunity of trying one or two law suits.

It is true that I had a limited partnership. The partnership was that I should take fees and compensation only in cases in which I accepted employment. I think that is known to the Senator from Louisiana and has been for all the time since he began to put these "advertisements", as he calls them, into the RECORD. My partnership was so limited that I only accepted compensation in cases which I myself accepted and tried. It is true that my name was in the firm. I had an office when I was at home, and I had stenographic service.

Mr. H. C. Couch, to whom the Senator from Louisiana has often referred, the head of the power companies in that part of the world, Louisiana and Arkansas, is a personal friend of mine as well as of the Senator from Louisiana. It happens to be true that I have never represented Mr. Couch or any power company or other company in which he was interested, in any lawsuit or in any matter. It is also true that I have never received one dollar in fees or other compensation, either directly or indirectly, from him or any of his companies. It is also true that corporations which are advertised here as clients of the firm of which I am a member, having a limited partnership, have never been my clients, and I have not represented them.

But I wish to say, Mr. President, that I do not think there is anything improper in a lawyer representing a corporation so long as it does not interfere with the performance of his duties in a public capacity. I am perfectly willing, now and at all times, to leave with those with whom I have served here the question as to whether I have been biased or prejudiced by my professional relations. It has been my object and my aim to perform my duties in this body creditably, and with absolute loyalty to the public interests. I realize that one is never the judge—at least, not the final judge—of his bias or his prejudice; but I certainly would not be willing to constitute the Senator from Louisiana as the judge in such particulars.

The Senator from Louisiana yesterday in his remarks first stated that I had brought from Louisiana, and put in a position here, someone who had threatened his life and planned to kill him, and when I modestly challenged that statement he said that the administration had done that.

What happened, according to my understanding, was that a Member of the House from the Senator's own State, being allowed a certain amount of what the Senator and I call "patronage", placed the individual on his patronage roll, and the administration had no more to do with it than had the Senator from Louisiana or I. That is a sample of the mental processes of the Senator from Louisiana.

I am not willing that the Senator from Louisiana shall make himself the judge of when one shall be permitted to serve in the Senate. Yesterday he announced that he expected to come into Arkansas; and then, when he asked the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] a question, and the Senator from North Carolina did not answer the question to suit him, the Senator from Louisana said, "Oh, well, you won't be back, either "-implying that he is not only dictator in Louisiana politics, but dictator in other jurisdictions as well.

Questions of that sort are not of interest to the Senate. I have found my services here, for the most part, exceedingly agreeable; but I am prepared to say now that if I have to continue to look at the Senator from Louisiana every day, if I have to hear him speak three or four times a day, as I have during the past few months, if I have to listen to his criticism and condemnation of everyone who does not agree with him, I think it would be a godsend to me if in some way I got out of the Senate of the United States. [Laughter in the galleries.1

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair admonishes the occupants of the galleries that they are here as guests of the Senate. Expressions of approval or disapproval, or laughter, are strictly prohibited by the rules of the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York permit me to say

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York further yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will repeat his admonition to the occupants of the galleries. If necessary, the Chair will order the galleries cleared.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I did not ask the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] a question yesterday, and the RECORD will not show it, and the RECORD has not been corrected as it came from the hands of the official reporters. The Senator from Arkansas is mistaken in that respect.

Furthermore, the Senator says he thinks it would be a great relief for him to get out of the Senate because of my being here. I did not know whether I would run for Governor of Louisiana or whether I would run for the Senate: but I now announce that I will run for reelection to the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is very interesting. Will the Senator from New York indulge me for just a moment?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield. Mr. ROBINSON. The last time I heard from the Senator from Louisiana he was running for Governor. The next to the last time I heard from him he was running for President. Now he is running for the Senate.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York further yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. COPELAND. I do.

Mr. LONG. There was no such announcement of public ! good that could be done by coming back to the Senate as there is now. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROBINSON. God save the Senate! [Laughter in the galleries 1

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair instructs the doorkeepers in the galleries to enforce order.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Quartermaster Corps", on page 22, line 21, after the word "reasons", to strike out "$4,388,-423 " and insert " $4,450,221 ", so as to read:

Clothing and equipage: For cloth, woolens, materials, and for the purchase and manufacture of clothing for the Army, including retired enlisted men when ordered to active duty, for issue and for sale; for payment of commutation of clothing due to warrant saie; for payment of commutation of clothing due to warrant officers of the mine planter service and to enlisted men; for altering and fitting clothing and washing and cleaning when necessary; for operation of laundries, existing or now under construction, including purchase and repair of laundry machinery therefor; for the authorized issues of laundry materials for use of general prisoners confined at military posts without pay or allowances, and for applicants for enlistment while held under observation; and for applicants for enlistment while held under observation; for equipment and repair of equipment of existing dry-cleaning plants, salvage and sorting storehouses, hat-repairing shops, shoe-repair shops, clothing-repair shops, and garbage-reduction works; for equipage, including authorized issues of toilet articles, barbers' and tailors' material, for use of general prisoners confined at military posts without pay or allowances and applicants for enlistment while held under observation; issue of toilet kits to recruits upon their first enlistment, and issue of housewives to the Army; for expenses of packing and handling and similar necessaries; for a suit of citizen's outer clothing and, when necessary, an overcoat, the cost of all not to exceed $30, to be issued each soldier discharged otherwise than honorably, to each enlisted man convicted by civil court for an offense resulting in confinement in a penitentiary or other civil prison, and to each enlisted man a penitentiary or other civil prison, and to each enlisted man ordered interned by reason of the fact that he is an alien enemy, or, for the same reason, discharged without internment; for indemnity to officers and men of the Army for clothing and bedding, etc., destroyed since April 22, 1898, by order of medical officers of the Army for sanitary reasons, $4,450,221, of which amount not exceeding $60,000 shall be available immediately for the procurement and transportation of fuel for the service of the fiscal year

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 17, after the word "trucks", to strike out "two hundred and sixty-seven" and insert "three hundred and ninety"; in line 20, after the figures "1935" to insert a comma and "and at the discretion of the Secretary of War, such other vehicles as in his opinion are required to meet an existing military necessity. or are capable of being economically operated and maintained", so as to read:

tained", so as to read:

Army transportation: For transportation of Army supplies; of authorized baggage, including packing and crating of horse equipment; and of funds for the Army; for the purchase or construction, not to exceed $10,000, alteration, operation, and repair of boats and other vessels; for wharfage, tolls, and ferriage; for drayage and cartage; for the purchase, manufacture (including both material and labor), maintenance, hire, and repair of pack saddles and harness; for the purchase, hire, operation, maintenance, and repair of wagons, carts, drays, other vehicles, and horse-drawn and motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles required for the transportation of troops and supplies and for official military and garrison purposes; for hire of draft and pack animals; for travel allowances to officers of National Guard on discharge from Federal service as prescribed in the act of March 2, 1901 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 751), and to enlisted men of National Guard on discharge from Federal service, as prescribed in amendatory act of September 22, 1922 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 752), and to members of the National Guard who have been mustered into Federal service and discharged on account of physical disability; in all, $9,191,981, of which amount not exceeding $250,000 shall be available immediately for the procurement and transportation of fuel for the service of the fiscal year 1936: Provided, That not to exceed $1,000,000 of this appropriation shall be available for the purchase or exchange of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and trucks, of which amount not to exceed $40,000 may be expended for the purchase of light and medium passenger-carrying automobiles at a unit cost of not to exceed $750 for light automobiles and $1,200 for medium automobiles, including the value of any vehicles exchanged, and not to exceed $75,000 may be expended for the purchase or exchange of motor-propelled ambulances and motorcycles: Provided further, That no appropriation contained in this act shall be available for any expense of any character, other than as may be incident to salvaging or scrapping, on account of any motor-propelled vehicle procured prior to January 1, 1920, except tractors, ambulances, fire trucks, 390 modernized class B trucks, and vehicles in use by Reserve Officers' Training Corps units on February 19, 1935, and at the discretion of the Secretary of War, such other vehicles as in his opinion are required to meet an existing military necessity, or are capable of being economically operated and maintained:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Horses. draft and pack animals", on page 26, line 24, to strike out "$222,155" and insert "$372,155", so as to read:

For the purchase of draft and pack animals and horses within limits as to age, sex, and size to be prescribed by the Secretary of War for remounts for officers entitled to public mounts, for the United States Military Academy, and for such organizations and members of the military service as may be required to be mounted, and for all expenses incident to such purchases (including $72,155 for encouragement of the breeding of riding horses suitable for the Army, in cooperation with the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, including the purchase of animals for breeding purposes and their maintenance), $372,155.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Barracks and quarters and other buildings and utilities", on page 28, line 22, after the word "posts", to strike out "$10,-049,104" and insert "$11,049,104", so as to read:

For all expenses incident to the construction, installation, op-For all expenses incident to the construction, installation, operation, and maintenance of buildings, utilities, appurtenances, and accessories necessary for the shelter, protection, and accommodation of the Army and its personnel and property, where not specifically provided for in other appropriations, including personal services, purchase and repair of furniture for quarters for officers, warrant officers, and noncommissioned officers, and officers' messes and wall lockers and refrigerators for Government-owned buildings as may be approved by the Secretary of War, care and improvement of grounds, flooring and framing for tents, rental of buildings, including not to exceed $900 in the District of Columbia, provided space is not available in Government-owned buildings, and grounds for military purposes and District of Columbia, provided space is not available in Government-owned buildings, and grounds for military purposes and lodgings for recruits and applicants for enlistments, water supply, sewer and fire-alarm systems, fire apparatus, roads, walks, wharves, drainage, dredging channels, purchase of water, disposal of sewage, shooting galleries, ranges for small-arms target practice, field, mobile, and railway artillery practice, including flour for paste for marking targets, such ranges and galleries to be open as far as practicable to the National Guard and organized rifle clubs under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War; warehouse and fuel handling equipment; stoves required for use of the Army for heating offices, hospitals, barracks, quarters. clubs under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War; warehouse and fuel handling equipment; stoves required for use of the Army for heating offices, hospitals, barracks, quarters, recruiting stations, and United States disciplinary barracks, also ranges and stoves for cooking food at posts, for post bakery and bake-oven equipment and apparatus and appliances for cooking and serving food when constituting fixed installations in buildings, including maintenance and repair of such heating and cooking appliances; for furnishing heat and light for the authorized allowance of quarters for officers, enlisted men, and warrant officers, including retired enlisted men when ordered to active duty, contract surgeons when stationed at and occupying public quarters at military posts, officers of the National Guard attending service and garrison schools, and for recruits, guards, hospitals, storehouses, offices, the buildings erected at private cost, in the operation of the Act approved May 31, 1902 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 1346), and buildings for a similar purpose on military reservations authorized by War Department regulations; for sale of fuel to officers; fuel and engine supplies required in the operation of modern batteries at established posts, $11,049,104, and $2,500,000 of this appropriation shall be available immediately for the procurement and transportation of fuel for the service of the fiscal year 1936:

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Arms, uniforms, equipment, etc., for field service, National Guard", on page 49, line 25, after the word "increasing", to strike out the comma and "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time,"; so as to read:

To procure by purchase or manufacture and issue from time to time to the National Guard, upon requisition of the governors of the several States and Territories or the commanding general, National Guard of the District of Columbia, such military equipment and stores of all kinds and reserve supply thereof as are necessary to arm, uniform, and equip for field service the National Guard of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, including motor trucks, field ambulances, and station wagons, and to repair such of the aforementioned articles of equipage and military stores as are or may become damaged when, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, such repair may be determined to be an economical measure and as necessary for their proper preservation and use, $6,387,638, together with such additional sums as may be necessary under the several subappropriations contained in this act under the National Guard to defray the cost of increasing the present appropriated for enlisted strength of the National Guard by 5,000, and all of the sums appropriated in this act on account of the National Guard shall be accounted for as one fund and of the total of such sums $1,500,000 shall be available immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, after line 7, to strike out:

No appropriation contained in this act shall be available for any expense for or on account of a larger number of mounted and medical units, and military police, wagon and service companies of the National Guard than were in existence on June 30, 1932.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from New York whether, in the consideration of the bill, the provision has been reached for increasing the number of members of the Military Establishment.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; we have already passed that provision in the first part of the bill.

Mr. KING. That was not an amendment?

Mr. COPELAND. No; that was in the bill as it came from the House.

Mr. KING. So it is not subject to consideration at the present time?

Mr. COPELAND. Not now.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. COPELAND. I do.

Mr. CLARK. I should like to ask the Senator from New York to explain wherein lies the necessity for the increase of $50,000,000 in this appropriation bill over the bill of last year.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it will be found by a study of the bill and the report of the House committee that about $21,000,000 of the increase comes from the increase in the development of the Air Service, the building of planes, and the equipment of existing planes with safety devices and with radio; $19,000,000 of the amount carried by the bill is put in because of the necessity of providing for the 5-percent increase in pay; $2,500,000 has been inserted because of the increased cost of subsistence; $6,000,000 is due to the mechanization of ordnance; and for the National Guard there is an increase of $5,000,000 in the appropriation. The total increase over last year is about $55,000,000.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. DICKINSON. I call attention to the language near the bottom of page 10, where the bill says:

Pay of enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $51,069,333—

And then the following language:

together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000 enlisted men.

It is my understanding that the pay of the Army costs about $425 per enlisted man. If the Army is to be increased by 45,000 men, an additional $20,000,000 ought to be provided here. Otherwise, according to the wording of the bill, the pay of any increased number of enlisted men will have to be found by taking some appropriation away from some other item in the bill.

I should like to know what the theory of the chairman of the committee is with reference to that matter.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the reply to the question is that not all of this addition will be made overnight. A gradual addition will be made to the number of men in the Army. I concede that this is a rather unusual form of legislation—that is, the provision as to additional sums. The language in question is found near the bottom of page 10:

* * together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act.

That is to say, if there should be such an increase as was suggested by the Senator from Iowa, immediately it would require subtraction, or would require the acquisition of these sums from other items in the bill.

Mr. DICKINSON. There are two particular phases of this bill to which I wish to call the attention of the Senate. In the first place, I think it would be unfortunate if any official of the War Department should assume to claim that the Department would be authorized to incur a deficit in excess of the appropriation by reason of this provision of the bill. In the second place, and I do not know whether or not it is covered by the bill, suppose there has been or should be made from the public-works appropriation an allotment for rivers and harbors of $60,000,000—and I understand the river and harbor item is found on another page of the bill—could $20,000,000 be taken out of that item and put into the pay of the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. It could not be. If the Senator will read the language on line 23, page 10, he will see that it reads, "appropriations contained in this act", so the money would have to come from appropriations included in the pending bill.

Mr. DICKINSON. But $25,000,000 is provided in this bill. Suppose, instead of spending that money on rivers and harbors, an allocation is obtained from the Public Works Administrator to cover the works on rivers and harbors, and then the $25,000,000 provided in this bill is used to the pay of the Army, and we have the Army increased and the increase paid for. I do not know that the Senate would have any right to object, because we ought not to excuse ourselves by attempting to pass indefinite legislation of this kind.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. NYE. The Senator from Iowa insists that the Senate might be held responsible, or that the Congress might be held responsible, for the very thing which he says might occur. Let me direct the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the fact that the Senate committee has amended the language of the bill as passed by the House, which originally provided that the question of the increased personnel should be left to the discretion of the President. The Senate committee struck out that language and made mandatory what originally was intended to be a matter for the discretion of the President. Assuredly the blame will be on Congress if the very things which the Senator from Iowa suggests shall come to pass.

Mr. DICKINSON and Mr. CLARK addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. COPELAND. I still yield to the Senator from Iowa. Mr. DICKINSON. It is my contention that there should not be any provision of this kind in the bill. If the Senate believes we ought to increase the Army by 40,000 men, let us increase it and appropriate the money. Why not bring it up as a direct issue? If, on the other hand, we should not increase it, let us eliminate this provision from the bill.

I contend that, regardless of whether we leave in the language inserted by the House that it shall be in the discretion of the President, or whether we take it out, there is no difference with reference to the allocation of the funds which I have been suggesting, and that the Secretary of War would have the right to increase the Army under the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to ask him a question, in all good nature—Is the Sen-

Appropriations?

Mr. DICKINSON. I am.

Mr. COPELAND. Did the Senator raise these questions in the committee?

Mr. DICKINSON. This matter was passed over before I reached the meeting of the committee; it was not called to my attention, and I did not think of it until I noticed it here on the floor of the Senate.

I do not intend to offer an amendment; I am simply trying to get this phase of the matter into the RECORD, so that what has been said may, I hope, afford some guidance in connection with what is to be done under the measure if we shall pass it in its present form.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield to me?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. If the Senator will yield for the purpose, I desire to give notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment at the bottom of page 10, lines 24 and 25, and line 1 on page 11, was adopted.

I may say, further, if the Senator will yield for just a moment, that I agree thoroughly with the Senator from Iowa in his position. It seems to me the first thing to do is to reconsider the vote by which that committee amendment striking out the House language was adopted, and at the proper time I shall make such a motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator does not make the motion, but simply gives notice of the motion?

Mr. CLARK. I give notice that I will move to reconsider. and at the proper time I shall make the motion.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] if he has stated the purpose of increasing the Army and the necessity for it. If he has done so, I shall read it in the RECORD, but, so far as I recall, I have heard no explanation of the proposed increase of the Army nor how the increase is to be allocated or how the number is to be determined.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] has given notice that at the proper time he will ask for a reconsideration of that item. If the Senator from Michigan does not mind, I should prefer to wait until we come to that time.

Mr. COUZENS. Does the Senator contemplate finishing the bill tonight with the possible exception of that item?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; I should like to get the details out

Mr. COUZENS. Very well; I shall wait.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I may not be able to be here when the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK) is submitted. In that connection I want to say, and I think it is time to say it now, that I shall oppose the motion, because I think we should not put that kind of responsibility on the President. Congress should say whether we shall increase the Army, and not leave it to the President. He cannot inquire into the various details and subjects. Let us take a little responsibility ourselves. It belongs to us. It is a matter of legislation, and I think we ought not to put the responsibility on the President to say that the Army shall take in 10,000 men this week and 5,000 men next week, and all that sort of thing. I think the committee has done well to strike that language from the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. FLETCHER. Certainly. Mr. COPELAND. The Senator from Missouri goes further than intimated by the Senator from Florida. He proposes to question the entire proposal to increase the number of soldiers.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida vield?

Mr. FLETCHER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. It is my intention first to move to reconsider the committee amendment beginning at the bottom of page | should not be the sole basis for increasing the Army. The ator who is now speaking a member of the Committee on | 10, and then to move to strike out the provision increasing the Army.

> Mr. FLETCHER. I simply want to say in that connection that I was very greatly impressed by the statement of General MacArthur to the committee. Aside from the question of national defense and military need for the increase at this time, it is the most economical and, I think, the best way we can provide for care of many of the unemployed. Let me read what he said:

> On the cost of these men, to digress from the military necessity of the situation, I should say that there is no way in which unemployment can be relieved so cheaply as by inducting these men into the service of the Army. They will come in as second-class privates. The strength of companies, troops, and batteries now has been so curtailed that instead of having the normal strength of from 100 to 120 privates and noncommissioned officers, we have only from 60 to 75, so that these men would merely fill in the gaps in the echelons in the lowest grade of the Army. The actual cost of these men would be their pay, which is $20 a month; it would be a ration, which is 37 cents a day; and it would be between $30 and $35 a year for their clothing. There would be practically no other expense involved in the case of these men, so that the total cost per capita would be in the neighborhood of > that the total cost per capita would be in the neighborhood of $400 a year.

>
> There is no method that I know of which has been devised in the efforts the Government has made to relieve unemployment that would do it so cheaply. I am talking now about relief not only from the standpoint of work relief but from the standpoint of dole relief. I do not believe you will find that even those men who are on the dole, who are being supported by straight relief measures, without returning any concomitant of work in return for it, can be supported as cheaply as these men would be supported. We would handle them for a little over a dollar a day.

It seems to me that is quite an important matter to con-

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. FLETCHER. I yield.

Mr. COUZENS. The Senator from Florida will remember that we adopted an amendment to the War Department appropriation bill several years ago in an effort to take care of some 88,000 boys who were roaming the streets by putting them into the C. M. T. C. camps. That proposal was rejected by the Congress. The argument advanced by General MacArthur is the most absurd, ridiculous, and indefensible argument I ever heard of for an increase in the Army. If this is a sound basis for increasing the size of the Army, why not put all of the unemployed into the Army? Why not do that in all the other countries where there is a large number of unemployed? It seems to me it is the most absurd argument I ever heard an intelligent man make.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not claim that is the sole justification for the increase. I am simply pointing out that if the increase is made that would be one of the consequences.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. FLETCHER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I agree thoroughly with what the Senator from Michigan has said. In the munitions investigation we found that the Navy, to put the shoe on the other foot for a moment, rushed in and got an allocation of $238,000,000. which was later increased to $278,000,000, which was taken out of the Public Works Administration fund before the Administration was even created. As soon as they got the money they proceeded to get a ruling from the Comptroller General to the effect that the money would be available until expended, and they have made no effort to carry out the program of putting men to work. They were simply interested, as the admirals who appeared before the committee said, in naval building rather than in the relief of unemployment.

I agree thoroughly with what the Senator from Michigan has said, that the argument of General MacArthur is absolutely preposterous.

Mr. FLETCHER. I not only think that the Army ought to be increased in this way, but that it is a possible means or potential means of work relief in the first place, though that military need for it is another thing. I believe the Navy ought to be increased for the same reason. I do not believe we could take care of many young men under better conditions at less cost to the Government and with greater benefit to the men than by allowing them to enlist in the Army and the Navy.

Mr. CLARK. If that is the correct theory, then why should the increase of the Army be limited to 10,000? Why not take in 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 men, and in that way relieve unemployment to a greater degree?

Mr. FLETCHER. Of course, we must fix a limit. It is unreasonable to expect that we would open the door and take in everybody who is in need of employment. That is out of the question. We have to fix the limit somewhere, and I think this is a reasonable limit. It does not increase the appropriation as provided by the House, either.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think the Senator is in error in assuming that if this increase should be made it would not increase the appropriation. The able Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] just a short time ago challenged attention to the fact that there would be a deficit of at least $20,000,000.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGill in the chair).

Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. KING. I do.

Mr. DICKINSON. Let me suggest that this item has to do only with the pay of the Army, which means about $400 or $430 per man; but for every man who is added we must have subsistence. We must have all the other increases that go with an increase in the Army. So, if this item is increased, there is no money in the bill to pay for it unless the authorization here to increase the number of men would give the War Department the right to overdraw its appropriations or create a deficit; or it might be done by transferring river and harbor items to some other item, and then supplementing that item with public-works funds.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. As the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] has pointed out, an increase in the size of the Army from 125,000 to 165,000 men, or approximately 20 percent, not only means an increase in pay, but it means an increase in the appropriation for the Quartermaster Corps, the Ordnance Department, the Motor Transport Department; in fact, the appropriation for every other bureau in the Army is naturally increased in proportion as the size of the Army is increased. We cannot escape that fact.

Mr. KING. The Senator is absolutely correct. There will be demands that we appropriate perhaps fifty to one hundred million dollars for new cantonments and buildings and new forts and places for housing and maintaining this increased Army. No one can foretell what the result will be. In addition to that, if we induct these men into the Army, we may not dismiss them overnight. We are bound to have casualties; we are bound to have conditions that will result in pensions which the Government will have to pay. We are embarking upon a program the consequences of which, in dollars and cents, it is impossible to determine. It will cost millions and tens of millions of dollars before the program shall be completed.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. I simply desire to call attention to what General MacArthur said:

We have practically all the housing facilities and everything necessary to take care of them now. They merely go into the company, troop, or battery units which have been decimated by the gradual process of attrition. Most of the barracks that house these companies now at a strength of from 60 to 80 can very easily accommodate the added strength of 30 or 40 riflemen which they would get if this proposition is approved.

Further, he said:

I want to emphasize that what we are suggesting does not increase at all what the House appropriated in money.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator unnecessarily; but, with reference to the quotation from General MacArthur which has just been read by the Senator from Florida, I should like to say that in the course of the past couple of years I have had occasion more or less accidentally to visit some seven or eight Army posts in this country, and in every one of those posts I was shown by the commandant the inadequacy of the present accommodations to take care of the present garrisons. In other words, the commandant of each Army post I visited was able to show, and I think to show very fairly and very clearly, that the accommodations at those posts are inadequate to take care of even the present garrisons; and in each case they are asking for appropriations from publicworks funds or from some other funds to improve the accommodations in those posts and make them adequate for their present garrisons.

On the one hand, General MacArthur comes before the committee of Congress and testifies to the great need for increase in the accommodations at Army posts. On the other hand, he comes before the committee of Congress and asks for an increase in the personnel of the Army, asserting that there are already accommodations sufficient to take care of a much larger number than we have.

Mr. KING. The Senator is absolutely correct in his statement; and we know that demands are to be made now for increased appropriations to take care of the Army, and for increased accommodations. Demands have been made; persons have come to see me in opposition to an amendment which they understood I was to offer to the public-works joint resolution, to the effect that not a penny should be spent for the Army or for the Navy, and contended that that amendment was too broad; that hundreds of the forts and other places where soldiers are to be maintained imperatively need large sums for repair and for increasing the accommodations that are absolutely required for the Army.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. DICKINSON. Supplementing the statement of the Senator from Utah, I desire to suggest that before the Appropriations Committee the junior Senator from California [Mr. McADOO] presented an amendment—as I understand, with the approval of the War Department-asking for $132,000,-000 to provide additional permanent barracks at the various Army posts in this country. The question to which I desire especially to call the attention of the Senator from Utah is, if we wish to increase the Army, why do we not do it in the regular way by saying, "So many men shall be enlisted, and we appropriate so much for them "? Why put in a provision that is of the pig-in-a-poke type? Nobody knows what will be done under it. There is no estimate as to what the expense will be. No money is provided, and yet there is an implied authorization here that will permit the Secretary of War to create a deficiency in order to carry on the authorization here given.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the Senator has not any doubt, has he, that if this provision should be passed as it is in the pending bill it would be taken as an authorization, and that an appropriation would not be subject to a point of order next year?

Mr. DICKINSON. I have no doubt whatever of that.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I recur to the subject to which I devoted a moment's attention at the outset in reply to the Senator from Florida [Mr. Fletcher]. He has repeated his argument that one of the best ways of dealing with unemployment is to put a large number of the unemployed into the Army. I repeat what the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Couzens] said in opposition to that argument, as well as the observations which I submitted in my first reply to the Senator.

Let me say in conclusion in respect to that matter that if it is important that we take care of more young men than will be taken care of by the C. C. C. camps, why not put them in school? They can be put in school for $30 per month. If it is imperative to take care of 45,000 young men, instead of putting them into the Army at a cost, I insist, of more than $1,000 a year per man, let us put them into the schools at $30 per month, or $360 a year, and they will learn more in the schools than they would learn in the Army. I am not disparaging the benefits that might result from the military training they would obtain in the military camps of the United States; but I wish to repudiate the thought that the Senate or the Congress of the United States plans to care for the unemployment situation by increasing its Army, and putting thousands of the unemployed into military camps, and drilling them for the life of a soldier.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Organized Reserves", on page 52, line 14, after the name "Organized Reserves", to insert a comma and "and for travel of dependents, and packing and transportation of baggage of such personnel"; and on page 53, line 8, after the words "in all ", to strike out " $6,372,178 " and insert "$8,258,528", so as to read:

and insert "$8,258,528", so as to read:

For pay and allowances of members of the Officers' Reserve Corps on active duty in accordance with law; mileage, reimbursement of actual traveling expenses, or per diem allowances in lieu thereof, as authorized by law: Provided, That the mileage allowance to members of the Officers' Reserve Corps when called into active service for training for 15 days or less shall not exceed 4 cents per mile; pay, transportation, subsistence, clothing, and medical and hospital treatment of members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps; conducting correspondence or extension courses for instruction of members of the Reserve Corps, including necessary supplies, procurement of maps and textbooks, and transportation and traveling expenses of employees; purchase of training manuals, including Government publications and blank forms, subscriptions to magazines and periodicals of a professional or technical nature; establishment, maintenance, and operation of divisional and regimental headquarters and of camps for training of the Organized Reserves; for miscellaneous expenses incident to the administration of the Organized Reserves, including the maintenance and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; for the actual and necessary expenses, or per diem in lieu thereof, at rates authorized by law, incurred by officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army traveling on duty in connection with the Organized Reserves, and for travel of dependents, and packing and transportation of baggage of such personnel; for expenses incident to the use, including upkeep and depreciation costs, of supplies, equipment, and matériel furnished in accordance with law from stocks under the control of the War Department, except that not to exceed $845,725 of this appropriation shall be available for expenditure by the Chief of the Air Corps for the production and purchase of new airplanes and their equipment, spare parts, and accessories; for transportaof the Air Corps for the production and purchase of new airplanes and their equipment, spare parts, and accessories; for transportation of baggage, including packing and crating, of Reserve officers ordered to active duty for not less than 6 months; for the medical and hospital treatment of members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps, who suffer personal injury or contract disease in line of duty, as provided by the act of April 26, 1928 (U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 10, secs. 451, 455), and for such other purposes in connection therewith as are authorized by the said act, including pay and allowances, subsistence, transportation, and burial expens

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from New York a question.

I observe that the only appropriation made in this bill for rivers and harbors is for maintenance. I observed yesterday that in the break-down of the so-called "relief joint resolution", the big appropriation measure, there are no items allocating funds for the construction of river and harbor works.

I should like to know if it is the intention of those in charge of that measure to discontinue the construction of river and harbor work, and simply continue the maintenance of existing works. If the Senator from New York will tell me, I should like to know about that.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I have always understood that it was the intention, in the various public-works activities, to do a lot of river and harbor work. There is no item in this bill for new work. This bill has to do only with the maintenance of regular work; but I think some sort of a hearing is going on in the House of Representatives with reference to increasing the activities in this direction.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Is any member of the Appropriations Committee present who can tell us whether it is the intention, in the public works joint resolution, to provide for the construction of river and harbor works?

Mr. COPELAND. I hope the Senator from Minnesota will not ask me that question.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Minnesota will offer an amendment to that effect, either to this bill or to some other bill. I think this bill ought to be amended or certainly such provision ought to be made in some bill. We cannot stop river and harbor work that has been going on for a hundred years. I wish the Senator would look up the matter. It may be necessary either to amend House Joint Resolution 117 or possibly to amend this bill so as to cover the subject. We certainly ought to take care of river and harbor work.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, since the question has been raised, I should like to call attention to the language of the pending measure known as House Joint Resolution 117. On page 3 of the joint resolution as recently reported from the committee the Senator will find a list of projects. The $4,000,000,000 is broken down into various projectseight of them, I think-and then, on line 21, the joint resolution says:

Provided further, That not to exceed 20 percent of the amount herein appropriated may be used by the President to increase any one or more of the foregoing limitations if he finds it necessary to do so in order to effectuate the purpose of this joint resolution.

And in one of these clauses there is a sort of blanket provision, "or other purposes."

I am not expressing any approval of this particular part of the joint resolution, because, frankly, I am not impressed by it; but I should say that there is ample power there for the President to do with the money whatever he wishes to do with it.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the Senator will find in line 20 a provision for "flood control, and miscellaneous projects."

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Three hundred and fifty million dollars is provided for that purpose.

Mr. COPELAND. That is $920,000,000.

Mr. FLETCHER. Three hundred and fifty million dollars is provided in line 20 for "flood control, and miscellaneous projects." Probably river and harbor improvements, and that sort of work, can be taken care of under that Mr. COPELAND. And to that can be added 20 percent of the entire appropriation, which would be $800,000,000; so, if the President so chose, he could make the amount $1,150,000,000.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I think the Senator for once in his life is mistaken. As I understand that language, it permits the President to use-20 percent of the amount herein appropriated * * * to increase any one or more of the foregoing limitations.

It is limited to the category enumerated here, as I understand.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator from Florida just answered the question raised. On line 19, page 3, appears the lan-guage, "sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, and miscellaneous projects,

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. It seems to me that, with a program which has been discussed and announced as being the administration's program for soil erosion, for forestation, reforestation, and flood control, and including miscellaneous projects, $350,000,000 is a very small sum compared with the allocations made.

Mr. COPELAND. Let the Senator read the remainder of it, "But not to exceed 20 percent of the amount herein appropriated"; 20 percent of the entire amount, which would be 20 percent of $4,000,000,000, may be added to any one of these items.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That has to be taken away from one of the other items.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I think it would go further and apply to the entire appropriation of $4,880,000,000. Therefore, it would be $976,000,000 which the President, if he saw fit, could apply to any one of the purposes enumerated on page 3 of the joint resolution. I think there is no question about that.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I appeal to Senators to allow us to finish the details of the bill. Then, at the close of the consideration of the committee amendments there is to be a reconsideration of the provision for the number of soldiers in the Army, and opportunity to discuss that matter will be afforded. If there is any amendment to be offered by any Senator, it may be offered at that time.

The committee has spent a tremendous amount of time on this bill; it has been trying for 3 days to get it through the Senate, and will not Senators please give us a chance to complete the consideration of the committee amendments? Then we will be happy to give the Senators all the time they desire to offer further amendments to the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, just one word in reply. think we have been given a very limited amount of time for consideration of a bill carrying more than $400,000,000. It is true the bill has been before the Senate for several days, but extraneous matters have taken up the time of the Senate, and but very few hours have been given to the consideration of the bill. Whenever we have military or naval appropriation bills before us, it has been the habit to let them go through with a limited protest by two or three Senators, and I know that any protest which may be made now against these enormous appropriations for military and naval expenditures will be unheeded.

I wish to say to the Senator that before we get through with the bill I shall move to recommit it, with instructions to reduce the amount of the appropriation by $50,000,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next

The next amendment was, on page 53, line 8, to strike out "$6,372,178" and to insert in lieu thereof "$8,258,428", so as to read:

In all, $8,258,428; and no part of such total sum shall be available for any expense incident to giving flight training to any officer of the Officers' Reserve Corps unless he shall be found physically and professionally qualified to perform aviation service as an aviation pilot, by such agency as the Secretary of War may designate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 7, after the name "Government of the United States", to insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing in this provision shall be so construed as to prevent the application of funds herein contained to the pay, allowances, or traveling expenses of any officer or enlisted man of the Reserve Corps who may surrender said pension, disability allowance, disability compensation, or retired pay for the period of his active duty in the Reserve Corps.

So as to read:

No appropriation made in this act shall be available for pay, allowances, or traveling or other expenses of any officer of the Organized Reserves who may be drawing a pension, disability allowance, disability compensation, or retired pay from the Government of the United States: Provided, That nothing in this provision shall be so construed as to prevent the application of funds herein contained to the pay, allowances, or traveling expenses of any officer or enlisted man of the Reserve Corps who may surrender said pension, disability allowance, disability compensation, or retired pay for the period of his active duty in the Reserve Corps. Reserve Corps.

No appropriation made in this act shall be expended for the No appropriation made in this act shall be expended for the pay of a reserve officer on active duty for a longer period than 15 days, except such as may be detailed for duty with the War Department General Staff under section 3a and section 5 (b) of the Army Reorganization Act approved June 4, 1920 (U. S. C., title 10, secs. 26, 37), or who may be detailed for courses of instruction at the general or special service schools of the Army, or who may be detailed for duty as instructors at civilian military training camps, appropriated for in this act, or who may be detailed for duty with tactical units of the Air Corps, as provided in section 37a of the Army Reorganization Act approved June 4, 1920 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 369): Provided, That the pay and allowances of such additional officers and nurses of the Medical Reserve Corps as are required to supplement the like officers and nurses of the Regular Army in the care of beneficiaries of the United States Veterans' Administration treated in Army hospitals may be paid from the funds allotted to the War Department by that administration under existing law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Citizens' Military Training—Reserve Officers' Training Corps", on page 57, line 19, after the word "vehicles", to strike out $3,452,304" and insert "$4,896,078", so as to read:

For the procurement, maintenance, and issue, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, to institutions at which one or more units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps are maintained, of such public animals, means of transportation, supplies, tentage, equipment, and uniforms as he may deem necessary including cleaning and laundering of uniforms and clothing supplies, tentage, equipment, and uniforms as he may deem necessary, including cleaning and laundering of uniforms and clothing at camps; and to forage, at the expense of the United States, public animals so issued, and to pay commutation in lieu of uniforms at a rate to be fixed annually by the Secretary of War; for transporting said animals and other authorized supplies and equipment from place of issue to the several institutions and training camps and return of same to place of issue when pressery; for purpose of return of same to place of issue when necessary; for purchase of training manuals, including Government publications and blank forms; for the establishment and maintenance of camps for the further practical instruction of the members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and for transporting members of such corps to and from such camps, and to subsist them while traveling to and from such camps and while remaining therein so far as appropriations will permit, or, in lieu of transporting them to and from such camps and subsisting them while en route, to pay them travel allowance at the rate of 5 cents per mile for the distance by the shortest usually traveled route from the places from which they are authorized to proceed to the camp and for the return travel thereto, and to pay the return travel pay in advance of the actual performance of the travel; for expenses incident to the use, including upkeep and depreciation costs, of supplies, equipment, and matériel furnished in accordance with law from stocks under the control of the War Department; for pay for students attending advanced camps at the rate prescribed for soldiers of the seventh grade of the Regular Army; for the payment of commutation of subsistence to members of the senior division of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, at a rate not exceeding the cost of the garrison ration prescribed for the Army, as authorized in the act approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act approved June 4, 1920 (U.S.C., title 10, sec. 387); for medical and hospital treatment until return to their homes and further medical treatment after arrival at their homes, subsistence during hospitalization and until furnished transporta-tion to their homes, and transportation when fit for travel to their homes of members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who homes of members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who suffer personal injury or contract disease in line of duty while en route to or from and while at camps of instruction under the provisions of section 47a of the National Defense Act approved June 3, 1916 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 441), as amended; and for the cost of preparation and transportation to their homes and burial expenses of the remains of members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps who die while attending camps of instruction as provided in the act approved April 26, 1928 (U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 10, sec. 455); for mileage, traveling expenses, or transportation, for transportation of dependents, and for packing and transportation of baggage, as authorized by law, for officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men as authorized by law, for officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men of the Regular Army traveling on duty pertaining to or on detail to or relief from duty with the Reserve Officers' Training Corps; for the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor vehicles, $4,896,078; of which $400,000 shall be available immediately.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill what this increase of $1,743,774 is for?

Mr. COPELAND. This is to increase the number of R. O. T. C. units in colleges by 65.

Mr. FRAZIER. It has been a long time since I was in school. I wish the Senator would use the English language, instead of the alphabet.

Mr. COPELAND. I confess I am somewhat confused by the alphabet, too, of late. I do not know whether it is a matter of what I learned or did not learn in school. But we afford military training for the Organized Reserve officers. That is language which we can all understand.

Mr. FRAZIER. Does the Senator mean the R. O. T. C., or the citizens' military training camps?

Mr. COPELAND. I stand corrected. This is for the summer camps of the R. O. T. C. units. They go to Plattsburg and similar places. This is to provide for the training there.

Mr. FRAZIER. Another inquiry. Is this for the summer camps for the boys from the colleges, or the citizens' military training camps?

Mr. COPELAND. This is not the item for the citizens' military training camps. That is another item, which we have already passed, I think.

Mr. KING. The citizens' military training camps item is on page 59.

Mr. COPELAND. On page 60, line 20, appears the provision for an increase in the number of trainees at the citizens' military training camps.

Mr. FRAZIER. There is an increase of $1,560,000 there?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. FRAZIER. That is for citizens' military training?

Mr. COPELAND. No; that is for the Reserve officers' training, of students who go from the colleges.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Citizens' military training camps", on page 60, line 20, after the words "in all", to strike out "$1,000,000" and insert "$2,-560,000 ", so as to read:

For furnishing, at the expense of the United States, to warrant officers, enlisted men, and civilians attending training camps maintained under the provisions of section 47d of the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 442), uniforms, including altering, fitting, washing, and cleaning when necessary, subsistence, or subsistence allowances and transportation, or transportation allowances, as prescribed in said section 47d, as amended; for such expenditures as are authorized by said section 47d as may be necessary for the establishment and maintenance of said camps, including recruiting and advertising therefor, and the cost of maintenance, repair, and operation of passenger-carrying vehicles; for expenses incident to the use, including upkeep and depreciation costs, of supplies, equipment, and matériel furnished in accordance with law from stocks under the control of the War Department; for gymnasium and athletic supmateriel furnished in accordance with law from stocks under the control of the War Department; for gymnasium and athletic supplies (not exceeding $20,000); for mileage, reimbursement of traveling expenses, or allowance in lieu thereof as authorized by law, for officers of the Regular Army and Organized Reserves, and for the travel expenses of enlisted men of the Regular Army, traveling on duty in connection with citizens' military training camps; for purchase of training manuals, including Government publications and blank forms; for medical and hospital treatment, subsistence, and transportation, in case of injury or disease contracted in line of duty, of members of the citizens' military training camps and for transportation and burial of remains of any such members who die while undergoing training or hospital treatment, as provided in the act of April 26, 1923 (U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 10, secs. 454, 455); in all, $2,560,000.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this amendment is for the citizens' military training camps?

Mr. COPELAND. That is correct.

Mr. FRAZIER. Does the Senator know how many more would be included?

Mr. COPELAND. It would increase the number by about 20,000, would increase the number to 37,500, which is the maximum number we have trained in any one year.

Mr. FRAZIER. Previously the number has been about

Mr. COPELAND. No; about fourteen or fifteen thousand. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title II-Nonmilitary activities of the War Department-Corps of Engineers—Rivers and harbors", on page 66, line 25, after the word "law" to strike out "$34,057,270" and insert "$24,057,270", so as to read:

To be immediately available to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of

For the preservation and maintenance of existing river and harbor works, and for the prosecution of such projects heretofore authorized as may be most desirable in the interests of commerce and navigation; for survey of northern and northwestern lakes and other boundary and connecting waters as heretofore authorized, including the preparation, correction, printing, and issuing of charts and bulletins and the investigation of lake levels; for prevention of obstructive and injurious deposits within the harbor and adjacent waters of New York City; for expenses of the California Débris Commission in carrying on the work authorized by the act approved March 1, 1893 (U. S. C., title 33, sec. 661); for removing sunker vessels or craft obstructing or endangering navremoving sunken vessels or craft obstructing or endangering navigation as authorized by law; for operating and maintaining, keeping in repair, and continuing in use without interruption, any lock, canal (except the Panama Canal), canalized river, or other public works for the use and benefit of navigation belonging to the United States; for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors; and for printing, including illustrations, as may be authorized by the Committee on Printing of the House of Representatives, either during a recess or session of Congress, of surveys under House Document No. 308, Sixty-ninth Congress, first session, and section 10 of the Flood Control Act, approved May 15, 1928 (U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 33, sec. 702j), and such surveys as may be printed during a recess of Congress shall be printed as documents of the next succeeding session of Congress, and for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motor boats, for official use, not to exceed $155,150: Provided, That no funds shall be expended for any preliminary examination, survey, project, or estimate not authorized by law,

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this item was reduced by the committee by $10,000,000, on the theory that $24,~ 000,000 was about the amount they had last year. I have had a very appealing letter from the Chief of Army Engineers pointing out that if this provision should be cut by $10,000,000, it would be $8,000,000 less than they think they absolutely must have in order to carry on the Delaware and Chesapeake canal work, and work on other projects which come under the Corps of Army Engineers.

It is not my business to suggest changes in the item, but the appropriations in the bill as reported to the Senate are $3,000,000 under the appropriations carried in the bill as it passed the House. Personally, I should be pleased if we could increase this item by $3,000,000, and then take the whole matter to conference.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator would suggest that we disagree to the committee amendment?

Mr. COPELAND. That we increase the amount carried in the committee amendment by $3,000,000.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have a letter from the Chief of Engineers of the Army which is very explicit to the effect that the amount recommended by the Senate committee is not sufficient for their work. When we consider that the provision is a reenactment of old legislation, and only brings the amount up to the figure necessary for maintenance of work the engineers are doing, to the extent the Senator from New York has suggested, I have no difficulty in concurring in his present recommendation. However, I should like to have inserted in the RECORD a letter I have received from the Chief of Army Engineers discussing this particular amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, March 5, 1935.

Hon. CHARLES L. McNARY,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: I have been advised that the Appropriations Subcommittee which conducted hearings on the War Department appropriation bill, in its report on this bill reduced the appropriations. tion item for the preservation and maintenance of river and harbor works by $10,000,000.

appropriation bill, in its report on this bill reduced the appropriation item for the preservation and maintenance of river and harbor works by $10,000,000.

I believe that this reduction was due to a misunderstanding that the appropriation of $34,057,270, as provided in the House bill, appears to represent an increase of approximately $10,000,000 over the appropriation for last year. This increase is only apparent, and does not represent an increase in the funds which will be made available to this Department, as it includes all funds formerly provided under the permanent appropriations. These permanent appropriations which in the past have provided for the operation and care of locks and dams, the removal of sunken wrecks, the maintenance and operation of dams, etc., have aggregated approximately $8,500,000 per year during recent years, and in the appropriation for the fiscal year 1936 the amounts reported necessary for this purpose were estimated at $8,218,017. Congress during its last session, in Public, No. 473, Seventy-third Congress, repealed the permanent definite and indefinite appropriations in order that the estimates formerly cared for by these appropriations might thereafter be included in the regular annual Budget estimates.

The appropriation of $34,057,270 provided in the House bill contains $8,218,017 hitherto provided by the permanent appropriations, making the comparable appropriation for the maintenance of river and harbor works for the fiscal year 1936, $25,839,253, as compared to the appropriation last year of $23,965,645. As the unobligated balance at the end of this fiscal year will be less than that at the end of the preceding fiscal year, the total funds made available to the Department under the appropriation in the House bill would be approximately the same as made available last year, although these funds will have to provide for the increased maintenance of completed river and harbor projects authorized by the Administration of Public Works. The reduction of $10,000,000 would leave going basis, with serious consequences to our commercial navigation.

It is not practicable to obtain funds for this purpose from the Administration of Public Works. That Administration has provided funds for the new work undertaken by the Department of the new work undertaken by the Department during the past 2 years, but maintenance operations must be cared for with regularly appropriated funds. The importance of assuring continuous maintenance in the interests of navigation renders it essential that funds for this purpose be at the disposal of the Secretary of War for immediate application as needed.

Very truly yours,

E. M. MARKHAM. Major General, Chief of Engineers.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I take it that the motion should be to increase the amount recommended by the committee by $3,000,000, making it $27,057,270.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to be advised as to the reason for increasing the appropriation. There must have been some testimony before the committee or some valid reason inducing them to reduce the appropriation from $34,000,000 plus to $24,000,000 plus. It seems to me that, before we consent to an increase over the amount recommended by the Senate committee, we ought to know the

Mr. COPELAND. Unfortunately there was no testimony whatever before our committee as to the item, and I think some of us misunderstood the penciled annotations as to the amount appropriated last year, which is very apparent from a copy of the letter from the Chief of Army Engineers which I have had. He makes a very good case that they ought to have more money for maintenance of their various activities. This does not provide for any new item; it is simply for carrying on activities now in progress.

Mr. KING. In addition to the $24,000,000, would there be $15,000,000 for the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and additional appropriations for emergency funds for flood control, and so forth?

Mr. COPELAND. That was the only change we made in the bill as it came from the House relating to the Army Engineers. I am satisfied that we went further than we should have gone.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, what does the Senator from New York now propose?

Mr. COPELAND. I propose that the figure should be changed on line 25 to $27,057,270 instead of $24,057,270. I move that the committee amendment be amended to increase the amount by $3,000,000.

Mr. FLETCHER. Making it $27,000,000 plus?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes. Mr. FLETCHER. That is $7,000,000 less than the House appropriated.

Mr. COPELAND. The Chief of Army Engineers, in the letter sent to the Senator from Oregon, and also to me, indicates that he could get along with a little less than $8,000,000 more, but since we had no testimony on the matter, and the House committee had, I thought we would give them the benefit here of $3,000,000 more than the committee had provided for, take the item to conference, and then, in conference, the Army engineers could be called before us to say whether or not the Senate would be justified in a further

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, with the understanding that the matter may be adjusted in conference, I do not object to that; but my own idea is that we should simply reject the committee amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. I desire to say for myself, as one member of the committee, that I should not be willing to do that because we had no testimony whatever on the subject.

Mr. FLETCHER. No; that is the reason why we should not venture to change the House provision. We have nothing to support us in making the change.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I leave the question to the Senate to decide.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 66, line 25, it is proposed to strike out "$34,057,270", and in lieu of the committee amendment to insert "$27,057,270."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, we have some other amendments which are legislative in their nature. We did not care to incorporate them in the bill as committee amendments, but I will frankly state that they are legislative in their nature.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator object to my offering an amendment which does not relate to any legislative matter?

Mr. COPELAND. I suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that he let us finish the amendments we have. There are only two or three.

I send to the desk the first of the amendments to which I have referred.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 66, line 19, after the word printed" where it occurs the second time, it is proposed to insert the words "with illustrations", so as to read:

And such surveys as may be printed during a recess of Congress shall be printed with illustrations as documents of the next succeeding session of Congress.

Mr. President, I make a point of order. I should like to hear an explanation of that amendment from the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Chairman of the Committee on Printing, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN]. is present in the Chamber and can make the explanation requested.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, a provision was contained in the Army appropriation bill of last year authorizing the reports of Army engineers to be printed. Some of those reports have illustrations, and we desire to include the words with illustrations."

Mr. CLARK. I have no objection. Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, there is a standing order of the Appropriations Committee with regard to legislative matters.

Mr. HAYDEN. A motion was made in the committee directing the chairman to offer this amendment on the floor. and he is doing so pursuant to the direction of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. The next amendment is offered because the House committee overlooked inserting this language in the bill, and sent it to us with the request that it be included in the bill, so that it may be considered in conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 22, after line 24, it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided, That laundry charges, other than for service now rendered without charge, shall be so adjusted that earnings in conjunction with the value placed upon service rendered without charge shall aggregate an amount at least equal to the cost of maintaining and operating laundries and dry-cleaning plants.

Mr. COPELAND. The purpose of this amendment is to do what the House thought it had done—to make clear that the charge for laundry service in the Army should cover its cost. There is no appropriation involved, but an admonition to the Army to make the laundry pay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I offer another amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, line 20, after the numerals "$9,257,465", it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That notwithstanding the suspension during the fiscal years 1933, 1934, and 1935 of the longevity pay increases provided for in the tenth paragraph of section 1 of the Pay Adjustment Act of 1922, the personnel (active or retired) so affected shall be credited with service rendered subsequently to June 30, 1932, in computing their active or retired pay accruing subsequently to June puting their active or retired pay accruing subsequently to June 30, 1932, in computing their active or retired pay accruing subsequently to June 30, 1935: Provided further, That this section shall not be construed as authorizing the payment of back longevity pay for the fiscal years 1933, 1934, and 1935, which would have been paid during such years but for the suspension aforesaid.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I make a point of order against that amendment, but I will reserve it pending an explanation. Mr. COPELAND. The explanation given by the War Department is as follows:

When the Congress took the 15 percent, the 10 percent, and the 5 percent away from all Federal employees it likewise took an additional amount away from the commissioned personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Public Health, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Coast Guard by depriving them of counting service for longevity pay, so that this personnel were unfortunately discriminated against by having a double cut in their pay. This is because the whole principle of pay for the commissioned personnel of the above services is based on a small initial salary, gradually increased by length of service, and to eliminate from an officer's life the 3 years 1933, 1934, and 1935, as contemplated unless this restriction is removed and overcome the Comptroller's decision of June 29, 1934, is manifestly unjust. manifestly unjust

The President in his Budget message recommended the removal of this double cut and submitted the language he desired to accomplish this purpose, and which is the language proposed to include in the bill now under consideration, as follows: Page 10, line 20, following numerals:

following numerals:

"Provided, That notwithstanding the suspension during the fiscal years 1933, 1934, and 1935 of the longevity increases provided for in the tenth paragraph of section 1 of the Pay Adjustment Act of 1922, the personnel (active or retired) so affected shall be credited with service rendered subsequently to June 30, 1932, in computing their active or retired pay accruing subsequently to June 30, 1935: Provided further, That this section shall not be construed as authorizing the payment of back longevity pay for the fiscal years 1933, 1934, and 1935 which would have been paid during such years but for the suspension aforesaid."

The inclusion of this language does not increase the Budget rec-

The inclusion of this language does not increase the Budget recommendations one cent, nor the committee recommendations one cent, and is merely to carry out the recommendations of the President in the matter.

The entire matter is to correct or, rather, make clear the intent of Congress. Certainly there was no thought of permanently reducing the pay of any selected group of employees, which will be the case if we do not allow the counting of this service, already performed, and not allow him to count 3 years of his life.

No other group of Federal employees are now so discriminated against, our commissioned officers of all the uniformed services being the only ones so affected.

It is not known why this provision was not inserted in the House of Representatives. However, as the War Department bill is the first one to come before the Senate carrying payments for this class of personnel, it is thought to be the proper plan to correct this

That is the reason why the Secretary of War sent down the amendment.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I do not recall that that matter was discussed in the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. It was not. That is frankly stated here.

Mr. GLASS. Then, not having been discussed in the committee, and being without question legislative in character, I feel compelled to make a point of order against the amendment. I do not know anything about it, and other members of the committee do not know anything about it. They just come to me and say that it was not discussed in the committee; and under the resolution of the committee the Senator from New York is obligated to make a point of order against his own amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. I am submitting the amendment. I realize that it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. GLASS. I shall be obliged to make the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. COPELAND. I send to the desk another amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 7, after the numerals "$5,841,118", it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided further, That, effective from and after July 1, 1935, the value of one subsistence allowance, as that term is used in section 5 of the Pay Readjustment Act of June 10, 1922 (42 Stat. 628), as amended, shall be and remain fixed at 60 cents per day; and the rate for one room for the purpose of computing the money allowance for rental of quarters authorized in section 6 of said act shall be and remain fixed at $20 per month.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I make a point of order on that amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. This matter was considered by the committee, Mr. President.

Mr. GLASS. It was?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes. The other amendment which I presented was not considered by the committee. This amendment, however, was considered by it. Argument was presented, and the amendment was recommended by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to. Mr. KING. Mr. President, was the last point of order sustained? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order was not insisted upon. Mr. GLASS. No; under the circumstances I did not feel that I could insist upon the point of order, though it clearly lies against the amendment. Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York state the reasons for the amendment? If they are valid reasons, I shall have no objection. I do not know why the amendment was not considered by the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it was considered by the committee.

Mr. KING. I think it is a vice to load down appropriation bills with independent new legislation. In the House it cannot be done. There is a rule against it.

Mr. COPELAND. This particular matter was given consideration by the committee, and testimony taken on it.

Mr. GLASS. The hazard of the thing, Mr. President, is that under rule XVI of the Senate, if the point of order should now be made and the Chair should sustain the point of order, the whole bill would have to go back to the committee, and I suggest to the Senator from New York that he is taking a great risk when he offers such an amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, let me say to my friend from Virginia that this amendment is not printed in the bill. This is a legislative item, frankly conceded by the committee to be a legislative item.

Mr. GLASS. If it is a legislative item, the Senator should know that it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. COPELAND. I know that.

Mr. GLASS. Then suppose the point of order is made. The bill goes right back to the committee.

Mr. COPELAND. I do not think so, because this is not one of the regular items in the bill. This is a matter which is presented entirely outside of the bill.

Mr. GLASS. I do not feel like taking the responsibility of making the point of order when the Senator himself is under instructions from the committee to make a point of order against amendments proposing legislation. I do not know anything about this item.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am not familiar with the character of the amendment but I should like to say to the Senator from Virginia that I think he is mistaken with regard to the application of the rule. If the amendment should be adopted, the bill would not go back to the committee. The rule merely operates upon the amendment which is offered.

Mr. GLASS. If the amendment should be adopted; but suppose the Chair should hold it to be out of order?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Oregon will permit me to interrupt, the rule regarding the automatic recommittal where a point of order is made against legislation on an appropriation bill—

Mr. GLASS. Refers to matters incorporated in the bill.
Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Refers to matters incorporated in the bill by the committee. If a point of order should be made against any of the amendments, the Senator from New York is offering from the floor, it would not invoke that portion of the rule which relates exclusively to amendments adopted by the committee in committee. So there would be no hazard that the bill would have to be recommitted if against some of the amendments points of order were raised.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if the adoption of this amendment will not necessitate an increase in the appropriation for subsistence or in the general appropriation in the bill?

Mr. COPELAND. It will not. The law prescribes now exactly what is proposed by the amendment, that is, 60 cents a day for subsistence and $20 a room for rent, but the Economy Act made a sort of sliding scale. It left to the Secretary of Labor the finding of a place where cheaper quarters or cheaper subsistence could be obtained. There have been found places in some sections of the country where the rental may be $13 instead of $20. In practical operation that is extremely embarrassing to the Army, and so it is desired to write into the appropriation bill what is now the law, namely, that the rate shall be 60 cents a day for subsistence and $20 for rent.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I will not make the point of order. I attended the meeting of the Appropriations Committee, but I have no recollection whatever that this matter was presented there or discussed. However, the Senator from New York being chairman of the subcommittee, and having devoted a great deal of time to the matter, I do not feel like embarrassing him by making points of order. So that if the Senate wants to adopt these amendments, it may go ahead and do so.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire if the amendment now pending is not identical with Senate bill 1940 which is on the calendar as an independent measure?

Mr. COPELAND. Which bill has been reported by the Military Affairs Committee?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. I presume that it is. I am not a member of the Military Affairs Committee, but I do not think there is any question about it. The matter has even been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget and the Budget Bureau says that it is not in conflict with the financial program of the President. There is not anything involved in it except the occasional prospect that an officer somewhere may be so stationed that, instead of being able to pay $20 per person for quarters for himself, his wife, and family, he would have to put it down to $13 or $18 because the Secretary of Labor found a way to do it. The provision is similar to the bill which has been recommended by the Military Affairs Committee.

Mr. AUSTIN. That being true, is it not also true that the amendment is not within the inhibition of the rule?

Mr. FLETCHER. There has been no point of order made against it.

Mr. COPELAND. I do not think that a point of order has been made against it, as a matter of fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been announced by the Chair that the amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well.

Now, I wish to call attention to page 11, line 10, because of a letter I have had from some flight surgeons saying that by striking out certain language in line 10 there will be no more flight surgeons. As a matter of fact, the committee struck out this language in order that the medical officers of the Army may be on exactly the same plane as the nonmedical officers of the Army, and so that the Army may, if it wishes, assign any number of surgeons to air-flight service. In any event, it is not intended to restrict the number of flight surgeons. I wanted the Record to show that that was the intent of the committee. The last amendment I have to offer is the one which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 45, line 20, after the word "purpose", it is proposed to insert:

: Provided further, That hereafter there shall be allowed at the United States Military Academy 3 cadets for each Senator, Representative, Delegate in Congress, and Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, 5 for the District of Columbia, and 132 from the United States at large, in addition to the number now authorized to be appointed from the enlisted men of the Regular Army and National Guard, and the sons of deceased officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines.

Mr. KING. I raise the point, of order against that amend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I should not be quite satisfied not to make a plea for the amendment, if the Senator will withhold his point of order for a moment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the amendment may embrace a very meritorious provision, but we have discovered in the past many evils resulting from legislation general in character upon appropriation bills. Appropriation bills ought not to be the vehicle upon which to secure general legislation, even though the legislation may be meritorious.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, my recollection is that this amendment is in the same language as a bill which has been reported favorably by a standing committee of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER.. The point of order is sustained.

The bill is still before the Senate and open to amendment. Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, to come in on page 50, line 3, after the numerals "$5,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 50, line 3, after the numerals "$5,000", it is proposed to insert the following:

And such increase shall include an air squadron for the State of Mississippi.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I merely desire to say that the amendment will merely enable the National Guard of Mississippi to have an air squadron. Unfortunately, it now has none. The officers of the National Guard there have taken it up many times with the Department here, and they are all in favor of it, including General MacArthur, with whom I talked, and General Leech, Chief of Militia, and so I am very anxious to have this provision incorporated in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. There is one other amendment, Mr. President, which I desire to offer.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, just a moment before the Chair rules. I have no disposition to object to what the Senator from Mississippi proposes, but I want the Senator to know that this is not like buying a package of peanuts.

Mr. HARRISON. I appreciate that. I may say to the Senator that if the war council objects to it in conference, I shall feel impelled in that event not to insist upon it.

Mr. GLASS. The war council is not going to object to anything that will cost the Government $375,000. Of course, they are not going to object to it.

Mr. HARRISON. If it does not appeal to the members of the conference committee, then I shall have no further recourse. Permit me to say, however, that I am very much obliged to the Senator from New York and to the Senate for having accepted the amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New York, in view of this grant, not considered and not having come before the committee, to the great State of Mississippi, will not corresponding grants be made to all other States? My State has not an air station, and I have many letters in favor of an air base there. There is no better place to be found for such a base for the protection of the defenses of the United States than in that fine ! intermountain region, and I would suggest that in our spirit of generosity, the State of Utah, the State of Nevada, and other States also be permitted large appropriations for the establishment of air bases.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Would the Senator be willing to accept an amendment to his amendment to include three air squadrons for the State of Missouri? [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRISON. Let me go to another very important amendment. [Laughter.] I have another amendment to offer. I certainly thank my colleagues.

Vicksburg is a great city. There is a historic national cemetery there, but unfortunately there is room left for the interment of only a few more persons. A few more acres of ground are needed, and for the purpose of obtaining additional land I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 6, between lines 21 and 22, to insert the following new paragraph:

For purchase of additional land for the extension of the Vicksburg National Cemetery, $82,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed by the Senator from Missouri, on page 42, line 6, to strike out the numerals "$79,530" and to insert "$5,000,000", so as to make the paragraph read:

GAGES, DIES, AND JIGS FOR MANUFACTURE

For the development and procurement of gages, dies, jigs, and other special aids and appliances, including specifications and detailed drawings, to carry out the purpose of section 123 of the National Defense Act, approved June 3, 1916 (U. S. C., title 50, sec. 78), $5,000,000.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to increase the allowance for the purchase by the Secretary of War, as a matter of national defense, of jigs, dies, and gages, and other special devices and appliances.

It has been discovered by the Munitions Investigation Committee that the principal excuse frequently offered for the maintenance of private manufacture of munitions is as a stand-by matter in time of war. In other words, it is universally asserted by the War Department as well as others that it is impossible for the Government to have sufficient plant capacity to manufacture its own munitions and expand it in the event of war.

It is also in evidence before that committee that the principal reason for a lack of the ability to expand in the event of war lies in the lack of jigs, dies, and gages, and the particular elements necessary for the manufacture of munitions. For instance, at the beginning of the last war there were being manufactured in Government arsenals the very best military rifles ever devised in the history of the world, as is admitted by the common consent of all military authorities. But the capacity of the Government arsenals for the manufacture of Springfield rifles was inadequate for the needs of the Government during the war when the Army was expanded to war strength. Therefore, because the Remington Arms Co. and the Winchester Arms Co. had been tied up in the manufacture of the British Enfield rifles, it was necessary for 2,000,000 American troops in France to employ, throughout the whole period of the war, an extremely inferior rifle, as all military authorities admitted.

One of the principal features of the National Defense Act was the provision that the Secretary of War might be empowered to purchase jigs, dies, gages, and other tools which would enable the Government in the event of war to take over ordinary manufacturing plants and equip them for the manufacture of munitions. That feature of the National Defense Act has been consistently and universally ignored by the Congress. When we had Colonel Harris, Chief of the War Plans Division of the War Department before us, I asked why that feature of the National Defense Act had not been put into effect, and he stated very frankly that it was because the Congress had not appropriated the money. I asked if he did not believe, from the standpoint of war planning, that the very best and most economical and most efficient money Congress could spend would be under that provision of the National Defense Act. He said he thought it undoubtedly was. He said the Congress had been appropriating about $60,000 a year for a project on which the Department could profitably and well spend at least $5.000,-000 a year with the prospect of saving the Government hundreds of millions of dollars in the event of war.

Therefore, I have offered the amendment for the purpose of answering the argument that the maintenance of private manufacture of munitions is necessary in order to put the Nation in a state of preparedness for war. I offer the amendment very seriously, and in contemplation of a vote I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	La Follette	Robinson
Ashurst	Couzens	Logan	Russell
Austin	Cutting	Lonergan	Schall
Bachman	Dickinson	Long	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Dieterich	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bankhead	Donahey	McCarran	Shipstead
Barbour	Duffy	McGill	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McKellar	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	George	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gerry	Metcalf	Townsend
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Trammell
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Truman
Bulow	Gore	Murphy	Tydings
Burke	Guffey	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hale	Neely	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Harrison	Norbeck	Wagner
Capper	Hastings	Norris	Walsh
Carey	Hatch	Nye	Wheeler
Clark	Hayden	O'Mahoney	White
Connally	Johnson	Pope
Coolidge	Keyes	Radcliffe
Copeland	King	Reynolds

Mr. DIETERICH. I announce that my colleague [Mr. LEWIS] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. My colleague the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are detained from the Senate by

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] are necessarily detained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. CLARK. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, this is an important amendment. I feel that we ought to have a record vote upon it. I hope we may have a sufficient second to have

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I do not think the amendment has been stated from the desk. At least, I am not familiar with its provisions. May it not first be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 42, line 6, it is proposed to strike out "$79,530" and insert in lieu thereof "$5,000,-000", so as to read:

GAGES, DIES, AND JIGS FOR MANUFACTURE

For the development and procurement of gages, dies, jigs, and other special aids and appliances, including specifications and detailed drawings, to carry out the purpose of section 123 of the National Defense Act, approved June 3, 1916 (U. S. C., title 50, sec. 78), $5,000,000.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I observe that the amendment proposes an increase of nearly $5,000,000. Will the Senator state the reasons for offering the amendment?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I explained the amendment at some length before the quorum call, but I shall be glad to explain it again.

I will state to the Senator from Oregon and to the Senate that the National Defense Act contained a provision which authorized the Secretary of War to prepare, or cause to be prepared, to purchase or otherwise procure, gages, dies, jigs, tools, and other things which might take the place of stand-by factory units in the event of war. That provision in the National Defense Act has been largely ignored. The purpose of inserting that provision in the National Defense Act, as I pointed out a little while ago, and which I am glad to repeat, was to take care of such a situation as this. At the declaration of war in 1917 there was being manufactured in the arsenals of the United States what by common consent of all military authorities was regarded as the best rifle in the world. Of course the capacity of those arsenals was entirely inadequate to supply the needs of an Army which was expanded to 4,000,000 men, but when the effort was made to bring into operation private factories, private makers of munitions, it was discovered, for instance, that the Remington Arms Co. and the Winchester Arms Co. were jigged and tooled up for the manufacture of the British Enfield rifle, by common consent a far inferior rifle to the Springfield rifle, and throughout the war American troops were forced to fight with a rifle inferior to that which was already in existence and in process of manufacture in the United States.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether this proposal was submitted to the Appropriations Committee of the Senate.

Mr. CLARK. It was not. This situation was brought out in the hearings of the Special Committee Investigating the Manufacture of Munitions.

When Colonel Harris, the head of the War Plans Division of the War Department, was before the committee, I asked him why this provision had never been carried into effect. He stated to the committee that it was because Congress had never been willing to appropriate the money for it. I then asked him if he did not believe that such an appropriation would be absolutely the best, the cheapest, the most economical, and the most efficient method of providing for the national defense, and he replied that he certainly thought it would be. I then asked him how much money, in his opinion, could be profitably spent by the War Department under that provision of the National Defense Act, and he replied that he thought $5,000,000 could be profitably expended in the first year.

I will say further to the Senator from Oregon that my particular purpose in offering this amendment was to answer the argument which has been constantly and universally made in this country that it is necessary to promote and keep alive and to be subservient to the private manufacturers of munitions because they are necessary as stand-by units in time of war. This provision of the National Defense Act was originally designed for the purpose of making the Government, as far as possible, independent of such agencies in time of war; and it is for that purpose that I offer the amendment.

Mr. McNARY. May I ask the Senator if this matter was ever brought to the attention of the War Department? Hasthe amendment been submitted to the Director of the

Mr. CLARK. It has not been submitted to the Director of the Budget. I will say to the Senator from Oregon, however, that it is authorized by law; and it was on the testimony of the representatives sent before the Munitions Committee by the War Department itself, brought to a meeting of the committee by the Secretary of War, the Chief of Staff, and The Assistant Secretary of War, that this amendment was offered.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, indisputably the amendment is subject to a point of order; but, not being in charge of the bill, I do not desire to invoke it.

Mr. CLARK. I shall be glad if the Senator will state why the amendment is subject to a point of order. It simply increases, for a purpose authorized by law, an amount carried in the bill. I shall be glad, therefore, if the Senator will explain why the amendment is subject to a point of order.

Mr. McNARY. I think that can be done in a very few words. It is an item which has not been approved by or submitted to the Director of the Budget.

Mr. CLARK. It has to do with a subject authorized by law. I think the Senator is in error as to the Senate rule on the subject. If the Senator desires to make a point of order, I shall be glad to have it ruled on by the Chair.

Mr. McNARY. I stated, and I still cling to that view. that in my judgment the amendment is subject to a point of order. At this time, however, I refer the matter back to the Senator in charge of the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I should dislike to raise the point of order against this amendment. I find myself personally very much in sympathy with what the Senator from Missouri has in mind; but it is a matter which we have not considered of late in the Senate. I suppose it was considered years ago.

The Senator from Missouri, and several other Senators, have had the benefit of the testimony before the Munitions Committee. I know how earnest these Senators have been in studying this great problem. I have no question that one of the recommendations they will ultimately make to us will include this item, but I do not think a matter which involves $5,000,000, which was not estimated for, which was given no consideration in the committee, should be added to the bill.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the Senator speaks of $5,000,000. The Senator's own committee made a change in the House bill, in the amendment which I have given notice I am going to move to reconsider, which will certainly amount to at least 10 times $5,000,000.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator certainly would think it was a very commendable act if we struck out something of that kind

Mr. CLARK. No; the committee agreed to the amend-

Mr. COPELAND. The item for the increase of the Army came to us from the House.

Mr. CLARK. Yes; but a change was made by the Senate committee which certainly will increase the expenditure at least tenfold.

Mr. COPELAND. At any rate, regardless of all that, I do not think this is an amendment which should be favorably acted upon now. I am not a parliamentarian. I am not sure what the parliamentary situation is. I desire to ask the Chair, if I raise the point of order against this proposal, in view of the fact that it violates rule XVI, what will be the ruling of the Chair?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if the Senator from New York desires to put a moot question up to the Chair, I should like to be heard on it.

Section 123 of the National Defense Act provides:

Section 123 of the National Defense Act provides:

Procurement of gages, dies, jigs, and so forth, necessary for manufacture of arms, and so forth: The Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to prepare or cause to be prepared, to purchase or otherwise procure, such gages, dies, jigs, tools, fixtures, and other special aids and appliances, including specifications and detailed drawings, as may be necessary for the immediate manfacture, by the Government and by private manufacturers, of arms, ammunition, and special equipment necessary to arm and equip the land forces likely to be required by the United States in time of war: Provided, That in the expenditure of any sums appropriated to carry out the purposes of this section the existing laws prescribing competition in the procurement of supplies by purchase shall not govern, whenever in the opinion of the Secretary of War such action will be for the best interest of the public service. of the public service.

The pending measure, as passed by the House and reported to the Senate committee, carries, in pursuance of section 123, an appropriation of $79,530. My amendment only goes to striking out certain numerals and inserting other numerals. This matter has been estimated for, it has been passed by the Bureau of the Budget, it has been passed by the House of Representatives, it has been reported by the Senate committee, and this is simply a proposal to strike out one sum and insert another sum.

I invite the Senator from Oregon, or the Senator from New York, to point out any rule which prohibits the Senate of the United States from increasing a sum estimated for.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the Senator said something about this matter having been passed by the Bureau of the Budget and having been estimated for. I do not understand that this $5,000,000 has ever been estimated for.

Mr. CLARK. That is perfectly true, but I am now discussing the point of order.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator has said that the estimate that passed the Budget was for $79,530.

Mr. CLARK. Does the Senator contend that there is any rule of the Senate against increasing an amount estimated by the Bureau of the Budget?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I call the able Senator's attention to rule XVI of the standing rules of the Senate. Clearly, in all cases of appropriation bills where an item is increased without the sanction of a standing committee or a select committee, or an estimate of the Budget, it falls within the rule, unless it is to carry out an existing statute. That, I think, is sufficient answer to the Senator.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, that is precisely the situation. This amendment falls exactly within the proviso just referred to by the able Senator from Oregon. I thank the Senator for calling my attention to that, because it exactly explains my position.

Mr. McNARY. If an existing law justifies the amendment, it does not fall within the rule. I am not familiar with any such existing statute.

Mr. CLARK. That is the reason why I invited the attention of the Senator from Oregon to the statute. I read the statute a few moments ago. The citation of the statute is contained in the paragraph which I have proposed to amend.

Mr. McNARY. I have not read the statute, nor have I had it before me. The mere fact that a statute on the books has some reference to a subject matter does not bring it within the rule.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, the specific statute referred to in the appropriation bill itself, at the page 42, is a specific authorization for the specific proposition for which the item of $79,530 is to be appropriated, and the act itself is a specific authorization for as much appropriation as Congress may see fit to make. In other words, it comes completely within the proviso to which the Senator himself just referred. The rule reads, in part:

All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law.

Mr. President, that is precisely the situation. Just a moment ago I read the provision of section 123 of the National Defense Act, which specifically authorizes this appropriation, and the same section, section 123 of the National Defense Act, is cited in the terms of this proposed act itself as the authority for the appropriation. If any Senator desires to make the point of order, I should be glad to have him do so.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it is so interesting a point that I should like to have the Chair rule upon it. I make the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGnl in the chair). The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate? The Clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. TYDINGS (after having voted in the affirmative). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Metcalf]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. LOGAN. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis]. I do not know how he would vote were he present, and I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and vote "nay."

Mr. GIBSON (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the junior Senator from California [Mr. McApoo] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted. Mr. GIBSON. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from California, and in his absence I withdraw my vote. Were I permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON. I regret to announce that my colleague [Mrs. Caraway] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

I also regret to announce that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overrow] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

I desire to announce the following general pairs on this question: The Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] with the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Shipstead], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Schall].

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gorge], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], the Senator from California [Mr. Mc-Addol, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], the Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business.

The result was-yeas 18, nays 48, as follows:

		TEAS—18
Adams Austin Burke Byrnes Carey	Coolidge Copeland Dickinson Fletcher Hale	Keyes King McNary Norbeck Sheppard	Townsend Tydings White
	can borrondo N	IAYS-48
Bachman Bailey Bankhead Barbour Black Bone Brown Bulkley Bulow Capper Clark Connally	Costigan Couzens Cutting Dieterich Donahey Duffy Frazier Gerry Glass Guffey Hastings Hatch	Hayden La Follette Logan Lonergan McCarran McKellar Minton Moore Murphy Murray Neely Nye	O'Mahoney Pope Radcliffe Robinson Russell Schwellenbach Smith Steiwer Thomas, Utah Truman Vandenberg Van Nuys
		VOTING-29	110,5
Ashurst Barkley Bilbo Borah Byrd Caraway Davis George	Gibson Gore Harrison Johnson Lewis Long Maloney McAdoo	McGill Metcalf Norris Overton Pittman Reynolds Schall Shipstead	Thomas, Okla. Trammell Wagner Walsh Wheeler

So the decision of the Chair was not sustained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark].

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, it will be noted that on the appeal from the ruling of the Chair I voted "nay" because I frankly thought the ruling of the Chair was in error; and although I am utterly opposed to the appropriation. and shall vote against it, and sincerely trust that the Senate will vote against it. I think the contention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] was correct from the parliamentary point of view. But, Mr. President, if we may without any estimate from the Budget, without any authorized recommendation from any source, increase this appropriation in the bill by $5,000,000, we may increase it in the same way by $50,000,000 or $150,000,000. I think it is a bad practice, and one in which the Senate should not indulge, to make appropriations of millions of dollars without any estimate whatsoever, or without any authorized recommendation whatsoever, merely upon the basis of a statement of some Army officer to some member of a committee investigating munitions.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I merely desire to say before the vote is taken on the amendment that whether or not the amendment is agreed to, it is my purpose, immediately after the vote is taken on it, to make a motion which will have the effect of saving many times more than the increase now advocated, and possibly to save the American people, in the long run, billions of dollars and millions of lives by the diminution of danger of another war. I intend, as soon as this vote shall have been taken, to move to strike out the provision providing for the increase in the United States Army.

Mr. GLASS. But the Senate may not agree with the Senator and we may lose the $5,000,000 which is proposed to be appropriated under the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if we are going to undertake to precipitate a war by continuing the present vicious circle of increasing armament, then, in my opinion, the cheapest and most economical method of providing for the national defense, according to all the testimony that has been given, is through an appropriation for gauges, dies, and jigs for the most efficient prosecution of war if it should come.

Mr. GLASS. I am not an optimist about many things, but I do not believe we are going to have a war at any time soon.

Mr. CLARK. I hope the Senator from Virginia is right. I ask for the yeas and nays on this question.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, although I have discovered that the Chair and I are wrong about the rule—and I have been in the Senate long enough to have known a question to be decided both ways at one session—nevertheless, on its merits, I think this is an unreasonable request to make of the Senate.

I am not competent to discuss the merits of the proposal. I have such confidence in the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] that I know he would not recommend anything which did not appeal to him. The others of us are entitled to have the facts, however, and a standing committee of the Senate is entitled to know the particulars and to know why this additional amount should be provided.

I think we are reversing the procedure which should be followed when we insert in this casual way an item so large as $5,000,000 without any recommendation from the Department, without any estimate from the Budget, and without a single word of testimony in the committee.

I hope the amendment will fail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark].

Mr. CLARK. On that question I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GIBSON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from California [Mr. McApool. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. TYDINGS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement that I made on the last vote, I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GLASS. My colleague, the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrn], is necessarily detained from the Senate. If present he would vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON. I wish to announce that the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are detained by illness.

I also wish to announce that the following Senators are necessarily detained: The Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], the Senator from California [Mr. McAdoo], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Pittman], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], the Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler].

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 40, as follows:

ESIGNATURES STA	Y	EAS-35
Barbour Black Bone Brown Bulkley Capper Clark Costigan Couzens	Cutting Duffy Frazier Guffey Harrison Hatch La Follette Long McCarran	McGill McKellar Moore Murray Neely Norris Nye O'Mahoney Pope	Reynolds Schall Schwellenbach Shipstead Thomas, Utah Truman Tydings Vandenberg
Charles Harry	N N	AYS-40
Adams Austin Bachman Bailey Bankhead Bulow Burke Byrnes Carey Connally	Coolidge Copeland Dickinson Dieterich Donahey Fletcher Gerry Glass Hale Hastings	Hayden Keyes King Logan Lonergan McNary Maloney Minton Murphy Norbeck VOTING—20	Radcliffe Robinson Russell Sheppard Smith Steiwer Townsend Van Nuys Walsh White
Ashurst Barkley Bilbo	Caraway Davis George	Johnson Lewis McAdoo	Pittman Thomas, Okla. Trammell

So Mr. CLARK's amendment was rejected.

Gibson

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment in lines 24 and 25, page 10, and line 1, page 11, was agreed to.

In addition to making the motion to reconsider that amendment I should like to give notice that, whether the motion prevails or not, it is my intention to move to strike out the provision applying to the increase of the standing Army

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it is now so late that I suggest we let the Senator's motion be pending until tomorrow.

Mr. CLARK. Very well, that is entirely agreeable to me.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I desire to give notice to Senators that tomorrow, upon the completion of the consideration of the pending War Department appropriation bill, it is my purpose to call up House Joint Resolution 117, dealing with relief and work relief.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

Mr. ROBINSON, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported favorably the following nominations:

John J. Muccio, of Rhode Island, now a Foreign Service officer of class 6 and a consul, to be also a secretary in the Diplomatic Service; and William P. Cochran, Jr., of Pennsylvania, now a Foreign Service officer, unclassified, and a vice consul of career, to be also a secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGill in the chair). The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The calendar is in order.

THE CALENDAR-POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the nominations of sundry postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters on the calendar may be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

As in legislative session,

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate, in legislative session, took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, March 7, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 6 (legislative day of Mar. 4), 1935

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS-TEXAS

A. Judson Pryor, Texarkana.

MINNESOTA

N. Elmie Lewis, Bertha. Emily M. Drexler, Brandon. James F. Doherty, Buhl. Ingval Lynner, Clarkfield. John K. Sloan, Coleraine. Helen I. Gervais, Currie. Edward A. Buckley, East Grand Forks. Catherine I. Ackerman, Eden Valley. Edward R. Siem, Elgin. LeRoy M. Schwartz, Evansville. Henry J. Widenhoefer, Fisher. Herbert C. Whaley, Fosston. Raymond E. Garden, Gary. Bertha T. Bot, Ghent. Carleton H. Leighty, Glenville. Charles B. Seipp, Hanley Falls. Michael E. Thompkins, Hector. Edith A. Marsden, Hendrum. Fritz von Ohlen, Henning. Florence D. Markham, Hopkins. William V. Kane, International Falls. Harry W. Simpson, Jasper. Hattie G. Haas, Lamberton. Peter J. Vasaly, Little Falls. Ole C. Olson, Littlefork. Jacob Ohlsen, Luverne. James V. Sweeney, Mahnomen. Fred E. Joslyn, Mantorville. Maude E. Williams, Mora. Justin I. Brown, Nevis. Leo F. Groos, North St. Paul. Frank S. Averill, Ogilvie. Harold T. Colbjornsen, Parkers Prairie. Linus E. Dougherty, Pine River. Raymond A. Linnihan, Red Lake Falls. William H. Wilson, Rushmore. Edward M. Swanson, Russell. John A. Henry, St. Cloud. William F. Krueger, Wykoff.

NORTH CAROLINA

Mortimer H. Mitchell, Aulander. Robert Lee Bridger, Bladenboro. Tasker T. Hawks, Norlina. Elias Carr Speight, Rocky Mount. G. Glenn Nichols, Sparta.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Lewis E. Smith, Alpena. Ian H. Maxwell, Delmont. Regina Trinen, Letcher. James R. Crowe, Yankton.

TEXA

Robert Rowntree, Bartlett.
Otto Hicks, Blum.
Earl B. Hopkins, Brazoria.
Theodore A. Low, Jr., Brenham.
Stanley F. Labus, Falls City.
Wallace J. Bludworth, Flatonia.
James F. Atkinson, Florence.
Robbie G. Ellis, Fort Davis.
Leonadis E. Eubanks, Groesbeck.
Sam H. Amsler, McGregor.
E. Otho Driskell, Mansfield.
Richard J. Bradford, Pettus.
Willis C. Giffin, Sabinal.

UTAH

John M. Bernhisel, Lewiston. Andrew J. Judd, Manti.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal and loving Father, on this day so filled with holy memories and with immeasurable teaching, we would withdraw to the secret place of God's pavilion. These are moments of solemn thoughts and we bend low in humility at the altar of mercy. We humbly confess our sins; the remembrance of them is grievous unto us; do Thou have mercy and forgive and let us hear Thy "depart in peace." Overturn the tables of traffic in the temples of our breasts, compass our grief, impress us with our mortality, and bless us with the song of deliverance. Strengthen us with a constant, assuring, spiritual power as a stream that breaks from the mountain side. O God of Bethel, pour into our minds wisdom and courage undaunted, and into our hearts mercy unrestrained; may they sound on the ivory pavement of truth and sincerity. Grant that the labor of this day bear the mark of distinction and intensity of desire to serve our beloved land. In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had concurred without amendment in a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 14. Concurrent resolution requesting the President of the United States to return to the House of Representatives the enrolled bill (H. R. 330) entitled "An act for the relief of Sophie de Sota."

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during the remainder of the week the Committee on Agriculture be permitted to sit during the sessions of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Doxey]?

There was no objection.

CURBING WAR PROFITS

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address given by my colleague from Ohio, Hon. FRANK L. KLOEB, over a Nation-wide hook-up on the subject of curbing war profits.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DUFFEY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include a radio address delivered by my colleague, Hon. Frank L. Kloeb, of Ohio, on invitation by the National Broadcasting Co., over a Nationwide hook-up, on March 5, 1935.

The radio address follows:

My friends, the Senate munitions investigation and the universal draft week of the American Legion have again brought before Congress and the people the question of curbing war profits in event of another war. This question involves primarily the study of the most effective method of curbing war-time inflation of prices, for from this evil naturally flow the resultant evils of profiteering, exorbitant cost to the Government, loss of morale to the men in the field and to the civilian population, and the inevitable depression that follows post-war deflation.

Profiteering in time of war by those who would take advantage of their government and of their fellow citizens is as old as civilization.

tion.

General Washington wrote of the Revolutionary War profiteers:
"No punishment is too great for the man who can build his greatness upon his country's ruin."
Some of our large fortunes were built during the Civil War upon the blood and the suffering of the manhood of America.

During the Spanish-American War we remember the scandal over embalmed beef, and the terrible suffering and death that followed its use.

After the declaration of these wars, the public and the soldiers in the field complained bitterly at the inflated prices of all necessary commodities and the inordinate profits of those who would take advantage of their fellow men. After the close of these wars, the prevention of a recurrence of these evils in the event of another war was seriously debated. Always time served to deader the recurrence of these wars, the prevention of these wars, the prevention of these wars, the subject consider the server of these wars. the memory of these outrages, until the subject ceased to be discussed and another war was upon us.

During the World War the American soldier carried a gun for $1 per day. I was one of them. The mechanic who fashioned the gun received $15 per day; the man who owned the factory received $15,000 per day. It was this inequity that affected the men in the service.

The American Legion, at its first convention in 1919, conceived the idea of the so-called "universal draft." It desired a law that would compel industry and labor to serve equally and without profit in time of war.

In 1931 Congress created the War Policies Commission, "to in restigate and report a feasible plan to promote peace and to equalize the burdens of war." The McSwain bill, now before the House, is the result of the efforts of that Commission. The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Disabled American Veterans have worked for what this measure substantially provides.

In past major wars history tells us that immediately after the declaration of war, because of speculation and a vastly increased demand, there comes a sudden stampede in prices. During the demand, there comes a sudden stampede in prices. Duri Civil War our efforts to control the stampede were feeble. we had entered the World War our effort was to so control the stampede as to bring the price leaders back on a level with their fellows. This we sought to accomplish through an excess-profits tax and a price-fixing commission. Some price leaders were checked by these means.

In studying this question of war-time infiation and its resultant evils, we must first arrive at the basic conclusion either of seeking to control the price stampede or of striking at the heart issue and preventing any stampede.

Either the device of an excess-profits tax or the commandeering by the Government of so-called "war industries" is advocated by those who see a price stampede as inevitable upon declaration of war.

war.

The excess-profits tax during the war did not prevent inflation. It helped to pyramid inflation. For example, the iron-ore producer had levied upon him an excess-profits tax. He, in turn, passed this on to the pig-iron producer as an element of cost. The pig-iron producer paid an excess-profits tax out of his profits and passed this on to the steel producer. Eventually, at the peak price, the Government, as the purchaser, paid the excessive cost, and thereby paid for the excess-profits taxes that it had previously collected. collected.

In the final analysis, it was the ultimate consumerpayer and the Government—who paid the excess-profits tax into the Treasury. This tax during the war penalized efficiency and rewarded inefficiency. It did not recover the excess profits; it did not keep prices down; it did not stimulate production. It did the opposite.

The excess-profits tax alone would not solve the problem.

Of those who advocate that the Government commandeer all -called "war industries", I ask this pertinent question: "What so-called are war industries?"

In a modern major war, practically every product contributes its part to the winning of the war. The economic strength of a nation is just as important as is its military strength. Assuming that we could define "war industries" and that the Government would commandeer these industries, it then must have the money to pay the men who expected the industries. the men who operate the industries. Government receives its money through taxation. Taxes are levied upon property and earnings. Every industry that is commandeered is so much property taken from under taxation. Eventually we arrive at complete socialization of all industry. After the close of the war endless problems would confront the Government in returning these properties to their rightful owners.

The first problem the Government would face in commandeering would be a constitutional one. The fifth amendment proing would be a constitutional one. The fifth amendment provides for reasonable compensation for property taken. When this power is exercised, the Government is required by the courts to pay reasonable compensation, which is the market price. If we permit the stampede of prices at the beginning of a war and then attempt the commandeering process, the Government becomes a purchaser of property at—or near—the peak of inflation.

I am not going into the question of the ability of the Government to operate industrial plants. For the Government to attempt to do so would so disrupt the economic structure of the Nation as to retard production seriously and thus interfere with winning the war.

the war

The third method proposed, which I consider the best solution The third method proposed, which I consider the best solution of the problem, is embodied in the McSwain bill now before the House. Under this bill the Executive is authorized to freeze prices as of a date prior to the declaration of war. By so doing, he would fix prices as of a date when business was being transacted under the normal law of supply and demand. A price ceiling would thus be established beyond which no prices could go, but under which prices might fluctuate. A price-fixing commission would then be established, with power to conduct hearings and raise or lower prices in order to correct inequities in the price structure. No man would have cause to complain, because reasonable compensation, considering the entire price level, would be received by everyone. evervone.

The speculator, knowing of the provisions for the freezing of prices, would refrain from speculation in advance of the declaration of war. There would ensue no undue inflation of prices and no deflation of the currency. The cost of living would remain fairly stable. All men would be working toward a common end—the same end toward which the men in the field were working—victory for the Nation.

No corruption of public officials—which follows unreasonable profits—would be experienced. The morale of the military and civilian population would be enhanced. There would be no demand for adjusted compensation or bonus to the service men after the war. Should the low-cost producer of a commodity in great demand receive inordinate profits, then an excess-profits tax could restore that profit to the Treasury. Operating under these conditions the tax would not pyramid prices because the price ceiling would prevent that. There would be no reaction and consequent depression at the close of the war, which always accompanies falling prices. The Nation would move from peace to war and from war to peace without serious disjointment of the economic structure. Business men would feel more confident in contracting for goods or services, knowing that prices would remain relatively stable. Labor would not complain when the cost of living did not increase. corruption of public officials—which follows unreasonable of living did not increase.

By the prevention of inflation the desired objectives would be accomplished. Peace, we desire above all else. By equalizing the burdens of war we enhance the probability of peace.

TWO YEARS OF DEMOCRATIC CONTROL

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include an address I delivered over the radio last night in conjunction with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KLOEB].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachuetts [Mr. TREADWAY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, 2 years ago yesterday the present Democratic administration took over the reins of government. It is therefore time that we take account of stock, balance the books of accomplishment and failure, and decide whether the administration has made good.

We all know that the election of 1932 came at a time of world-wide depression, and that there was a definite, psychological tendency toward a change of party control. Employment was scarce. It was easy to appeal to the husband out of a job and to the housewife lacking the needs of home. It was easy to persuade them to condemn the existing administration and to pin their faith to the assurances of prosperity to be gained by a change. Failure in this respect is apparent from the statistical returns showing that there are more than 10,000,000 unemployed and 19,000,000 on relief rolls.

Business is unable to make any substantial recovery because of Government interference. The basis of business prosperity is confidence. The uncertainty caused by daily changing policies necessarily breeds lack of confidence. A recent editorial written by one of the best known newspaper owners emphasized the fact that the Government should attend to its business and allow private business to manage its own affairs. A very excellent suggestion, but one far from reality at this time.

In his inaugural address President Roosevelt freely admitted that the legislation which he would propose would be an experiment. How long must business suffer from experiments? It is an interesting fact that the only new legislation tending toward permanent recovery was inherited from the last administration in the form of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation law. This Finance Corporation, created during the previous administration over the opposition of the then Democratic leaders, has done more to save the country from complete collapse than all the other alphabetical establishments combined.

Let me quote a brief paragraph from the Democratic platform of 1932:

We believe that a party platform is a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power, and that the people are entitled to know in plain words the terms of the contract to which they are asked to subscribe.

Listen to some of the contents of the covenant. It provided, among other things, for a reduction in the cost of government, for a balanced budget, for the elimination of extravagance, for the preservation of a sound currency at all hazards, for strengthening the antitrust laws, for the removal of Government from all field of private endeavor.

This covenant was endorsed in his acceptance speech by Candidate Roosevelt 100 percent. Promises are one thing and accomplishments are another. Besides failing to keep these promises, the Democratic Party under the Roosevelt leadership has brought about fundamental changes in our methods of legislation which never were submitted to the people for their consideration.

The Democratic administration has tremendously increased the cost of government by creating a monster Federal bureaucracy and adding to the Government pay roll nearly a hundred thousand new employees who have been appointed on a spoils basis rather than on a merit system. It has debased the dollar, nullified the antitrust laws, and is gradually putting the Federal Government into nearly every field of private enterprise.

These are only a few of the Democratic Party's broken pledges. The effort to control private enterprise is not limited by the size of the business involved. In fact, the small business man seems to be the hardest hit and the system of code control aids the big fellow.

To illustrate, there was in my district a small concern in a small community which cured hams and manufactured pork products. It took the surplus hogs from the nearby farmers and it gave employment, particularly in the wintertime, to about 30 or more people. The Government's control over business has caused this firm to fail, and the homes represented by those employees must resort to welfare aid. However, this incident accords with the testimony of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who said that the smaller and what he termed "inefficient" industries must give way.

There was no suggestion in the Democratic platform that constitutional government in this country would be suspended and that the Nation would undergo a "peaceful revolution" in which the governmental structure would be overhauled by a professorial "brain trust" not responsible to the people.

The Democratic Party has failed to keep faith with the American people in accordance with its platform and its campaign promises of 1932. During the campaign Mr. Roosevelt several times stated that the cost of Government must be reduced. In one speech he accused the last Republican administration of being the "greatest spending administration in peace times in all our history."

However, upon examining the records of the past 2 years we find that the present administration has increased expenditures from $5,143,000,000 in 1933 to $7,105,000,000 in 1934, with an estimated increase to $8,581,000,000 in 1935. This latter figure is 60 percent in excess of the 1933 cost. The Budget for 1936 indicates an expenditure of not less than $8,520,000,000, so it is evident the upward trend will be continued.

The preelection ledger hardly agrees with the postelection results. The figures I have cited, which are taken from official Government sources, give President Roosevelt's own administration, rather than the previous Republican one, the rather dubious distinction of being what he termed the "greatest spending administration in peace times in all our history."

Mr. Roosevelt, in one of his campaign speeches, said:

It is my pledge that this dangerous kind of financing shall be stopped and that rigid governmental economy shall be forced by a stern and unrelenting administration policy of living within our income.

At another time Mr. Roosevelt said:

Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continued deficits. * * * Stop the deficits. * * *

Worse than the record of extravagance which I have cited is the fact that the billions spent have brought about no permanent recovery. The administration's attempt to squander the Nation back to prosperity has utterly failed, and the country is left with nothing to show for the experience but a tremendous increase in the public debt, which eventually must be paid by the taxpayers.

The Democratic administration has burdened industry and agriculture with all sorts of restrictions, and yet it wonders why they do not recover. Its legislative enactments work at cross purposes with one another.

Under the A. A. A. the administration sought to raise the farmer's income, but under the N. R. A. it took the increase away from him in the form of higher prices for what he had to buy

Under the N. R. A. the administration sought to raise the wage level, but under the A. A. A. it took any increase away in the form of higher prices for food and clothing by means of the burdensome and excessive processing taxes.

The N. R. A. has driven many a small businessman to the wall, and the processing taxes imposed under the A. A. A. have put many a producer out of business, like the small packing-house firm which I mentioned.

Under the A. A. A. the administration has curtailed the production of agricultural commodities, but under the recent act authorizing the President to make tariff bargaining arrangements with foreign countries, it has paved the way for increased importations of such commodities from abroad, seriously damaging our own farmers.

Under the N. R. A. the administration has increased production costs, but under the Reciprocal Tariff Act it is reducing tariffs and allowing greater competition from foreign producers who pay starvation wages and who are not subject to control in hours of employment, working conditions, and so forth.

Only recently a trade agreement was concluded with Cuba. The negotiations were conducted in secret, and not until the agreement was signed did its terms become public. Among other things, the President granted reductions in our duties on Cuban sugar, tobacco, potatoes, tomatoes, and other products. Under this agreement, 300,000 tons more sugar will be imported from Cuba to displace cane and beet sugar produced in this country, and the garden truck business of Southern States will be injured by the other items. Negotiations are now under way with some 14 other foreign countries which produce commodities in competition with ours. The one just concluded with Belgium still further injures our industrial recovery.

As a Republican, I believe that the interests of this country can best be promoted by maintaining the protective tariff, rather than by destroying it. The unemployed never can be put back to work by increasing our purchases abroad, nor can the condition of agriculture be improved by allowing a greater importation of farm products. After all, it should be remembered that the United States is the greatest home market on the face of the earth. We normally consume within our own borders 90 percent of what we produce, and export only 10 percent. Our prosperity is dependent upon the 90 percent and not upon the 10 percent. Even in 1929, the value of our exports was only $5,000,000,000 as compared with a national income of $90,000,000,000. The place for American dollars is at home.

In conclusion, I want to point out that domestic recovery depends upon a revival of business. That must be the foundation upon which reemployment and everything else depends. Business cannot and will not revive as long as the Democratic administration is permitted to put stumbling blocks in its way. The American people have it in their power to say whether the present policies shall be continued. I am sure that the day is not far distant when the electorate will be clamoring for a return to power of the Republican Party.

This brief résumé of 2 years of Democratic control shows that in taking inventory the liabilities greatly exceed the

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 150

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for concommittee of the whole house on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 6021, a bill to provide additional home-mortgage relief, etc. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 4 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the hill for enveloped the committee shall rise of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the rule I have just presented is for the consideration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. The plan is to call up the rule tomorrow. The rule provides for 4 hours' general debate. That is in addition to the 1 hour on the rule. It is desirous, if possible, that all general debate be completed tomorrow; that tomorrow be used entirely in general debate. With the 1 hour under the rule and 4 hours of general debate, it makes a fairly long day unless we start at 11 o'clock. Therefore I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR]?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, to ask the gentleman from New York a question. I would not have any objection to meeting at 11 o'clock if it were necessary, but for the last several days there has been practically no business before the House and we have been adjourning early. As I understand the situation, there is not much business before the House today. Let me make this suggestion to the Chairman of the Rules Committee. We would be willing to waive the provision whereby the rule must lay over for 24 hours and grant consent to call that up this afternoon, and finish part of the debate today and meet at the regular time tomorrow. What does the gentleman say about that?

Mr. O'CONNOR. That has not been suggested. I do not know whether the committee members would be ready for that. I understand they are meeting now on some other matters, and I think that might take them unawares. The plan is, if possible, to finish the bill Friday night; that 2 days will be used on the bill, 1 day for general debate and 1 day reading the bill for amendment. I think it would be too short notice to take it up today. If that suggestion had been made earlier, we would have tried to work it out.

Mr. SNELL. I shall not object to meeting tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ONE MILLION ALIENS ON OUR RELIEF ROLLS.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a brief report appearing in the morning press on a splendid address on aliens being supported by our Government, delivered by my colleague from Texas [Mr. Dies] at a D. A. R. dinner in Washington last night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]?

Mr. COX. Reserving the right to object, of course I shall not object.

Mr. BLANTON. I thank my friend from Georgia.

There was no objection.

The report of the dinner speech of Hon. MARTIN DIES, of Texas, reported in the Washington Herald for Wednesday, March 6, 1935, is as follows:

Immigration Curb Demanded by Dies—Million Now on Relief, Member of Congress Tells D. A. R. Dinner

Immigration doors of this country must be closed, for the protection of those who already have been afforded asylum here, Representative Dies, of Texas, said last night in a speech on Immigration Conspiracy.

America is the only country in the world, he said, which takes the taxpayer's money to pay relief to aliens, of whom there are now 1,000,000 on relief rolls.

SINISTER INFLUENCES

Representative Dies spoke at the dinner of the District confer-nce of the Daughters of the American Revolution and charged sinister influences" under different colors and different names,

"sinister influences" under different colors and different names, are at work to undermine the State Department and Consular Service and to place in the hands of the Labor Department discretionary powers in regard to immigration.

Radicals, sentimentalists, internationalists, and the aliens themselves, shed crocodile tears, heedless of the warnings America must stay on its own shores and protect its own people. The time is coming, he averred, when America will have to adopt the motto of George Washington, for the purpose of self-preservation. His motto was "None but Americans on guard."

At the present time, Representative Diffs said there are 3,500,000 aliens illegally in this country, Altogether there are 16,000,000 foreign born in America, 7,000,000 of them aliens, and of these aliens 6,000,000 have jobs which should have gone to American citizens.

citizens

750,000 EXCLUDED

In Germany, Mexico, France, England, Switzerland, and most other countries, he pointed out, there are laws prohibiting jobs being given to aliens as long as citizens of the country in question are available for the job. But they, he said, perhaps are not motivated by the "lofty ideals of the professors" of this country. He lauded the Government for its work in excluding 750,000 aliens within the last few months, on the grounds they might become public charges, and said that recently of 564,000 foreigners who have applied for visas from our consuls abroad, more than 400,000 have been rejected on the same grounds.

SOLDIERS' BONUS

Mr. STACK. Mr. Speaker, I have a communication from my own district back home and I am convinced that my idea about Government is that I as a Congressman from the Sixth District of Pennsylvania should, when I can, express the sentiment of my district. I have a short communication that I think is of interest to all districts of the country, which I will be glad to read, with your permission.

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. STACK. About 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute. Is there objec-

There was no objection.

Mr. STACK (reading):

MY DEAR MR. STACK: As a citizen and taxpayer and a nonveteran, I wish to let you know my views on the "soldiers' bonus" ques-

I am against the Belgrano bankers' bonus bill (Vinson bill). The bankers and Wall Street gamblers got their bonus in the years 1917 and 1918.

I am in favor of the Patman bill, H. R. 1. Please vote for it and vote against the Vinson bill. Respectfully.

HERMAN A. DYKE.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the minority leader, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Snell], requested unanimous consent that he might address the House for 2 minutes to correct certain statements in one of the newspapers of the city of Washington.

The article that he referred to was one which gave the Democratic leaders credit for a victory; and in the 2 or 3 minutes granted to the gentleman he pointed out that the article was not correct, that he felt the Nation should know that it was not a victory for the Democratic leadership.

I want to say to the gentleman from New York that if the Democrats on this side were to rise and ask unanimous consent to correct misstatements whenever they appear in the newspapers they would be obliged to rise half a dozen or perchance a dozen times every day to correct the misstatements that are printed by the press against the Democratic Party. I want to say to the gentleman further that although someone might have stated to him that the steering committee made a recommendation on the bill, the gentleman was not correctly informed, for the steering committee made no such recommendation. The steering committee tries to act only when it is for the best interest of the House and for the best interest of the Nation, and they do not take part in any minor measures like the one that was before the House on Monday.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SABATH. Yes; I yield to the leader on the Republican 'side.

Mr. SNELL. I thought I was stating the position correctly, because I understood from the Chairman of the Accounts Committee that a subcommittee of the steering committee appeared before the Accounts Committee with the request that the bill be reported out. If I am in error about that, then I am mistaken about the statement made by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN].

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman from New York, as well as the gentleman from North Carolina, is misinformed.

Mr. SNELL. I am very glad to get that information.

Mr. SABATH. But I say this, as I understand the bill, it was reported by votes of the Democrats as well as of the Republicans. I find that nearly every day members of committees reporting bills vote for them in the committees. We have unanimous votes in the committees, and then when the bill comes on the floor of the House, under the whip and domineering influence of the Republican leader, Members are obliged to change their position and vote against their own convictions and against the interest of the membership, as it was Monday, and against the best interests of the

I voted for that bill, but not as the chairman of the steering committee. I voted for it because I realized, notwithstanding the statement of the gentleman from North Carolina, that the work has not increased; I voted for it because I knew that the work of this House had doubled since the war days. I was a member of two important committees in 1917 and 1918. I know what the work was then and I knew that the work has increased at least 200 percent. The gentleman from New York knows this as well as I. It is for that reason that I voted for the bill; and that is the reason others voted for it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have until midnight tonight to file a report from the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and the special orders for today I may address the House for 20 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, if this request is granted, will the gentleman from Mississippi address the House before the Committee on the Judiciary is reached on the call of the calendar?

The SPEAKER. If the request is granted, it will precede the call of the calendar.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the gentleman wait until we shall have disposed of at least three of the bills of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Then, Mr. Speaker, I modify my request.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the Committee on the Judiciary has yielded the floor today I may address the House for 20 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the Chair kindly inform the House what the program will be this afternoon? Then we shall know better how to consider these requests.

The SPEAKER. This is Calendar Wednesday.

Mr. SNELL. Which committee has the call, and how far down the calendar is it intended to go?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will find the list printed in the calendar. The Election Committees are at the head of the list, then follow the Committee on Ways and Means, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SNELL. Is it understood that none of the committees ahead of the Committee on the Judiciary have bills ready?

The SPEAKER. That is the understanding of the Chair. Mr. SNELL. And there will be no other committees called after the Committee on the Judiciary?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would not say that. It depends on how much time is consumed by the Committee on the Judiciary; and that, of course, depends upon the action of the

Mr. SNELL. I thank the Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that after the Committee on the Judiciary has completed its business on the calendar for today, that he be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WASHINGTON AND THE VERMONT HERITAGE

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein an address delivered by Hon. John Spargo, president of the Vermont Historical Association, on Washington and the Vermont Heritage.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, who is the gentleman who made the speech?

Mr. PLUMLEY. Hon. John Spargo, president of the Vermont Historical Association, and the subject is Washington and the Vermont Heritage, delivered on Washington's Birth-

Mr. RANKIN. Has the gentleman from Vermont scrupulously consulted the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] on this request?

Mr. PLUMLEY. I have not. Mr. RANKIN. I suggest that he consult that guardian of the RECORD, and if it is all right with him I have no objection.

Mr. RICH. I have a large number to look after, and if the gentleman will look after the Members on that side we will take care of the insertions not Members' own remarks in the RECORD over here.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich], may I say that if he will look after his minority we will take care of the majority.

Mr. RICH. If we on this side put in the RECORD as much as the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN], we would have to increase the size of the RECORD and put on another shift in the Printing Office.

Mr. RANKIN. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] would put in as much, according to the number of words he uses, that might help considerably toward improving the quality of the RECORD.

ing the quality of the Record.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think the gentleman from Vermont and the people of Vermont should have anything within reason that they desire. I shall not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the Record I include the following address of John Spargo, president of the Vermont Historical Society, at the annual dinner of the United Patriotic Societies of Vermont, held at Burlington, February 22, 1935:

Vermont, neld at Burlington, February 22, 1935:

The day we celebrate as the birthday of Washington has come to hold a place in our national life as unique and as exalted as that of the man himself. To a greater extent and in a profounder sense than any other day in the year, it may be said to have become our annual feast of patriotic dedication. In every part of the civilized world, wherever American citizens foregather, reflection upon the life and character of Washington evokes a sense of patriotism of rare spiritual quality. Influenced by the majestic greatness of the man himself, his freedom from cant, from insincerity and vaingloriousness, on this day our expressions of patriotic pride and consecration have a nobler quality than we commonly attain.

Even as we gather here, representatives of various patriotic so-commonly attain.

Even as we gather here, representatives of various patriotic societies and organizations of Vermont, so in every part of this great Nation similar gatherings of patriotic citizens have assembled throughout this day to pay homage to Washington's memory and to rededicate themselves to those patriotic principles so gloriously and inseparably associated with his name. Year after year for a hundred and fifty years now, his countrymen have celebrated Washington's birthday and made of it a day of patriotic consecration. In that period there have been sunshine and storm, prosperity and adversity, triumph and disaster, and through all the spirit of Washington has been potent in guidance and inspiration. We need both the guidance and the inspiration today more than ever before.

ever before.

It is not generally realized, I think, that the custom of holding public celebrations of Washington's birthday began during his lifetime. The newspapers of the time recorded great celebrations in New York and in Richmond, Va., in 1784. Although I have observed no earlier accounts of the formal public celebration of the day, it is worthy of note that the New York Gazetteer, in its account of the celebration in that city, refers to it as being according to an "annual custom."

Those early observances were held on the exact birth data—that Those early observances were held on the exact birth date—that is, on February 11—and that was the custom for many years. Thus in 1790 in Baltimore there was much celebration of the anniversary. The account appeared in the Pennsylvania Packet and Dally Advertiser, February 22, 1790. It is dated from Baltimore February 16, and describes the observances as being held "on Thursday last", which was the 11th. In his mother's Bible Washington himself inscribed the date of his birth as February 11. The adoption of the Gregerian calendar by the British Parliament by the act of 1750 brought a good deal of confusion into local and family records. That act of Parliament decreed that in 1752 October 3 should be reckoned as October 14 throughout the British possessions. Thus in all records October 2 would be immediately followed by October 14. Moreover, the new law provided that New Year's Day, which had always been April 24, was henceforth to be January 1.

that New Year's Day, which had always been April 24, was henceforth to be January I.

This revision of the calendar did not come into effect until Washington had grown to manhood. When he was born, the old style of reckoning by the Julian calendar was in use. Had the new style then been in use, the date would have been February 22, 1732. That is why we commemorate this date and not the earlier one. The actual date is of no importance, of course. Any day set apart for the purpose of honoring Washington's memory and recalling the greatness of his service to his country would of necessity become a holy day. Washington himself is a symbol. From the beginning he has been revered as the examplar of great virtues, rather than loved for personal traits and charms. None ever regarded him with the intimate, personal affection with which millions have regarded Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln. Awed reverence, rather than personal affection and familiar understanding marks our thoughts and our speech shout Washington.

millions have regarded Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln. Awed reverence, rather than personal affection and familiar understanding, marks our thoughts and our speech about Washington. When we consider the life of the English gentleman of Virginia whose destiny it was to become the First American and to be placed among the great immortals, what deed or event shall we select as best exemplifying his greatness? Some will turn to the majesty of his agony at Valley Forge. Others will turn to the moment when he left the Second Continental Congress in shy confusion, as John Adams eulogized him and proclaimed his unique fitness to command the Continental Army. Still others will choose as the greatest expression of his genius the stern imperiousness of his rebuke to those who would make him king.

Probably there are few who, if challenged to make such a choice, would select his presidency of the Constitutional Convention of 1787 as the supreme manifestation of his greatness as a leader. Yet such a choice would have great merit to commend it. It has always seemed to me that the calm wisdom and the intellectual and moral integrity of Washington contributed greatly to the success of that body of able and illustrious men, who for 4 months struggled with the task of fashioning the structure of an enduring National Government. The importance of Franklin's wise counsel has been fully recognized. The brilliant genius of Hamilton and the learning of Madison have been universally acclaimed. But it is exceedingly doubtful whether the contributions of these giants, and of others like Edmund Randolph, Robert Morris, Roger Sherman, and Charles C. Pinckney were of greater importance than the influence of the almost silent Washington. There is reason to believe that but for his matchless leadership—a leadership of undisputed moral prestige—the Convention would have ended in a disastrous increase of dissention.

of dissention.

When the fate of the Constitution hung in the balance, a visitor at Mount Vernon wrote to Thomas Jefferson concerning Washington: "I never saw him so keen for anything in my life as he is for the adoption of the new scheme of government." It is impossible for any candid mind to study the contemporary records of the conditions prevailing at the time without reaching the conclusion that Washington's influence and leadership made possible the adoption of the great instrument which made us a nation, and which for almost a century and a half has sustained the greatest system of popular government and personal freedom in all human history.

At this time, when all thoughtful men and women are conscious of the fact that the Constitution is being subjected to serious and unprecedented strains, and many of us are convinced that both the Constitution and the whole body of rights it sustains are in danger of quick destruction, it is well to remind ourselves of the heroic past. It is well to remind ourselves that the Constitution was the consummation of the Revolution and the War of Independence. Without it the Declaration of Independence would be no more than a fanciful essay, and Saratoga and Yorktown memorable only as theaters of stupendous folly.

Recently, at my suggestion, our good friend Col. Robert McCuen.

orable only as theaters of stupendous folly.

Recently, at my suggestion, our good friend Col. Robert McCuen introduced in the Legislature of this State a joint resolution providing for the appointment by the Governor of a commission to arrange for the commemoration of the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of Ethan Allen. I hope that when that commission is appointed the members of the various patriotic organizations of the State will throw themselves into the work with enthusiasm and zeal. Despite all that has been written about the most romantic personage in Vermont history, I am convinced that much remains to be revealed. Dramatic and bizarre episodes and eccentricities have obscured qualities and services of greater importance and worth.

Moreover, I hope that the commission will be empowered, and far-visioned enough on its own account, to so broaden the scope of its work as to provide for a commemoration at the same time of the one hundred and fittleth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution. The sesquicentennial anniversary of an event of such transcending importance ought not to be passed by without notice under any conditions. The conditions now prevailing, and likely to prevail, make the sober and solemn commemoration of the anniversary a special obligation which you here assembled cannot in decency and honor shirk.

out notice under any conditions. The conditions now prevailing, and likely to prevail, make the sober and solemn commemoration of the anniversary a special obligation which you here assembled cannot in decency and honor shirk.

Within the present week a distinguished member of the Supreme Court of the United States, speaking for four members of that great tribunal, declared that "It does not seem too much to say that the Constitution is gone" and that the fundamental rights and guarantees of that instrument have been "swept away." Admittedly only a serious jeopardy of the Constitution and of the personal and property rights rooted in the Constitution could have called forth such a serious declaration by 4 of the 9 members of the Supreme Court.

I submit that there is in that declaration a challenge to every citizen, and a special challenge to every member of each of the great patriotic bodies here represented. If the Constitution has in fact been so violated that it has ceased to be effective, and is to all practical purposes destroyed, it must be restored and reinstituted. If, on the other hand, we hold that the dramatic declaration of the four Justices contains large elements of emotional exaggeration, it is still clearly evident that the Constitution is in grave peril and needs stout and determined defense. Whichever view of the matter we take, it seems to me, there lies at the very heart of it a challenge we must not evade. I wish that from this gathering there might proceed a movement to make Vermont's answer to that challenge. It would be well if between now and 1937, every man and woman in Vermont would wear, as a badge of loyalty and consecration, the outward and visible sign of an inward grace and purpose, a simple button with the motto "Preserve the Constitution" inscribed upon it. With that preparation, we could make 1937 forever memorable as the year in which the Constitution was restored and the Republic preserved.

I shall not here discuss the issues raised in the conflicting opinions of the members of the Supreme Court in the cases just decided arising out of the legislation of Congress affecting the so-called "gold clauses" in contracts, save only to make a single observation. The majority opinion, equally with that of the minority, holds that the Congress violated the Constitution when it abrogated the gold clause in Government bonds. Stripped of non-essential terminology, that is what the entire Supreme Court de-

That finding is in full consonance with the principle long cided. ago laid down by Alexander Hamilton, and uniformly followed throughout our history. As Hamilton forcibly pointed out, the idea that Congress can itself enter into an obligation and then at will make a law changing the obligation is repugnant both to reason and morality. But the majority of the Court, having emphasized this sound principle, proceeded to reduce it to a mere pious admonition, of no practical value to the citizen, by holding that the citizen holding a Government bond whose value is impaired by the unconstitutional action of Congress has no redress at law, because a citizen cannot sue the Government without the at law, because a citizen cannot sue the Government without the Government's consent.

The principle that the sovereign may not be sued by the citizen without the sovereign's consent is sound law, essential probably in a democratic republic, to the existence of sovereignty itself. But for all that, its application in such a set of circumstances as are comprised in this case, is brutally oppressive, repugnant to morals, and inimical to stable government. It is quite plain that the present Congress will not enact legislation enabling the victims of its own unconstitutional and invalid action to seek redress. It is no less certain that had the majority opinion of the Supreme Court left open and undetermined the question of the right of citizens to sue the Government for the enforcement of contractual obligations illegally abrogated, Congress would have been called upon to pass legislation specifically denying that right.

In short, we have the most flagrant and shameful repudiation upon to pass legislation specifically denying that right.

In short, we have the most flagrant and shameful repudiation by the Government of its obligations to its own citizens, repudiation which the Supreme Court declares to have been improperly and unlawfully accomplished, but with no redress for the citizen. Regardless of our opinions upon any of the grave questions which are intermingled with the great problems of currency and credit, I believe that there is no thoughtful man or woman of good faith and good will in all this land who does not feel humiliated and shamed by the cynical unrighteousness of this phase of our Government's policy. Governor Pownall once described certain principles and plans proposed for the regulation of relations between Great Britain and the Colonies as "mere useless opprobrious theory." So those who are responsible for the conduct of our Government seem to regard the universally accepted principles of honorable and honest dealing.

This is no occasion for partisan criticism or attack, and I shall of honorable and honest dealing.

This is no occasion for partisan criticism or attack, and I shall not commit the offense of attempting to discuss those issues which are being contested by the political parties in our land. It is unfortunately true that in both the great political parties there are many who approve the shameful policy of repudiation. And it is fortunately true that the policy is as sternly repudiated in the party of the administration as in the party of the opposition. What I am concerned to point out is the serious, and perhaps, irreparable, damage that the repudiation has done to the Nation, and to other nations, damage which will be felt long after those now living shall have passed away.

As a student of economics and political science. I cannot close

As a student of economics and political science, I cannot close my eyes to the fact that this policy of repudiation has taken the stabilizer out of the economic mechanism of the Nation. In times past prudent and cautious men, relying upon the soundness of government obligations, have always preferred government securities with comparatively low returns over other types of securities with larger returns in sufficient number and investment volume a stabilizer, a counter balance to the constant pres of speculation. The great fiduciary investments, based to a large extent upon the confidence that our Government obligations were of speculation. The great fiduciary investments, based to a large extent upon the confidence that our Government obligations were beyond failure whether by accident or design, have been an important part of that stabilizing mechanism. Repudiation of the obligations of the Government can have no other result than to destroy that confidence, remove all Government obligations from the position they have heretofore held unchallenged, and make those securities as speculative as those of private issue.

It is a favorite device of crators speaking upon occasions like this in commemoration of Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, or other great leaders of the past, to ask what that leader would do if he were alive today, challenged by today's problems. The answer is always the same, namely, that he would do just what the orator himself believes should be done. I shall not resort to that device. I do not presume to say that Washington, if he were reincarnated and returned to us in this year 1935, would do this or that thing. Whether he would support our entry into the World Court or the League of Nations, whether he would favor returning to the gold standard, or experimenting with inflation, who shall say?

What I do assert, however, is that if he came with the same austere rectitude of mind and conscience, the same selfless purpose, the same high regard for the constitutional principles he did so much to bring to reality in 1787, he would be foremost among those who now are fighting to preserve those principles and the institutions founded upon them. Certainly, Washington would find himself in a bewilderingly changed world. He would see mighty mills with throbbing motors where he had known small workshops. Instead of travel by stage or horseback he would see mighty mills with throbbing motors where he had known small workshops. Instead of travel by stage or horseback he would see swift transportation through the skies. Instead of waiting months to get a simple exchange of communications with France or England, he would be able to make the exchange in a few minutes, more easily than it was in 1787 to communicate with his next-door neighbor.

Yet these marvelous changes, and others not less striking, would perplex him less, I think, than the changes in our Government which have taken place during the past few years. I have an idea that he would find it much easier to accommodate himself to the mechanical changes than to the political changes. The tremendous increase in the functions and powers of the Federal Government; the invasion of the rights and sovereigntles of the States; the abdication of its legislative functions by the Congress states; the abdication of its legislative functions by the Congress and the assumption of those functions by the President and by agents appointed by him; the steady march of the Nation toward a lock-step regimentation of its citizens; the levying of billions in taxes to be expended at will by the President, without direction or limitation or accounting—surely these things would stagger the immortal Washington, who is still "first in the hearts of his countrymen!"

There is no evidence that Washington ever set foot in Vermont. When preparations were being made for the celebration of the bicentennial anniversary of his birth, I made an exhaustive search to find out if possible whether there was any evidence that he had been in Vermont at any time. Other investigations were made under the direction of Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, the great histories. No such evidence was found. Of course, there are historian. No such evidence was found. Of course, there are legends. There is the silly story of his supposed visit to Bennington, to confer with Governor Tichenor, when he is alleged to have come "disguised as a groom." There are other legends hardly less silly, but there is not a single shred of credible evidence that he ever came to Vermont at any time.

We know that he was deeply and profoundly interested in getting Vermont into the Union. We know, too, that in the darkest hours of the Revolution he was cheered by the heroism of the Green Mountain boys and the victory of Stark's army at Bennington. It was fitting that Vermont should come into the Union during his Presidency, the first State to be added to the original thirteen. Because of these things, we of Vermant feel that we have special reason to cherish Washington's fame and memory. We feel that our kinship with him is second only to that of Virginia, whose son he was. And today the principles and ideals which were his are still cherished here to such an extent that from coast to coast the very word "Vermonter" is held synonymous with the title, "Defender of American Liberty."

Paraphrasing a noble declaration by Calvin Coolidge that will

Paraphrasing a noble declaration by Calvin Coolidge that will live as long as our language itself, I venture to say here: If the faith and the ideals of Washington should vanish in every other part of the Union, and loyalty to the institutions of liberty he helped to make should elsewhere perish, all could be replenished and restored from the generous store held by the people of Vermont

IMPRESSIONS OF A NEW CONGRESSMAN

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting a radio address made by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Stefan] over the Columbia Broadcasting System on February 28.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address by Representative Karl Stefan, Republican, of Nebraska, over the Columbia Broadcasting System Thursday, February 28, at 11:30 p. m. Representative Stefan discussed his impression of Congress from a new Congressman's viewpoint. He is the only radio announcer in Congress. He spoke from the studios of WJSV, Columbia's station for the Nation's Capital.

The address is as follows:

I have been given this opportunity by the Columbia Broad-casting System to talk to you from the standpoint of a new Mem-ber of the Seventy-fourth Congress and, also, as the only practical radio man in the House of Representatives.

Feeling that I know what a radio listener wants to hear and realizing how you feel about long-winded speeches, I beseech you to be tolerant with my efforts to tell you some of my impressions of Congress from the viewpoint of a "rookie" Member.

One of the inevitable first impressions of the House of Representatives that comes to a new Member and to the visitor in the gallery is that there is usually a great deal of confusion in the Chamber and that it is very difficult for Members and visitors to hear what is going on. The truth is that bad acoustic conditions in the Chamber militate against good order. However, better sound conditions in the House Chamber would contribute to the improved decoration of the House as well as to the ease with which sound conditions in the House Chamber would contribute to the improved decorum of the House as well as to the ease with which business is transacted, and because of the obvious need for the improvement one of my first acts here was to discuss the existing situation on the floor of the House and to introduce a resolution for the purpose of having modern scientific appliances installed in the Chamber for the perfection of sound transmission.

I want to repeat what I said over this great radio chain on the opening day of this session of Congress—that the people are not interested in politics or politicians right now. As a new Congressman, I have listened eagerly for constructive legislation from men who have been in Congress for many years. Because I believe I have some constructive ideas, I have endeavored to take my part early in the session by putting some of these ideas into motion, and have introduced a few bills which I feel are constructive, such as my bill to take the Postal Service and the Post Office Department out of politics; my bill to authorize and direct a special commission to make a study of the "farm dollar" and to devise ways and means to restore and maintain an equitable and stable purchasing power of the farm dollar; also, my bill to authorize farmers to repay crop-production loans in commodities in kind, after harvest, bushel for bushel, rather than in money, notwithstanding the intervening fluctuations of farm-commodity prices, etc.

I have never been a public-office holder before; never before have I been a candidate for public office. Although elected on the Republican ticket—the only Republican from my State—I am not interested in partisan politics and look at Congress from an ordinary layman's viewpoint. I realize that the United States is not contained entirely in the District of Columbia. I realize that we must represent 48 States and our Territories and island possessions. I realized early after coming to Washington that a dewe must represent 48 States and our Territories and island possessions. I realized early after coming to Washington that a depression brings something of a boom to Washington; that it may be easy for a human being to forget that there is a depression when thousands of officeholders in this city display wealth and prosperity. I talk daily with great statesmen who are learned in legislative tactics and parliamentary law. Knowing the misery which exists outside of the city of Washington, I am amazed how quickly some of these men take advantage of partisan politics.

I have read a great deal about minority and majority parties.

quickly some of these men take advantage of partisan politics.

I have read a great deal about minority and majority parties. Today, I am a member of that smaller group. I listen carefully to partisan politicians and I wonder why these leaders forget so quickly who they really represent; who really made the present majority in Congress and why.

You who are listening to me know who the forces are that made this majority, do you not? You know what forces made Franklin D. Roosevelt our leader. To refresh your memory, that force includes 3,500,000 people who are unemployed. Some say that force is closer to 10,000,000. It also includes the millions on relief; the million young men and women out of our educational institutions walking the streets looking for jobs; the thousands of young people who become of age each month. That, in my opinion, is the force which made this majority and leadership, and that is people who become of age each month. That, in my opinion, is the force which made this majority and leadership, and that is the force which gave commands, and that is the force which can take away that majority and that same leadership unless relief take away that majority and that same leadership unless relief based upon common sense and permanency is forthcoming. Knowing this to be true, I feel that the biggest answer to that force came from the House when it voted to turn over to the President about 5 billions of dollars to bring permanent recovery. Of course, that bill is now in the Senate for remodeling, and that it is being remodeled, you well know.

I can't imagine how much $5,000,000,000 is. Can you? But I and that it is being remodeled, you well know.

I can't imagine how much $5,000,000,000 is. Can you? But I can imagine the plea for help from millions of human beings and I pray that this money which belongs to you will be spent in such a way that it will do the most good for the most number of people, and that it will be spent from a nonpartisan point of view and kept free from the palms of the spoilsman.

The Seventy-fourth Congress has been in session 2 months. What have we, a legislative body, accomplished to the end that the economic and social ills of the country may be cured? I am impressed by the fact that about all we have done so far is to appropriate money. Insofar as the House is concerned, we have passed five of the regular annual supply bills—thirty-nine millions for the District of Columbia; seven hundred and seventy-seven millions for the independent offices; ninety-eight millions for the State, Justice, Commerce, and Labor Departments; nine hundred and three millions for the Treasury and Post Office Departments; three hundred and seventy-eight millions for the War Department; and about $1,000,000 of "urgent" appropriations near the beginning of the session. We have yet to pass the appropriation bills for the Interior Department, the Navy Department, the Department of Agriculture, and the legislative establishment. These, of course, will aggregate additional hundreds of millions of dollars. Notwithstanding that we have yet to pass four of the major appropriation bills of the year, the House has already appropriated $7,076,000,000, in round numbers, since January 3, 1935. This, of course, includes the $4,830,000,000 carried in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. I cannot avoid the conclusion that two questions are now very pertinent. First how long can we continue that prodigal rate of expenditure of public money; and, second, are we not going to have to do much more and different than appropriate money to lift ourselves out of our present trouble? The challenge is out to this Congres as mammoth appropriation bills.

From observation and participation in the proceedings of this historic Congress, I realize that public sentiment has much to do with legislation; that the voice of the people, if that voice is loud enough, usually sways action in Congress. Therefore, I feel that the force which made this majority party and this leadership will not stand for spoilsmanship in this our hour of distress; that spoilsmen will not take advantage of this the greatest moneyspending program in the history of our Nation or any other nation spending program in the history of our Nation or any other nation on the face of the globe.

Most of the representatives have various ideas. They come from every State in the Union with the problems of people from their various districts. Naturally, their ambitions to serve their people are based upon the present demands of the people in their particular districts. These ideas are contained in the various bills and through committees, conferences, etc., there is that exchange of views for the purpose of bringing to all of the people that mixture of legislation which in the minds of their representatives is essential to their welfare.

I am working for legislation toward the betterment of my dis-am working for legislation toward the betterment of my disct. Every Congressman has his program for legislation which believes will help his district. That's why the exchange of ideas seems to help us new Members. We are getting considerable help from older Members, but they have their own troubles. After interviewing scores of Members of the House of Representatives, Democrats and Republicans alike, I believe that every Member has the interest of his district at heart and everyone is, first, an American and is here fighting for your welfare, and while some things are done which may look to the contrary, I believe that the United States Congress is still a representative body of men and women. I believe that everyone in the House today wants to save this Nation and to keep intact our constitutional Government.

ment.

We are at the half-way mark of the present national administration. The last 2 years have witnessed many changes, some of them fundamental. Not a few of these changes occurred with the admission, express or implied, that they were temporary in nature and were induced only by the emergency. The next 2 years will do much to initiate the removal of temporary expedients or to cultivate them into fixed forms incapable of displacement. Of this situation the American people should be fully aware, and the American people should tell its Congress now whether or not it wants these far-reaching changes perpetuated. I want to thank Ted Church and staff and the Columbia Broadcasting System for the use of its great radio facilities.

It has been my privilege to walk along with radio from almost its infancy, and I am amazed at the strides of this great science. As one radio fan to another, I wonder if we take all of this wonderful service for granted? Those of us who know the tremendous expense and the tremendous amount of scientific research which is behind this service appreciate it all.

behind this service appreciate it all.

And to those of you who have been so patient I want to thank you for listening to me tonight. Might as well be happy, folks, because everything is going to be all right.

JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes to pay a brief tribute to Justice Holmes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I give notice that I will object to the granting of any further special privileges today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes is dead. The great dissenter is gone. He dissented from old thought patterns in favor of new ones. It is my belief that if his dissents of 10, 20, 30 years ago had been accepted as the true guide posts to our development, much of the trouble of today would have been spared us. and Brandeis dissent." Historic words!

From my days in law school he has been a sort of spiritual godfather of mine. This is not the time to appraise his achievement, but it is certain, as he once said, "We will leave our spirit in those who follow, and they will not turn back. All is ready; bugler, blow the charge."

On the day that his death is announced to the world I would like to point out just one, perhaps the major part of his creed-his belief in experiment.

Justice Holmes knew that growth is the law of life; that only change is changeless; that "time makes ancient good uncouth"; that men must be free to pioneer new pathways to new El Dorados.

Justice Holmes always believed in a new deal. He would, without doubt, have upheld the major purposes of the new deal of today. For 94 years he remained "invincibly young" as Justice Hughes once said. He brought to the Nation's altar the winnowed wisdom of years, but his heart was a boy's heart to the end. He never put life in a pigeon hole, nor the Constitution in a straight-jacket.

This is easily proved by his own words and I here set down "little fragments of my fleece that I have left upon the hedges of life ".

In the first chapter of his first book, The Common Law, he said: "The life of the law has not been logic; it has been experience", and of course experience comes from experiment.

The provisions of the Constitution are not mathematical formulas having their essence in their form; they are organic living institutions transplanted from English soil. Their significance is vital, not formal.

The fourteenth amendment (and he would have said the same thing of any other part) is not a pedagogical requirement of the impracticable.

The fact is that legislation in this country, as well as elsewhere, is empirical.

There is nothing I more deprecate than the use of the fourteenth amendment beyond the absolute compulsion of its words to prevent the making of social experiments that an important part of the community desires, in the insulated chambers afforded by the several States, even though the experiments may seem futile or even noxious to me and to those whose judgment I most respect.

If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other, it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for the thought that we hate.

We see nothing in the Constitution that compels the Government to sit by while a food supply is cut off and the protectors of our forests and our crops are destroyed.

As any line of adjustment between conflicting rights must be drawn on practical grounds, there is no doubt that it may vary under different circumstances. For instance, in England, in view of the national importance of their great manufacturers, juries are instructed that, in counties where great works are carried on, parties must not stand on extreme rights.

When 20 years ago a vague terror went over the earth and the word "socialism" began to be heard, I thought, and still think, that fear was translated into doctrines that had no proper place in the Constitution or the common law. Judges are apt to be naive, simple-minded men, and they need something of Mephistopheles. We, too, need education in the obvious—to learn to transcend our own convictions and to leave room for much that we hold dear to be done away with, short of revolution, by orderly change of the law.

We know too much to sacrifice good sense to a syllogism.

The law is the witness and external deposit of our moral life. Its history is the history of the moral development of the race.

He believed in the "oughtness" of the law.

Many more like these few excerpts from his wisdom might be given, but these are here set down "in order that we may remember all that buffoons forget." He did not believe in wild swings of the pendulum because he once said, "Historic continuity with the past is not a duty, it is only a necessity." But he did believe that the past is not the present, nor the present the future.

He once wrote to a Hoosier friend of mine, Oswald Ryan, of the Federal Power Commission:

Life is a romantic business. It is painting a picture, not doing a sum; but you have to make the romance. And it will come to the question, How much fire have you in your belly?

As he once said of an associate who had passed on, so we may say of him:

Sooner or later the race of men will die, but we demand an external record. We have it. What we have done is woven forever in the great vibrating web of the world. The eye that can read the import of its motion can decipher the story of all our deeds, of all our thoughts. To that eye I am content to leave the recognition and memory of this great head and heart.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I should like to add one sentence to what has just been said. Mr. Justice Holmes was a great jurist, who believed in a democracy in government based upon a democracy in opportunity and in responsibility. We of the South recognize him as a valiant soldier during the tragic war between the States and as a generous friend when the war was over.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, as one of the Massachusetts delegation, I think I should add a brief word of sympathy, respect, and admiration in memory of Mr. Justice Holmes.

In the death of Mr. Justice Holmes the State of Massachusetts has lost one of its most illustrious citizens and the Nation its most preeminent jurist. Although he is gone from our midst, his spirit will never die. He has left his "footprints in the sands of time."

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., was born in the city of Boston on March 8, 1841. On the ninety-fourth anniversary of his birth he will be laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery beside the remains of his beloved wife, who preceded him in death by some 6 years.

Nothing can be more fitting than that every possible respect should be shown to his memory. I am unable to say whether Congress has ever paused in its deliberations to officially pay tribute to a person no longer holding any public position, but, Mr. Speaker, in the present instance there is a very unusual situation. There probably never has been a parallel case, so we do not need to look for any precedent. Therefore, I propose to present a concurrent resolution to extend an invitation to Mr. Chief Justice Hughes to address a joint meeting of the two bodies of Congress in commemoration of the life and services of the late Justice.

As a boy Oliver Wendell Holmes lived under the influence of his poet father—another famous son of Massachusetts—whose full name he bore. In 1861, at the age of 20, he was graduated from Harvard University with the degree of bachelor of arts.

Shortly thereafter young Holmes volunteered with the Twentieth Massachusetts Regiment for service in the Civil War. He was commissioned a lieutenant, and served his country with distinction, being thrice wounded. He was mustered out of service in 1864 with the brevet of colonel, a title which in his later years he revered above all others. At that time he was but 23 years of age.

There is an interesting story in connection with his Civil War service that illustrates the close relationship of young Holmes with his father. During the Battle of Antietam he was wounded in the neck.

Upon learning of his son's injury, the elder Holmes set out at once to find his boy, traveling some 500 miles, only to be directed from one place to another in Maryland and nearby Virginia. Finally he found young Holmes, who was then a captain, in a railway train at Harrisburg, Pa.

After the war young Holmes returned to Harvard and entered upon the study of law, receiving his degree in 1866. Following a lengthy vacation in Europe, he formed a law partnership with his brother, Edward, and later became a member of the firm of Shattuck, Holmes & Munroe.

In 1870, 4 years after obtaining his law degree, he went back to Harvard as an instructor in constitutional law. Subsequently he delivered a series of lectures before the Lowell Institute on the common law, which were later printed as a textbook. This book at once established Mr. Holmes as a master of legal jurisprudence and after 54 years is still in wide use.

In 1882, shortly after he had been appointed to a new professorship at Harvard, he was named by Governor Long of Massachusetts to be an associate justice of the State supreme court. Seven years later he was made chief justice.

He served upon the supreme bench of his beloved State for a period of 20 years, during which time he wrote many scholarly opinions, running through 45 volumes of legal reports, which marked him as a jurist far above the average.

His reputation became so great that in 1902 he was named by President Theodore Roosevelt to be an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. At that time he was 61 years of age, and although some question was raised as to the advisability of appointing a man of such advanced years, the wisdom of President Roosevelt's choice has been more than vindicated. Although most men have passed the zenith of their careers at that age, Mr. Justice Holmes was but entering upon what was to become 29 years of further distinguished service. When he retired from active duty in 1932 on the occasion of his ninety-first birthday, he had firmly established himself as one of the most brilliant jurists of all time.

Mr. Speaker the Psalmist wrote:

The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

Oliver Wendell Holmes not only reached fourscore years, but was within striking distance of fivescore when his busy, useful, and brilliant earthly existence was terminated. He died as he lived, calmly and peacefully, and retained his strong mental faculties and his hopeful philosophy until the end. His last years were not years of "labor and sorrow." Age did not wither him, but on the contrary lent luster to his brilliant mind.

Oliver Wendell Holmes is a name that will ever be connected with the best in American life—the best in literature, in poetry, in philosophy, in law, and in jurisprudence, and yet above all, the best in human sympathy to his fellow man. In nearly a half century upon the bench Justice Holmes sought to dispense equal justice without fear or favor; and if in some of his decisions he leaned toward so-called "liberalism", it was not as a dissenter but as one who preferred to err, if he erred at all, on the side of those whose rights he felt it his bounden duty to safeguard.

Justice Holmes was the oldest justice ever to actively sit upon the Supreme Court bench, and only eight justices in the entire history of the Court exceeded his record of 29 years of service. These were Justice Bushrod Washington, of Virginia, 31 years; Chief Justice John Marshall, of Virginia, 34 years; Justice William Johnson, of South Carolina, 30 years; Justice Joseph Story, of Massachusetts, 34 years; Justice John McLean, of Ohio, 32 years; Justice James M. Wayne, of Georgia, 32 years; Justice Stephen J. Field, of California, 34 years; and Justice M. Harlan, of Kentucky, 34

Mr. Speaker, the people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts loved and admired Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. and were justly proud of him as one of their illustrious native sons. In fact, he was loved and revered by his fellow men everywhere, not alone for his works which live after him, not alone for his great learning, not alone for his deeds with sword and pen, and not alone for his culture and versatility, but because he was a man of exalted and noble character.

Permit me to quote an appraisal of Mr. Justice Holmes by one of his former associates, Mr. Justice Stone, who often joined him in dissenting opinions. Justice Stone said:

It may fairly be said that no judge in the entire history of Anglo-American law has written opinions exhibiting as profound an insight, with such crystalline clarity of thought and such literary grace, as Justice Holmes, and few have exercised a more profound influence on the law and on legal thinking. In this, his dissenting opinions have been quite as influential as his opinions for the Court. Many of the latter have already become the law of the land, and many more will ultimately become so.

Mr. Speaker, on the occasion of his ninety-first birthday, following his resignation from the Court, Mr. Justice Holmes was showered with the praises and tributes of the bar of the Nation, led by Chief Justice Hughes. His response to that ovation was characteristic and gave an insight into his true feelings regarding life and death. I quote his words in conclusion of my remarks. Mr. Justice Holmes then said:

In this symposium my part is only to sit in silence. To express one's feelings as the end draws near is too intimate a task.

But I may mention one thought that comes to me as a listener-in.

But I may mention one thought that comes to me as a listener-in. The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to oneself: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes, "The race is over, but the work is never done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rect. It cannot be while you still live. not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

And so I end with a line from a Latin piet, who uttered the message more than 1,500 years ago:

'Death plucks my ear and says: "Live—I am coming."

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] is recognized for

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, my subject today is "Freedom of Speech"; and as an example I cite the talks made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY]. [Applause.]

I begin with a very fine example of tolerance and freedom myself [laughter]. That is because I agree with the ideas of one of the gentlemen and disagree with the ideas of the other, and the Members may guess with which I agree and disagree. But I yield to both! I am going to speak on an attitude that has been assumed by some American people. We have what is called another "red" scare. Some of us are worried to death by Communists, taking over this Government. Some of us have the jitters. We are afraid that the Communists are going to corrupt our soldiers and sailors, and that the Communists are going to take over the Army. the Navy, Marine Corps, and, as stated the other day, the Coast Guard, the Reserve Corps, and Reserve Officers' Training Corps. It is all bunk. The American people have too much sense, and moreover, cannot be driven like cattle.

Mr. Speaker, I am not worried about that situation, I am not afraid of it, and I am tired of hearing about Communists all day long. It reminds me of a story that is said to have happened at one time in Tammany Hall when Pat was making a speech. He was pouring it on the Republicans, and somebody said: "Pat, you may say anything you please about them, because there are not any of them here."

Now, we may talk here about Communists, and be as brave as we please, all we want, because there is not a single Congressman who is a Communist nor a sympathizer of Communists; and, as a matter of fact, there are very few of either in the whole of the United States.

The gentleman who preceded me here, the able gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Pettengill], made a very brilliant speech on the life of Justice Holmes. He was a grand old man and loved liberty. I hope his soul goes marching on with us. had several things in my mind to say about his beliefs, but the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Pettengill] did it better than I can. However, I want to repeat one of his quotations from the opinions of Justice Holmes:

If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attention than any other, it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us—but freedom for thoughts that we hate

I am not going to lecture this Congress, because I am not a wise man, and there are wise men in this body. However, I am going to read the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which states:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof—

It did not set out any particular sect. Then it says: or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press.

It did not designate the character of speech, and does not say Republican papers or Communist papers or any other kind of papers. It says "freedom of speech and press" and that is what it means, and for a very good reason. If you suppress one philosophy or idea, you can suppress others; therefore, the only guaranty we have of free government is free speech.

In the last few weeks there have been various examples of violations of the right of freedom of speech, and I am going to give some of them, taken from the press.

Out in California the other day a newspaperman went into that State to write a story of the lettuce pickers, and was summarily thrown out and illegally deported. said he had "Communist literature on him." He did have Communist literature in his possession, because he had collected all kinds of literature for his story in order to give the whole story. He even had chamber of commerce literature in his possession. According to their rule out there in California, if we pass any of this gag legislation, if a Congressman were to go to New York, as I did the other night, and buy a daily paper called "The Daily Worker", they could arrest such Congressman and put him in jail and say he was a Communist because he had a copy of the Daily Worker. As a matter of fact, I bought the paper, and it was a very dull paper. It was not worth reading, and I threw it away, but, accidentally, someone might have come up to me and arrested me if we had such gag laws.

I am going to read here part of an editorial from the New York Post concerning this arrest out in California. It stated:

Feudal tyranny walks through the great agricultural valleys of

The arrest and illegal deportation of James Rorty, nationally known poet and writer, from the Imperial Valley lights up the rapidity with which American liberties are being destroyed there.

It should have added, "and in many other States." Then it says:

In the process the destruction of civil liberties has reached the stage where a writer cannot enter a town to gather material for a book without being jailed on a trumped-up charge of communism, and then driven out of the State.

Then it says further:

Unless Congress and the Federal courts intervene soon, a ruling-class dictatorship will be firmly established in rural California on European models, and the success of strong-arm methods there in crushing labor is likely to bring the same methods into use

Then the editorial mentions hired guamen and sheriffs, and I want to call particular attention to this fact—the use of so-called "peace officers" committing illegal acts. When a sheriff or other peace officer illegally knocks a man in the head and deports him out of a State or county, little is said about it and nothing is done about it; but if some poor, weak-minded Communist says something to which no attention is paid, we all begin to shout and holler all over the country about it.

When this alleged peace officer illegally arrested this news reporter, who was an American citizen legally traveling in his own country, he, the sheriff, "violently overthrew the government", at least temporarily. Suppose some so-called 'radical" had deported the sheriff? The Governor would have ordered out troops, and, if that had not been enough, a section of the Army would have been sent there. That is the reason that I say we should require our peace officers to obey the law just as any other citizen, and there is no law on earth that gives a sheriff the right to deport an American citizen out of a given State because the sheriff does not happen to like the thoughts of the visitor.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. I yield.

Mr. COLLINS. The gentleman is aware that the so-called "abduction" he is speaking about was at the request of this Communist. He asked to be escorted out of the State by the sheriff.

Mr. MAVERICK. The gentleman is not talking about Rorty?

Mr. COLLINS. I am talking about Sheriff Ware's taking this man down to Yuma.

